*The Recorder of Jan. 23, 1824, gives a valuable statement respecting the multiplication of religious periodicals. During the eight years that had intervened since the Recorder was begun forty-eight religious periodicals had been born and were then living. Of these twenty-five were monthly and twenty-three weekly. New York had eight; Pennsylvania seven; Massachusetts and Connecticut six each; Rhode Island five; the District of Columbia three; Maine, Virginia, South Carolina, Georgia and Kentucky two each; and New Hampshire, Vermont and Delaware one each.

man recorded—the beginning of what has developed into our present church news department.

In No. 3 there are hints at too much child labor in the commonwealth. In No. 5 the germ of a Literary Department is to be found, being only a list of new publications —chiefly sermons—but no reviews. In No. 6 there is the first indication of interest in slavery the declaration of the Congress of Vienna being reprinted, and S. F. B. Morse's exhibition of pictures is advertised—Morse, the pupil of Allston and Leslie, who was to win immortality later by his inventions and telegraphic code. In No. 7 Yale and Bowdoin Colleges advertise, the first educational institutions to realize the merit of the religious weekly as an advertising medium. In No. 15 the editor questions the wisdom of admitting Indiana and Mississippi as States, and uses arguments similar to those now current in re to Arizona and New Mexico. No. 16 had long letters from William Carey in India, describing the progress of Baptist missions there, for the Recorder in its selection of religious news, both domestic and foreign, was exceedingly catholic. Nos. 18 and 19 had strong editorials setting forth the danger of the population of the United States outgrowing its distinctive institutions and the necessity of planting churches in the newly settled territories and educating clergymen to man the pulpits there. In No. 18 a new department—of poetry—appeared, James Montgomery's A Night in a Stage Coach being the forerunner of the thousands, original or selected, that have since appeared.

The importance of the newly created American Bible Society was clearly recognized in the editorial and news columns of No. 21, and Intemperance in Maine, and ways of reducing it, were considered the following week. The strong peace proclivities of the paper were first revealed in No. 25, and in No. 34 there was a vigorous editorial denouncing trade in slaves, but failing to suggest the abolition of the traffic in the United States, the same issue containing a poem, On the Birth of His Third Son, written by President Davies, sometime president of Princeton College, in which the Princeton theology of his day was reflected in the truly paternal reference to the newly born child as,

Thou embryo angel, or thou infant fiend.

Such were some of the features of Vol. I., viewed from the standpoint of the reader. From the standpoint of the owner it is interesting to note that in June attention was called to the multiplication of rivals, the doubling of the circulation, and in November a proposition to issue the sheet in the octavo form as well as in folio form if a sufficient number of subscribers to make it pay indicated a desire for a change before the new year began. They did not, and no such change was made until Nov. 3, 1892.

On Jan. 7, 1817 Mr. Morse announced his intention of withdrawing from the paper; on April 1 he left and to his post came Rev. R. S. Storrs of Braintree, who combined editorial labors with pastoral until the close of 1823, when he resigned "under the conviction that an instrument of so much power ought to be in the hands of a man whose undivided attention may be given to it." Willis, in his autobiographical statement, says that with "Mr. Storrs's help the Recorder rose from its lowest depression and was prosperous."

THE FIRST CHANGE OF FORM.

April 22, 1817, the Recorder was enlarged, lengthened and widened, and two columns of space added. The next fall delinquent subscribers were delicately reminded that they might find the next meeting of the legislature an excellent time to pay arrears. Dec. 2, the publisher desiring to raise funds to purchase a new set of types, offered premiums of two books to those who would pay their subscriptions in advance, so general and demoralizing was the custom of not paying until the end of the year if at all; and two years later, in a similar appeal, it was stated that $5,000 was due the publishers from delinquent subscribers. Jan. 1, 1818, a New Year's Ode was circulated among the Boston subscribers by the regular carriers of the paper, and printed in the paper of the next week for the benefit of rural subscribers.

THE PROBLEM OF ADVERTISEMENTS.

May 29, 1819, the publisher replied to those readers and correspondents who "feared lest the increasing number of advertisements should circumscribe its sphere of usefulness, and disappoint its patrons." A pledge was given that no advertisements save those that were religious or literary would be admitted, and for a time the rule was adhered to quite strictly, but as early as 1817 advertisements of patent medicines had appeared, and ere long they found their way back again, Anderson's Cough Drops, the Elixir Pectorale and Coffin's Buchan being the pioneers. The first illustrated advertisement appeared Jan. 26, 1827, and, voter the expenses; and he communicated a letter from Mr. Brent, the Paymaster-General of the army, in which he states the aggregate of the deficiencies of 1814 and 1815, and which are made up of balances due on account of the pay, subsistence and retained bounties of the regular army; and of the pay, subsistence, forage and clothing of the militia in those years, viz.:

LOWER HALF (REDUCED) OF THE THIRD PAGE OF THE FIRST ISSUE OF THE RECORDER.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Pay of regular troops, | $1,865,000 | |
| Pay of militia, &c. | 3,095,000 | |
| | | 4,960,000 |
| Subsistence of regular troops, | 236,000 | |
| Subsistence of militia, | 265,000 | |
| | | 500,000 |
| Forage of militia, &c. | | 60,000 |
| Clothing of militia, &c. | | 80,000 |
| Retained bounties, &c. | | 400,000 |
| | | $6,000,000 |

On motion of Mr. Lowndes, the blanks in the bill were so filled up as to embrace the following appropriations:—

| | |
|---|---|
| For the Quarter-Master's Department, | $950,000 |
| For the pay of the army and militia, | 5,617,000 |
| For the subsistence of do. | 2,310,372 |
| For forage, | 60,000 |
| For clothing, | 108,000 |
| For bounties and premiums, | 400,000 |
| For Medical and Hospital Departments, | 100,000 |
| For fortifications, | 200,000 |
| For the Ordnance Department, | 140,000 |

After a short discussion, Mr. Lowndes consented that the bill should be so amended as to provide for arrearages due prior to 1814.

The bill then passed, and was sent to the Senate.

The petition of the General Association of Congregational Ministers in Massachusetts praying that the mails may not be opened or transported on Sunday, was presented and committed.

Wednesday, Dec. 20.

A bill for the relief of the infirm, disabled and superannuated officers and soldiers of the revolutionary war, and of the army of the United States for the time being, was read twice and committed.

The petitions of certain Cotton Manufacturers in Berkshire, Massachusetts, praying that measures may be adopted to preserve and encourage the Cotton Manufacturing establishments of the United States, was read and committed.

Thursday, Dec. 21.

Mr. Harlington offered for consideration the following resolution:—

Resolved, That the Committee appointed on so much of the President's Message as relates to roads and canals, be instructed to inquire into the expediency of extending prompt and efficient aid, on the part of the general government, to the company incorporated for the purpose of cutting a canal from the waters of the Chesapeake to those of the Delaware, commonly called the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal. The motion was agreed to.

Friday, Dec. 22.

The Committee on the Public Lands, who were instructed by a resolution of the House to inquire into the expediency of granting rights of occupancy and preemption at 2 dollars per acre, to all such persons as shall be actually seated on the first day of October, 1816, upon any section of land obtained by treaty or conquest from the Creek nation of Indians, during the late war, reported that it was inexpedient to grant the same. The Report was debated but no question taken.

The Committee on Roads and Canals were instructed to report on the expediency of opening underwent the sentence near the gate of the castle, on the 15th October. Thus has terminated the career of the first Lieutenant of Napoleon Buonaparte.

By the arrival at New-York of the Amiable-Matilda, from Liverpool, London dates have been received to Nov. 20.

The following are the most interesting articles.

Trial of Marshal Ney.

PARIS, Nov. 14, 1815. The Council of War convened for the trial of Marshal Ney came to a decision, that they were not competent to try the accused, he being a Peer of France. From this decision, M. Jeinville, the King's Judge Advocate, appealed to the Council of Revision; and they have confirmed the judgment.

In consequence of this decision, His Majesty issued two Ordonnances, directing the House of Peers to proceed immediately on the trial of the Duke Marshal; and prescribing regulations for the government of the trial.

The articles of impeachment against Ney have been read in the Chamber of Peers; and he has been removed from the Conciergerie to the Luxemburg, where the Peers hold their sittings.

LONDON, Nov. 20. The Allied Troops which are to remain in France, and to be commanded by the Duke of Wellington, are to be called the European army. They are to be fed and lodged by France.

Miscellaneous Articles.

Intelligence of the signature of the Treaty of Peace between France and the Allies, was daily expected.

Rumours of an approaching war between Russia and Turkey still prevailed.

The house of Baring and Co. London, have agreed, it is said, to pay to Austria 800,0001. ster. i. e. 1,332,000 dollars for the exclusive privilege of selling the red lead produced by the mines of Idria for three years.

The States of Wurtemberg had convened and demanded of the King the restoration of their ancient privileges. The King at first refused, but has since proposed that Plenipotentiaries should be appointed on his own part, and on the part of the States, to form a new Constitution for the Kingdom of Wurtemberg.

We understand, says the New-York Gazette of Monday last, that the Manhattan and the Mechanics' Banks refused on Saturday to receive Treasury Notes as Deposite.

The Nat. Intelligencer of Dec. 30, contains two Treaties between the U. States and Indian Tribes; one with the Pottawatomies, the other with the Kickapoos.

The Treaty with Algiers has been ratified by the Senate, and published.

The following is an enumeration of the principal Bible, Missionary, and Tract Societies in

7. The BIBLICIAN KNOWLEDGE SOCIETY, was instituted in England in 1698, for the diffusion of Religion, generally, in the world. Its receipts during the year, ending April 21st, 1814, were upwards of 147,000 dollars. It circulated during the same year 73,079 copies of the Scriptures, and 740,000 other Books and Tracts, besides spending 6,150 dollars upon its Missions in India.

8. The RELIGIOUS TRACT SOCIETY was instituted in England, in 1799. It has at present 124 auxiliaries. Its receipts during the year ending the 31st of March, 1815, were 30,550 dollars. It had circulated in 1813, Seventeen Million of Tracts in the English, Welsh, Irish, Manks, Gaelic, Modern Greek, French, Dutch, Spanish, Portuguese, Italian, German and Danish languages. This number must have greatly increased since that period. The Society is just turning its attention to China. There are about 200,000 Chinese settlers in Java and adjacent islands under the British government. By means of these settlers the Society expect to introduce Tracts in the Chinese language into every part of that populous Empire.

9. The HIBERNIAN SOCIETY for establishing Schools and circulating the Holy Scriptures in Ireland, was instituted in London, in the year 1806. The receipts of this Society for the year ending March 31st, 1815, were upwards of 12,000 dollars. It supports 242 schools containing 11,916 children.

The Executive Council of this State will meet on Monday the 8th inst. and the Legislature on Wednesday the 10th.

MARRIED.

In Burlington, Vt. Alvan Foote, Esq. Attorney at Law, to Miss Priscilla Rice, daughter of Col. Nathan Rice.

At Wrentham, on the 27th December, by the Rev. Mr. Fisk, Rev. Walter Harris of Dunbarton, N. H. to Mrs. Elizabeth Cleaveland, consort of the late Rev John Cleaveland of the former place.

In Salem, Mr. Benjamin Dow, Merchant of Boston, to Miss Mary Proctor of Salem.

DIED.

In London, JOHN COAKLY LETTSOM, Doctor of Laws, Fellow of the Royal Society, and one of the most eminent physicians in England.

In Spain, the Lady of General Porlier who was executed for Treason.

In Williamstown, (Mass.) in an apoplectic fit, the Rev. Walter King

NOTICE.

THE annual meeting of "The Foreign Mission Society of Boston and the vicinity," will be holden at the Hall of the Massachusetts Bank, TO-MORROW, at 3 o'clock, P. M

A Sermon will be preached in the Old South Meeting House, at half-past six by the Rev. Mr. BATES of Dedham; after which, a collection will be made to further the benevolent design of the institution.

January 3, 1816. J. HUNTINGTON Secry.

Ladies' fashionable Broadcloths,

THE PANOPLIST.

SAMUEL T. ARMSTRONG, No. 50, Cornhill, Boston, continues the publication of the Panoplist, a religious monthly Magazine, which has been regularly published from 1805 to the present time. The twelfth volume will commence with the year 1816. Six volumes have been issued under the superintendance of the present Editor.

The late excellent and learned Dr. Buchanan expressed his opinion of the work, in the following words: "Many thanks for the Panoplist, an interesting and well conducted work. I admire much the good temper and enlightened spirit which are so visible in the religious community of America. It is the best pledge of the future happiness of your state. Desperate men will sometimes produce desperate measures; but if ever our ships should fight, the Panoplist and I shall yet be at peace."

The sentences were contained in a letter from Dr. Buchanan to the publisher of the Panoplist, dated Boroo'bridge, Yorkshire, May30, 1812, and written, not only without solicitation, but without even the most distant expectation that the writer would feel so much interest, in a Magazine, printed on this side the Atlantic

The price is $2,40 a year, that is twenty cents a number.

New Subscribers are invited to send their names to the publisher Jan. 3.

LINCOLN & EDMANDS,

AT THEIR

Bible Warehouse, and Theological and Miscellaneous Bookstore, 53, Cornhill,

KEEP for sale, the greatest assortment of Pulpit, Family, Pocket and School Bibles to be found in New-England, at all the various sizes and bindings—with an extensive stock of Theological Works, and Books in the various branches of Literature. Libraries supplied at the usual discounts. They have recently published the following

Valuable School Books.

Adams's Geography, a new and valuable work for schools, on an original and much improved plan. In three parts. Part I. consists of a Geographical Orthography, divided and accented. Part II. consists of a Grammar of Geography, containing the principles of Geography, to be committed to memory. Part III. is a description of the earth, &c. to be read in classes Accompanied with a valuable Atlas. $1; with Atlas $1,50 The following extract of a letter from an Instructor in Philadelphia, to the author, exhibits the estimation in which the work is held: "I have introduced your Geography into my school with the most unexampled success.  I am confident with one half the labor, I have realized more than four times the improvement I ever did with any other system."

Richardson's American Reader. A selection of Lessons for Reading and Speaking; wholly from American authors. 37 cts. single, $3,50 per dozen.

Murray's Introduction to the English Reader—English Reader—and Sequel to the Reader.

Temple's Practical Arithmetic, and Child's Assistant in the Art of Reading

The Child's First Book, being an easy introduction to Spelling and Reading; well adapted to the young learner

The Writer's Assistant, containing Co-

WILLIAM KIDDER,

Market-Square, Opposite Kidder's Lottery Office,

KEEPS constantly on hand a complete assortment of

Genuine Drugs and Medicines

which he offers for sale, on reasonable terms, for Cash or approved Credit.

Jan. 3.

Notice to Teachers of Youth.

R. P & C. WILLIAMS have recently republished the Columbian Orthographer, or First Book for Children. In which the sounds are methodically arranged, rationally divided into syllables, and accurately accented according to the best authorities. For the use of Schools. By James Pike.

——————in vain,
Without fair culture's kind parental aid,
Without enlivening suns and genial showers,
And shelter from the blast; in vain we hope
The tender plant can rear its blooming head,
Or yield the harvest promised in the spring.
Akenside

RECOMMENDATIONS.

The importance of early impressing the minds of children with the rudiments of orthography, it is presumed none will deny; for the useful art of speaking, reading and writing with readiness and propriety, depends much on the habit of spelling and pronouncing words with accuracy

To give a death wound, therefore, to the painful, incorrect practice of directing children to read lessons before they are able to spell and accent common words of three syllables, we cordially recommend the Columbian Orthographer This work we approve, because it is, as the first school book ought to be, merely a spelling-book.

The Tables distinguishing the different classes of words are judiciously arranged to facilitate the progress of children in their rudimental studies.

We think therefore, the author merits the patronage as well as the gratitude of the public, for his exertions to promote the interest of the rising generation; and we heartily recommend this book to instructors as better calculated to answer the design of a spelling book, than any that has hitherto been published.

[Here follow the names of many respectable Clergymen, and Preceptors, and Teachers of Academies and Schools.] Price $2 per doz. 22 cents each. tf Jan. 3.

Wilberforce's View.

JUST published, and for sale by S. T. ARMSTRONG, and N. WILLIS,

A PRACTICAL VIEW of the Prevailing Religious System of Professed Christians in the Higher and Middle Classes, contrasted with Real Christianity.

BY WILLIAM WILBERFORCE, Esq
Member of the British Parliament.

The high character which Mr. WILBERFORCE has long maintained, both in the civil and religious world, is generally known in this country. His practical view is every way worthy of him, as a man of sound judgment and a Christian. The subjects of which he has treated, are

I. Inadequate conceptions of the Importance of Christianity.—II. Corruption of Human Nature.—III. Chief Defects of the Religious Sy-being a picture of the Good Samaritan and advertising a well-known drug store on Washington Street, it was less open to criticism than some of the pictures which find their way into modern advertising columns

QUESTIONS OF COMITY.

The questions of comity and of toleration the Recorder early had to face—comity as it concerned the paper's dealing with its contemporaries, toleration as respects the factions within the Congregational fold, and the non-Congregational, non-Calvinistic, non-Pedo-Baptist churches of the land. From 1816 to 1822 there was little or nothing in the paper to indicate that a fierce controversy between Trinitarians and Unitarians was raging. Controversial pamphlets and books were advertised, meetings were announced and sermons reprinted but the editorial columns were kept free from bitterness or partisanship. Baptist, Presbyterian, Episcopal, Reformed Dutch, Methodist news from New England, the Middle States and the South, as well as from the mission fields, was given much space, and not only were the foreign and domestic religious newspapers freely quoted from, but the rise of religious journalism carefully noted and a word of hearty welcome always extended to rivals. From 1816 to 1825 the Recorder had just two controversies with its rivals, and they of a mild character compared with those of later days.

REV. PARSONS COOKE, D. D.

Willis's philosophy in this course was referred to in his autobiography, in which he says: "I was advised to admit the Unitarian controversy into the Recorder, but I declined because the paper was intended as a vehicle of intelligence, which would be excluded so far as long discussions were admitted," and the attitude of the paper toward other Christian sects was set forth in an editorial in 1817, when it was declared: "We recognize no other parties than those two, into which the Scriptures divide the whole world. Here we take sides," and again in Jan. 1, 1820, when it said: "Nor do we mean to judge the principles and motives of different sects. We are happy to record their worthy deeds in their own language and leave it to God and to themselves to judge of more secret matters." In 1822 the paper declined to become embroiled in the dispute between Williams College and Amherst, and in 1828, after a period of polemics, in an editorial, How to Please All, it was announced as "a settled conviction that a continual petty warfare with errorists is not so efficacious as a uniform support of good principles and a reply to some of the more important attacks."

THE QUESTIONS OF THE DAY.

A survey and necessarily brief enumeration of the contents of Vols. II. to IX. reveals editorials condemning horse racing and Sabbath desecration in New England, Sabbath desecration by public officials in Washington, D. C., slavery in the United States though asserting its sanction in the Constitution, "privateering," those who sneered at the Puritans and Pilgrims, some of the evils of Methodist camp meetings, dueling, "Jingoism" and Unitarianism and Universalism; editorials commending the mission of the A. B. C. F. M. in the Sandwich Islands, the work of the American Education Society, the Society for Promoting the Civilization and General Improvement of the Indian Tribes within the United States; and others pleading for revivals of religion in Boston, for contributions to the societies newly organized for evangelizing heathen lands and the settlers on the frontiers.

THE TELEGRAPH, 1824–25.

Dissatisfaction with the Recorder because of its unwillingness to deal in polemics led to the establishment of The Telegraph in 1824, Gerard Hallock, a graduate of Williams College, being editor. It failed to thrive on controversy, and Nov. 13, 1824, the Recorder announced that on the first of the following January the two papers would be merged, one of the reasons given being worthy of note in these days when we are prone to fancy that we have just discovered our duty as Christian citizens. Said Willis and Hallock:

> We hope to render the united paper such a medium of information as shall best be suited to the wants and circumstances of men, in a country where they are called to act not only as Christians, but as citizens and members of a social and intelligent community.

Mr. Hallock's career after he left the Recorder and Telegraph, June 30, 1826, was notable. For a time a part owner of the New York Observer, in 1828 he became an associate with David Hale in owning and editing The Journal of Commerce of New York city; and in editing it on pro-slavery lines through the exciting period preceding the Civil War he showed great ability and sincerity of purpose, but in 1861 a United States Grand Jury declared The Journal of Commerce guilty of encouraging rebellion, and it and three other papers were forbidden the use of the United States mails. This radical act led to Mr. Hallock's retirement from journalism, but left him freer to do philanthropic and Christian work. He and David Hale established the news service, which later led to the formation of the Associated Press, of which Mr. Hallock was the first president.

THE RECORDER AND TELEGRAPH.

The Recorder and Telegraph No. 1 was issued Jan. 1, 1825, Nathaniel Willis and Gerard Hallock being editors and owners. It immediately began to live up to the pledge that on "subjects of a doctrinal or controversial nature, the character of the Telegraph would be retained." In February a controversy with The Christian Register was begun over the question whether Dr. Watts was a Unitarian or not. In April we find a long scholastic editorial, punctuated with proof-texts, defending the doctrine of the Trinity from the attacks of The Christian Register, and the following January appears a polemic directed against Universalism, and until Mr. Hallock retired there was scarcely an issue in which there was not a controversial editorial or communication signed with some classical pseudonym, referring openly or in veiled terms to the heresies of the day.

Sabbath desecration by public officials and the people was sternly rebuked again and again. President John Quincy Adams did not escape censure when he violated the proprieties. In the issue of April 9, 1825, we find an editorial utterance revealing more clearly than anything else could the differentiation between the religious and the secular which obtained at that time. "We are asked," say the editors, "if we have not recommended our publication as a fit paper to be read on the Sabbath." "No! Never. And though most of it is of a nature very different from the general contents of the New York Courier [which had attacked the Recorder and Telegraph for its criticism of the Courier's first Sunday issue], yet we are free to say that, in our opinion, the Sabbath is not employed in the best manner when devoted to its perusal." And a fortnight later, the Courier having taunted it with its consideration of secular affairs, the Recorder and Telegraph replied that it did not profess "to infuse any peculiar unction" to its legislative, domestic and foreign news, for "such an unction it cannot receive; and sooner than be instrumental of circulating it to occupy the sacred hours of Sabbath, we would suffer any extreme of poverty to which Providence might call us. If we introduce a small portion of such reading, it is only because our patrons are citizens as well as Christians."

REV. H. M DEXTER, D. D.

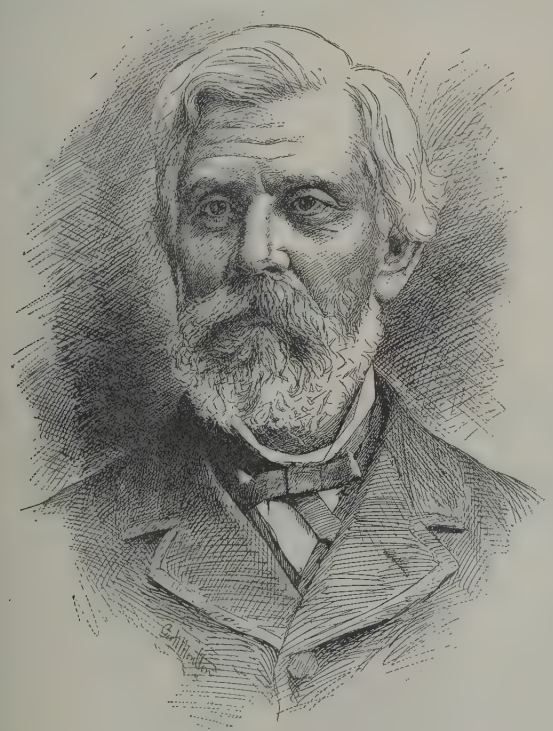
CHANGES IN EDITORS AND TITLE.

In 1826 Mr. Hallock left Boston for New York and sold his share of the Recorder to Rev. Asa Rand, a graduate of Dartmouth, who had edited The Christian Mirror in Portland, Me., since 1822. He served as editor and proprietor until 1830, when he sold his share as proprietor to Mr. Willis. He subsequently edited The Observer in Lowell, and was prominent among those who preached and lectured against slavery. From 1830 to 1831 Prof. Calvin E. Stowe assisted Mr. Willis in editing the Recorder, and then Mr. E. C. Tracy of the Class of 1819 in Dartmouth College, who had been editing the Vermont Chronicle from 1822 to 1828, was associated with Mr. Willis as editor until 1834, when he returned to the Vermont Chronicle and there remained until his death in 1862. In 1834 his elder brother, Rev. Joseph Tracy, Dartmouth, 1814, became editor, retiring in 1837 to engage in secretarial labors in behalf of societies fostering the colonization of Negroes. From 1837 to 1844 Deacon Willis edited the paper assisted by leading clergymen of the denomination.



WILLIAM L. GREENE.

In 1844 Deacon Willis, being sixty-four years old, felt like securing relief from active service and sold the Recorder to Rev. Martin Moore of Brown University, 1810, who summoned to his aid Rev. Dr. Storrs of Braintree, Rev. E. D. Moore—later the editor of The Boston Reporter—Rev. A. W. McClure and J. F. Moore, Esq.

THE NEW ENGLAND PURITAN.

As early as 1826 Rev. Dr. Parsons Cooke, Williams College, '22, then of Ware and later of Portsmouth, N. H., and Lynn, began to appear in the secular and religious press as a fearless, trenchant critic of Unitarianism. In 1839, wishing to have a medium of unrestrained expression and feeling the necessity for a religious newspaper more insistent upon polemics than the Recorder was, he established, Dec. 30, The Puritan, dated at Lynn and Salem until May 22, 1840, when the office of publication was moved to Boston. Dr. Cooke's spirit was aggressive. His blows aimed at latitudinarianism in or out of the Congregational fold were direct from the shoulder, and one seeking for specimens of pungent, adroit, controversial editorial work will find it exemplified admirably in the editorials of The Puritan, The Puritan Recorder, and the Boston Recorder from 1840 to 1862, the period representing Dr. Cooke's literary activity.

THE PURITAN RECORDER.

In May, 1849, The Puritan, or New England Puritan, as it was then called, was united with the Recorder and published under the name The Puritan Recorder, the proprietors being Moore, Woodbridge & Co., the editors, Rev. Parsons Cooke and Rev. J. E. Woodbridge, who had purchased The Puritan in December, 1840, and joined its editorial staff. The combined circulation of the Recorder and the New England Puritan gave the new paper a circulation of 10,000 to start with. In 1853 Mr. Woodbridge sold his interest to Rev. S. H. Riddel, Yale, '23, who had had considerable editorial experience in editing The Connecticut Evangelical Magazine and The Hartford Congregationalist. He remained proprietor and office editor until 1858. On Jan. 6, 1859, Rev. Nathan Munroe of Bradford succeeded Mr. Riddel as co-proprietor and co-editor with Parsons Cooke, reviving the old name and style, The Boston Recorder. In November, 1862, Rev. Dr. E. P. Marvin purchased the interest of Dr. Cooke, and in May, 1863, he became sole owner and editor, which relation he sustained until the consolidation of the Recorder with The Congregationalist, May, 1867.

BIRTH OF THE CONGREGATIONALIST.

From being in its early days a representative of all the churches of the Pilgrim polity in New England, the Boston Recorder in 1849, and for some years previous, had come to be somewhat narrow in its outlook, particularly antagonistic to what was known as the new school theology, and consequently obnoxious to a large and increasing element of ministers and laymen. The younger men, especially, complained that the paper would not insert their contributions, and the demand for an organ which should be more representative and catholic became more and more pronounced. There was a strong feeling, too, that the Recorder was not outspoken enough against slavery.

CHARLES A. RICHARDSON.

A number of preliminary conferences were held, a petition was circulated and received the signatures of over a hundred ministers, and the movement crystallized around a certain number of divines, some of whom were already influential in the Congregational body and others were just emerging into prominence. It became clear that there was sufficient editorial and literary ability to found and sustain a new paper. Then the all-important question of the wherewithal arose. Deacon Galen James was living at Medford, having practically retired from business after accumulating considerable property in ship building. He was approached, viewed the matter favorably and concluded that his days of active usefulness were by no means ended. He pledged himself and his resources to the new enterprise. He espoused it heartily, too, saying that he intended to make it go, and associated with him in the partnership Deacon Edward W. Fay of Charlestown. The two made the necessary mechanical arrangements and on Friday, May 25, 1849, the new paper appeared, the names of Edward Beecher, Joseph Haven, Jr., and Increase Tarbox appearing in the upper right hand corner of the first page as editors. Beneath this superscription was the name of Rev. E. D. Moore as office editor, and the further statement that the editors in their labors had the co-operation of Rev. R. S. Storrs, Rev. B. B. Edwards, Rev. E. A. Park, Rev. E. N. Kirk and Rev. W. I. Budington. The paper announced itself as printed at the New England Type Foundry, Congress Street, of which Hobart & Robbins were the proprietors, though the editorial and publishing office was at 12 School Street.

THE CONGREGATIONALIST

VOLUME LXXIV BOSTON THURSDAY 16 MAY 1889 —Ten Pages NUMBER 20

HEADING (REDUCED) OF THE PAPER WHEN IN THE EIGHT PAGE FORM.

The Congregationalist did not go forth into the cold world relying solely on the friendly expressions of its wellwishers. The proprietors before projecting it had bought out the Boston Reporter, with its list of about 2,500 subscribers, and it was natural that the office editor of that paper, Rev. E. D. Moore, should take a similar position on the new paper.

The prospectus was an able document, making it plain that the paper would be conducted on a broad, catholic basis, would champion the great moral reforms of the day and would stand, not as a representative of any theological party, but for comprehension within evangelical lines. A year and a half later, when reviewing its history up to that period, it disclaimed vigorously the idea that it was or would be the organ of either New Haven Seminary or Andover Seminary, and declared its intention to treat in an impartial and sympathetic fashion themes relating to politics, literature, theology and practical religion.

One by one, in subsequent issues of the paper after the first number, names were added to the co-operating editorial staff which we now recognize as those of men who have since then had a notable share in denominational activities. Among them are recorded Joel Hawes, Henry B. Smith, A. H. Clapp—our beloved "Huntington," who is with us until this day—J. W. Chickering, George E. Day, Ray Palmer and several others.

In 1851, Oct. 24, the paper bought the Christian Times, which had then been running four years, being edited by Rev. Dorus Clarke and Rev. J. Choules. The former became office editor of The Congregationalist, succeeding Mr. Moore. Already from the principal editorship had withdrawn Mr. Haven, Jan. 3, 1851, on account of his call to Amherst College, and July 11, 1851, Mr. Tarbox, to become the secretary of the Education Society. Mr. Haven's immediate successor was Rev. R. S. Storrs, and Dr. Dexter's name first appears Oct. 24, 1851, accompanied by the announcement that Rev. E. N. Kirk and Rev. A. L. Stone would be special contributors.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE CONGREGATIONALIST.

Under this joint pastoral-editorship The Congregationalist's earlier years reflected the strong grasp and spiritual breadth of the men who wielded the pen, and its columns furnished a large variety of wholesome miscellaneous matter. The next change of consequence arose at the time of the death in 1856 of Deacon Fay, when Messrs. C. A. Richardson and W. L. Greene acquired an interest in the property, the former becoming the office editor and the latter assuming charge of the business department. From this time forward a new and forceful impulse made itself felt throughout the entire paper, both as respects its literary qualities and its business development.

Mr. Richardson, though not a college educated man was gifted with remarkable editorial ability, joined to tireless energy and an indomitable purpose. During the period from 1856 to 1867 the paper leaped forward in circulation and influence, and, catering particularly to the family, it established itself in thousands of homes throughout the land. Mr. Richardson sensed with remarkable acuteness the capacity and the desires of the "average reader," and the original contributions, as well as the selected matter, were of a popular character. So without losing its hold on the ministerial and professional classes the paper gained in the esteem of the rank and file. Selections from its choice contributions were brought together in 1866 in a volume called Household Reading, which had so large a circulation that a second volume entitled Good Things was put upon the market.

REV. A. E. DUNNING, D.D.

During the Civil War the pages were witnesses to the excitement of those stirring times, and to the determination of the North to put down the rebellion. Letters from the front from Chaplains Quint and James filled columns week by week. Maps showing the scene of engagements and campaigns were introduced, and a weekly summary of the progress of the war gave as terse, comprehensive and graphic a résumé as was to be found in any daily or weekly sheet. This was prepared by Mr. Richardson in addition to all his other editorial cares, and it was some of the best of the original work of his life. His brother, A. D. Richardson, the famous correspondent, was an occasional contributor, and the tragic ending of his life is recorded in a brief paragraph welling up from the depths of a fond brother's heart.

The next landmark relates to the consolidation in 1867 of the Recorder, whose circulation had been continually dwindling, with The Congregationalist, which then had twice as many subscribers as its rival. The fact that Rev. E. P. Marvin, the editor of the Recorder, was given a position at once on the staff of The Congregationalist and Recorder preserved the line of continuity. At this time the firm of W. L. Greene & Co. succeeded that of Galen James & Co. In the summer of this same year Dr. Dexter, turning a deaf ear to entreaties to take the presidency of Pacific Theological Seminary, resigned the pastorate of Pine Street Church (now Berkeley Temple) and became the leading editor of the organ to which for fifteen years or more he had been an editorial contributor. How vigorously and influentially he wielded his pen until death snatched it from him so suddenly the editorial pages of this paper year after year bear abundant witness. His pungent, incisive style stamped with a peculiar quality all his work.

BUSINESS OFFICE.

EDITORIAL ROOMS.

And yet another change marked this eventful year. This was of the mechanical sort, being the adoption of the eight-page form in the place of the four-page. The new heading, The Congregationalist and Recorder, was set off by a graphic picture of the landing of the Pilgrims. In 1870 the experiment was tried of publishing, in addition to The Congregationalist, a distinct paper called the Recorder at half price, and containing just about half the matter, skimmed from the larger sheet, and about this time, Nov. 5, 1870, the word "Recorder" was dropped from the heading of the paper. After a trial of a little less than three years this experiment resulted so unfavorably that the smaller sheet was discontinued, and although the name of the Recorder was never restored to the main heading of the paper it appeared for a long time in smaller captions over the editorial columns and elsewhere.

CONTRIBUTORS.

It is a noble list of contributors to which this paper can point. It has always been the policy to enlist the best writers on both continents in the service of the paper, and a rapid glance over the files down to the present day reveals the names of many of the prominent literary workers of America and Great Britain.

A pardonable pride may be taken in the fact that comparatively unknown writers have been discovered by this paper and brought into prominence. Gail Hamilton's first work was done in our columns, and for years articles characterized by all her sprightliness and brilliancy appeared almost every week. Lucy Larcom found early recognition and for a time, in addition to contributing poems herself, passed judgment upon all the poetry that was published. The charming stories by Lynde Palmer (Mrs. Pebbles) made their first appearance in The Congregationalist, as well as portions of Sophie May's Prudy Books, beloved of children the world over. Mrs. E. H. J. Cleaveland's poem, No Sect in Heaven, when reprinted attained a circulation of over 200,000 copies, and an equally warm welcome was extended to the Deacon's Week, by Rose Terry Cooke, whose many other stories for this paper helped to give her fame. Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, Frances Lee Pratt, "Grace Greenwood," Sophie May, Isabella T. Hopkins (Z. A. R.), Mary F. Butts and Phœbe Cary were others among the women writers.

To enumerate the prominent male contributors would be like calling the roll of the ministerial and lay leaders of the denomination. We must, however, advert to Prof. T. C. Upham's Letters, Æsthetic, Social and Moral, to the striking series of articles by Professor Phelps, to Leonard Bacon's telling contributions, some of which bore the caption Views from the Watchtower, and to many articles by J. P. Thompson, John Todd, John S. C. Abbott, C. C. Coffin, Henry Clay Trumbull, Henry Wilson, Schuyler Colfax, Jacob Abbott, E. N. Kirk, A. L. Stone, Samuel Wolcott, Ray Palmer, Asa Bullard, E. A. Rand, J. W. Kimball, J. O. Means and I. N. Tarbox. We are dwelling particularly now upon the authors who figured prominently in our columns from twenty to thirty-five years ago, for our present constituency of readers is fairly familiar with the writers of more recent years.

Continuous, too, was the development of the departments of the paper, one after another being added and bringing a fresh element of strength. They related to almost all the concerns of human life and some of their titles are still preserved. Thus the fields of science and of information, practical everyday topics, of health and temperance, of agriculture and finance were opened to the readers of the paper. The department of Church News was a noteworthy evolution, and as early as 1866 the present classification by States arose, with paid correspondents in all parts of the country. So strong a feature did this become that the tribute of imitation was paid by more than one contemporary.

The last quarter of a century has witnessed a large extension of correspondence from different centers. For many years at the capital we were represented by W. R. Hooper, who wrote under the nom de plume Spectator. For years we have had representatives in England and Scotland, and in addition American travelers and sojourners in the Old World have been impressed into service. Rev. W. L. Gage, D. D., furnished, some thirty years ago, an exceptionally valuable series of foreign letters under the nom de plume of "Torc," while Dr. Dexter's piquant letters from abroad ranged through a wide variety of topics. Mr. Richardson, despite his usual close confinement to the office, went about the world considerably, and on his first trip abroad in 1867 wrote twenty-four letters, while a subsequent journey to California bore similar fruit. The paper has always been fortunate in its Chicago representatives, Dr. Roy (Pilgrim) and Dr. Simeon Gilbert serving successively and efficiently in this capacity each for many years.

COMPOSING ROOM.

The change of location—from Cornhill to the Congregational House—in 1873 marked another era in the paper's life, and it may justly be said that Dr. Dexter's energy and enthusiasm were among the potent influences which led the denomination to purchase this structure. We need not relate in detail the progress of the paper in the last quarter of a century. The management underwent no change of consequence until the death of Dr. Dexter in November, 1890, followed by that of Mr. Richardson in January, 1891, when the present editorial management of the paper was inaugurated. With characteristic foresight Dr. Dexter and Mr. Richardson had, practically, years before, selected their successors and trained them for their duties, so the sudden break occasioned by their unexpected deaths was less apparent in the ongoing of the paper.

Reference should be made to the share which associate editors have had in developing and broadening the journal. The first woman to take a place on the staff—and probably the first to enter Boston journalism—was Miss Ellen M. Stone, whose work lasted from 1867 to 1878, when she went to Bulgaria as a missionary. Her able successor was Mrs. Sarah K. Bolton. Rev. Edward Abbott was a valuable member of the staff from 1869 to 1878, displaying the versatility which has characterized the distinguished family to which he belongs. Other worthy and useful persons connected with the paper for longer or shorter periods through a series of years were Samuel Burnham, Rev. F. T. Lee, now of Chicago, Rev. M. D. Bisbee, now of Dartmouth College, Prof. Henry E. Bourne of Adelbert College, Rev. F. H. Kasson, Miss H. H. Stanwood, now Mrs. C. B. Rice, and Miss Mary Barrows.

PRESENT ORGANIZATION.

Since the denomination, in 1873, took possession of the gray stone building on Beacon Street The Congregationalist has had its headquarters there and has several times outgrown the space allotted to it. The rooms of the publisher are on the second floor and there the business management of the paper is centered. Here the subscription books are kept, the daily mail received and distributed and such matters as relate to the purchase of the paper, its mechanical features and its marketing receive attention. Mr. William F. Whittemore, since 1887, when Mr. Greene laid aside the active responsibility for this department, has been the publisher of the paper. The head bookkeeper, Mr. E. H. Hames, began his business career as a boy in the office of The Congregationalist, and is thoroughly conversant with all that pertains to the work of the business office, having a remarkable familiarity with the subscription lists. The advertising department is under the charge of Mr. O. B. Merrill and Mr. H. F. Grout. Miss Ruby M. Tyler is cashier.

The mailing room is on the same floor with the business office, and the busiest days here are Wednesday and Thursday, when the mail bags are being packed for their journeys hither and thither to every State and territory in the country and to many foreign lands as well.

The ascent of two flights of stairs, or, if one has plenty of leisure, the use of the elevator, brings the visitor to the editorial rooms, where the staff of workers occupy desks in close but friendly proximity. The editor in-chief, Dr. Dunning, shapes the policy of the paper and passes final judgment upon everything that appears in its columns. Mr. Dexter, besides being an editorial writer and an owner of the paper, conducts the literary department. In point of service he is the oldest member of the staff. During an absence of nine months in Europe his place is being supplied by Rev. I. O. Rankin. Mr. Bridgman, the managing editor, is responsible for each week's make-up and for the general oversight of all the departments. To Mr. Morris fall the preparation of the review of the week headed Current History, the perusal of the exchanges and the preparation of much miscellaneous editorial and news matter. Mr. Stickney is office editor and superintends the Church News department, being assisted therein by Miss Kittredge. Miss Dyer has been connected with the paper for fifteen years. She projected and has developed the Home department, in conducting which of late she has been aided by Miss Buckley, who also prepares Progress of the Kingdom. Miss Florence S. Fuller furnishes stenographic and clerical help. Mr. Martin is a weekly visitor and even November's gloom is changed at once to sunshine when his cheery voice calls "good morning." The day that goes by without a call from Dr. Quint lacks a certain completeness. He passes from desk to desk chatting with the staff in turn and his counsel is frequently sought and greatly prized. The writer of the Business Outlook is Mr. Henry E. Hammond of the Boston Commercial Bulletin.

PRESS ROOM.

MAILING ROOM.

Up still another flight of stairs is Mr. Thomas Todd's composing-room, where he whom Mr. Martin has immortalized as the Despotic Foreman holds sway. But if all tyrants possessed even a fraction of his good temper and consideration of others revolutions would be unknown. His labor and that of his nimble-fingered assistants are indispensable factors in the production of the paper. After the forms are "made up" on Tuesday afternoon they are taken by faithful men to the printing establishment of T. J. M. Smith & Co., on Purchase Street, where the best modern machinery speedily transforms white paper into printed sheets. The folding and binding process comes next and then the great baskets of papers are loaded into wagons and dispatched to the Congregational House.

GATHERED FROM OUR FILES.

In our study of the bound volumes of the paper, in order to familiarize ourselves with its history, we have chanced upon a multitude of notes extremely suggestive of contemporaneous history. Some of these we print below.

Jan. 3, 1816. The Recorder. Published every Wednesday afternoon, At No. 76, State Street, Boston, by Nathaniel Willis. Price three Dollars a year. (Entrance through Mr. H. Messinger's Hat-Store, or in the rear of the building from Wilson's Lane.

April 17, 1816. (From the American Advertiser.) The directors of the (Philadelphia) Academy of fine Arts have secured this masterpiece of modern painting (Allston's picture of the dead man restored to life by touching the bones of the prophet Elisha) the work of an American artist. This picture, which gained the prize of two hundred guineas from the British Institution, and excited the delight and admiration of foreign amateurs, is now to grace the walls of our Academy.

Aug. 28, 1816. Mr. Gallaudett and his deaf and dumb companion Laurent Clerc, have arrived in Hartford, and will shortly commence their labors in the Institution established in that city.

Jan. 1, 1817. It entered into our original design to furnish our readers with a select list of publications. In order that we may do it, we wish that authors would seasonably hand us at least the title-page of their works, for otherwise we cannot be responsible for inserting them accurately, or even for inserting them at all.

April 21, 1818. Late travellers in the interior of India, give us an account of a chain of mountains rising from the valley of Nepaul, called the "Himalaya chain"—the summit of whose highest peak is estimated at 26,462 feet, or about five miles above the level of the sea—Chimborazo, the highest peak of the Andes, had always been considered as the most elevated part of the globe, being 21,450 feet, or nearly four miles high.

July 24, 1819. A writer in the Boston Gazette recommends that on every alarm of fire at night, householders should "place immediately in an elevated situation a light to lead the way. This may induce a great number of our citizens to attend all fires, and save the property of the public in general." To this we would add a suggestion, that the name of the street, or section of the town where the fire is, be always mentioned by those who first cry fire, that people may know where to go with their buckets, without loss of time.

Aug. 31, 1822. "No lover of new translations of the Bible," is excluded for want of Greek types.

March 27, 1824. A new pocket edition of Dwight's Theology has been published in London in six pocket volumes, with a copious life of the author and a portrait by Romney.

April 17, 1824. (Announcement.) Village Hymns, for social worship; designed as a supplement to Dr. Watts Psalms and Hymns, by Rev. Asahel Nettleton.

May 29, 1824. Messrs. Carey and Lea have in press and announce for publication no less than eleven American works.

June 19, 1824. Franklin's Life and Maxims have been lately published in France in Modern Greek, and sent to Greece.

April 14, 1826. "The Great Unknown" no longer unknown. We have seen a letter from London, dated the 14th of February, which mentions that Sir Walter Scott had acknowledged himself (under oath) the author of Waverly Novels. It is already known that the author of these novels was a large creditor of the house of Constable & Co., which failed some time since. In proving this claim, Sir Walter was obliged to acknowledge himself the author of these works. (N. Y. Gaz.)

April 28, 1826. The public are generally aware that Noah Webster Esq. of Newhaven, has been engaged for more than 20 years in preparing for the press an "American Dictionary of the English Language." The prospectus of this important work is at length issued; and is accompanied by testimonials of approbation from a great number of distinguished gentlemen, among whom are Judge Story and the Hon. John Pickering of Salem, Rev. Jared Sparks, Editor of the North American Review, President Day and Professors Silliman, Gibbs and Kingsley of Yale College, Professors Willard and Channing of Harvard College, Professor Everrett, Rev. Sereno E. Dwight, late of Boston, Gov. Clinton of New York, President Madison, and the Hon. John Trumbull, author of Mc. Fingal.

June 2, 1826. The United States Literary Gazette published in this city and the New York Review, are to be united and hereafter published simultaneously in New York and this city under the joint editorship of Messrs. W. C. Bryant and Carter.

FOUR YEARS OF CLUB WORK.

The Young Men's Sunday Evening Club of Appleton, Wis., is now on its fifth year. The fourth anniversary service was held on a recent Sunday and an elaborate program was issued, giving in brief the history and work of the organization as well as a complete directory of the church.

Beginning as the first of its kind the success of the club was problematical. The novelty was expected to wear popularly but a short time and then perhaps cease to be effective.

The twenty original members have stood together through these years and have increased their numbers to 560, and their work is now stronger and more efficient than at any previous time. The distinctive features which first characterized their work have been retained and briefly are: short sermons on timely topics, good music and programs in the hands of all who attend.

The design to enrich the evening service has to an eminent degree been successful. All men not affiliated with other church work are cordially invited to this and the results are an enlarged parish, increased attendance at both the morning service and the Sunday school and a marked helpfulness in the financial and social condition of the church. Heartily indorsed by the church and community, meeting but little adverse criticism, and that chiefly from the prejudice of those who have not participated in its service, the club has come to occupy an important place in the field of this church.

During the past year over 300 musicians have assisted, and occasionally prominent speakers from outside have helped to deepen and broaden the influence. The social features have been introduced wisely and in no small degree have proved an important factor. Two social entertainments and a lecture course of high order have been provided during the year and enthusiastically sustained. The receipts, outside of the ordinary church contributions, have been nearly $1,800 and the expenses a little over $1,600.

The influence of the work has extended far beyond this organization and cannot be measured. By many letters, programs and printed reports as helps, other organizations, patterned mainly after this, are working now in methods chiefly in the same line and with the same beneficent results. J. F. F.

The daughter of a Jewish rabbi in New York city married a Roman Catholic recently. Her father, as soon as he discovered the fact, resigned his pastorate and sent the following letter to his daughter, a letter that reveals a spirit which is so typical that it explains much of the vitality of Judaism as a religion and the Hebrews as a people:

You are in a different sphere of life and you are in a new family circle. It is your duty then to gain the affection of your new companions, but not to look back on us whom you have discarded. God will console you and will give you a new heart to repent one of these days. These are the last words I will ever write to you. Your betrayed father.

The Home

LOOKING TOWARD SPAIN.

BY JULIA C. R. DORR.

Among the choicest of our early as well as later poetical contributors we are proud to rank Mrs. Julia C. R. Dorr, whose beautiful sonnets and other poems glorify the home life, its loves, joys and sorrows, and breathe with tender and devout feeling. Julia Caroline Ripley was born of French parentage on her mother's side in Charleston, S. C., Feb. 13, 1825, but when a child her family settled in Vermont where she has lived ever since, her home being now in Rutland. In 1847 she married Seneca R. Dorr. Besides contributing both prose and poetry to prominent periodicals, she has published several novels as well as books of verse.

I stand on a rocky headland
Far out in the deep blue main,
And only its tremulous splendor
Lies between me and Spain.

Behind me the pine tree forest,
Singing the old refrain;
Before the exulting billows
And the far dreamland of Spain.

On the red rocks dash the breakers,
Their spray is a blinding rain;
My hair is wet with the sea foam,
But the wind blows straight from Spain.

Hark to the roar and the tumult
And the cries like a soul in pain!
But beyond is the calm and the silence,
And the beautiful land of Spain.

Afar, on the dim horizon,
I watch with a yearning vain
Yon fair ship gallantly sailing
Straight on to the ports of Spain.

And it's O, for the splendid castles,
And the light on tower and fane,
And the mystical, magical glory
Of the marvelous realm of Spain!

Night falls on the rocky headland
As day and its splendors wane,
While o'er the dark waters the moonlight
Is building a bridge to Spain.

But I think with an infinite longing
Of the hopes that no longer reign,
Of the dreams that are past fulfillment,
Unless on thy shores, O Spain!

SIGNPOSTS ALONG THE PATHWAY OF WOMAN'S PROGRESS.

BY FRANCES J. DYER.

To record in detail the notable achievements of American women during the period covered by the life of The Congregationalist would require all the space allotted to the Home Department. I shall attempt, therefore, only to call attention to a few signposts along the four great highways of industrial and social life, education, moral reform and missionary effort.

We must travel forty years along the beaten path of conservative ideas before coming to that sharp turn in the road marked Woman's Rights, which George Meredith calls "the most indigestible fact of the century." Then it was a terrifying sign and, peering into the thorny, untrodden way leading apparently into a labyrinth of difficulties, few there were which entered therein. But a corporal's guard bravely followed the directing finger and blazed the way for that new road which now ramifies in countless directions. The original design was to secure equal political rights for both sexes, and, while this specific end has not been attained, the effort has resulted in opening up all those new avenues of employment which have radically changed the industrial status of woman. The sentiment in regard to suffrage at that time is well illustrated in the familiar anecdote concerning the pastor of the Congregational church in Malden, who thus announced an address to be given by Lucy Stone under the auspices of the Massachusetts Anti-Slavery Society. Holding the notice up before his face, he said: "I am requested by Mr. Mowry to say that a hen will undertake to crow like a cock at the Town Hall this afternoon at five o'clock. Anybody who wants to hear that kind of music will, of course, attend." The feeling of the press was voiced by Samuel Bowles, a most estimable man, who welcomed the same gentle speaker through the columns of the Springfield Republican in this gentlemanly fashion: "You she-hyena, don't you come here!" Today a woman suffrage gathering creates no more sensation than a prayer meeting.

But the indirect ends gained by the woman's rights movement are what we notice most as we read the signs along this new road. Then only two bypaths, teaching and sewing, led into the industrial world. Today women journey side by side with men in all the trades and professions. Whether this consitutes an ideal state of society, however, is an open question. The first woman who kept a store in Massachusetts was a widow in Lowell, who timidly undertook to support herself and children by selling boots and shoes. When she put up her modest sign it was greeted with a loud guffaw by outsiders in the street. Now, in this State alone, over 300 occupations are open to women and there are over 500,000 wage-earners in their ranks, not including those in domestic service in private families. Outside of employments like dressmaking and millinery, that are considered as essentially feminine, we find women engaged as architects, chemists, taxidermists, house and sign painters, butchers, carpenters, brass and metal workers, makers of caskets, tiles, twine, fireworks, matches and scores of other articles. I regret to say that there are eighty-one saloon keepers in this ancient commonwealth and one manufacturer of ale and beer. In the country at large are nearly 1,500 commercial travelers, 216 stock raisers and 56,809 farmers. The number who earn their living as clerks, bookkeepers and operatives in mills or factories runs into the hundred thousands.

Turning to the professions we find that the first woman lawyer was admitted to the Iowa bar in 1869. Now there are seventy-five practicing law in twenty-three States, eight of which were obliged to pass special legislative acts to secure them the privilege. The advance in medicine may be gauged by a few salient facts. When Harriet Hosmer, a sculptor of whom Massachusetts is justly proud, wished to study anatomy she knocked in vain at the doors of medical colleges in New England and New York. Crossing the Mississippi she went to Dr. McDowell, dean of the Medical College in St. Louis, who said to her, with true Southern chivalry, "You shall study anatomy in my college, and if anybody interferes with you he will interfere with me first." Yet in her own State, not long after, the first medical school in the world for women was opened. This was in Boston, Nov. 1, 1848, with twelve students. In the same city today are two hospitals, the New England Hospital for Women and Children and the Vincent Memorial Hospital, which were started and are managed by women. In Kansas they have been appointed to the office of county physician. In several States they are trustees of asylums and hospitals, and the whole number of physicians and surgeons in the United States is nearly 2,500. As preachers 165 occupy pulpits and 228 may be found in the ranks of journalism. The number of authors, artists and professional musicians exceeds 15,000. Women also serve as bank directors, factory inspectors, prison and library commissioners, and 154,805 are teachers.

Another narrow byway leading out of this main road has become a broad and beautiful avenue known as Women's Clubs. When Amelia B. Edwards on leaving America was asked what impressed her most here she said, "The number, size and importance of women's colleges, the enormous forward movement for education for everybody, and the universality and activity of women's clubs." In these latter organizations we find some of the finest exponents of the nobler social ideals which mark the close of the century. There is a disputed point of priority between the Sorosis of New York and the New England Woman's Club of Boston, but it is certain that both came into existence in 1868. From this small beginning has sprung the flourishing national body called the General Federation of Women's Clubs, with Julia Ward Howe for its honored president, and a membership of over 600,000 representing about 600 clubs. Besides the personal enrichment of mind and character that has come to thousands of women from journeying along this road, they have been potential in bringing about civic and social reforms of no small magnitude. They have secured, among other public ends, better tenements for working people, more humane care of criminals and paupers, improved sanitary conditions for schoolhouses, the appointment of police matrons and the creation of higher ethical standards. An enlargement of this thoroughfare led to the magnificent movement in behalf of working girls, ten years ago, under the leadership of Grace Dodge of New York, and the constituency of these clubs runs far into the thousands.

Going back to the sharp turn in the road in order to traverse the path of education, one is bewildered by the number and the curious character of the signs. For instance, here is a Connecticut town meeting which records that "it is the sense of this meeting that girls should not be taught the back part of the arithmetic!" Again we rub our eyes when Massachusetts proudly proclaims in 1828 that girls may attend school the year round. For a century and a half after the organization of its public school system in 1635 girls were shut out altogether and then were permitted to attend school only from April to October, so this indicates a tremendous concession. Ipswich Seminary, the mother of Mt. Holyoke, was opened by Mary Lyon in 1828, and five years later girls were admitted at Oberlin. But after the establishment of Vassar, the first college devoted exclusively to the education of the so called weaker sex, in 1865, one can no more read the signs along this road than he can count the telegraph poles as he is whirled along in a modern express train. And the pace of the girls themselves, from that humble starting point of the "back part of the arithmetic" to the goal of college president, a position now filled by five American women, is like the chariot race in Ben Hur.

It was considered a great gain when the Massachusetts Institute of Technology extended the privilege of its scientific courses to women and appointed the first graduate, Mrs. Ellen H. Richards, instructor in sanitary chemistry. But such things have ceased to be remarkable. Equality of opportunity is the recognized canon in modern education. To Massachusetts also belongs the distinction of organizing the Association of Collegiate Alumnæ, now a national body with a representation from fifteen colleges. And to Mrs. Pauline Agassiz Shaw belongs the credit of starting kindergartens, to which she has personally contributed $344,579.

The most conspicuous signpost which points the way to the manifold roads of moral reform is marked Temperance. This cause best typifies that passion for righteousness which has found expression in the social purity and kindred movements, in midnight missions, and all those forms of specialized work made necessary by the existence of the monster evil of intemperance. A praying band of Ohio women started the crusade in 1873. It developed almost immediately into a national body and now has a network of branches in every State and Territory, including Alaska. Splendidly systematized into departments of preventive, educational, evangelistic, social and legal work and enrolling in its juvenile societies an army of thousands of boys and girls of every sect, color and nationality, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union has become one of the grandest highways of modern times.

A last signpost, glittering in letters of golden light, bears the emblem of the cross and the word Missions. It is true that early in the century consecrated feet trod in narrow byways of personal gifts and sacrifice, but not till 1861 was the road of organized missionary effort opened whereon multitudes now walk rejoicingly toward the palace of the King. In the authentic anecdote of the Michigan pastor who, prior to the date mentioned, always insisted upon attending the women's meetings because "no one knew what they would pray for if left alone" is reflected the suspicions then extant toward feminine power, even in a religious gathering.

The Woman's Union Missionary Society of New York was the pioneer in this divinely guided movement, the Woman's Board of Boston followed in 1868, and the Methodists, Presbyterians, Baptists and others fell into line in rapid succession. At present there are thirty-three such Boards with thousands of local auxiliaries. The primary purpose was the evangelization of those in foreign lands, but the reaction was soon felt in the old-fashioned sewing circles which had been the recognized agency for home work. Then, as Miss Ellen C. Parsons says in her admirable paper read at the Congress of Missions at the World's Fair: "Every class must be sought out and benefited. The emigrant girl must be met on the wharf when she lands. The good Samaritan must pour oil into the wounds of the Alaskan girl fallen among thieves. The Huguenot blood and the Covenant blood in the mountains of Kentucky, Tennessee and North Carolina must be searched out and sent to school. There must be Sunday schools for the cowboys and even the Jews must not be overlooked any longer. . . . Efforts are put forth for Italian laborers along the beds of great railway lines, and for the Slovack miners in Pittsburg, and if anybody is generally left out he is specially gathered in under the term neglected populations." Young Women's Christian Associations came into existence almost simultaneously with the missionary boards and have been followed by King's Daughters, Girl's "Friendlys," Red Cross societies and kindred organizations for the service of humanity.

In the retrospect of these eighty years it is manifest that the Civil War helped to develop women more than any other single agency. The prodigious exertions then put forth by them in behalf of the soldiers, as shown in the consummate skill and marvelous success of the great sanitary fairs—a suggestion of Mrs. Mary A. Livermore's—brought forth talents which have since been devoted to the ends of Christian philanthropy. May woman's gifts never be degraded to anything less worthy! In view of what has been accomplished I think we may modestly accept the estimate of James Bryce, who says: "No country seems to owe more to its women than America does, nor to owe to them so much of what is best in social institutions and in the beliefs that govern conduct."

FATHERHOOD.

BY MRS. M. E. SANGSTER.

Mrs. Margaret E. Sangster, the accomplished editor of Harper's Bazar, needs no introduction to readers of The Congregationalist, to which she has been a frequent contributor for fifteen years. As author, poet, editor and reviewer she has won a large place in modern literature and a still larger place in the hearts of her readers, who are encouraged and comforted by the strong, serene and sympathetic personality, the spirit of which pervades even her written words. Mrs. Sangster's maiden name was Munson, and she was born in New Rochelle, N. Y., Feb. 22, 1838, marrying George Sangster in 1858. Her present home is in Brooklyn.

American fathers are, as a rule, so occupied with the cares of life that their relations to their children become, in a sense, superficial. Mothers are the intimates of the little ones, their refuge from distress, their confidantes and counselors. Fathers provide the means for the carrying on of the home. They are regarded with affection and respect, but in many cases they do not really know their children, nor do their children feel acquainted with them, as they might reciprocally know and be known where life is less rigid and hours less exacting.

As children grow up and enter on the responsibilities of maturity, they become clear-sighted as to their fathers. Nothing is so terrible or so tragic as the condemnation of a child who sits in judgment on a weak, selfish or erring father. Nor is anything in life more beautiful than the tribute paid by sons and daughters to him whose name they bear, whose family line they carry on and who stands to them as the head of their house. One likes to see the deference belonging to the chief of a clan paid to the father, to observe running through family life an instinctive regard for and belief in the father as wise and worthy and the ruler of one's race.

In reading lately the Life of Professor Austin Phelps, by his daughter, Mrs. Ward, I have been deeply impressed with the loftiness of this great man, not as a scholar or preacher or theologian merely, but as a father. A busy man, the claims on his time and strength clamorous and manifold, a man suffering from delicate health, a man belonging so much to the great outside public that he might have thought himself excused from continual attention to the little kingdom of home, Professor Phelps never sought exemption from the smallest duty, and gave himself with utter lavishness of love to his children.

One aspect of his grand sort of fatherhood especially touched me as I read the pages in which his gifted daughter has inscribed her eloquent tribute to the object of her reverential affection. With most people of strong natures, Professor Phelps was emotional and impulsive. Sometimes he spoke too soon, or reproved a child as an offender when the child was not deserving of blame. On such occasions this father never failed to acknowledge his error. "It was one of the rare things about him that he was not ashamed to apologize to the child whom he might have wronged. Of that simple nobility which of us ever took a low advantage? It was a thing too high." Unalterable moral rectitude, the deepest tenderness, the swiftest sympathy, the most unfailing consideration made this father's life a type of the Heavenly Father. From such a home the children could not go out orphaned into the world. They would reach up and take the divine hand the more confidently, that the earthly father's hand had been so firm and so close clasping and so blessedly true in its guidings.

Fathers and mothers, too, need, now and then, to inquire of themselves what is the best thing they can give their children. It is in the atmosphere to think that money, land, a good bank account, luxury, a fortune, are to be accumulated for one's heirs. Better than these is an outpouring of one's self, is a stamping of character with a personality rare and sweet and strong. Best of all is the so living with one's children that the children shall find God through the influence of the earthly home.

The usual and sometimes extravagant frivolities of "leap year day" had one sensible exception this year in a country town not far away, where a lady invited to her home a large number of her neighbor ladies with the proviso that their gowns should conform in length to a prearranged and conservative standard—not at all of the "bloomer" variety, but sufficiently shortened to avoid trailing the dirt. A row of tiny bells, set in a board three inches from the floor, over which the guests walked, was the test—if the bells jingled that lady did not receive a rose! The day was eminently favorable to the experiment, the rain, mud and slush conspiring to commend the good sense of the "emancipation" improvement. If bissextile days can be utilized for the general good in this way it is a pity that the Gregorian calendar will allow no other opportunity for emphasizing such a needed and notable reform until 1904!

THOSE FORGOTTEN NAMES.

BY KATE UPSON CLARK.

There are few things more annoying than to be approached by some one who seems a perfect stranger, yet who pronounces your own name and extends his hand, expecting to be recognized. Of course, you do not know him. You met him once at some club or reception, and, as chance would have it, he has remembered you, while you have forgotten him. You stammer the hackneyed formula about forgetting his name though his face is familiar, wherein, as likely as not, you stretch your conscience a little. Possibly, he taxes your patience still further by begging you to recall that very jolly story which you told, and which he followed up by one "which you cannot have forgotten."

The next man shows himself to be a gentleman. You may not know him any more than you knew the first speaker, but your heart warms to him and your respect for him is awakened when he says: "How do you do, Mr. Jones? My name is Robinson, and I had the pleasure of meeting you at the dinner given to General Smith."

In an instant all the circumstances flash over you. You remember him, and you remember him with the greatest pleasure. The densest man in society could not fail to have his memory quickened by so circumstantially kind a description as this courteous man volunteers, in order to make you at ease, of the place and time of your former meeting. In the other case, your first embarrassment is momently deepened by the expectation which your rude friend entertains that you cannot fail soon to recall so important a person as himself. You hope that you may never meet him again to remind you by his mere presence of your stupidity and of his own disappointment in in you.

The moral of every such case—and hundreds of them occur in good society every year—is obvious. In meeting any one with whom we have only a slight acquaintance, one should always introduce one's self by name, especially if such an one is in the way of meeting a great number of people all the time. In these days of large assemblies, it is impossible to keep names and faces properly attached, or even to preserve clearly in the mind the features of those whom we meet. It should be an invariable rule among all right minded men and women, when taking the initiative in speaking to any but a well known friend. "I am Mr. Johnson (or Miss Thompson). I met you at the reception at Mrs. Blank's." This simple statement usually settles matters between you, whether you remember the new-comer or not. It is the only polite system to be employed in such a case.

---

I have learned from observation that three things happen to a man who works steadily without relaxation. In the first place, he becomes nervous, irritable and hard to get along with. In the second place, the grade of his work falls off, his services are worthless, and he is liable to err in his judgment. In the third place, he dies suddenly. It is an incontrovertible law of nature.—Chauncey Depew.

ABOUT PEOPLE.

The young empress of Russia is showing an earnest interest in the line of temperance reform. Recently she has had interviews with several provincial governors regarding the best means of checking the fearful increase of intemperance among the peasantry. It is understood that she intends to found a woman's temperance association.

A beautiful anecdote is told of Wendell Phillips, illustrating his loverlike devotion to his invalid wife. At the close of a lecture engagement in a neighboring town, his friends intreated him not to return to Boston. "The last train has left," they said, "and you will be obliged to take a carriage into the city. It is a sleety November night, cold and raw, and you will have twelve miles of rough riding before you get home." To which he replied, "But at the end of them I shall find Anne Phillips!"

Even when occupied with a houseful of brilliant and notable guests at his studio receptions, Lord Leighton could find time to give some attention to any little visitors that might accompany their elders. On one of these occasions a pretty little girl was seen struggling to edge her wee person through the crowd in order to see his pictures, but without success. In a moment the president of the Royal Academy grasped the situation, raised her to his shoulder, and the two were soon chatting gleefully together as if they were lifelong friends.

A sister of the poet Longfellow is still living in Portland, although at an advanced age. Mrs. Pierce has had a remarkable experience as a Sunday school teacher. She took charge of a class of tiny girls when they made their first appearance at church and she continued to teach the same scholars until one by one they married and moved away. But the ties of friendship between teacher and pupils, as well as between the members of the class, were wonderfully strong and now as gray-haired grandmothers return to Portland for a visit each one pays her court to Mrs. Pierce, while the bond of having belonged to "Mrs. Pierce's class" is like that of a close society.

One reason why Christina Rossetti remained single was because, in two cases at least, she was withheld by religious considerations. In the new volume of her poems edited by her brother he says, in a note: "The first suitor, a painter, was a Christian, but not in the Anglican communion; the second, a scholar and literary man—and this was far the more serious affair of the two—either was not a Christian at all, or else was a Christian of undefined and heterodox views." This recalls the position taken by one of our New England poets, Lucy Larcom, who refused a lover on patriotic grounds, convinced that she could not marry a man who upheld slavery. The position she took is set forth in her noted poem, A Loyal Woman's No.

One of the best tributes ever paid to the sanctity of the home and to the right of the head of the family to make the hearthstone a "dead line," over which none can pass safely without his permission was that given by Bismarck when he defied the present ruler of Germany. Bismarck had had an interview with Herr Windthorst. Emperor William, learning of this, proceeded to Bismarck's home and demanded to know what they had been talking about, and why Bismarck had appointed a private interview without consulting him. Whereupon Bismarck intimated that he could not allow any one to determine who should or should not cross his threshold. "Not even when I as your sovereign command you so to do?" cried the emperor, with passion. "The commands of my sovereign end at the drawing-room of my wife," replied the Iron Chancellor with calm dignity.

Closet and Altar

If thou canst for a while cease from thine own speaking and willing thou shalt hear unspeakable words from God.

The greatest evils are from within us and from ourselves also we must look for our greatest good, for God is the fountain of it, but reaches it to us by our own hand; and when all things look sadly around about us, then only we shall find how excellent a fortune it is to have God to our friend, and of all friendships that only is created to support us in our needs.—Jeremy Taylor.

Wilt thou with St. John rest on the loving heart of our Lord Jesus Christ, thou must be transformed into the beauteous image of our Lord by a constant, earnest contemplation thereof, considering his holy meekness and humility, the deep, fiery love that he bore to his friends and his foes, and his mighty, obedient resignation which he manifested in all the paths wherein his Father called him to tread. And now ye must gaze much more closely and deeply into the glorious image of our Lord Jesus Christ than I can show you with my outward teaching, and maintain a continual, earnest effort and aspiration after it. Then look attentively at thyself, how unlike thou art to this image and behold thy own littleness. In the glorious likeness of Christ thou wilt be made rich and find all the solace and sweetness in the world.—John Tauler.

What we are stretches past what we do, beyond what we possess.—Henry Drummond.

Thou sayst, "Take up thy cross,
O man, and follow me";
The night is black, the feet are slack,
Yet we would follow thee.

O heavy cross of faith,
In what we cannot see!
As once of yore, thyself restore,
And help to follow thee.

Within our heart of hearts
In nearest nearness be;
Set up thy throne within thine own,
Go, Lord, we follow thee.

—F. T. Palgrave.

For one to be a Christian it is only necessary that he be loyal, but to be a Christian of the first order he must be mystical. Jesus still comes to us in our outer life, and blessed is the man who arises and follows him whithersoever he goes. Jesus still comes to the door of the soul, and that man is most blessed who receives the Lord into his guest-chamber.—Ian Maclaren.

We thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, that we can truly say the Lord is good; his mercy is everlasting. We need help this day. Come to us and tell us what thou wouldst have us do. Hear our prayer for wisdom and our cry for understanding, and look kindly upon us when we stretch forth our hands unto thee. We would live honest, peaceful, useful lives, doing our duty without fear, and walking in thy way in reverence and gladness. When the hill is high and the way is rough, may Christ be near at hand. When the wind is cold and the whole sky is one great cloud, may our hearts be strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus. Amen.

Tangles.

[For the leisure hour recreation of old and young. Any reader who can contribute odd and curious enigmas, etc., of a novel and interesting kind is invited to do so, addressing the Puzzle Editor of The Congregationalist.]

23. ANACROSTIC.

(In this puzzle the first letters of the lines form an anagram, whose answer is described or hinted at in the verse.)

Come to the couch of pain—of woe—
Look where the tears of sorrow flow,
E'er there dispense the kind relief,
And blend thy tears with other's grief.
Rich be the blessings thou shalt know
Hovering around thy path below;
And when thy race on earth is run,
Behold a brighter is begun:
In joy the plaudit waits for thee,
"This kindness thou hast shown to me."

HARRY.

24. ANAGRAMS.

FAMILIAR FLOWERS.

1. One name. 2. Lone dear. 3 We see Pat. 4. Fowl's rune. 5. Rend vale. 6. Wide bend. 7. In coat ran. 8. Do rend log. 9. Inn gate. 10. To hire leap. 11. O, mad girl. 12. Stare. 13. A pi tune. 14. Love it. 15. I run game. 16. Lamb. 17. Note gem tin. 18. Trust in a no. 19. O, the wires.

S. R. M.

25. "NATIONS."

1. This nation never stays at home;
2. This one an offering brings;
3. A nation, this, of clergymen;
4. This one, of queens and kings.

5. This nation's rated musical;
6. And this one knows which which is;
7. A nation, this, hilarious;
8. And here is one of witches.

E. R. B.

26. "CITIES."

1. What city is most extensive? 2. In which do inquisitive people live? 3. What city is famous for its fat men? 4. Which is considered most trustworthy? 5. Which has most rapid transit? 6. What city is very unfortunate? 7. Where is famine imminent? 8. Where may the boldest people be found? 9. Where the most contrary? 10. What is the happiest city you know? 11. Where do people live at the highest pressure? 12. What city is notorious for betrayals? 13. Where is the most quarreling done? 14. Where are people always hungry? 15. Where do beggars congregate? 16. In what city is hatred rife? 17. Where can no secrets be kept? 18. What city is most primitive? 19. Where is science most advanced? 20. Where is it impossible to be selfish?

M. F. LEWIS.

A PRIZE.

Some of the enigmatic "nations" and "cities" of Nos. 25 and 26 may be guessed without difficulty, but perhaps not all. The sender of the best list of both "nations" and "cities" will receive a handsome book of Photographic Views of the World, containing 246 pages, 8 by 11 inches in size. In case of a tie, neatness and arrangement of the list will be considered. Competing answers must be received on or before March 24, and the name of the prize winner will be published in Tangles of April 9.

ANSWERS.

17. Aden's, dean's, Danes, Andes', sedan.

18. Aster, vaster, pilaster, master, Doncaster, boaster, coaster, Zoroaster, chaster, roaster, toaster, feaster, taster, poetaster, waster, faster, disaster, plaster.

19. Parenthetic.

20. I was suffering from a painful toothache, yet I rowed in my canoe to a sloop; in this I sailed down the river to a seine, alone taking a lot of fine mackerel. [Key: Eye in eye; ou in oustiti; ause in because; ps in psalm; ough in tough; yrrh in myrrh; ey in turkey; ngue in tongue; ph in seraph; rhomb in rhomb; eigh in neigh; eign in reign; ph in seraph; ool in wool; pt in ptarmigan; œu in manœuver; phth in phthisic; eigh in neigh; eat in breath; igh in sigh; ough in though; yn in lynx; eigh in sleight; cha in chameleon; pneu in pneumatic; pt in ptarmigan; ioux in Sioux; ey in bey; ps in psalm; ll in llama; ew in new; eign in foreign; phth in phthisic; ys in mystery; ei in gneiss; c in cere; ay in bay; bd in bdellium; ou in mound; ea in tea; ie in sieve; olo in colonel; ough in through; ai in mail; sc in scene; esne in mesne; ai in mail; ey in key; ch in loch; y in lynx; ngue in tongue; aigh in straight; acht in yacht; ov in grovel; ign in align; mb in bomb; acquer in lacquer; elle in belle.

21. Ivy. (IV.)

22. 1. Abraham Lincoln. 2. Oliver Cromwell. 3. Robert Burns. 4. Phillips Brooks. 5. Thomas A. Edison. 6. Louis Agassiz. 7. William E. Gladstone. 8. William Lloyd Garrison. 9. Charles Sumner. 10. Benedict Arnold. 11. Florence Nightingale. 12. Christopher Columbus. 13. Aaron Burr. 14. William T. Sherman. 15. Edward Everett Hale.

Nillor, Middlebury Springs, Vt., gave answers to Nos. 13, 15; H. H., Sherbrooke, Quebec, 14; A. A., Newton, Mass., 13, 14, 15. Under "Answers" of two weeks ago $10,000 should, of course, read $10,100.

MY SHADOW.

I have a little shadow that goes in and out with me,
And what can be the use of him is more than I can see.
He is very, very like me from the heels up to the head,
And I see him jump before me when I jump into my bed.

The funniest thing about him is the way he likes to grow—
Not at all like proper children, which is always very slow;
For he sometimes shoots up taller, like an India rubber ball,
And he sometimes gets so little that there's none of him at all.

He hasn't got a notion of how children ought to play,
And can only make a fool of me in every sort of way.
He stays so close beside me, he's a coward you can see;
I'd think shame to stick to nursie as that shadow sticks to me!

One morning, very early, before the sun was up,
I rose and found the shining dew on every butter cup;
But my lazy little shadow, like an arrant sleepy-head,
Had stayed at home behind me and was fast asleep in bed.

—Robert Louis Stevenson.

Vigorous, well-preserved women of eighty years old or over are so numerous at the present time as to be a subject of general comment, and much interest is felt in their lives. One writes of her daily enjoyment in reading Greek, a language which she began to study after the age of seventy. Another continues the horseback riding which she has always enjoyed, and has recently been photographed on her favorite horse. A third tells of answering more than fifty congratulatory letters received on her birthday, while an enthusiastic dame of eighty-six is delighting in the outdoor life of California. In questioning these octogenarians we find that they were never considered very strong nor likely to live to be old. They were almost all, from early youth, obliged to "take care of themselves," and perhaps that has been the secret of their longevity. They have never dared to disregard the laws of health, but have lived simply and quietly, ready to stay or go as might be their Master's will.

What furniture can give such finish to a room as a tender woman's face? And is there any harmony of tints that delights like the sweet modulation of her voice?—George Eliot.

WELLESLEY AND MT. HOLYOKE IN SOUTH AFRICA.

The scope of Christian Association work for young women is reflected in a recent journey half way around the globe undertaken by Miss Annie M. Reynolds, a Wellesley graduate, who was appointed last year as the first world's secretary, with headquarters in London. Returning from Australia via South Africa, she speaks first of the Association Home in Johannesberg, a locality to which the eyes of the universe have been attracted lately, and then says of the Cape Town home:

I know of no other association anywhere whose history seems so much of a romance. For several years the association was a union of Christian workers, who met for weekly prayer, and who lived their prayers in working for any needy women of whom they heard. They were especially desirous of helping young women, but were sadly cramped by lack of funds and room, as they had only one small office. One day there came into the office a quiet gentleman, who said: "I understand you are in need of a Young Women's Christian Association Home. I have come to offer you a house to be used for that purpose. I had two daughters who had been studying in Germany, whom I expected home soon to make glad their mother's heart and mine by the sunshine of their presence. Only a few weeks since I received a telegram that they had both been called hence and had exchanged an earthly for a heavenly home. I own a house of twenty rooms on Long Street, which I intended as part of their dowry. I want to make it my daughters' gift to the Young Women's Christian Association. I make no condition, save that it shall be always for their use." So over the door of this Association Home today is a large tablet, recording it as a gift in memory of Minnie and Maria Bam.

Some days later I visited the Huguenot Seminary at Wellington, and learned how the story of Mary Lyons's life had inspired the founder, Rev. Andrew Murray, to begin that work. As I saw the pupils and heard of the far-reaching influence of the work I realized somewhat of the value of America's gift to Africa in the influence of that noble life. As I heard the story of this Association Home, so simply and touchingly told, I wondered if there might not be here something of a return gift of inspiration from Africa to America.

Are there not many homes among us gladdened by the presence of fair young daughters whose fathers and mothers can give as a thank-offering for their lives a Christian home for the girls who have none of their own?

The Conversation Corner.

MY DEAR CORNERERS: We have had all sorts of boats in the Corner —the Valkyrie, the Vigilant, the Marjorie, Joe Lucy's Eskimo kayak, as well as the old Captain's original Alphabet and its successor, the 26, our present dispatch boat. But this is a new kind altogether. The nearest of anything like it I ever knew (except the bowl of the three wise men of Gotham) was in the story which used to be told in Dr. Grenfell's land of good Mother Robin at Old Fort Island, who, when all the small boats had gone adrift in a storm and it was necessary to reach a large boat moored out in the bay, brought out a washtub and sent a boy off in that! But this is a real boat in actual use. Our eight-year-old member in North Dakota sent me the picture and, when I wrote asking about the comical craft and its use on mill-ponds, sent me a miniature model with this explanation:

FT. BERTHOLD, N. D.

Dear Mr. Martin: Papa drew the first picture and I copied it on the mimeograph. A "bull-boat" is a round, skin boat. It is called so because the Indians used to use the skin of the buffalo bull to make their boats, because it took a big skin. You will see what it is like, because I am going to send you a little model and paddle for the Corner Cabinet. The boat is about five or six feet across. A bull-boat sometimes gets a hole in it and the Indians stop up the hole with mud. Two go in the bull-boat, but four can go in it. When one goes in it they have to put a stone in the other side to balance it. We have no mill-ponds here. You have to have an Indian who knows how to paddle it when it is rough. The women paddle them very often. The woman who paddled mamma across the Missouri made the model. . . .

Your friend, EVAN H.

This is one of Evan's mimeographs too, showing a log meeting house and parsonage at an out-station among the Mandans. You will find a very interesting story about it ("Di tapio — who are you?") by Evan's father in the American Missionary magazine for March, for the "A. M. A." has the charge of those Indian missions. The article mentions the woman who made our Cabinet model. If any of us visit the upper Missouri, let us patronize Mrs. Little Crow's buffalo hide ferry-boat!

Di tapio? Who are you? The omitted portion of Evan's letter will answer. I sent him and "Dora" the Corner "certificates," suggesting that they should now exchange photographs. In reply I received the above and the below:

The only late photograph we have is one my papa has drawn of us. I will send it to you. My sister Dora and I were very much pleased with the Pomiuk pictures.

I suspect that "papa" has a considerable strain of fun in him for a missionary of the wilderness—in fact, I remember him as a student!

The mention of Pomiuk, in whom Evan and Dora as well as the little Indian children of that mission have been interested, reminds me of Dr. Grenfell, the missionary surgeon of the far north, of whose visit I have not had a chance before to speak. He only spent two Sundays in New England, but the children—young and old—who became acquainted with him and saw his pictures and heard his story of what God has helped him, and the other missionaries of the "Deep Sea Mission for Fishermen," to do for the men of the North Sea and the sick and starving and needy "liveyers" of the Labrador coast will not soon forget him. I have something more to tell you of Dr. Grenfell, and will only now mention two things he told me about our boy Pomiuk. One was that when the poor fellow cried at the daily dressing of his wounds, Dr. G. chalked on a medicine cupboard in the cabin the days of the week, like this:

| POMIUK. | Sunday. | Monday. | Tuesday. |
|---|---|---|---|
| | B. | G. | G. |

That is, when he kept from crying a mark for Good was given him, otherwise, one for Bad. When he had so many G's, some little present was given him. The other thing was about that little box on his bearskin which you see in his picture on the receipt. It is a soap box which the doctor had given him and which contained all his earthly possessions. When he was brought away from his "tupik," such was his condition that not even his clothes could be taken with him, and the only thing that he brought away was the photograph which I had so much trouble to send to him in Newfoundland, after he left the United States. He clung to that, and if you can use the "X-rays" you can see it in that treasure box which he keeps under his hand!

D. F. has just shown me proofs of two pictures which are to go into this anniversary number, of himself and his accomplices in the printing office, and the boys in the mailing room. What a nice number this will be! I am wondering whether I am not the oldest one "on the paper," in point of service, for I lately came across an old letter of 1856, from Galen James & Co., the proprietors, about my canvassing for the then young Congregationalist. Forty years—that covers half the whole period since the Recorder started! I find articles in my scrap-book which I wrote as early as 1860, and many for the children beginning with 1874—perhaps some of them were read by your parents. This is certain, that the Boston Recorder eighty years ago did not think so much about the children's department as the present editors do, even if good Deacon Willis, who founded the dear old Youth's Companion, did run the paper!

Mr. Martin

CORNER SCRAP-BOOK.

St. (?) Petersburg. The London Little Folks has an interesting statement about the name of the Russian capital which we do not think half of our American little folks know. It is not St. Petersburg, as we always call it, but plain Petersburg. That is, it was not named for St. Peter, but for Peter the Great, who though a great man and good ruler was never made or esteemed a saint. It is said that in Russia the city is always mentioned without the prefix. Can any of our juvenile readers confirm that?

Petrels. But, on the other hand, many places and people and things are named for Peter the apostle, some instances of which may be new to us. The familiar sea bird, the stormy petrel, was so called because it keeps so long on the surface of the waves that it seems to be able, like Peter of the New Testament, to walk upon the water, petrel being the diminutive of Petrus, i.e., "little Peter."

Only Yearly in the World. This distinction is claimed by the Eskimo Bulletin, published annually at the A. M. A. Mission School, Cape Prince of Wales, Alaska, Mr. Lopp, the missionary there at the time of the last issue for 1895, being editor and proprietor. It has two small pages and is evidently reproduced by mimeograph. As may be seen on Dr. Jackson's reindeer map (I got a copy at the A. M. A. rooms), the station is at the extreme west point of Alaska, opposite East Cape in Siberia. As there is only an annual mail there, the resources for news are limited, but the various departments of a well regulated newspaper are sustained. From "Locals" we take the following items:

No Whales.

A Big Walrus Catch.

Ti-now-gorz-ga and Noo-tudl-got, who have been staying here this winter, will return to their home in Asia in a few days.

Two items each are given from the "Fashion" and "Society" departments:

Belts made of the skin of wolferine feet, claws on, with suspender buckles, sleigh bells and door keys dangling, are all the rage.

Bed ticking is the most popular cloth worn over the fur suit this season.

Master Dwight T. Lopp, May 2, gave the Eskimo boys a birthday treat.

On May 10, Se-ga-yook, having killed his first bird with bow and arrow, gave a kisok (flour paste sweetened with molasses) party to his companions.

We should like to have been present at those parties! The reindeer enterprise is reported as successful, the mission herd now numbering 171, and the Bulletin appeals to Congress for a larger appropriation. The advertising columns are interesting—rates free, but no patent medicine "ads"! The first follows a cut of a reindeer:

100 prs. Reindeer horns for sale. Address, etc.

LOST. A black dog—last full moon—two sleeps journey north of the Cape.

How much of meaning there is in these "Mission Notes":

During the whaling season one boat's crew observed Sunday.

The Sunday afternoon prayer meeting is well attended.

The children enjoy singing "Come to Jesus" in their own language:

Kohine Jesus, kohine Jesus,
Kohine Jesus, w-urne;
W-urne kohine Jesus,
Kohine Jesus, w-urne.

The last reminds us of Pomiuk's song, Takpa-nele, Takpanele, a verse of which is printed on his receipts. We should like to hear from "Master Dwight T. Lopp." Who knows but that, eighty years hence, when Alaska may have become a populous and powerful State, this little Bulletin will not be recorded as the pioneer paper? I shall file away my copy in the "Corner Cabinet."

L. H. M.

The Sunday School

LESSON FOR MARCH 22. Luke 12: 37-48

FAITHFUL AND UNFAITHFUL SERVANTS.

BY REV. A. E. DUNNING, D.D.

Those who follow Christ are divided into many sects. But he knew only two divisions of Christians—those faithful to himself and those unfaithful. In these words to his disciples, none of whom were altogether faithful, he described:

I. The Christian's attitude toward Christ. Always he stands in some conscious relation toward his Lord.

1. The Christian is a servant. His business is to obey. Paul delighted to call himself the slave of Jesus Christ. So complete was his subjection that he thought he had no longer a will of his own. He said of himself, "It is no longer I that live, but Christ that liveth in me." But the servant of Christ is servant to no one else. Christ said, "No man can serve two masters"; "One is your Master, and all ye are brethren." Paul said that slaves need not worry about their position. If they were Christians they were "the Lord's freemen" [1 Cor. 7: 21-23]. They served men only in obedience to Christ. Every Christian is bound to serve him.

2. Christians serve an absent Master. Though Christ is spiritually present, we cannot feel ourselves under his eye as we might if we could see him and hear him give directions concerning every step in life. In many respects we live like servants whose master is away. We are often perplexed because we do not know what would please him best. We often see his followers doing what we think must displease him. Many things in the world seem to be going wrong because they lack the supervision of a present master. We ask what would happen if Christ were to come to Chicago, or to Boston, or to other centers of life where men profess to be his servants. The spirit of Christ is with us, but Christ has withdrawn himself from the world.

3. The Christian expects Christ to return. His first disciples thought he would establish on earth a kingdom immediately after his resurrection [Acts 1: 6]. Though he assured them that the time when his rule should be established on earth could not be within their knowledge, he promised them the gift of the Holy Spirit and commanded them to testify of him throughout all the world. While they were obeying this command, they seem to have expected his reappearance at any moment. More than nineteen centuries have passed and he has not returned. His disciples who are faithful are watching for his coming. His message to each one of us today is, "Be ye also ready: for in an hour that ye think not the Son of Man cometh."

This is the great lesson of prophecy, the supreme secret of a successful life. Every hour is a coming of Christ. The sun sets on no day in which some opportunities are not forever closed. The sum of these makes the one life for which we must give account to him. The sum of all lives is to complete and consummate the glorious kingdom in which he is to reign forever. He is guiding all things to their final consummation. That time may come at any moment—is sure to come to us as a surprise. We are in the world like servants of a householder who has left home with the assurance that he will return. We have each a trust, each a work. Any hour may witness sudden and complete changes in the affairs of the house, caused by his appearance, when the opportunity to fulfill the trust and complete the work will be ended.

We are soldiers on guard in the night. Each in his place is safe, nowhere else. There are signs of the Master's coming—a flash here, a light gleaming there. The age has been long on its way. Some day there will be changes in human society as sudden and startling as the darkening of the sun and the falling of the stars, which seem impossible. The power and glory of Christ will shine forth with amazing brilliance. All men will see that he has been the ruling power in history, that he is King over all. But to all that day will come as a surprise. To those who know most about it the time and manner of his coming will be unexpected. The King's message concerning it is, "What I say unto you, I say unto all, Watch."

II. The faithful servant's reward. He receives it every day of his life. Doing his duty is pleasing his master, and that pleases the faithful servant. When his work is done, he will be brought still closer into his master's confidence and will receive larger trusts. To be worthy of them is to have manhood modeled after Christ's. No one who is worthy of these trusts will fail to receive them. The reward of the faithful servant is complete, in himself and in his position.

III. The unfaithful servant punished. Simple neglect of known duty persisted in is self-destruction. Our Lord's figure in describing it is a carnival among the servants of a household during the master's absence. Only once in the gospels beside this instance does he mention drunkenness. That sin does not seem often to have attracted his attention. But in both these instances he speaks of it as preventing men from recognizing his coming and causing their destruction at the hour of the crisis of their lives. No sin is more fatal to Christian life, which is the life that develops the highest manhood and womanhood, than drunkenness. But from whatever cause, to be unprepared to meet Christ at his coming is to make a failure of life. It is to bring down on one's self with certainty the punishment of God.

Yet the character and extent of that punishment will depend on the unfaithful servant's knowledge of the duty required of him which he has failed to perform. Those who sin ignorantly will not be exposed to the same degree of condemnation with those who commit the same sins knowingly. We may well hesitate to pronounce judgment on others. But for ourselves, understanding our advantages for knowing the will of Christ, to neglect it will surely bring on us the ruin of our souls.

THE CHURCH PRAYER MEETING.

Topic for March 15-21. Ordering One's Life for Christ. Col. 3: 12-17.

The motive. The plan, as related to business, church, family, neighbors, country, the world.

(See prayer meeting editorial.)

In our crowded cities, amid the triumphs of material progress and scientific discovery, men's hopes and aims seem steadily narrowing down to the visible and earthly horizon. The church itself has turned with new zeal to philanthropy and social reforms and foreign missions, and just because it is so intent on preparing the way of the Lord looks less eagerly for his appearing. Are there still Christian people too much preoccupied with thoughts of heaven? Richard Baxter tells us that "when it began to be too dark to go on with his reading and writing, and before the candles were brought in, he used to sit quietly in the twilight, meditating on the Saints' Everlasting Rest." Our religion is impoverished and enfeebled because it forgets the powers and the peace of the world to come. We have well-nigh lost the eager, exulting hope so characteristic of the primitive disciples.—British Weekly.

The passing away of early illusions with regard to the sanctity of those who seemed to us exceptionally fervent and devout is one of the severest tests of our loyalty to Christ.—R. W. Dale.

Don't Rub Your Clothes to tatters in a vain attempt to clean them with poor soap. Save your time and health by using
Sunlight Soap
It makes home brighter.
Lever Bros., Ltd., Hudson and Harrison Sts., New York.

Vigor belongs to health. Health to well-fed bodies. It's easy to feed some people, but proper nourishment for the invalid, the convalescent and the dyspeptic is hard to obtain.
Somatose
a perfect food; strengthens and nourishes the system; restores the appetite
Somatose-Biscuit, 10% Somatose. A valuable addition to the diet.
Runkel Bros.' Somatose-Cocoa (10% Somatose), for nursing mothers, invalids and convalescents. A pleasant and strengthening beverage for table use.
Runkel Bros.' Somatose-Chocolate (10% Somatose), for eating and drinking.
All druggists. Descriptive pamphlets free of
Schieffelin & Co., New York, Sole Agts.

Quick as Thought
No time lost with WHITMAN'S INSTANTANEOUS CHOCOLATE.
Taste, flavor and quality the best. Put up in pound and half-pound tins.
Stephen F. Whitman & Son, Sole Mfrs. Philadelphia.

REX BRAND Extract of BEEF FLAVOR
Sample, 4 cents. Book free.
OUDAHY - - SO. OMAHA

THE WORLD KNOWN
LIEBIG COMPANY'S EXTRACT OF BEEF
THE STANDARD FOR PURITY AND EXCELLENCE.

PROGRESS OF THE KINGDOM.

OUR OWN WORK.

Wounded to the Quick. In addition to the protests from the mission field regarding the retrenchment of the American Board comes this stirring letter from India: "We have had the knife of fifty per cent. reductions driven into us by that letter announcing the amount allowed for work this year. I say nothing about the ten per cent. reduction of our salaries, I can stand that kind of 'vote of confidence,' but such a reduction on the funds for our work I cannot stand without protest. I am going back to my station to dismiss half my men, stop half of my schools, let half of my wretched hovels that represent to this people the 'churches of the Living God' go to ruin and I am going to tell those who labor in hope and patiently wait that their brethren in the churches at home are tired of trusting their God and are going to trust 'business principles' hereafter, and that when money is in hand there will be work done in the Periakulam station, and that when there is no money in hand there will be no work. Presently I shall have a statement of 'results' to send home. I could forecast that statement now, but 'business principles' require me to wait and see. I believe that God will avert the consequences of such reductions, and I know that if he does not avert them he is able to overrule them for good. I am not writing in a passion. I feel that I have been betrayed. I am grateful to you for every word of argument and for every word of appeal, but blood flows and such wounds may be healed, but not without leaving a scar. The American Board may have to look to dead men and to live women for its funds, and perhaps it reflects credit on the Congregational churches that it should do so, but thanks be to God, who worketh in us, all the work that is being done does not depend on money. Much of it must stop when the money stops, but that which is best and most precious and most lasting will not stop though the money does stop. The indifference of the church can injure the work, but it cannot kill it."

A Mexican Evangelist. From Rev. J. D. Eaton come tidings of a successful series of evangelistic meetings in Chihuahua, conducted by Rev. Arcadio Morales, a Presbyterian pastor for twenty years in Mexico City. Last summer during the Sunday school convention held in San Luis Potosi, this Spanish minister showed marked power as an evangelist and has been in demand to lead special meetings in Satillo, Monterey and Vera Cruz. Mr. Eaton says of him: "Señor Morales is a man of winning personality, possesses spiritual power to a marked degree and is acquainted with the majority of the Christian workers, both native and foreign." Not until after the Week of Prayer, which marked the beginning of unusual spiritual interest, was he able to visit Chihuahua. The public mind was prepared for his work by the wide distribution of beautifully printed invitations and the daily circulation of hundreds of handbills. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was invited to join with Mr. Eaton's people and for ten days, morning and evening, the meetings continued and were blessed with such an outpouring of the Spirit as profoundly to move all hearts. Not only were believers aroused and stimulated, thirty-five new converts led to begin a new life, but many persons came to hear the Mexican evangelist who had never before attended a Protestant service. It is worth noting that about seventy-five dollars of the expenses were contributed by native members of the congregation. The services of the preacher were gratuitous.

Spiritual Destitution at Home. In an interesting article in The Home Missionary, Rev. T. W. Walters points out the resources and needs of northern Idaho, which is almost completely shut off from the southern part of the State by obstructive mountain ranges, all traffic and traveling between the two sections being through Washington and Oregon. He calls attention to the rich agricultural, grazing and fruit growing land, especially in the Camas prairie, the Potlatch country and the vast Nez Percé reservation, opened for settlement last November, where thousands of families have located their homes; to the flourishing young towns which are rapidly springing up; and then regretfully declares that within the whole of this vast, rich territory we have but one church. Among the mining towns of the Cœur d'Alênes, also, the spiritual destitution is pitiful and appalling. Our general missionary indicates the religious condition of these mining centers when he says that they do not pretend to have any sacred days or sacred hours. Business, money-making and sporting constitute the great aim of life. When spending a Sunday at one of these busy towns Mr. Walters made it an object to find out, and visit if possible, every religious movement therein. He found two small Sunday schools, with about forty scholars in each, superintended and carried forward by women, as not one man was visible. The first school is held in a schoolhouse, the other in a dancehall. In the evening an attempt was made to hold a young people's prayer meeting at a central point, but given up for want of competent leaders. These seemed to be the only religious efforts of the place. Surely we must agree with Mr. Walters that, if the missionary funds are to be devoted to send the gospel to those who have it not, the mining centers of the Panhandle deserve a prominent place on the list.

PEN AND SCISSORS.

President Gates of Harpoot writes that they are trying to render aid to the destitute Armenians by employing them to clear away the débris of the burned buildings, and they hope soon to put a roof on the building of the girls' primary department that it may be used again for school purposes.

The Church Missionary Society has, after mature deliberation, decided to yield to the eager desire of several young women who, before the Ku-cheng massacre, were under appointment for missionary service in China, and they are to be sent to Foochow, where they are enjoined to remain, occupying themselves with the study of the language until they can go into the interior with a reasonable degree of safety.

A fresh instance of Dr. John Paton's self-sacrifice and devotion to the New Hebrides mission is his recent munificent gift of $60,000, presented to the Victorian General Assembly as a fund for carrying on the work to which he has given his heart and life. This large sum is the result of the publication of his autobiography—the profits of the sale and the donations received by him from persons who have read the book.

A new movement inaugurated in England by laymen is known as "A Missionary Mission to Men" and is designed to reach, not the men in the slums of London or in unevangelized lands, but those in the home churches who need to be imbued with the missionary spirit and aroused to intelligent interest and effort. The women of America have organized bands for prayer and study regarding this great subject; why not the men also?

The Christian Chinese connected with the California Chinese Mission of the A. M. A. appeal to members of Sunday schools and C. E. Societies to aid them in purchasing a new and commodious mission home in San Francisco. The cost of rental for the building they have occupied more than twenty years is $900 per year, and the leading workers declare that the time has come when our Congregational mission ought to have larger accommodations and the work should be relieved of this heavy burden of rent. The A. M. A. heartily approves of the enterprise, but is not able to appropriate any funds for it.

With regret we learn that M. Coillard, the veteran Protestant missionary of the Zambezi, has suffered from so severe an illness that he has been ordered home on furlough. Before his sickness he undertook a tour of evangelization which seemed almost fruitless, as he was unable to reach the tribe he went out to seek, and the missionary and his native companions suffered much from privation and from the opposition of the people through whose territory they traveled. But the journey was not in vain, for M. Coillard, with characteristic zeal, turned his attention to the souls of the men in his little caravan. He made frequent appeals to them and prayed much for their conversion, making a serious impression which was deepened after a narrow escape from death at the hands of one of the native chiefs. As a result, when the journey was over eight of these men arose in the church at Lealuyi to declare their new faith and hope.

Y. P. S. C. E.

PRAYER MEETING.

BY REV. H. A. BRIDGMAN.

Topic, March 22–28. "Diligent in Business." Prov. 6: 6–11; Josh. 22: 5.

The first application of this thought should be to our daily work, to the interest in life which calls for our most strenuous endeavor and the larger share of our thought and time. Most of us have some special thing to do in the world. We might like something else better, but, so long as duty points to it, we are cowards and shirks if we are half-hearted in doing it. I remember the strong impression made by the testimony of one man at the close of a large convention of college students. The question was being passed around, "What new resolve have you made at this meeting?" One and another arose and declared that they were purposing to read their Bibles more faithfully, or to do more personal work in behalf of others. After nearly every one else had spoken, a member of the conference stood up and said that he was going back to study harder. Without disparaging the testimony of the others, the purpose thus expressed bore powerful witness to the value of this gathering.

When a lazy college boy is waked up to a realization of the fact that he is sent to college principally to study, some new impulse certainly has begun to work in his heart. It is the impulse which swayed Christ himself, which he communicated to his first disciples. Before he called them to special following of him he wanted them to show themselves successful fishermen, and so he bade them launch out into the deep and let down their nets and perform small details relating to their calling in a thorough fashion. When a man becomes a Christian he does not become less, but more, fitted for fulfilling his ordinary tasks. So let us believe that diligent work in the schoolroom, the office, the store, the factory, on the railroad is a good big part of our Christianity.

But the King's business also needs to be done, and he who looks at his ledgers and his implements of toil, or his particular trade or profession so constantly that his vision of God and of his needy fellowmen is dimmed is in danger of losing his own soul while occupied with the effort to gain the whole world. Religion is a business, just as much as selling cloth or sawing wood. Saving one's soul is no holiday pastime. Redeeming others from their sins is no child's play. "How is my soul straitened," says the Saviour. Carrying on the work of Christ today under complicated modern conditions is a great task. The energy, the inventiveness, the careful oversight, the thoroughness and persistence which men put into their business are needed in order to win the world to Christ. Let us not be religious dawdlers and sentimentalists. Let us carry on the King's business in a kingly way.

Parallel verses: 1 Chron. 26: 30; Neh. 13: 30; Prov. 22: 29; Luke 2: 49; 24: 29; John 9: 4; Rom. 12: 11; 1 Thess. 4: 11.

FORTY-SEVEN YEARS IN AND AROUND THE COMPOSING ROOM.

BY THOMAS TODD.

I am asked if I can recall anything about the earlier days when The Congregationalist was first started. Perhaps a few things might be said, readable if not brilliant. I must be pardoned if the capital I is used more than usual.

The week that The Congregationalist was started, I, then a boy of thirteen, was hired as a compositor, as more hands were needed in the office. I was put on the new work, and soon became interested in Dr. Edward Beecher's editorials, and attempted to understand the mysteries of Hopkinsianism and Pelagianism and Arminianism, and the side tracks along the line of other isms. It was the custom of the good doctor to let his Pegasus mount on his wings and fly off with a four-column editorial attached to him as a streamer, and those columns not of the modern size, but of that of the old-fashioned blanket sheet. One of his editorials would make about three pages of the present size of The Congregationalist. Generally a little religious editorial was sandwiched in, if there was room. One day, after the editors had all gone home, we needed two stickfuls, or about four inches, of news matter to fill the paper. I was deputed to go to the room of the proprietors and state our wants to one of them, Deacon Edward W. Fay, who told me to come again in a half-hour. I went, and he had prepared half a column, and said if I would come in an hour he would give me the balance. I asked him what he thought was a stickful, and he said he supposed it would be a column. I took up his copy, tore off what I needed, told him I required no more, was out of his office in a flash, leaving him agape with surprise, and went and told the story of my adventure to the printing office amid considerable laughter.

The Congregationalist having been started upon the ashes of the Boston Reporter, edited by Rev. Erasmus D. Moore, Mr. Moore naturally succeeded to the office editorship of The Congregationalist. He was a pleasant man, but was one of those good men who could not keep out of the shambles of debt, which hindered his usefulness materially. He always seemed preoccupied and wrote, I sometimes thought, to fill space. One time he wrote an article upon the theaters of Boston, and the line of his thought turned upon the statement he made that never before had there been so many theaters open as at that time. I was more conversant with theaters then than now, and on reading his copy I told him that the year before more theaters were open in Boston than the present year of which he was writing. He thought a moment, saw that if my statement were correct his article would be spoiled, then said, "Well, Thomas, let the article go in, and if there is anything said we will put in an erratum next week." No erratum was ever published—probably because the readers were not posted upon theatrical matters.

And speaking of long editorials I remember that after Mr. Richardson's assumption of the care of the office he was vigilantly anxious that everything in the editorial and contribution line should be cut down to the shortest possible limit, and nothing wasted in useless verbiage. He would not allow even the old time and now considered useless introduction, but insisted upon everybody plunging at once in medias res. Mr. Richardson's health gave out at one time, as the result of overwork, and he was obliged to go away on a vacation of some indeterminate length. He had hardly left the office an hour when good Dr. Dexter called me down stairs, and, remarking to me that Mr. Richardson would be away for some weeks, opened a drawer in his desk and producing three articles upon some subject in which he was interested, said: "Here are three articles, and we will begin next week and print the first, to be followed with the other two. The second one is longer than the first, and the third is a trifle longer than the second." They were printed.

I was placed over the office as foreman at the age, I think, of about seventeen years, at the munificent salary of $6.50 per week. But as I had fixed the salary, I had no cause to complain; I think, however, I charged as much as I was worth. Mr. Fay was very kind, and, when he saw I was getting tired, would give me a short vacation. The office was more like a family in which all were interested, than are the present business arrangements of not only newspapers but everything else that is in "the swim." For instance, all through the fruit season and into the winter, good Deacon James, who was in co-proprietorship with Mr. Fay, would appear about once a week with a good-sized basket upon his arm and, opening the copy drawer, would say, "Here's some more copy for you, Thomas," and then place the contents of his basket, apples or pears as the case might be, in the drawer.

As soon as the paper was sent to the press, my brother and I would fold the paper, Deacon Fay and a hired writer direct the papers, and Deacon James bundle them up. When the time came for me to get married, I had first to put the paper to press and then start off on my matrimonial venture. I remember, as I started out of the office to take the train to where my charmer lived, Deacon James proceeded to sing, in his usual Psalm tone:

My mother gave me feather bed,
My father gave me ceow,
For I vow I will get mar-ri-ed,
The fit is on me neow.

Professor Park and Rev. E. N. Kirk could neither of them take the first prize in any writing school for excellence in penmanship, if, indeed, they ever tried. This fact, and the necessity that existed that they should explain their "tracks" to the compositor, gave me the opportunity to enjoy the company of each of those distinguished divines for a day, and very precious days they were to me. They had at different times each furnished, one a sermon and the other a paper, and were anxious that no errors should appear in their contributions. Pleasant and affable they both were, and while they "condescended to men of low estate," they little realized how much good they were doing to the boy to whom they were explaining their hieroglyphs.

Dr. Edward Beecher would come in and sit and read papers and books by the hour, apparently oblivious to all outside affairs; but if any question arose as to the spelling of words or any other matter, from behind the book or paper would come a solemn voice setting the matter aright, and then "dead silence fell." Dr. A. L. Stone of fragrant Park Street memory, upon the contrary, was always making pleasant faces and sending smiles around the office, his great heart never seeming easy unless he were scattering sunshine upon all within reach.

Rev. Dr. Storrs, the father of our present honored Dr. Storrs, would smile benignly upon all of us, but his dignity was something tremendous and aweful. Our Dr. Dexter, who has so recently left us, having "taken on sleep," was always pleasant, urbane and approachable, and I could always go to him, not only for counsel regarding temporal matters, but we talked of things of the kingdom, and I owe much to him for his spiritual uplifting. Only a few years ago, upon going into the editorial room one day, I found Dr. Edward Beecher had come in to see and chat with his former coadjutor. Of course we shook hands, and then Dr. Dexter, being in an unusually pleasant mood, began to joke. It was permitted me to respond, and from small beginnings the jokes began to fly around the poor devoted head of Dr. Beecher. The very atmosphere became charged with jollity. From a pleasant smile came loud laughing, and then roaring. And all this time Dr. Beecher, who was as impervious to a joke as his brother Henry was full of them, sat there looking perfectly bewildered. His dazed look seemed to add more to the fuel, and Dr. Dexter kept the ball rolling until from sheer exhaustion he had to cease. That was the last time that I saw Dr. Beecher.

For some years I sat in the pew with Mr. Richardson, in Chelsea. Being engaged in active work through the week, I found, as many others have, that I could not close my eyes during the offering of the so-called "long prayer" without going to sleep. What was my surprise to receive, about that time, a communication for the paper, written in Mr. Richardson's hand, entitled He Was Looking About, and decrying the habit that some Christians had of looking around the church during prayer time. I thought it was rather personal, but felt obliged to hold my peace. About the last time that I saw Mr. Richardson alive I went into the editorial room and said to him, "You remember writing a piece about me thirty years ago, entitled He Was Looking About?" He replied, "I remember the article, but it was not written about you, but about Parsons Cooke." "Well," I said, "I thought you meant me, and have always laid it up against you, but am glad to know it was not aimed at me," and then I went on to tell him about a ludicrous incident that happened the day before, while I was at church, and looking about during prayer time. In all my experience with him, I do not recall the time when he gave himself so utterly away to laughter as he did over the incident that I then narrated. And so with the great sorrow that I experienced at his departure from us, comes the recollection of his pleasant, happy, social nature that overstepped all outward troubles, and came to the surface to cheer our hearts.

But I must stop. I might flow on and on forever, like Tennyson's brook, until the readers were tired. I might go on and tell of the sad scenes and the partings from tried and true friends, and the disappointments that have come to us all, but those are things with which "a stranger intermeddleth not," and so, with the vision of the editor's blue pencil, like Damocles's sword, hanging over my head, I will say, "The paper is filled, no more copy wanted."

GENERAL HOWARD ROLL OF HONOR.

TO PAY THE HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY DEBT IN SHARES OF $100.

Mrs. Dwight Spencer, Manchester, Ct.
Mrs. Lucy J. Ford, Manchester, Ct.
Mr. James W. Porter, Chicago, Ill.
Cong. Church, Pomfret, Ct.
W. H. M. Auxiliary, Bristol, Ct.
Pilgrim Church, Providence, R. I. Two shares.
Mrs. William H. Laird, Winona, Minn.
W. H. M. Society, Winona, Minn.
Woman's Society for Christian Work, Cong. Church, Orange Valley, N. J.
Miss Sylvia Pope and Miss Sarah Pope, Norwich, Ct.
H. M. Rally at Second Church, Norwich, Ct. Two shares.
Mr. and Mrs. William Mackay, Brooklyn, N. Y.
A few ladies in Central Church, Providence, R. I.
"A Friend," Whitinsville, Mass.
Edward Whitin, Whitinsville, Mass. Two shares.
Estate of Mrs. C. P. Whitin, Whitinsville, Mass. Three shares.
Estate of W. K. Whitin, Whitinsville, Mass. Five shares.
Anonymous, Whitinsville, Mass.
Second Cong. Church, Chicopee, Mass.
"A Friend," Malden, Mass.
In memory of Mrs. R. B. Fuller, by two daughters, Brighton, Mass.
W. Q. Wales, by Mrs. William Wales, Dorchester, Mass.
Cong. Church, West Brookfield, Mass.
In memory of J. Franklin Fuller, Jr., by Mrs. J. F. Fuller, West Newton, Mass.
Central Church, Sunday School, Fall River, Mass.
J. B. Harley, Fall River, Mass.
Arthur's Mission, Millbury, Mass.
Mrs. H. H. Hyde, Boston, Mass.
First Cong. Church, Woodbury, Ct.
Cong. Church, Peacham, Vt.
Mrs. W. W. Converse, Hartford, Ct.
Mrs. Erastus Hubbard, Meriden, Ct.
In memory of Mrs. Catherine R. Hillyer, by Mrs. C. E. Hillyer, Hartford, Ct.
Miss Maria R. Hicks, Fall River, Mass.
Second Cong. Church, Attleboro, Mass.
Mrs. E. S. Horton, Attleboro, Mass.
Mrs. J. C. Brown, North Attleboro, Mass.
In memory of Rev. Daniel Dennison, New Jersey.
Cong. Church, Auburndale, Mass. Two shares.
First Church, Sunday School and Ladies Guild, Middletown, N. Y.
Mr. Frank A. Ferris, through Cong. Church, Westfield, N. J.
Woman's Association, Cong. Church, Westfield, N. J.
Previously reported, 683; added above, 52; total, 735.

Some Striking Literary Productions.

Gleaned from an Extensive Editorial Experience.

Journalistic work is lightened by a great variety of happenings, the character and details of which seldom find their way to the public. The Congregationalist has had its share of these alleviations of daily toil. Next to the rear end of an electric car the best place for the study of human nature is a newspaper office. Interesting and amusing phases of life reveal themselves both through callers and through letters and manuscripts. Aspirants for literary fame, some of whom labor under the delusion that if they present their wares in person they are more likely to find a market for them; poets with the light of a real or fancied divine frenzy still lingering in the southwest corners of their eyes; reformers confident that their particular ism is just the panacea for the world's ills and should receive treatment to the extent of three pages in the very next issue; ardent spirits worked up to a pitch of indignation about something in last week's paper and bent on securing immediate retraction—these are among the types of callers. And still our latchstring hangs out and, as the passage of time silvers our heads, we grow more and more docile and open to suggestions from the vast multitude of outsiders who know how a paper should be edited.

It is, however, some comfort to us when, intentionally or unintentionally, we have drawn down upon our heads the remonstrances of our gentle readers, to remember that a freeman's right to criticise his favorite newspaper is not something that has been exercised only in recent years. The first editors of the Boston Recorder evidently received some spicy letters from time to time, to which on Nov. 4, 1817, we find them replying as follows:

Some of our subscribers complain that they find so many intolerably hard words on our pages that they are puzzled to read them; and when they have surmounted the first difficulty, they meet a second—they can't understand them. Others complain that our pieces are insufferably long, and that they can't find time to read two whole columns on any subject. Some wish us to dispense with those articles that must occupy a portion of several papers in succession, and confine ourselves to such articles as may be admitted, in toto, into a single paper. Others are desirous of having every article divided and subdivided, till it shall stretch, perhaps, through a whole issue. Some have no patience with us, because we give no room to literary discussions, others because we don't usurp the province of other religious publications, and furnish essays on moral and metaphysical subjects. Some would have us review those publications that are coming from the press constantly, and stamp our imprimatur on them as if they are worth reading—others are afraid to have us suggest a syllable in commendation or dispraise of any work. We should be heartily glad to meet the wishes of all our subscribers. Our interest and our feelings impel us to do all that we can do, consistently with our original plan, to gratify their various tastes. But we should feel ourselves authorized to claim more than the honors of Hercules, if we accomplished this more than Herculean labor. We might as easily suspend by our fiat the first law of nature, as give perfect satisfaction to all our readers at the same time—nay, we had almost said, as to satisfy ourselves.

It seems, then, that three-quarters of a century ago in eastern Massachusetts there were neither perfect editors, perfect papers or even perfect readers, and so when a subscriber writes us, as happened not long ago, and tells us that he has concluded to take the paper another year in the hope that it may improve, we file the letter away with others declaring that the paper was never better, and conclude that we will not be wiser than our predecessors and enter upon the vain endeavor to satisfy everybody.

But while the editor, on the one hand, must try to live on at least civil terms with the public an entirely different class of problems arises from his relations to writers and would-be writers. In the olden days the editors of the Recorder used now and then to pass judgment upon rejected contributions by saying right out in print just what was the matter. For instance, as long ago as 1821 we find these friendly admonitions:

While we sincerely congratulate "E. H." on the domestic felicity insured to him by the hopeful conversion of his children to God, and while we rejoice that his prayers have been so graciously answered, we do not perceive anything in his communication of so peculiar a nature as to promise much general edification.

"A Constant Reader" is informed that while we highly approve his zeal against intemperance, and perfectly accord with him in our views of its hatefulness and brutality, yet there are so many incorrectnesses in the style and so little originality in the matter of his communication as to put us to the disagreeable necessity of rejecting it.

We trust that the persons who were thus notified that their contributions were not available received the news in a proper spirit. The method has some advantages over immediate and heartless consignment to the waste-basket, or the modern fashion of sending a printed slip couched in a vein like this:

The rejection of a contribution does not necessarily imply that it is lacking in merit. Any one of a number of reasons may render a contribution unsuited to our present uses.

Sometimes, when the pressure of manuscripts is very great, we feel like resorting to the olden method ourselves.

When we come to the blossoming fields of poesy we enter a region which offers solace to the weariest editor. In the long run it is poetry that saves the editor from an early death from overwork. Of course a vast deal has been submitted to The Congregationalist, only a fraction of which has ever found its way into print. If some things have been put into type which, judged by the severest critical canons, are inferior to the best work of Milton, Browning and Longfellow, it must be remembered that on the other hand the editor, often at the risk of his life, has acted as a barrier between would-be bards and an innocent and unsuspecting public. To make the public realize this solemn truth the editors of the Recorder, as far back as Dec. 23, 1820, offered this plaintive apology:

Some complaints have been heard on the subject of our original poetry. We wish it were better, but, so long as we select the best that is forwarded and make no pretensions to personal familiarity with the "sacred nine," we shall not charge ourselves with great guilt till we shall have rejected the better productions of those who have freely, and perhaps justly, censured our want of taste. If all the "prose run mad" which we have received and thrown "under the table" since we commenced our labors were collected we should undoubtedly find an apology in the mind of any candid spectator for presuming, as we do occasionally, to select from it a solitary article for the Poet's Corner.

Modesty shall not prevent us from saying that during our long career we ourselves have been immortalized in verse more than once. When the century was still comparatively young some admirer of the new venture in journalism voiced his pent-up feeling in this stanza:

Thou friend of my childhood, instructor of youth,
I love thee because thou defendest the truth.
Thou friend of my childhood I will not forsake,
Though others prefer a false paper to take.

Among our literary treasures carefully filed away is an ode to The Congregationalist, in the form of an acrostic, beginning:

Continue on in years to come,
O journal good and wise!

Each of the fifteen lines that follow begins with the successive letters of the paper's name. We will lend this to persons of good character, but it is altogether too precious to put into ordinary type.

A while ago, when the paper was published on Friday, a rural subscriber sent us a poem in which she confutes the customary notion that Friday is an unlucky day by declaring that to her the day brought an extra glimmer of sunshine because The Congregationalist was in the habit of reaching her then. We can quote only three of the six pulsating stanzas:

For to me comes this helpful paper,
So welcome all over the land.
One may read, in its goodly columns,
Themes that with loftiness often expand.

I know, as I open its pages,
It will nothing but goodness unfold,
And the contents, if carefully followed,
Christian principles surely will mold.

So I send it along on its mission,
That others its blessings may share;
Thus Fridays prove often most lucky,
And with other days well may compare.

The centennial of Washington's inauguration, celebrated in New York in 1889, was the occasion of our receiving one of the most remarkable poems that ever drifted into a newspaper office. The first six lines were as follows:

One hundred years, alas, how fleet! have passed away
Since that auspicious, grand, illustrious, glorious day
When Washington, in garb of civil state arrayed,
Mid loud acclaim, proud pomp, display of myriad throngs, by oath inaugural great president was made.
The festive cannon boomed, loud, deafening thunders rolled,
The joy, delight of a united, happy people told.

From a typographical point of view it is obviously difficult to reprint much more of this production, which goes on to draw the entirely novel lesson that Washington being a great man, we, also, should endeavor to be great, but we must dip in once more, a mile or so further along, where our poet goes on to say:

Where realm on realm imperial grand shall yet unveil,
And tyrant forces never dare man's inborn rights assail.
Star peering after star in matchless, glorious light,
With vast, grand destinies forever waxing bright;
Great galaxy of States flaming along the sky,
A rapture, joy to every patriot gazer's eye;
The teeming, glorious North, the balmy, fragrant South
Blooming in loveliness of perennial youth,
Till from th' Atlantic to the far Pacific shore
The great republic crowned can ask for nothing more.

We have space to reproduce only four other poems, which we have been holding for a number of years, for lack of space and for some other reasons, but we have increased the number of our pages this week in order that for once in our lives we may be able to give proper recognition to talent that has hitherto been hidden under a bushel, or, to speak less metaphorically, in our pigeonholes.

THE CORNERS OF THE EARTH.

The little birds whose songs are heard
On many a bush and brake,
Or high in air, so free from care,
Or dipping in the glassy lake,
Teach us a lesson wise and good,
Teach us a lesson understood,
"In His hands are all the corners of the earth."

The autumn leaves of the forest trees,
More grand than purple robes
Of kings on coronation day,
Leaves clothed in varied colors
Of red, orange, green and brown,
Or bright and lively yellow, teach us,
"In His hands are all the corners of the earth."

TRUTH GREATER THAN MIRACLE.

If one whom I had loved but Heaven loved more
Might come again from death and dissolution,
And to my soul in sacred elocution
Declare, "God's way is strait, his word is sure!"
Would I believe? Since saint and prophet-lore
Revealed of old, at heavenly institution,
In vain reprove my spirit's destitution
By prayer, by promise, threat and overture?

The strange repeal of natural decree
Avails me nothing for my soul's first need;

The maze of a profound theology
I may not disentangle for my creed;
A child, a flower, extol the charity
Of God, so true, so plain, that "he who runs may read."

A PICTURE OF "TOM."

My Cousin Tom
Is six years old;
He's a bright boy,
So I am told.

My Cousin Tom
Can take a book
And read right off
With just a look.

My Cousin Tom
Can take a pen
And write as well
As most of men.

My Cousin Tom
Can add, subtract,
And tell the sum
Of this and that.

My Cousin Tom
Can run and jump,
And so at play
He is a trump.

My Cousin Tom
Is a good boy,
And so, of course,
Is full of joy.

DANDELION—LILAC.

When I hang out my clothes to dry,
I have to stop, and look around,
And sniff the sweetly smelling lilacs,
And step so careful on the ground.

For Solomon, I don't believe,
Had such a carpet on his floor
As in the back yard where I hang out
My clothes close to the kitchen door.

The grass so soft and bright, set thick,
So I can hardly step between,
With just the biggest dandelions,
Like gold stars in a cloth of green.

And then the bird-songs full of joy,
And the leaves dancing on the trees,
I really feel, if no one saw me,
Like falling plump upon my knees

To thank God, that for lowly me
(No better would he for a queen),
He fixes up my yard so grandly,
With birds and flowers and grasses green.

"Jerusalem my happy home,"
I softly hum with pure delight,
And swing to catch the fragrant breezes
My washing clean and snowy white.

I just snip off a lilac bunch,
'Twill happify my good man's face
To see it on the dinner table,
Set in a tumbler at his place.

When he says grace, one eye half closed
Will watch the posy by his plate,
As if he saw right into heaven,
And the sweet lilac was the gate,

Another source of amusement in the newspaper office is the number and variety of the questions hurled at the editor from all parts of the country. It gives one always a pleasing sense of his own importance to be asked his opinion on themes of greater or less consequence, and the fact that whenever he settles a mooted point it may not stay settled over night does not in the least deter him from replying to his questioners. To furnish some idea of the queries that have been put to The Congregationalist at one time and another we subjoin a specimen list. Some of these we have answered in the paper, but the larger part have been replied to privately. Some of them, it will be seen, are pretty hard questions, but we flatter ourselves that we can answer still harder ones than these, though we give notice that return postage must be inclosed:

Who has charge of the Congregational churches in the State of Massachusetts?
Can a man smoke and be a Christian?
What is the best oil stove on the market?
Do Congregationalists believe that infants dying are lost?
What is the Protestant press doing at present to suppress and expose the crafty and cunning movements of Rome?
Where is the line between the church and the world, or is there any?
Are there more members of Congregational churches who are card players than who are not?
What is the best one-volume work suitable for general reading, for Bible students and laymen on the Fulfillment of Scripture Prophecy, giving a full account of those prophecies which have to this time been fulfilled and are now matters of history?
Are there any blast furnaces in Massachusetts? If so how many? Do they burn Coal or Charcoal? How much a bu. does coal sell in Mansfield, Bristol and Worster? What is the quality? Is it Anthersite or soft Coal?

ANNIVERSARY JOTTINGS.

As early as 1829 articles deploring German rationalism found their way into the American religious press.

To be scrupulously exact, we were eighty years old two months ago, Jan. 3, but it is more convenient to celebrate now than it was then.

The portrait of Deacon Nathaniel Willis, which appears on our cover page, is copied from a beautiful specimen of the daguerreotyper's art, never before published, which has been carefully cherished by Pres. Horace F. Bumstead of Atlanta University, a grandson of Deacon Willis.

The cry of today against the degeneracy of the secular press is no new note. The prospectus of the Recorder said, "That the press has too generally been under the control of weak and incompetent hands, both in our own country and abroad, is sincerely lamented by many of our wisest and best men."

The amenities of the religious journalism of the past may be judged somewhat from the following statement of a contributor to the Watchman in 1827, who said, "It is a pity that the poor sheet meant for a Christian mirror should reflect such ugly faces and tempers when its conductors put their image upon it."

The Panoplist and its successor, The Missionary Herald, and the Recorder found open enemies as well as secret foes. Plain Truth, published in Canandaigua, N. Y., 1823–24, was an avowed anti-missionary journal, and existed apparently for the sole purpose of sneering and scoffing at the A. B. C. F. M. and the journals above mentioned, which reported and conserved its development.

The name of one of the first subscribers to the Recorder, Alfred Ely of Monson, appears in the facsimile reproduced on our cover page. It is an interesting indication of the fact that in those ante-machine days each individual paper was directed by hand. Who knows but that Willis himself may have penned the name that now, after a lapse of fourscore years, is brought to view.

Admirable as were the political summaries of the Recorder in its earliest days, and discriminating as were its selections of state papers to republish, it now and then, of course, failed to realize the full significance of that which it recorded. Thus Monroe's famous message of 1823 was published without a word of comment save this, "The Providence of God is not Acknowledged in this Message!!!"

The influence of Andover Seminary in founding The Congregationalist should not be overlooked. The seminary had taken its position on the more liberal side of the controversy within Trinitarian ranks. Professors Stuart, Edwards and Park strongly favored the establishment of a new journal, and the latter was especially instrumental in launching the paper, spending a month of his vacation in and about Boston furthering the project. Meetings of laymen and clergymen, like Rev. William A. Stearns, Dr. Budington of Charlestown, Rev. Thomas P. Field, Dr. Kirk, Dr. Edward Beecher and Dr. Storrs of Braintree, were held, and in due time the paper was born and ere long became so influential in molding theological sentiment at a critical time that Professor Park has been heard to say that the paper saved the cause of New England theology in New England.

Our present scheme of prayer meeting topics, scattered broadcast in our annual Handbook and commented upon each week by us editorially and used by thousands of our churches in the regular weekly church prayer meeting, grew out of a suggestion made in 1886 to Mr. C. A. Richardson, the managing editor of the paper, by Rev. C. C. Carpenter, and first broached in our columns Oct. 28, 1886. It met a common need, was heartily indorsed by the pastors who first tried it. The plan developed naturally, and today, we think, is one of the most useful services rendered by us to our constituents.

Robert Raikes, the founder of the modern Sunday school, was an editor of a weekly newspaper. Today no well-equipped religious weekly is without a Sunday school department, containing an exposition of the International Lessons. It would be interesting to know just when the desirability of a uniform, systematic course of study of Scripture first gained expression in this country, and was recognized as worth heeding. We know this much, that as early as 1829 the Christian Mirror of Portland, Me., published a list of subjects worthy of study, taken from the Scripture, and supplemented the list with editorial exposition. The Recorder and Telegraph thought so well of the new departure that it reprinted each week the Mirror's matter. It was not until 1835 that the Massachusetts Sabbath School Society issued its first question book, and the International Lesson System was not born until 1872.

The presence in this country of Miss Stone, for eleven years on the editorial staff, has intensified her interest in our birthday number, and she sends us a delightful pen photograph of scenes in the "dear, dingy, cramped little rooms" on Cornhill. Those were the days when editors turned themselves into clerks if occasion required, and when the genial publisher, Mr. Greene, reciprocated by lending a hand on editorial work, saying, in his pleasant voice, "Now, Miss Stone, let us rest awhile by reading proof!" It was arduous service and often prolonged far into the evening The tall form of Whittier was frequently seen in the office, as he found a congenial anti-slavery friend in Mr. Dexter. And what a notable procession of college presidents, ministers and authors climbed the narrow stairway! Among those who were helped into successful authorship were Hezekiah Butterworth, now of the Youth's Companion, Mrs. M. F. Butts, the late Mrs. M. B. Williams and scores of others.

In one of the early numbers of The Congregationalist there is an editorial upon the Religious Newspaper which says:

The editor of a religious newspaper is often spoken of as filling a pulpit and preaching weekly to an audience of many thousands, and the statement contains a striking truth. The newspaper is less limited in its range than the pulpit. It can preach, but it is not limited to preaching. The most essential thing, and the one the most difficult to effect, is that it should in its pervading spirit be deeply and thoroughly religious. Meanwhile, who prays for an editor? He is a mark for assault; all have a right to criticise him. The pastor in his parish is surrounded by a church. It is one of their first duties to pray for him. But who prays for the editor, who speaks from week to week to thousands of families from one extreme of our land to the other?

It has been the wish and hope of the editors of The Congregationalist from the beginning that they might do their work in this spirit of devotion to the Lord of the church, and that they might stand in such close spiritual as well as intellectual relations to their readers as to count upon their prayers as well as interest from week to week.

Literature

THE LITERARY BEGINNINGS.

The oldest surviving newspaper of America, The Connecticut Courant, antedates The Congregationalist by only fifty-two years. In that half-century the Revolution had been fought and the Constitution settled, the troubles with France overcome and the second war with England brought to an end. The settlement of the West was advancing, the steamboat had been made practical, and the self-consciousness of the nation had been roused by the triumphs of its navy and the extension of its commerce into all the seas. It was the "era of good feeling," and the shadows of later contests and disagreements were only beginning to appear.

The constituency of the Boston Recorder were not readers of newspapers in the modern sense. The newspaper as they knew it existed chiefly for news, which trickled in by stage or ship, or the first steamboats which began to displace the sailing craft upon the rivers. Such literature as it printed was taken without much discrimination from foreign journals. There were no great centers of literary thought. The colleges were mostly in little towns or villages, libraries were small and few in numbers. The nearest approach to a literary school which had yet been formed was the short-lived one at Hartford, where Trumbull, Dwight and Barlow had worked together until scattered by the necessities of practical life. New England commerce had been broken by the war with England, and every energy was directed into the utilitarian channels of trade, manufactures and the appropriation of the empire just thrown open in the West. History was making fast, but the historian and the poet had not yet arisen.

The growth of anything like a national literature was hindered also by difficulties and delays of travel. The stagecoach still made its slow way by muddy roads from town to town. Delays and accidents were not uncommon. On one occasion in 1802, President Dwight tells us, travelers were four days in coming through a great snow storm from New York to New Haven. The first number of the Recorder (of Jan. 3, 1816) has Washington news of Dec. 22, and, "By the arrival in New York of the Amelia-Matilda from Liverpool, London dates to Nov. 20." Postage was high and letters limited to a single sheet by the penalty of double rates. In the first issue of 1817 the editor complains that he had received a letter containing $2.62, upon which thirty-seven cents were charged. Perhaps it is a sign of this isolation and localization of life that it is only on May 8, 1816, two years after its first publication on the morrow of the battle it celebrates, that the Star Spangled Banner, under the title of The Defense of Fort McHenry, found its way into the Recorder with an account of the circumstances under which it was written. Of the verse which immediately preceded and followed, it must be said that what was original was not good, and what was imported is mostly taken from forgotten English versifiers. Its quality improves rapidly, however, and much of the best religious poetry of the time is found in early numbers. By 1820 the editor takes notice of the complaints which come to him of the quality of the original verse and justifies himself by saying that he selects the best that is offered. Willis's Bible pictures, with their easy and moving style, which began to appear in the Recorder when he was a student in Yale, were exactly suited to the taste of the time, and led the way to the appreciation of later work by stronger poets.

What has been said about verse holds good, with some modifications, as to prose also. At first the paper is frankly a compilation, not gaining its own articulate voice until after the change of editors in the second year. From that time there is a steady increase of power and breadth of interest, re-enforced by a fresh stream of energy at the union with The Congregationalist, but always improving upon its past.

Speaking broadly, the age of the paper's beginning was an age of tracts and pamphlets. Bible distribution and missionary work were the immediate concern of the Recorder and its readers in 1816. There is, indeed, a promise of notice and review for new publications, and a little later authors and publishers are entreated to send in at least a title-page that notice may be given of their works, but it is not until March that the first original review appears—a matter of two and a half long columns devoted to Remarks on the Observation of the Lord's Day by a Tythingman. So keen was the interest in religion and moral reforms that the readers of the paper accepted week by week a series of "anecdotes," some of them of great interest, others stale or trivial, but all bearing on the progress of the truth. In this connection the attitude of mind toward poetry may be further indicated by the proposal of a correspondent to use it systematically as a means of correcting "youthful levities which undoubtedly owe their origin to those low and vicious thoughts received from profligate and vain poems"; and the opinion of fiction from more than one anecdote in which the heroine has a mind perverted by a course of novel reading, but is restored by timely expostulation or a judicious administration of tracts.

It is necessary to insist upon these moral reforms and missionary enthusiasms, because they formed the atmosphere of the time in which the Recorder began to draw the breath of life. The generation was just beginning to be awake to the sin of drunkenness and sensitive to the abuses of slavery. To show the changes of public sentiment about this time we may recall the fate of a resolution presented in vain to the Methodist General Conference of 1812, "That no stationed or local preacher should retail spirituous or malt liquors without forfeiting his ministerial character." In 1813 Dr. Humphrey of Fairfield presented to his association a report which was soon printed as the pioneer temperance tract in America. In 1815 Lyman Beecher preached in Litchfield his famous temperance sermons; and in 1816 the resolution passed the conference. As to the other, the repressive laws of the second stage of slavery, with their practical prohibition of organized worship or education among the Negroes, already awakened an indignation in New England which often finds expression in the Recorder.

With such preoccupations and prepossessions, it is not strange that the uprising of literature in the next generation produced at first a comparatively small effect. Much of its growth was distinctly affiliated with Unitarianism. It was not until men learned that art is not sectarian, until the contest of the time had given the religious and educational leadership of the whole country to the Trinitarians, that the wider expansion of the paper's literary interest begins. By devoting its energies to the needs of the whole country, the Congregational body delayed, but did not abandon, its partnership in the literary activities of the time.

The literary generation whose work is parallel with the life of the paper really began with Washington Irving, the first number of the Recorder appearing between the publication of Knickerbocker, in 1809, and that of the Sketch Book, in 1819. Thanatopsis, perhaps the most significant single poem of the whole literary product, was printed in the North American Review in 1817. From 1819 to 1825 the tendencies and prophesies of the new era are unmistakable. In 1819 Channing preached his famous sermon at the ordination of Jared Sparks, and Moses Stuart wrote his letters in reply to its positions; Webster argued, and Justice Story decided the Dartmouth College case; the courts of Massachusetts rang with the same great judge's denunciations of the slave trade; Maine was separated from Massachusetts, the survey of the Erie canal was advancing; Dr. Scudder and his companions sailed for Ceylon; and the last volume of Dwight's theology is noticed in the Recorder, along with numerous reports and descriptions of the sea serpent. In 1820 were published Silliman's Tour and Dwight's Travels, which illustrate at once the public interest in everything relating to the Revolution and the separation and isolation of the localities which they visited. These two books may be said to have set the fashion of that love of travel which has grown to be such a part of our modern American life. In the same year Hawthorne as a boy not yet in college started The Spectator in Salem and sustained it for a month and a half, and Precaution, Cooper's first venture in fiction, appeared. In 1821 (the year of the breaking out of the Greek war of independence, of the death of Napoleon, and of widespread revivals in America) Bryant's first book of poems appeared and Cooper's Spy, with other books of note, from Dana's Idle Man to the enlarged edition of Moses Stuart's Hebrew Grammar. In this and the two years following sprang up a crop of imitators and rivals of the Recorder, the Christian Register, Zion's Herald, the New York Observer and others. In 1826 a Children's Department was begun, to take form in the following year as The Youth's Companion, which for a number of years remained under the same roof and management as the Recorder, and for a single number only a department was set aside for young ladies. About this time came from Bowdoin the two wonderful classes which gave the country Hawthorne, Longfellow, Calvin E. Stowe—afterwards one of the editors of The Congregationalist—Franklin Pierce, Sargent E. Prentiss and John P. Hale. The presses begin to be busy with new works, and, by the end of another decade, nearly all the great names are in evidence, and the domain of history is annexed by the first of its great American writers, Prescott's Ferdinand and Isabella appearing in 1837.

Looking back from the crowded literary present the achievements of the past seem meager. The earlier times had left but little of enduring value outside the domains of theology and statesmanship. Perhaps their most significant contributions to the reading of today were the Journal of John Woolman, which prefigured the religious fervors and moral enthusiasms of a later time, and the writings of Franklin, who voiced and strengthened the practical sense of a majority of the people. But in 1816 the minds of Americans were already awake to their great destiny, and from that time on the stream of literary utterance broadens and deepens until it becomes the mighty river which we know today.

BOOK REVIEWS.

LOUIS AGASSIZ.

The Life, Letters and Works of Louis Agassiz by Jules Marcou.

No doubt the American popular estimate of Agassiz required some modification, for he has been one of the people's special heroes, and the praise which has followed him has been often undiscriminating. The well-known biography by his American wife, is an incomplete picture of his scientific activity, and suffers also from an unrelieved outpouring of loving eulogy. But the man was so large, his enthusiasm was so delightful and overwhelming and he made so many friends and champions in his journeys, that it is not surprising that he looms very large in the popular estimate, nor is that estimate on the whole mistaken. Certainly no more picturesque and influential figure has been contributed by the old world to the new.

Mr. Marcou, we think, has mistaken the nature of this influence. He seems to imagine that American scientific study began with Agassiz, and that all its leaders of thought were trained by him, which is much too large a statement of his influence in this direction. And, on the other hand, he does not fully grasp what was, after all, Agassiz's greatest service to America—his rousing and encouraging popular interest in the work of scientific study. Agassiz did more than train a few leaders, he made an atmosphere in which scientific thinking breathed freely and easily; he taught a nation too much absorbed in utilitarianism the worth and interest of pure science.

Upon the side of undiscriminating eulogy this biography does not incline to err. Indeed, some of us who never happened to hear of Mr. Marcou except as the prospective biographer of Agassiz find the tone of calm judicial superiority with which the faults of other biographers, and more especially those of Agassiz himself, are pointed out and insisted upon rather irritating. We do not think it was necessary to revive at such length all the quarrels in which the great naturalist and his assistants and acquaintances were involved, about which the public really knew little and cared less. It is the positive side of a great man's character, after all, which is of permanent interest, and the negative side may well be sketched with only enough detail to insure the truthfulness of the whole picture. Mr. Marcou feels his responsibility as "devil's advocate" too deeply, and apparently takes far too much pleasure in proving that his hero is not so much of a hero after all. The effect with many is likely to be that they will go back to the earlier biography, and leave this to the specialists who care for questions of priority in discovery and the technical details of scientific work. In another way, too, Mr. Marcou's work is disappointing. Agassiz has a large circle of admirers in America who read only English and they will be sorry to find that all the French letters in the book are left untranslated. In this, as in his estimate of Agassiz's popular influence, Mr. Marcou has underestimated the number of his readers.

The enormous range and persistent activity of Agassiz is recalled by the list of more than 400 titles of publications in French, German and English. Of this strictly scientific career the book gives a good account. The impatient versatility, however, which Mr. Marcou so often insists upon as a mark of weakness was really a sign of Agassiz's special calling, which was that of a teacher and inspirer of other men, and it is this quality which keeps the mind of the unscientific reader constantly awake and interested in following his career. Mr. Marcou's book is well and carefully edited, and fully supplied with all needed aids for study and reference. [Macmillan & Co. 2 vols. $4.00.]

BIBLICAL STUDY.

The literary forms of Biblical expression offer to the student of the Bible a fascinating field for study, and it seems remarkable that it has till recently been so completely neglected. Prof. Richard Moulton of Chicago University is a pioneer in this line of investigation, and in England, before he came to this country, his lectures on this subject attracted much popular attention. His Literary Study of the Bible is the fruit of many years of labor and of a mind keenly sensitive to the beauties of poetic expression and of the relation of ideas to one another in literary composition. Professor Moulton avoids the discussion of the problems of higher criticism and of theology, though, of course, his book is incidentally often richly suggestive on these themes. But his purpose is to discover to his readers the literary excellences of the books of the Bible as found in their English translations. He begins his work by an extended analysis of the Book of Job as illustrating all the leading varieties of literary form. The entire Bible is then treated in the same way. His volume is divided into six books, first treating of Biblical versification and then classifying Biblical literature under these heads: Lyric, Epic, Philosophic, Prophetic, Rhetoric. Professor Moulton is peculiarly at home in discussing the poetry of the Bible. He feels the rhythm of Hebrew thought and sets it to music. A fine illustration is to be found in his comparison of the translations of the twenty-eighth chapter of Job in the Authorized and Revised Versions, pp. 86–89. This chapter, which in these versions is assigned to Job, Professor Moulton puts into the mouth of Zophar, though, if our memory serves us, in his lectures a few years ago he regarded it as a choral interlude. We are glad to recognize this change of view as indicating that the author's study continues and is unflagging. This book appears to be designed especially for students of English literature in higher institutions of learning. Its extensive use in our colleges would lead to a new era of enthusiasm for the study of the Bible as literature which could not be indifferent to the power of its sublime truths over the heart and conscience. Professor Moulton in a new way has demonstrated the superiority of the Book of books over all other literature. This volume will be most welcome to the minister, a work of great value for the classroom, and a prized companion to the Bible in multitudes of homes. [D. C. Heath & Co. $1.00.]

SERMONS.

The Epistle of James and Other Discourses, by the lamented Dr. R. W. Dale, is edited by his son, A. W. W. Dale. Nearly half the book is taken up with a series of expository discourses upon the Epistle of James and the other half with sermons which the author had revised for publication before his death, most of them having been printed in the English newspapers. This exposition of the most practical of the epistles is a sincere and interesting piece of work, too brief to carry out the suggestions which are drawn from the words of the epistle into the details of modern life, but insisting upon the great principles of Christian morality and responsibility as found here in their germinal form. The vitality of Christ's doctrine in its relation to the needs of the soul and as a source of guiding inspiration for daily life, which are so prominent in all the work of Dr. Dale, appear to good advantage in both parts of this book, which recalls to us once more the great loss which the church has suffered in his death. The epistle of James is tonic for the present state of the churches in view of the social problems which are pressing upon them, and nowhere has it found a simpler and more earnest intrepretation than by Dr. Dale. Specially interesting in the other part of the book is the sermon on The Parable of the Prodigal and the Doctrine of the Atonement. [A. C. Armstrong & Son. $1.50.]

Visions and Service, fourteen discourses delivered in college chapels by William Lawrence, Bishop of Massachusetts. Bishop Lawrence has gathered in this book sermons which breathe the life of the university and take up the problems of faith and doubt which are so real to every fresh generation of students. It is a difficult kind of preaching, but we can commend these discourses because they show a grasp of the needs of those who are addressed, and because they meet those needs with a directness and simplicity which is wholly admirable. They do not attempt to make light of the intellectual temptations of the time, or to show a swift way of evading them, but emphasize the power of Christ as an aid to inquiry. To those who are inclined to take pessimistic views of our college life we especially commend the words with which Bishop Lawrence prefaces his book. "A residence of ten years in Cambridge, under the shadow of its great university, binds one to the students with strong ties of affection. A man cannot come into contact with them without gaining confidence in their high purpose, respect for their character, sympathy in their doubts and temptations, and a reverence for their love of truth, their chivalry and their simple faith. Many of the intellectual and spiritual problems which they encounter can be fought out only by hard thinking and deep discussion. But when they come to church I believe they want to hear from one who, sympathizing with their difficulties, speaks the most simple, sincere and strong words of the Christian faith." In this tone of simplicity and faith the book is written, and it is sure to be helpful to others than the class to which it is primarily addressed. [Houghton, Mifflin & Co. $1.25.]

SCIENCE.

Since the biologists are pretty well agreed that man is descended from the same stock as the rest of the living creatures of the earth, it is well that they are beginning to give us the detailed results of their study of his pedigree. Not that they are at all clear in their own minds, however, as to the exact steps of modification by which he has come to his present high organization, but that they are pretty well agreed as to the general outlines of the process. In The Whence and Whither of Man, being the Morse Lectures of 1895 before Union Theological Seminary, Prof. John M. Tyler of Amherst has taken up this subject and given us a brief history of man's "origin and development through conformity to environment." The book is in ten chapters, with an introduction, charts and index. After stating the problem Professor Tyler proceeds to consider man's pedigree, associating with each step the advance of function which was made in reaching it, and ending with chapters on the teaching of the Bible and the present aspects of the theory of evolution. "The sequence of dominant functions or aims can be traced with far more ease and safety, not to say certainty," he tells us, "than one of anatomical details," and this is the dominant thought of the book. Professor Tyler accepts fully the evolutionary theory in the form opposed to Weissmann's limitation of its scope, and has given us a thoroughly interesting and Christian interpretation of it. We commend the book especially to those who believe that all applications of Darwin's teaching are of necessity anti-Christian.

If we have any fault to find it is that the author apparently felt the necessity of winning over his hearers so deeply that the presentation of the matter is sometimes weakened for the reader who comes with an open or already convinced mind; but this may be a merit rather than a fault for the class of readers which the author is most anxious to convince. Altogether the work takes its place worthily with the volumes of lectures which have preceded it. [Charles Scribner's Sons. $1.75.]

Another book closely related to this in subject is The Primary Factors of Organic Evolution by Prof. E. D. Cope of the University of Pennsylvania. In this, however, the interest is general, man being regarded simply as one among the many complicated results of the evolutionary process. Professor Cope is a Lamarckian and defends the wider form of the development theory with enthusiasm. As much as possible of the material for his argument he has drawn from paleontology, believing that the actual lines of descent must be demonstrated at last chiefly from this source. "In the absence of the paleontological record, we necessarily rely on the embryologic which contains a recapitulation of it. The imperfections of the embryonic record are, however, great, and this record differs from the paleontologic in that no future discovery in embryology can correct its irregularities. On the contrary every paleontologic discovery is an addition to positive genealogy. If the present work has any merit, it is derived from the fact that the basis of the argument is the paleontologic record." These words from the preface will give a good idea of the method and purpose of Professor Cope's argument. The book is well made and illustrated and has a complete index. [The Open Court Publishing Co. $2.00.]

NOTES.

—— In the recent death of Peter Bayne a well-known critical and theological writer passed away. His books have been somewhat crowded off the stage by more recent comers, but were widely read in America.

—— It is somewhat remarkable, says the Bookman, that Mrs. Oliphant invented the name "Thrums" and used it in one of her early novels. Mr. Barrie reinvented it in total ignorance of his predecessor's book. His first choice of a fictitious name for Kirriemuir was "Whins."

—— Edgar Wilson Nye, who died in North Carolina on Washington's Birthday, was better known to newspaper readers and lecture-goers as "Bill" Nye, the humorist. Born in Maine and educated in the middle West, he made his literary reputation in Denver in newspaper work, and won thousands of friends all over the land by his books and lectures.

—— Mr. Purcell replies with vigor to the critics of his recent life of Manning, charging them with "poisoning the wells of Catholic criticism," and asserting that he not only had full authority to use the documents in his possession, but that he, in the exercise of his discretion, suppressed much that was important, including Manning's attack upon the Jesuits. In fact, the reply is much more an attack than a defense, and makes the situation more interesting than ever.

—— Charles Carleton Coffin, whose unlooked-for death we chronicled last week, was a very industrious and versatile author. His published works number twenty volumes, most of which have a steady sale. The Boys of '76, Story of Liberty, Boys of '61 and his latest work, The Daughters of the Revolution, are most popular, but many of his books are used for supplementary reading in the public schools. In addition to book writing he was a frequent contributor to the magazines and newspapers, and had delivered more than 2,000 addresses.

—— The Hartford Courant has recently recalled attention to the fact that it numbers among its former editors the first woman who ever owned and conducted a newspaper in America. Mrs. Hannah Watson, after the death of her husband, was the owner, editor and publisher of the paper until she married the next editor in succession, Mr. Hudson, a prominent citizen and paper merchant of Hartford, to whom she transferred the editorship. Among her numerous descendants was David Watkinson, the founder of the well-known Watkinson Library in Hartford. This was in the Revolutionary period, and George Washington was one of the subscribers to the paper while it was under her editorial care.

For Books of the Week see page 451.

News from the Churches

Meetings to Come.

BOSTON MINISTERS' MEETING, Pilgrim Hall, March 16, 10 A.M. Paper by Dr. C. E. Harrington on Prof. Goldwin Smith's article, Christianity's Millstone, in the North American Review.

FOREIGN MISSIONARY PRAYER MEETING in the rooms of the Woman's Board of Missions every Friday at 11 A.M.

UNION BIBLE CLASS, conducted by Rev. Alfred A. Wright, D. D., Bromfield Street Church, Boston, Saturday, 3 P.M.

MIDDLESEX UNION ASSOCIATION, Ayer, March 17, at 1 P.M.

Benevolent Societies.

THE CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY is represented in Massachusetts by the MASSACHUSETTS HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY, No. 9 Congregational House. Rev. Joshua Coit, Secretary; Rev. Edwin B. Palmer, Treasurer.

WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION, Room No. 32, Congregational House. Office hours, 9 to 5. Annual membership, $1.00; life membership, $20.00 Contributions solicited. Miss Annie C. Bridgman, Treasurer.

AMERICAN BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS, Congregational House, No 1 Somerset Street, Boston. Frank H. Wiggin, Assistant Treasurer; Charles E. Swett, Publishing and Purchasing Agent. Office in New York, 121 Bible House; in Chicago, 153 La Salle St.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, Rooms 1 and 2 Congregational House. Miss Ellen Carruth, Treasurer; Miss Abbie B. Child, Home Secretary.

THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION, Bible House, New York. Missions in the United States, evangelistic and educational, at the South and in the West among the Indians and Chinese. Boston office, 21 Congregational House; Chicago office, 153 La Salle Street; Cleveland office, Y. M. C. A. Building. Donations may be sent to either of the above offices, or to H. W. Hubbard, Treasurer, 108 Bible House, New York City.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY.—Church and Parsonage Building. Rev. L. H. Cobb, D. D., Secretary; H. C. Pinneo, Treasurer, 59 Bible House, New York; Rev. George A. Hood, Congregational House, Boston, Field Secretary.

CONGREGATIONAL EDUCATION SOCIETY.—(Including work of former New West Commission.) Aids four hundred students for the ministry, eight home missionary colleges, twenty academies in the West and South, ten free Christian schools in Utah and New Mexico. S. F. Wilkins, Treasurer. Offices, 10 Congregational House, Boston. 151 Washington St., Chicago, Ill. Address, 10 Congregational House, Boston.

CONG. SUNDAY SCHOOL & PUBLISHING SOCIETY.—Contributions used only for missionary work. Rev. George M. Boynton, D. D., Secretary; W. A. Duncan, Ph. D., Field Secretary; E. Lawrence Barnard, Treasurer, Congregational House, Boston.

PASSING COMMENT.

The first Men's Club, mentioned on page 433, is a pioneer organization like its church, and both have merited the honor of being at the front from the start. So many new growths spring up in church work only to fade before they blossom that this luxuriant increase is the more noteworthy. Success to an enterprise which has so much before and behind it!

An exchange tries to voice the feelings of one who was church sexton for thirty years, saying that so long a period of service "in such an exacting position" is evidence of high Christian character since his fidelity was above reproach. What, then, must a decade longer of such service have been, as in the instance of a New York official.

That the pastor is responsible for the status of benevolences in his church is not a new assertion. One of our seminaries recognizes the fact and is laying a careful foundation in the missionary instruction of its students.

A real revival in Illinois resulted in only a few conversions, but the chief outcome was "the reconsecration of the people of God themselves."

Of Special Note.

The generous offer of the Yale divinity students to the churches.

The extensive institutional work of a New Jersey church.

A good record for free pews in a Connecticut church.

An experiment in mission work in an Iowa church.

Energetic revival efforts in Nebraska.

Michigan's good work for the Board.

Invigorating news from Maine.

A spiritual work in Utah.

THEOLOGICAL SEMINARIES.

Hartford.

At the missionary meeting last Thursday afternoon, Rev. H. G. Bissell, a graduate of '92, now stationed at Ahmednagar, gave an able address on the Condition of India.——Professor Paton gave three interesting chapel talks last week, in continuation of his series on The Doctrinal Teachings of Jesus, regarding the natural condition of man, the condition of man under grace, or the kingdom of God and the Messiah, or the Head of the kingdom ——

The class prayer meetings Wednesday night and the seminary prayer meeting Friday night were of great interest. The thought of each centered around the Inter-Seminary Convention.

Yale.

Dr. Van Dyke will lecture on The Gospel for an Age of Doubt, in the Lyman Beecher course.——The subject at the Leonard Bacon Club, last week, was: Resolved, That the Turko-Armenian crisis justifies interference on the part of the United States. Several of the Armenian members of the school took an earnest part in the discussion.——The fortnightly address, last week, by Mr. E. C. Wheeler of the Senior Class, on Foreign Missions as Related to the Kingdom of God, was a strong and suggestive presentation.——The current reports of Professor Blackman's intended resignation are erroneous, having their only source in the recent invitation of North Church, Bridgeport, to its pastorate, where Professor Blackman has been supplying. He has announced his purpose to remain at the seminary.

Papers have recently been presented before the Senior Class in homiletics on Defects of Modern Sunday School Work, by Mr. C. W. Collier, Fixed Forms in Worship, by Mr. P. H. Epler, Congregational Worship, by Mr. James Davis, and The Relation of the Sermon to Worship, by Mr. B. F. Dailey. ——On Friday evening of last week Mr. H. W. Mabie of The Outlook delivered one of the best lectures of the year, on Literature as a Personal Resource.——The Student Volunteer Band has issued a circular letter to the churches of the State, offering to appoint members to give them addresses and stereopticon lectures on Foreign Missions. The services of these young men can be obtained by addressing W. S. Beard, at the Seminary, 82 W. Divinity Hall. There are 16 students in the membership of the band.——At the regular meeting of the Semitic Club, last week, Professor Curtis read a paper on Old Testament Commentaries.

Oberlin.

Some time ago the seminary adopted the plan of having missionary secretaries lecture here annually about the work of their respective societies, so that, in the course of three years, the work of all the societies is presented. Dr. Judson Smith has just given four carefully prepared lectures on The Origin and History of the American Board. The character and wisdom of the founders were dwelt upon and the fact emphasized that their policy has stood without essential change during the decades since. The missions were reviewed and the fundamental ideas of mission work clearly outlined.

Chicago.

President J. M. Coulter of Lake Forest University, professor elect of botany in the University of Chicago, addressed the Students' Conference last Thursday afternoon on Evolution and Christianity. ——The Inter-Seminary Economic Club held its fortnightly meeting at Chicago Commons last Saturday. Dr. Lindholm and other prominent socialists told what the community has a right to expect of the church and the ministry.

Pacific.

One evening last month the students enjoyed the hospitality of their brethren at San Anselmo, the Presbyterian school of the prophets. The following day the Oakland faculty visited there and received the welcome of the professors. A paper was read by Prof. F. H. Foster, outlining a course of thought on the doctrine of Christ's place and person.——For mutual discussion of problems interesting to teachers of theology it is proposed to organize The Edwards Club.

CONFERENCES AND ASSOCIATIONS.

CT.—Middlesex Conference held its spring meeting in the new edifice of the church in Westbrook, March 3. Behind the pulpit is a stained glass window contributed by churches of the conference. The subjects were: Systematic Giving, The Church Building Society, The Woman's Board, and The Sunday School Society.

N. Y.—The Susquehanna Association met in Binghamton Feb. 25, 26. Among the themes were: How Far Should Churches and Ministers Return to Evangelical Methods as Outlined in Acts? Uses and Abuses of Creeds, Preaching to Children, What Should Be the Attitude of the Churches Toward the Reforms of the Day? Utilizing the Social Power of the Church, How to Have a Live Church.

CLUBS.

MASS.—At the March meeting of the Essex Club in Salem the subject, Men and Church Membership, was spoken on by Rev. E. C. Ewing and others. Special music was a pleasing feature.

MICH.—The joint meeting of the Eastern and Western Michigan Clubs at Lansing was an enthusiastic and largely attended gathering. Four able papers on The Methods for Stimulating the Benevolence of the Churches were read by Rev. Messrs. E. W. Miller, J. C. Cromer, W. E. Strong and H. E. Butler. Prof. W. B. Chamberlain of Chicago Seminary gave the evening address on Sacred Music, which was well received.

MINN.—At the last meeting of the Minnesota Club the subject, The Church's True Aim—Disciples or Partisans, was discussed by Rev. M. C. Julien of New Bedford, Mass. Pleasing selections were given by the Plymouth church choir.

NEW ENGLAND.

Boston.

Old South. Israel and the Judges was the subject of the third lecture in the Lenten course, which was delivered last Sunday evening by Prof. G. F. Moore of Andover. In a clear, impressive manner he described the invasion and settlement of Western Palestine, the transformation of the nomadic Hebrew tribes into an agricultural people and their conflicts with the Canaanites; and he pointed out some of the important political and religious changes involved by their new circumstances. Professor Moore did not attempt to date the exodus and invasion, but he dwelt upon the fact that occupation of Palestine by Israel was by means of a long, slow conquest, although in certain Bible narratives the work of centuries is foreshortened into one generation. After showing how naturally the Hebrews learned the arts, civilization and religious rites of the Canaanites in this formative period, the lecturer touched briefly upon the conflicts under the leadership of local heroes and champions who became known as the judges; and in closing he declared that the strongest evidence of the strength of the Israelite character and the vitality of the race is seen in the fact that the Hebrews became a settled people and adopted a new civilization without losing the stamp of their own individuality or giving up their own religion.

Massachusetts.

CHELSEA.—First. The late Mrs. Lucy A. Hartt, long a member of this church, left $48,000 to religious and charitable objects: $30,000 to the Old Ladies' Home of this city, $5,000 each to the Woman's Board, the American Missionary Association and the Woman's Home Missionary Association and $3,000 to this church. The latter sum is in addition to a larger gift from Mrs. Hartt previous to her death to clear a mortgage on the parsonage.

MAGNOLIA.—Six persons have recently expressed a purpose to live the Christian life. At the last communion three of them were received into the church and one by letter. Others will follow. Rev. J. E. Enman is pastor.

FALL RIVER.—Central added four names to the General Howard Roll of Honor for the C. H. M. S.; and for Miss Seymour at Harpoot for the Armenians, the same day, it gave $152. Over $400 had been sent through the A. B. C. F. M. before.

FITCHBURG.—Rollstone. Rev. C. S. Brooks concluded March 1 a pastorate of nine years. During that time 295 new members have been admitted to the church, and the benevolent contributions, including legacies, have amounted to $31,623, and the home expenses have been $55,979, making an aggregate of $87,602. The present membership of the church is 547. A large reception was given by two families of the congregation, at which Rev. and Mrs. Brooks were special guests, and a little later a general reception, under the auspices of the Rollstone Y. P. S. C. E. for all members of the congregation, was tendered the retiring pastor and wife in the church parlors, which was largely attended. Mrs. Brooks's Sunday school class, of about 40 past and present members, gave her a reception, at which she was presented with a large carbon photograph of Hoffman's Christ with the Doctors, and a New Year's gift of over $100 was received by the pastor and his wife. Mr. Brooks has already taken a temporary residence at Hyde Park.

WORCESTER.—Union made a contribution of $700 for the debt of the American Board. Dr. Selah Merrill has commenced a series of four illustrated lectures on Palestine, to be given on the Tuesday evenings of March; subjects: One Hundred Things About Jerusalem, The Holy City of Today and Tomorrow, Bashan and Its Ruined Cities, Calvary Identified.

SPENCER.—First. Fifteen persons were received into fellowship last week Sunday on confession, as a partial result of the special labors of Rev. H. J. White. A spirit of deep earnestness and consecration seems to pervade the entire church. Through the untiring efforts of the pastor, Rev. S. W. Brown, the past year has been prosperous. The total benevolences were $4,936, while the expenses have been $5,474.——French. This church, organized several years ago, has thriven considerably in spite of drawbacks, but since the coming of the present pastor, Rev. T. S. St. Aubin, it has received a new impetus to growth. There are about 30 communicants, with a congregation of about 60, a flourishing Sunday school and a C. E. Society formed during the past year with 15 members. The church worships in the rooms of the W. C. T. U.

MILLBURY.—First. The pastor, Rev. G. A. Putnam, owing to illness, has been unable to preach for several Sundays, but is now much improved in health.——Second. Under the direction of the pastor, Rev. G. P. Eastman, this church is in a flourishing condition, although several of the mills are idle and in ruins on account of the floods. A Men's League was started Dec. 1, and it has been successful. The former small congregations in the vestry now number 150 to 300 in the auditorium. The additions the past year were by letter five, by confession three. The present membership is 212. Benevolences amounted to $1,628.

OXFORD.—Evangelistic services resulted in about 15 conversions. Previously there had been several others, making a total of 20, mostly among the young people. The present pastor, Rev. A. E. Bradstreet, is an earnest worker, and the congregations are steadily increasing.

HINSDALE.—This church, Rev. J. B. Laird, pastor, has just issued a new manual and history commemorative of its organization 100 years ago, the anniversary of which was fittingly celebrated last December. Mr. Laird is the eighth pastor and is now in his thirteenth year of service.

HOUSATONIC.—Rev. H. W. Pope has been assisting this church with special evangelistic services, twice daily, for a week. The meetings were helpful and quickening. Rev. A. J. Benedict is pastor.

Maine.

ASHLAND.—Secretary Hatch visited here recently and a meeting was held to plan a building for this newly organized church, the only one formed for 26 years in this rapidly developing section. Everything looks hopeful for a church home, the people being interested and resolute in the matter. Rev. Charles Whittier reports a visit to one of the large logging camps employing about 30 men. He spent a Sunday, holding services which every one in camp attended, even Roman Catholics. He says there were several faithful C. E. members and the Sunday in this and other camps was well kept. The men seemed to appreciate and welcome the minister and a religious service.

DEER ISLE.—At the recent annual meeting the pastor, Rev. J. S. Richards, gave a summary which shows a faithful ministry last year. There has been much work done at Little Deer Isle, resulting in the formation of a church and also at Green's Landing, where Mr. Aprahamian is now stationed. At the roll-call 110 persons in all responded. There were excellent reports of church activities, including five out-stations. A special effort was made to contribute to the Maine missionary debt and there has been a gain in benevolence.

SACO.—The socials have taken new hold on the interest of the people as an effort is made to have them instructive as well as social. The Scotch people gave a Robert Burns anniversary, 150 participating. There was given a sketch of his life, songs and readings. A Lincoln celebration followed. The Sunday evening people's lecture is largely attended and is aided by an orchestra. Rev. P. H. Moore is a diligent pastor.

CUMBERLAND MILLS.—An auxiliary to the W. B. M. has been organized here. The occasion was of much interest, the first hour being devoted to brief addresses, emphasizing especially the medical work in Madura toward which the branch is asked to pledge $100. Missionary letters were read and a pleasant tea gave opportunity for social intercourse.

GARLAND.—The celebration of Rev. P. B. Thayer's birthday occurred Feb. 29, which marked his 80th year. Valuable gifts were presented in money and useful household articles. Many letters were received and poems and greetings were given.

SANFORD.—The temperance work is reaching young men here, and there is a decided forward movement. Congregations are increasing so that an enlargement of the auditorium is considered. Rev. C. L. Woodworth is pastor.

HIRAM AND SEBAGO.—Mr. G. P. Merritt, a graduate of Northfield, is engaged here and religious work is encouraging. Two young men from Bangor Seminary assisted during the vacation and greatly strengthened the spiritual interest.

SOUTH PARIS.—Rev. S. D. Towne and Mr. Goodwin, the singer, have assisted the pastor in a three weeks' series of meetings, resulting in bringing many persons to a decision to live Christian lives.

BIDDEFORD.—Rev. T. A. Frye has prepared illustrated lectures upon A. M. A. work in the South and among the mountain whites.

New Hampshire.

ATKINSON.—The church has just made a special contribution in aid of the American Board amounting to $65, with the promise of more. Of this $50 was given by Miss Abbie Page, one of its most liberal members. A short time ago it placed itself on the Howard roll of honor by the gift of $100.

MERIDEN.—The late movement for the erection of a new edifice to replace the one burned several months ago has resulted in the completion of plans. The estimated cost is $4,500.

MONT VERNON.—William A. Mack of Lowell, Mass., has recently given a new furnace to the church, a gift which will be greatly appreciated.

Vermont.

RUTLAND.—Four persons were received to the church on confession and five by letter, March 1. During 1895 the total additions were 64, a net gain of 42, making the present membership 767. There have been 27 adult and 18 infant baptisms. The benevolences of the church, through its various organizations, amount to $3,500. The Sunday school enrolls in all over 500 members. Two C. E. Societies report 110 active members. Three circles of the King's Daughters number nearly 100. The Home Circle, a kindred organization, has 50 members. Home and foreign missionary societies, and a Ladies' Aid Society do good work. The Fortnightly, a literary club under the leadership of Mrs. Julia C. R. Dorr, numbers 130. The pastor is Rev. G. W. Phillips, D. D.

NEWPORT.—The pastor, Rev. E. A. George, has resigned, having accepted a call to Willimantic, Ct. On March 1 nine of the congregation united with the church on confession and three by letter. The service was tender and beautiful. Two of the new members were father and son, who only one week ago were detained from services by the death of the wife, a member of this church for years.

CLARENDON.—Not before for six years has this church, now under the care of Rev. Richard Scoles, received as many new members as united on confession March 1, three heads of families and three young men.

Connecticut.

NEW HAVEN.—At the Ministers' Meeting last week the subject discussed was My Message, or What I Preach.——The union mass meetings, held Sundays at 3 P. M. in the Grand Opera House, are largely attended and of much interest.——Howard Avenue. On March 1, 18 persons were received on confession and five by letter, making 31 additions this year. The church proposes to extend its work by opening its doors every night in the week. Periodicals, a library and simple amusements will be provided. The organization of reading circles, a rescue band and other features of an everyday church will be included in the plan. A gratifying feature of the Sunday evening service recently is the large attendance of men. As a rule they outnumber the women.——United. The Men's Club service last Sunday evening was addressed by Prof. W. N. Rice of Wesleyan University. Last Sunday morning the new assistant pastor, Mr. Frederick Lynch, preached for the first time for this church.

HARTFORD.—A union meeting of all the Congregational churches in the city was held last week Sunday evening in the South meeting house. It was largely attended and addressed by Dr. W. P. Paxson of St. Louis, superintendent of the American Sunday School Union in the Southwest, who spoke in the interests of that organization.

BETHLEHEM.—Rev. E. P. Ayer is being assisted by two women evangelists, who are holding meetings in the schoolhouses and making a canvass of the parish. A number of conversions are already reported and the work is meeting with encouragement.

NORTH HAVEN.—The church has recently lost by death two of its oldest members—Mr. Henry Bradley, who joined in 1831, and Mr. George Brockett, who joined in 1837.

CENTERBROOK.—Repairs are being made on the meeting house, a lecture recently given yielding the funds to carry them out.

MIDDLE STATES.

New York.

NEW YORK.—Broadway Tabernacle. Mr. F. S. Boyd, who has been sexton of this church more than 40 years, died March 3, in his 85th year. His services for the church have been varied and in many ways quite beyond his office. Through his influence the present site of the meeting house was chosen. A striking feature of the funeral service was the row of white-haired gentlemen in the front seats, many of them officers of the church. Dr. Stimson paid an affectionate tribute to his memory.

ORIENT.—Since the Week of Prayer union services have been held by the Congregational and Methodist churches, and a quiet interest has prevailed. Many persons have been restored to spiritual life, and a good number of others have accepted Christ. The pastors worked together unitedly, and were assisted for two weeks by Rev. Jacob Freshman, a converted Jew. Rev. J. N. Taft, the Congregational pastor, is an indefatigable worker and popular in the community.

NORWOOD.—This church, in union with the Methodists, is conducting a 10 weeks' series of evangelistic series. During the first nine weeks about 20 cottage prayer meetings are to be held every Tuesday night. The tenth week the effort will be directed by Rev. W. E. Geil.

New Jersey.

JERSEY CITY.—Tabernacle. This almost isolated lighthouse of Protestant Christianity in the lower part of the city has kept its light shining brightly the past year over the increasing flood of irreligious population. Twenty-four persons have been added to membership, chiefly on confession, and the congregations, with young men conspicuously present, the attendance at the Sunday school and the young people's societies have been large. People's Palace, the annual report of which has just appeared, makes a good showing in everything but finances, as to which it is sadly limited. Nevertheless, a new front has been added to the temporary buildings and these have been newly painted and renovated, largely by the labor of the young men of the institution. It is estimated that about 40,000 persons, or nearly half of those who swarm in the boarding houses and tenements of the lower city, have the past year been benefited in some way by this establishment. Over 10,000 free baths were given to the poor, while in the day nursery department about 2,000 poor children were cared for, washed, fed and taught while their mothers were out at work. Over 300 young men are full members, and nearly as many more are in one or more of the various classes. During the year over 6,000 lessons have been given in music, art, stenography, science, temperance, physical culture, etc., to young men and women, and boys and girls. There have been a well-stocked reading-room always accessible on week days and evenings, social gatherings on a large scale, and many amusements at once innocent and physically and morally healthful. A charitable clothing department has done much good. A labor bureau and a boarding house bureau have aided the young people in wise and stimulating ways.

THE SOUTH.

Arkansas.

SILOAM SPRINGS.—The fifteen recent accessions include four husbands with their wives and one or more children. All had recently moved here from remote States and belonged to various denominations. They come into the church from convictions of privilege and duty. All find a congenial home and Christian fellowship. The outlook is encouraging. A new location for a meeting house has been chosen without a dissenting vote, and it is confidently expected that a new edifice will soon be erected in a more central location, and the demands upon the C. H. M. S. will be lessened.

THE INTERIOR.

Ohio.

CLEVELAND.—The ministers at their March meeting had practical and valuable addresses, by Rev. C. W. Carroll on Gathering Church Members, and Rev. C. S. Mills on Nurturing Church Members. This meeting is now regularly attended by pastors as far distant as Akron, Kent and Wellington, and is an increasingly helpful promoter of fellowship among the pastors of northeastern Ohio. Its programs are carefully prepared and strongly presented.——Rev. C. S. Mills has been elected a trustee of Oberlin College.

SHANDON.—The church has organized a temperance crusade in this township. The community heartily responded and closed the saloons under "local option" by 89 majority. Then Rev. L. H. Suddith assisted the pastor, Rev. Frank Foster, in special meetings for two weeks. Ten new members were received March 1. The pastor has organized a young people's Bible class on Sunday afternoons with 18 members.

SPRINGFIELD.—First. Last week Wednesday afternoon and evening were devoted to jubilee exercises in the interest of the American Missionary Association. Addresses were made by Secretary Ryder and Rev. W. G. Olinger on the Work Among the American Highlanders, Miss D. B. Dodge on the Work Among the Indians, and Rev. G. V. Clarke on the Educational Work Among the Negroes. Much interest was manifested.

CINCINNATI.—Walnut Hills. The pastor of this church, Rev. Sydney Strong, has planned to take a party of boys abroad the coming summer on a bicycle tour through England and the Continent, a more extended journey than he carried out last year. The party will be limited in number and the entire expense moderate.

Illinois.

CHICAGO.—A serious accident occurred last week Monday to Mr. Edward Kimball, so well known among church circles throughout the country by his prominent identification with church finances and the raising of church debts. Walking down State Street, he slipped on the ice and fell heavily, suffering a fracture of the hip. His son, Dr. R. H. Kimball, was quickly summoned, and Mr. Kimball was removed to the Palmer House. The following day he was taken to the National Temperance Hospital. At the time of his mishap Mr. Kimball was visiting his son and daughter in Evanston. He was engaged in assisting to raise a debt on a church in Austin. This accident will result in a long and painful confinement, but his ultimate restoration to health and vigor is hoped for.

BARTLETT.—On the day of recognition of the new pastor, Rev. D. A. Evans, occurred the strangest duststorm ever known in this region, accompanied by snow and a fierce gale. But the services were held successfully. The power of this little church of 14 members lies in its large Sunday school, most of the members being foreigners.

WATAGA.—Under the labors of Rev. W. H. Chandler the special meetings resulted in 18 conversions, but the real work seemed to be the reconsecration of the people of God themselves.

Indiana.

INDIANAPOLIS.—People's. An unusually large congregation attended the morning service March 1. Rev. O. D. Fisher, the pastor, had conducted special meetings previously. The first fruits of the revival were manifest in the 20 persons who united with the church. They were mostly from new families and others will come later. The pastor is giving a series of illustrated lectures for school children Friday afternoons and the attendance ranges about 75 in number. Cottage prayer meetings are being maintained in different sections. A mile northwest, in a new and flourishing addition, work has been begun where the people want a new church.

BROAD RIPPLE.—This church has steadily prospered. There are several Lutheran families, a few Disciples and scattering adherents of other denominations. There is a good Sunday school and Young People's Society. There has been a growing spirit of unity and the people have now united in calling a council to be organized as a Congregational church. The field is on the environs of Indianapolis northward.

Michigan.

The statistical secretary sent in the Year Book report Feb. 20. The churches have not increased or diminished in numbers, but the total membership shows a gain of 700 and an aggregate of 30,600. Benevolences show a loss of $8,000, more than made up by large legacies. The Sunday school enrollment shows a loss of over 1,000.——There is much rejoicing in the State over the completion of its apportionment of $2,000 for the American Board debt.

Wisconsin.

CLINTON.—Rev. F. N. Dexter closed a successful pastorate Feb. 23, 15 persons, all but two on confession, having united with the church during his period of work. He becomes home missionary of the eastern district under the H. M. S.

MENOMINEE.—Within six years the church has grown from a weak organization to a membership of 250, and its meeting house is a beautiful building. Benevolences last year were $1,000 and expenses $5,000. Rev. J. W. White is pastor.

THE WEST.

Iowa.

OTTUMWA.—First. The women have recently combined their home and foreign missionary societies into a Woman's Association, in which all of their activities are centered. The experiment has proved a success from the first. About three times as many members have already joined the new society as were formerly members of the two. The main dependence for raising money is no longer suppers and fairs and entertainments, but voluntary offerings, a certain proportion of the funds going to local work and a certain proportion to missions. The various departments of work are in the hands of committees. Eight new members were received into the church March 1, two on con fession. The missionary meetings of the church are in the hands of committees appointed monthly by the pastor. The midweek prayer meeting once a month is led by the C. E. Society.——Second. All departments are in good condition. The recent accession of 41 members on confession testifies to the faithful work of the pastor, Rev. J. R. Beard, and his wife during the past year. Much sympathy is felt for them in the recent loss of their youngest child.

OSAGE.—A quiet and deep work of grace has been going on in this community, all the churches co-operating. Through the autumn months the Sunday schools maintained a union teachers' meeting, which was deeply spiritual in tone and proved to be a preparation for what was to follow. The Week of Prayer was observed by union meetings of the Congregationalists, Baptists and Methodists. Special union services with the Baptists followed, at which Rev. F. G. Wilcox of Mason City was present for three weeks and rendered valuable assistance. The meetings grew in power and influence, and March 1 the Congregational church received 60 persons into membership, 55 on confession. The converts were representative, ranging in age from 10 to 82, and coming from all ranks of life. The work still goes on.

DENMARK.—Under Rev. F. E. Kenyon as pastor the church is prospering. Last year over $300 were spent in improvements on the meeting house and parsonage. The pastor has recently conducted a series of special meetings in which about 20 persons professed conversion, most of them students in Denmark Academy, where the attendance is larger than it has been for several previous years.

FAYETTE.—During the last month there have been 117 additions to the church on confession and six by letter. Of this number 103 were baptized. The church building is being taxed to its utmost capacity. Rev. J. E. Snowden is pastor.

DES MOINES.—North Park. Special meetings are being held under the leadership of Evangelist C. W. Merrill, in which four of the north side churches have united. Good attendance and interest are reported.

KEOSAUQUA.—Rev. T. S. Oadams has resigned his charge to accept a call to Elburn, Ill. During his three years' pastorate here he has made many friends, and the church regrets his departure.

AGENCY.—Rev. Allen Clark has recently held a series of meetings at the Gospel Ridge branch, as a result of which there have been 13 accessions to the church and others are to be received later.

ELDON.—Special meetings, conducted by the pastor, were held for nearly five weeks after the Week of Prayer. Twenty-eight members have been received already, and more are expected.

The Manchester church has voted to erect a new house of worship not to exceed $9,000 in cost. Rev. H. W. Tuttle is pastor.——The Genoa Bluffs church has recently received 19 new members as the result of special meetings conducted by the pastor, Rev. C. W. Stark.——The Garner church has just purchased a parsonage for its pastor, Rev. N. F. Douglas.

Minnesota.

MINNEAPOLIS.—Plymouth. A union meeting of the Congregational ministers of St. Paul and Minneapolis was recently held, Rev. G. R. Merrill, D. D., reading a paper on Liturgics. The death of Miss Martha King at Marsovan, Turkey, was announced and resolutions of sympathy were passed. She was a member of Park Avenue Church and services commemorating her life and work were held March 3.——Park Avenue. The addition of eighteen new members, marked increase in attendance, a payment on the floating debt and a growing unity among the members are encouraging symptoms here.

DULUTH.—Morley. An interesting fellowship meeting was held here March 4, the churches at the head of the lake participating. Topics discussed were: How to Teach Children, Bible Truths, Heredity, Congregationalism and Civil Liberty, Cuba, and Congregationalism. The church is agitating the question of procuring a house of worship and hopes to see its way to begin soon.

FARIBAULT.—Mrs. E. N. Leavens, the leader of the primary class, has solicited funds for a library of 150 volumes. It has greatly increased the interest in her enthusiastic class of more than 100 pupils. A gentleman recently gave the pastor, Rev. G. S. Ricker, a valuable overcoat, and a few women presented to his wife a purse of more than $30.

HANCOCK.—This church, pastorless for six months, has sustained Sunday school and C. E. services, paid nearly the whole of a floating indebtedness and is now passing a subscription to complete the payment of the debt. It will be ready for a pastor May 1. A good parsonage was secured last year and is ready for occupancy.

BELGRADE.—This church is united with the one recently organized at South Bend and both are flourishing. Large congregations and increasing interest are reported. Eight persons united, March 1, five on confession.

EDGERTON.—Rev. Elijah Carter, who has served this church for six years and has been the means of erecting a house of worship and a parsonage, both of which are paid for, has resigned on account of ill-health, but will continue to reside in the community.

SPRINGFIELD.—The work was never in a more hopeful state. Seven persons have recently united upon confession and one by letter, while the matter of church building is being agitated at the outstation, Selma.

ALEXANDRIA.—Work has been commenced in the out-lying districts supported largely by this church, to be in charge of Rev. C. F. Morton of Brainerd. Over 100 families will come under his ministry in these new fields.

CANNON CITY.—This small church is enabled to hold regular services by securing a supply from Faribault. Considerable interest has been awakened.

MORRIS.—A new organ has been purchased, to be set up this month, and the money in hand, together with the expected proceeds of an organ concert, will pay the bills.

Nebraska.

FAIRVIEW.—The revival interest aroused in this country neighborhood five miles south of Dodge, under the lead of Rev. Arthur Farnworth of the Dodge-Howells field, culminated in the organization of a promising church, March 3, with a membership of 45. When the meetings began there was scarcely a Christian in the neighborhood to take part, but little by little the interest grew until a large number of families have been reached and about 60 persons have professed conversion. The new organization includes one or two families formerly connected with the Glencoe church, most of whose members joined the church in Dodge at its organization. At the afternoon session of the council many of the converts gave a statement of their religious experience and their reasons for asking the organization. The public services in the evening were held by invitation in the Methodist edifice at Glencoe. The sermon was by Rev. J. J. Parker. The field will be cared for by Mr. Farnworth in connection with Dodge and Howells.

SCRIBNER.—Rev. U. B. Harrison has been following up the special meetings of last fall with steady, aggressive work. Interest has been quickened in both the Endeavor Societies, and the Sunday school has increased in numbers and efficiency, the attendance on a recent Sunday reaching 178. The superintendent has a special class for young men on Monday evening. Fifty additional chairs have lately been purchased for the audience-room. In addition to the weekly prayer meeting, which is largely attended, two cottage prayer meetings are held every week, and one of the deacons superintends a large Sunday school in the country. The church is making itself felt as an evangelizing power through a wide region where the population is largely German.

OMAHA.—Saratoga and Cherry Hill observed March 3 as home missionary rally day, and responded generously to the appeal of Superintendent Bross for the work at the front.——Plymouth. At the communion service nine persons were received to membership, March 2, on confession. The work is strengthening in all departments under the efficient lead of Rev. H. S. MacAyeal, and if the aid asked from the C. C. B. S. to help pay the debt on the building shall be furnished the church will have a promising outlook.

GRANT.—After the special services, in which Rev. G. W. Knapp was assisted by Rev. G. W. Murphy of Wallace, the church united heartily with the Methodists in continued work. As a result, the whole town has been greatly moved and there have been nearly 50 more hopeful conversions, including many prominent business men. Communion Sunday 15 persons united with the church, March 1, on confession, nine being baptized. This makes a total of 31 accessions as the results of the special meetings.

NEWCASTLE.—A series of three week's special services closed March 2. The pastor, Rev. John Roberts, was assisted in the early part of the meetings by Rev. Samuel Pearson of West Point, and later by Evangelist Billings. The work went forward with constantly growing interest. As first fruits 30 persons have united with the church.

FREMONT.—All the churches of the city united in special services during the month of February. They were brought nearer in fellowship and there were over 40 hopeful conversions. Several of the converts have already pledged themselves to unite with this church, of which Rev. W. H. Buss is pastor.

North Dakota.

HANKINSON.—The annual meeting was encouraging. The Sunday school and C. E. Society have paid their debts, payments on the parsonage loan have been promptly met and additions to the church membership bring the total up to 40. The benevolent societies have received increased contributions, as has also the home work. Rev. G. S. Bascom and his wife have put their hearts into this work and the church has responded to their efforts. President Simmons of Fargo received over $40 for the college upon a recent visit.

ABERCROMBIE.—The revival meetings have been full of interest. Sixty-one persons have signed cards expressing a desire to lead the Christian life. Rev. Mr. Deale from the United Brethren has assisted the pastor, Rev. E. E. Saunders, in the work, and the people have given him a call to supply the field for six months from the expiration of Mr. Saunders's term, May 1.

DICKINSON.—The church has been holding a two weeks' series of revival meetings, Rev. G. W. Gallagher doing all the preaching himself. The meetings were well attended and eight persons united with the church March 1, three on confession. Mr. Gallagher is called to a Presbyterian church at Tacoma. The Dickinson church hopes he will decide to remain here.

CARRINGTON.—Rev. James McLaughlin, who has supplied here for three months, is having large congregations and the people are anxious to retain him as their pastor, but on account of his family he feels that he must decline the call. Carrington is one of the best fields in the State and needs an earnest and able minister at once.

CRARY.—This little village on the Great Northern Railroad has been supplied by Rev. U. G. Rich of Michigan City for the past year in connection with his work there and at Lakota. The people are now moving to organize a church and are enthusiastic over the prospects of a house of worship.

South Dakota.

HOLABIRD.—This mission Sunday school has been aided in its work for four years by the Sunday School Society, with occasional services by the Highmore pastors. Recently Superintendent Daley held a series of special meetings here which resulted in the conversion of several heads of families and young people, more than 20 of whom desired to unite in forming a church. A council for this purpose was called to meet March 5.

LESTERVILLE.—This little church, in the midst of a foreign population, has had a hard struggle, but the outlook is now much more encouraging. The Sunday school is growing and presents the most hopeful feature of the work. The primary class numbers 35 pupils. Mr. M. J. Fenenga of Yankton College has served the church for the past year and remains there.——Lakeport has been added to the Lesterville field.

CARTHAGE.—This church has procured the fine building at Esmond, erected years ago by Rev. A. J. Drake, and is moving it here, where it is much needed.

Utah.

Mr. Charles N. Crittenton and his fellow-evangelists spent the last week in January and the month of February in this State. As a result of their efforts, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, there has been an unprecedented awakening. In many places strife and jealousy have given place to reconciliation and reconsecration. A large number of persons have united with the churches. The evangelists labored in Salt Lake City, Ogden and Park City, but the influence of their work was not confined to these places. Many came from surrounding towns and returned with greater zeal for the Master's cause. The power of these workers seems to lie in their deep consecration, humility and knowledge of the Scriptures.

Montana.

MISSOULA.—Evangelist H. W. Brown of Chicago has just closed a three weeks' series of meetings, as a result of which over 100 persons have signed cards. Four evangelical churches have united in the effort and a delightful spirit of unity has prevailed throughout. Mr. Brown came to Montana under the direction of the Y. P. S. C. E. of the State and will continue his work until midsummer.

PACIFIC COAST.

California.

SAN FRANCISCO.—The members of the Chinese Mission, under the A. M. A., are making an effort to purchase a building for city and State headquarters. For years a rental of $900 per annum has been paid, while $20,000 will purchase suitable property. The Chinese have pledged $800 and expect to raise $2,000. They ask help from friends.——Bethany celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary Feb. 16, Dr. W. C. Pond, the only pastor the church has ever had, preaching the sermon. The membership has increased from 32 to 413, a good number of whom are Chinese.

POMONA.—Pilgrim. The Men's Sunday Evening Club has a membership of 75 and has just closed a year of useful service. During the eight years' pastorate of Rev. L. H. Frary the church has increased from 59 members to 365, beside the 30 dismissed to form the church at Pomona College. The benevolences for the same time were $12,934, those of the past year being $2,785.

SAN DIEGO.—Second. Congregations have doubled within a year. At La Mesa, the other preaching point of Rev. T. R. Earl, the attendance has so outgrown the schoolhouse that a meeting house is a necessity.

Rev. C. V. Martin, the pastor at Haywards, is still conducting union revival services.——The students of Pomona College have recently started a mission Sunday school near Claremont.

Oregon.

PORTLAND.—First. The annual meeting revealed a healthy growth. Fifty new members were received during the past year, 15 from the Sunday school. The present membership is 636. The average attendance at public services was considerably larger than ever before in the history of the church. The Y. P. S. C. E. numbers 109. Besides maintaining itself it raised $175 to support the Front Street mission school and has also held monthly services at the county jail and the poor farm. The Junior C. E. closed the year with a membership of 95. The year has been one of aggressive effort in all departments. Three mission Sunday schools are maintained in different parts of the city. The current expenses amounted to $5,600, and the benevolences to $2,400, of which $1,181 were for objects entirely outside the church. Strong resolutions were passed indorsing the pastor, Dr. G. R. Wallace.

HUBBARD.—A service of welcome to the new pastor, Rev. J. M. Dick, was recently held, in which church, Sunday school and Y. P. S. C. E. participated. After the Week of Prayer special meetings continued for six weeks, resulting in a number of accessions to the membership.

Washington.

The Upper Columbia and North Idaho Association has granted Miss Rosine M. Edwards a license to preach.

CANADA.

MONTREAL.—Special services are in progress at Point St. Charles, in which the pastor, Rev. Thomas Hall, is assisted by local brethren.

HAWAII.

WAIMEA.—Rev. W. M. Massie, recently pastor at Kenwood, Cal., has ordered a communion set in preparation for the first sacrament soon to be celebrated in his new parish. His large congregation has promised to reseat the old native house of worship, now used for foreign services.

BIOGRAPHICAL.

REV. JUBA HOWE VORCE,

Pastor of the church in Enfield, died in Hartford, Ct., Feb. 20, at the age of fifty-three. He was born in Crown Point, N. Y., was graduated from Middlebury College and Yale Divinity School, and ordained at Hanover, Ct., in 1870. After several pastorates in Connecticut he went to Enfield in 1893. He had been in feeble health for some time, and went to the hospital in Hartford for surgical treatment, but died suddenly of apoplexy only two weeks after the death of his father.

REV. JOSIAH BARTLETT CLARK

Died in West Dedham, March 3, aged eighty-eight years, one month, twenty-one days. He was born in Stratham, N. H. Formerly he held pastorates in several places in Vermont, among them Rupert, Pittsfield and Weathersfield, and he supplied occasionally, at the last of his ministry, in Ludlow. He has not been able to preach regularly for about eight years.

It is now officially announced that Pres. John M. Coulter of Lake Forest University will accept his appointment as head professor of botany in the University of Chicago. This will give him an opportunity of pushing his favorite studies in a department in which he stands so high.

Cures

Prove the merit of Hood's Sarsaparilla—positive, perfect, permanent Cures.

Cures of scrofula in severest forms, like goitre, swelled neck, running sores, hip disease, sores in the eyes.

Cures of Salt Rheum, with its intense itching and burning, scald head, tetter, etc.

Cures of Boils, Pimples, and all other eruptions due to impure blood.

Cures of Dyspepsia and other troubles where a good stomach tonic was needed.

Cures of Rheumatism, where patients were unable to work or walk for weeks.

Cures of Catarrh by expelling the impurities which cause and sustain the disease.

Cures of Nervousness by properly toning and feeding the nerves upon pure blood.

Cures of That Tired Feeling by restoring strength. Send for book of cures by

Hood's Sarsaparilla

To C. I. Hood & Co., Proprietors, Lowell, Mass.

Hood's Pills are the best after-dinner pills, aid digestion. 25c.

17th CENTURY.

As a special novelty in drawing-room furniture for this season we offer this suit constructed on the lines of the old-fashioned Dutch fire settles of the 17th century.

The winged sides are exactly the same as on a "great comfort" chair of fifty years ago. They are exceedingly decorative, and the suit is strikingly original in appearance.

We make the backs high enough to support the head in the corner framed by the back and side, which virtually gives to this suit a degree of luxury never before enjoyed by any drawing-room furniture. The mahogany frames and arm rests are nearly five inches in width for extreme comfort.

It is difficult to exaggerate the effectiveness of this startling departure from established forms. It is one set in a thousand, and arrests the attention of every beholder.

PAINE FURNITURE CO.,

48 CANAL STREET, BOSTON.

Not a Patent Medicine.

In cases of Paralysis

Vertigo
Dyspepsia
Insomnia
Constipation
Sick and Nervous Headaches

Freligh's Tonic

A Phosphorized Cerebro-Spinant.

has been prescribed by over forty thousand physicians with wonderful success. Sample by mail, 25 cents; regular bottle, $1.00, 100 doses. Concentrated, prompt, powerful. Descriptive pamphlet, full directions, testimonials, etc., sent to any address.

I. O. Woodruff & Co.,
Manufacturing Chemists,
106-108 FULTON STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

Formula on Every Bottle.

Church Equipment.

CHURCH PLANS WANTED.

Any church that has in recent years erected a modern church building, seating in the main room 800 to 1,000, with good Sunday school and social rooms, and costing without organ $30,000 to $50,000, will confer a favor on a sister church by sending a view of the church, a sketch of the interior plan, and a statement of cost completed, to A. B., Care of The Congregationalist.

A. B. & E. L. SHAW
Established 1780.
Largest Manufacturers of
PULPIT SUITS,
27 SUDBURY ST.
Boston, Mass.
Send 5c. stamp for new 100-page catalogue.

Church Cushions
Correspondence Solicited.
Ostermoor & Co., 116 Elizabeth St. New York, N.Y.

Blake Bell Foundry
Established in 1820.
Successors to WM. BLAKE & CO.
Manufacture bells of every description, single or chimes, of Copper and Tin. Address
BLAKE BELL CO., Boston, Mass.

Buckeye Bell Foundry
E. W. Vanduzen Co., Cincinnati, O.
Best Pure Copper and Tin Church Bells & Chimes
Highest Award at World's Fair. Gold Medal & Mid-winter Exp'n. Price, terms, etc., supplied free.

BELLS
Steel Alloy Church & School Bells. Send for Catalogue. The C. S. BELL CO., Hillsboro, O

IMPROVED
Cathedral Tubular Bells,
CHIMES AND PEALS (Harrington and other patents.)
U. S. Tubular Bell Co., Sole Mfrs., Methuen, Mass.

A BELLS all kinds, big and little—for Church and School, for Fire, Factory and Farm.
Catalogue FREE.
AMERICAN BELL FOUNDRY CO., NORTHVILLE, MICH.

GEO. H. RYDER & CO.,
Church Organs
FACTORY AND HOME OFFICE
READING, MASS.
BOSTON OFFICE:
No. 5 MUSIC HALL BUILDING.
Send for a Catalogue.

BOOKS OF THE WEEK.

Lamson, Wolffe & Co. Boston.

TWO UNPUBLISHED ESSAYS. By Ralph Waldo Emerson. pp. 81. $1.00.

THE HOUSE OF THE TREES AND OTHER POEMS. By Ethelwyn Wetherald. pp. 94. $1.00.

D. C. Heath & Co. Boston.

LE GENDRE DE M. POIRIER. By Angier et Sandeau. Edited by B. W. Wells, Ph. D. pp. 106. 30 cents.

Roberts Bros. Boston.

HANDBOOK OF ARCTIC DISCOVERIES. By A. W. Greely. pp. 257. $1.00

Charles Scribner's Sons. New York.

THE EVOLUTION OF CHURCH MUSIC. By Rev. F. L. Humphrys pp. 179. $1.75.

THE INTERNATIONAL CRITICAL COMMENTARY: THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO MARK. pp. 317. $2.50.

COMEDIES OF COURTSHIP. By Anthony Hope. pp. 376. $1.50.

THE JEWISH SCRIPTURES. By Amos K. Fiske. pp. 390. $1.50.

American Book Co. New York.

ROBINSON'S NEW HIGHER ARITHMETIC. pp. 506. $1.00.

ELEMENTS OF PLANE GEOMETRY. By John Macine. Edited by E. E. White. pp. 240. 75 cents.

LABORATORY WORK IN CHEMISTRY. By E. H. Keisler. pp. 119. 50 cents.

VIRI ROMÆ. By Robert Arrowsmith and Charles Knapp. pp. 217. 75 cents.

D. Appleton & Co. New York.

CALIFORNIA OF THE SOUTH. By Walter Lindley and J. P. Widney. pp. 335. $2.00.

THE EXPLOITS OF BRIGADIER GERARD. By A. Conan Doyle. pp. 361. $1.50.

GREENLAND ICEFIELDS AND LIFE IN THE NORTH ATLANTIC. By C. F. Wright, D.D., LL.D., F.G.S.A., and Warren Upham, F.G.S.A. pp. 407. $2.00.

G. P. Putnam's Sons. New York.

THE FLORENTINE PAINTERS OF THE RENAISSANCE. By Bernhard Berenson. pp. 141. $1.00.

Hunt & Eaton. New York.

CHRISTIANITY VINDICATED BY ITS ENEMIES. By Daniel Dorchester, D.D. pp. 187. 75 cents.

Thomas Whittaker. New York.

THE THEOLOGY OF THE OLD TESTAMENT. By W. H. Bennett. pp 218. 75 cents.

J. B. Lippincott Co. Philadelphia.

THE AMERICAN IN PARIS. By E. C. Savidge. pp. 273. $1.00

A PROFESSIONAL BEAUTY. By Elizabeth P. Train. pp. 231 75 cents.

MRS ROMNEY By Rosa N. Carey. pp. 215. $1.00.

WHEN GREEK MEETS GREEK. By Joseph Hatton. pp. 327. $1.50.

Lea Bros. & Co. Philadelphia.

A HISTORY OF CONFESSION AND INDULGENCES IN THE LATIN CHURCH. Vol. I. By Henry C. Lea, LL. D. pp. 523.

C. H. Kerr & Co. Chicago.

RATIONAL THEOLOGY. Vol. II. By J. M. Williams, D. D. pp. 325. $1.25.

D. H. McBride & Co. Chicago.

EVOLUTION AND DOGMA. By Rev. J. A. Zahm, Ph. D., C. S. C. pp. 461.

Government Printing Office. Washington.

REPORT OF THE COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION FOR 1892-93. Vol. II. pp. 2,153.

MAGAZINES.

March. NICKELL.—CATHOLIC WORLD.—SAILOR'S.—CHAUTAUQUAN.—CENTURY.—AMERICAN KITCHEN.—MCCLURE'S.—ART AMATEUR.—ATLANTIC.—NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW.—SPIRIT OF MISSIONS.—TREASURY.—CHAP-BOOK.—JOURNAL OF HYGIENE.—OUR COUNTRY.—APPLETON'S POPULAR SCIENCE MONTHLY.—BOSTONIAN.—REVIEW OF REVIEWS.

DON'T worry yourself and don't worry the baby; avoid both unpleasant conditions by giving the child pure, digestible food. Don't use solid preparations. Infant Health is a valuable pamphlet for mothers. Send your address to the New York Condensed Milk Co., New York.

The Patent Whatisit!

It looks like sarsaparilla, smells like sarsaparilla, tastes like sarsaparilla, it is sarsa..... Stop! What is the name on the bottle? Is it Ayer? Then it is sarsaparilla; the best that is made. But the other kind, that looks and smells and tastes like sarsaparilla. What is it? That's it. It's whatisit. It's a conundrum. Give it up. Ayer's Sarsaparilla, alone, is made exclusively from the imported Honduran sarsaparilla plant, the variety richest in medicinal value and healing power. Possibly, this is why one bottle of Ayer's does as much work as three bottles of any other kind. At least, that is what people say who've tried others, and then tried Ayer's. Some go farther. There's GEORGE SMITH, Druggist, of Seymour, Conn., for example, who writes: "I will guarantee more benefit from one bottle of Ayer's Sarsaparilla than by using half a dozen bottles of any other kind." That's the sort of record Ayer's Sarsaparilla is living up to. Others imitate the remedy; they can't imitate the record—50 years of cures.

Send for the "Curebook."
100 pages, 16 half-tones, bound in Royal Holland. Free.
Address J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

THE BUSINESS OUTLOOK.

The prospects for general trade are slowly improving, but at the present time conditions are somewhat unsatisfactory. The volume of business is light, and in many lines of trade prices are low, although not so low as in 1894 at this time. The present level of prices naturally makes profits small, and this fact is probably responsible for the pessimistic talk one hears, rather than any dearth of actual business.

This would seem to be the best explanation of such discontent, for railroad earnings and bank clearings indubitably show that merchandise is moving in fair volume. There is, of course, much room for improvement in the actual demand for goods, but if prices should advance all along the line, without any increase in the demand, merchants would soon change the tone of their remarks.

Spring trade is backward, in sympathy with the weather and in Boston, at least, high money rates naturally militate against any general expansion. The fact that it is a presidential year, that European politics are excited, that we have what may be called disputes with England and Spain over Venezuelan and Cuban affairs, also tend to affect business adversely. Still the sentiment among large interests is hopeful, and with Congress out of the way we shall very likely see quite a spurt in trade.

The damage by floods to many New England mills will cause some curtailment of the output of cotton goods, which will help the situation rather than otherwise, as it will relieve the market of the pressure of goods. Stocks of cotton goods have been accumulating and prices have eased off somewhat. The export demand for cottons is good, however. The iron and steel trade is quiet and orders are not satisfactory in volume. Wool, dry goods and woolens are slow of movement, but would do better with seasonable weather. Boots and shoes are quite active, but prices are low. The stock market is also narrow, but would respond sharply to any good news. Bank clearings for last week were $1,062,000,000, an increase of 16 per cent. over the previous week, 6 per cent. more than in 1895, 13 per cent. more than for the first week of March, 1894, but 18 per cent. less than in 1893

For months the cry from many parts of our house—"We need more room for our increasing multitude of customers"—has been so urgent that we have today purchased the stock and lease of George E. Allen, 9 and 11 Winter Street, which will double our capacity for business.

We are now marking down his entire stock to prices that will surprise everybody when we open next Monday for a grand clearance sale.

GILCHRIST & CO.,

5 and 7 Winter Street,

BOSTON.

10 TIMES OUT OF 10

The New York Journal recently offered ten bicycles to the ten winners in a guessing contest, leaving the choice of machine to each.

ALL OF THEM CHOSE

Columbia Bicycles

Standard of the World.

Nine immediately, and one after he had looked at others. And the Journal bought ten Columbias. Paid $100 each for them, too. On even terms a Columbia is chosen

10 TIMES OUT OF 10

POPE MFG. CO., Hartford, Conn.

Financial.

7 PER CENT. NET.

First Mortgage Loans on Improved Farms in the Wonderfully Fertile Red River Valley and in North Dakota and Minnesota. 20 years of experience in the business, and an actual residence of over 8 years in the Red River Valley and of over 22 in Minnesota and North Dakota. A personal knowledge of lands and values Loans only made to industrious, thrifty farmers, on well improved farms. I give my personal supervision to the business. Loans made in your name and interest coupon-notes and mortgages and applications sent to you and held by you. Interest collected by me and forwarded to you by New York Check. Funds now earning you only 2, 3, or 4 per cent. in Savings Banks will here earn you 7 per cent.—about doubling your income. Remit funds for investment by New York or Boston Draft, or by personal check payable to my order. Address

E. P. CATES,

2628 Portland Avenue, Minneapolis, Minn.

References: Nat'l Bank of Commerce, Minneapolis, Minn; Importers and Traders Nat'l Bank, New York City.

P. S.—I will be at Young's Hotel, Boston, Tuesday and Wednesday next, March 3 and 4.

Iowa Loan & Trust Co.,

of Des Moines, Iowa.

Capital, $500,000. Surplus, $335,000.

This old and reliable company has been in successful business operation for over 23 years, and has always met every obligation promptly at maturity.

Its Surplus is now larger than ever before, and the company continues under the same careful management. Its Debenture Bonds are amply secured by

FIRST MORTGAGES ON REAL ESTATE,

$105,000 of such mortgages being deposited for the security of each series of $100,000 Bonds.

Bonds in sums of $200, $300, $500 and $1,000 for sale by

FREEMAN A. SMITH,

Ex-Treasurer American Baptist Missionary Union,

Office, 31 Milk St., Room 22,

Correspondence solicited. Boston.

WESTERN MORTGAGES

DEFAULTED AND OTHERWISE, Bought for Cash.

CHAS. E. GIBSON, 45 Milk St. Boston, Mass.

YOU SELL WE BUY

DO YOU WANT TO SELL A Western Mortgage

or Western Land—avoid foreclosure costs—stop sending good money after bad—get a good 5% investment instead? State exact location, condition of title, and your lowest price. Over $2,000,000 in Western securities successfully handled by the present management of this corporation

THE BOSTON REALTY, INDEMNITY AND TRUST CO

Send for our Bond List. 33 Equitable Building, Boston

YOUR MONEY

Is safe when invested in my Iowa Farm Mortgages. No loss for 22 years. Address

ARTHUR S. LAKE, Shenandoah, Iowa.

Railroads and Excursions.

RAYMOND & WHITCOMB'S TOURS.

ALL TRAVELING EXPENSES INCLUDED.

Parties will leave Boston, April 21, for Grand and Comprehensive Tours (personally escorted throughout) to

COLORADO, CALIFORNIA,

The Pacific Northwest,

ALASKA

AND

THE YELLOWSTONE PARK, The Wonderland of America.

Send for special descriptive circular.

RAYMOND & WHITCOMB,

296 Washington Street, opposite School St., Boston.

VACATION TOURS EUROPE

H. GAZE & SONS, 52d Year.

All expenses—$175 to $800—all expenses.

HIGH CLASS ARRANGEMENTS.

Spring and Summer Vacation Tours, Europe. Thirty Tours, ranging in price from $175 to $800, visiting England, Ireland, Scotland, France, Holland, Rhine, Germany, Italy, Switzerland, Danube, Austria, etc.

North Cape and Russia Party, June 27.
Annual Round the World Party, Sept.
Holy Land Party (Egypt and the Nile)—Spring and Autumn—Four tours annually.

Independent tickets for any desired tour in Europe, with or without hotel coupons. Estimates furnished. Agents all lines steamers. Choice rooms secured. Gaze's Tourist Gazette free, gives particulars.

113 Broadway, New York. H. Gaze & Sons, Ltd., 201 Washington St., Boston.

CRUISE OF THE AMERICAN BUILT STEAMER "OHIO."

The largest and finest yacht steamer in the world. Dining room holds 200 persons, and only this number will be taken on the cruise.

March 28th to June 6th. 70-day cruise to the Mediterranean, visiting Spain, Malta, Egypt, Palestine, Turkey, Greece, Italy, France Ten days longer than any other cruise. Rate, $425 and upwards.

June 27th to August 27th. Cruise to Russia, Sweden, Norway and the Midnight Sun, and the total eclipse of the sun, visible August 8th. Rate, $550.

June 6th, July 1st and 8th. European Tours. Send for descriptive catalogues.

THOMAS FOREIGN TOURIST CO., 1715 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, or Leon L. Collver, New England Agent, 306 Washington Street, Boston.

EUROPE

Application (with references) may now be made for membership in President Capen's (Tufts College) Party, and in the Harvard and Brown Universities' Parties to visit the Historical, Literary, and Art Centers of Europe. Cards of Membership $265 to $630. Address

LEON L. COLLVER, N. E. Agent Clark's Tours,

306 Washington St., Boston.

WHERE?

Write Gaze where and when you wish to Travel, and they will inform How and the Cost. Escorted Parties for Winter, Spring or Summer Tickets issued for Independent Travel Everywhere. Choice Berths on all Steamships—no extra cost. See Tourist Gazette (by mail 10 cts.), and Save Money. State your wishes carefully; full information Free. Address HENRY GAZE & SONS, Ltd., Universal Tourist Agents 113 Broadway N.Y.; 201 Washington St., Boston; 220 S. Clark St., Chicago, Ill.; 135 S. Fifth St., Philadelphia.

WHEN?

TOURS to EUROPE FROM $185 to $585

All expenses. Itineraries of Edwin Jones, 462 Putnam Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y. Fall Tour to Palestine, $650. Tour Round the World, $1,650.

EUROPEAN TOURS.

14th Year. Personally conducted by Dr. and Mrs. Paine. Limited party. Terms reasonable. Address H. S. PAINE, M.D., Glens Falls, N. Y.

EUROPE 50 Parties during the season, $147 to $2,000, all expenses included. Programs free. Ocean passages by all lines, and travel tickets everywhere. Letters of credit, foreign moneys. Every requisite for travelers. Estimates free. Write us. Japan party, March 21.

Thos. Cook & Son., 261 & 1225 B'way, N. Y.

Your New Spring Hat

Easter is almost here! With the approach of that glad day comes the selection of your New Spring Hat. It is a very important matter to most women. Let us help you decide what to wear this season.

Our Milliners are artists of taste and originality. They can design and execute a Hat that will be becoming to you; stylish, but quiet and refined.

Our prices are the lowest possible for work of superior excellence.

We can save money for you even if you reside outside of Boston.

Wm. S. Butler & Co.,

The Leading Millinery House,

TREMONT & BOSWORTH STS., BOSTON.

BUY

"Pride of the West"

Bleached Muslin.

Take No Substitute.

THE CONGREGATIONALIST

AND BOSTON RECORDER.

The Recorder founded 1816: The Congregationalist, 1849.

Published every Thursday.

PER COPY, 6 CENTS. PER YEAR IN ADVANCE, $3.00.
TWO YEARS IN ADVANCE, $5.00; FIVE YEARS, $10.00.
IF PAYMENT IS DELAYED, $3.50 PER YEAR.
ONE OLD AND ONE NEW SUBSCRIPTION, $5.00.
CLUB OF FIVE, ONE AT LEAST BEING NEW, $10.00.
On Trial, 6 Months, $1.00; 3 Months, 25 Cents.

RECEIPTS for subscriptions are indicated by the date of expiration following the subscriber's address, as printed upon the paper. If a special receipt is wanted a stamp should be sent with remittance.

DISCONTINUANCES.—In accordance with the almost universal wish of our subscribers, papers are continued until there is a specific order to stop. In connection with such an order all arrearages must be paid. An order of discontinuance can be given at any time, to take effect at the expiration of the subscription.

ADVERTISING RATES.—25 cents per agate line each insertion, 14 lines to the inch; 11½ inches to the column. Discounts according to amount of contract.
READING NOTICES, leaded nonpareil, 50 cents per line, each insertion, net.

W. L. GREENE & CO., Proprietors, Boston.

Entered as second-class mail. Composition by Thomas Todd.

WOMAN'S BOARD PRAYER MEETING.

CONGREGATIONAL HOUSE, BOSTON, MARCH 6.

A placard upon the door of Room 2, announcing "Prayer meeting in Pilgrim Hall," indicated the change of place which the increased attendance has rendered inevitable. The Woman's Board rooms, with their missionary associations, have witnessed many a blessed Friday meeting, but just as it has been found possible to have a good annual meeting in Park Street and Berkeley Temple, as well as in the old Mt. Vernon Church, so the spirit of the Friday meeting is not limited to Rooms 1 and 2, and the ninety ladies who came together in Pilgrim Hall last Friday found more room, better light and air, and greater comfort generally than it was possible to have in the old quarters, with no loss of the usual spirit of the meeting.

Mrs. Abell presided and read selections from Deuteronomy and Isaiah referring to God's covenant with his children. The calendar topic, prayer for missionary wives and mothers, was suggestive. Mrs. Kellogg spoke of the change in the title of Life and Light, which at the beginning added "for Heathen Women," but from which the word heathen was long ago dropped; also of the blessing which the members of missionary families have often brought to those with whom they have been associated in this country, and of the change in circumstances which makes the separation of children from parents less imperative than formerly.

Mrs. Capron, from her own experience, spoke of the effect produced upon the people for whom missionaries labor by their having left their children at home. When she returned to India without her children the women coming down the hill with their loads would often lay down their burdens as they saw her approaching and, putting off their sandals, would stand with folded arms in token of their wonder and admiration, saying, "Think what you have done." And then she would answer, "If forty of you will be my children, it will pay to have come," sometimes adding, "Will it not take 100 of you to be equal to one of mine?" The very sacrifice seemed to create a tender tie between her and the Hindu mothers, to whom it was a great matter to send a son eighty miles away.

News had come of the death of Miss King (W. B. M. I) at Marsovan, Feb. 1, of smallpox. Three years ago she went out with Miss Gage and together they have been most successful in the care of the girls' school at Marsovan. Miss Washburn gave some details of the sad story and of the sorrow which has come to the whole station, as well as to the friends in the home land. She alluded, also, to the murder of Mr. Kuludjian, pastor at Sivas, as mentioned in the Missionary Herald, and told of his wife, Maritza, whom she had known as pupil and teacher at Marsovan—one heart-rending case among many.

Insist

On a good (the best) skirt binding as strenuously as on a good cloth for the skirt.

Ask for (and take no other) the

TRADE-S·H·&M·-MARK

Bias Velveteen Skirt Binding.

If your dealer will not supply you w will.

Send for samples, showing labels and materials, to the S. H. & M. Co., P. O. Box 699, New York City.

CHANDLER & CO.'S

Duchesse Perfect Fitting Glove.

We invite the attention of the ladies of Boston and New England to this most justly celebrated glove as the greatest triumph of the glove maker's art. In shapeliness, beauty and wearing qualities we have never seen it equaled during the many years of our catering to the wants of the New England family trade.

We will send this glove anywhere by mail, on receipt of price, and guarantee perfect satisfaction to the purchaser.

We do not hesitate to recommend this glove as the very best made.

Four Button Kid, in Colors, Plain Back . . . . . $1 50 per pair.
Four Button Kid, in Black, Plain Back . . . . . $1.75 " "
Four Button Kid, in Colors, Embroidered Back . . . $1 75 " "

CHANDLER & CO.,

Winter Street, Boston.

Church Finances Greatly Augmented.

To fill your church with interested people is the way to have a healthy treasury. This is easily done by using the masterpieces of the world to proclaim the gospel to the eye as well as speak it to the ear. Everybody sings the gospel from the lantern screen.

Write for pamphlet, "Solved; or, The Sunday Evening Problem." Read its hints, and the actual experience of pastors who have tried the new plan. It is mailed for the asking. Illustrated catalogue 20 cents.

RILEY BROTHERS,

Branches: 16 Beekman St., New York.
BOSTON: 244 Washington St. CHICAGO: 196 La Salle St. KANSAS CITY (Mo.): 515 East 14th St. MINNEAPOLIS: 1564 Hennepin Ave. CHATTANOOGA: 708 Market St. SAN FRANCISCO: 430 Kearny St. PORTLAND: 411 Couch St.

245 Columbus Ave., Boston, and 34 Union Sq., N. Y.

IT WILL SERVE THE INTERESTS of all concerned if, in correspondence suggested by announcements in our ADVERTISING COLUMNS, mention is made of the fact that the advertisement was seen in The Congregationalist.

WEEKLY REGISTER.

Calls.

BACHELER, Francis P., to permanent pastorate of South Ch., E. Hartford, Ct. Accepts.
BAKER, Jno. W. H., Lancaster, Mass., to Enosburgh, Vt. Accepts.
BARNARD, Henry T., Bradford, Vt., to supply at Fairlee in connection with his present field. Accepts.
CHUTE, Edward L., Northboro, Mass., to Ware. Accepts, to begin April 1.
CLEAVES, Chas. P., Yarmouth, Me., to supply for a year at Waterford. Accepts.
CROWMILLER, Bruce W. (Pres.), accepts call to supply at S. Egremont, Mass., for a year from April 1.
CUTLER, Walter A., Emington, Ill., to Chenoa. Accepts.
DEALE, Mr. (United Brethren), to supply at Abercrombie, N. D., for six months from May 1.
GALLAGHER, Geo. W., Dickinson, N. D., to a Presbyterian Ch., Tacoma, Wn.
HADDEN, R. A., W. Pullman, Ill., to Forest Heights, Minneapolis, Minn.
HAMPTON, Wm. S., to remain another year at Ogalalla, Neb. Accepts.
HARVEY, Jasper P., First Ch., Ware, Mass., to Columbia, Ct. Accepts, and has begun work
HEYWARD, Jas. W., Hayward, Wis., to Bethany Ch., Minneapolis, Minn.
IRELAND, Wm. F., Columbus, N. Y., accepts call to South Ave. Ch., Syracuse, to begin work April 1.
KIERNAN, Thos. L., Pewaukee, Wis., accepts call to Cromwell, Io.
McCROSKEY, J. A., Leavenworth, Wn., to St. John and Endicott. Accepts, to begin work March 15.
McLAUGHLIN, James, to remain at Carrington, N. D., where he has been supplying. Declines.
MORTON, Geo. F., Long Prairie, Minn., to work in country districts near Alexandria. Accepts.
NEWTON, George J., Beechwood, Mass., to Hopkinton, N. H. Accepts, to begin work March 15.
OADAMS, Thos. S., Keosauqua, Io., to Elburn, Ill. Accepts.
PHILLIPS, Chas. H., Jamestown, N. D., to Grand Forks. Declines.
PRATT, N. Miller, Union Seminary, accepts call to Barton, Vt., to begin work in May.
RIVES, Chas. G., Bryan, Okl., to Morrison. Accepts.
ROGERS, Alfred H., Green Ridge, Mo., to Mound City, Ill. Accepts.
SAGE, Chas. J., accepts call to remain a third year at Rising City, Neb.
TILLETT, Barton C., Boone, Io., accepts call to supply Kelley, Slater and Garden Prairie till January, 1897.
TURNER, Tell A., Excelsior, Minn., to Hazel Park Ch., St. Paul, Minn. Accepts.
WITHEE, Leslie B., Gilead, Me., to No. Rochester, Mass. Accepts.

Ordinations and Installations.

GOODALE, David W., i. First Ch., Suffield, Ct., March 3. Sermon, Rev. Dr. C. M. Lamson; other parts, Rev. Messrs. W. D. Love, H. B. Roberts, D. E. Jones, Richard Wright.
LEE, Wilberforce, o. p. Olivet Ch., Toronto, Can., Feb. 27. Parts, Rev. Messrs. J. A. C. McCuaig, T. B. Hyde, J. P. Gerrie, Chas. Duff, Thos. Sims, D. D., Wm. Johnston.
UPSHAW, W. L., o. Vittum, near Guthrie, Okl., Feb. 26. Sermon, Dr. R. B. Foster; other parts, Rev. Messrs. J. H. Parker, J. E. Platt, Wilson Lumpkin and L. S. Childs.

Resignations.

CARTER, Elijah, Edgerton, Minn.
CHAMBERS, Alex., Prentice, Wis.
LEE, Gerald S., Park St. Ch., W. Springfield, Mass., to engage in literary work.
PALMER, Frank H., E. Bridgewater, Mass., to take effect April 1.
PARSONS, Henry W., Sauk Rapids and Cable, Minn.
TROWER, Wm. G., Hutchinson, Minn.
VINCENT, Sam'l L., Jamaica, Vt.
WALLER, Wm. C. A., Fergus Falls, Minn., to take effect May 1.

Churches Organized.

FAIRVIEW, Neb., March 3. Forty-five members.
NORA, Ill., Feb. —.
OTO, Io., reorganized, March —. Fifteen members.
SHAW STATION, Lee Co., Ill., Feb. —.

Miscellaneous.

AVERY, Fredk. D., for forty-five years the honored pastor in Columbia, Ct., and now its pastor emeritus, has removed to East Hartford, where he will reside with his son. His departure occasions much regret.
BEAMAN, Wm. F., formerly pastor in Woodford, Vt., and now missionary in China, has been heard from. For months his friends here have feared that he was killed in the massacre of last autumn.
CLARK, Wm. C., has been given an immediate and extended leave of absence by the church of So. Hero and Grand Isle, Vt., that he may recruit his health.
CULVER, Franklin J., of Pasadena, Cal., offers to devote a large part of his time to raising money for Pomona College, paying his own traveling expenses. This generous proposition the executive committee has gratefully accepted.
McCULLY, Chas. G., and wife, were given a reception by the women of their parish in Calais, Me., on the twentieth anniversary of his settlement. The large attendance included neighboring pastors, and many tributes of appreciation were offered. The collation was skillfully served by the young men.
MORSE, Henry H., and wife, recently gave a reception to the members of the church in Milford, Ct.
SARGENT, Clarence S., pastor of Central Ave. Ch., St. Louis, Mo., has been elected president of the Evangelical Alliance of that city, an organization representing 40,000 church members.
SARGENT, Frank D., has been given a three months' vacation by the church in Putnam, Ct., that he may regain his health. He is now in Bermuda and will accompany The Congregationalist's Pilgrimage next June.
TURK, Morris H., has been granted a three months' leave of absence to finish his studies in Boston. He will, however, continue to supply the pulpit at Hooksett, N. H.

IMPOVERISHED blood causes that tired feeling. Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies, enriches and vitalizes the blood and gives vigor and vitality.

SPEEDY runners, as Conneff, Myers and A. B. George, recommend Pond's Extract for use in training.

"CONGRESS IN SESSION."—Now is the best season of the year to visit Washington, D. C. Royal Blue Line personally conducted tours leave Boston April 3 and 15 and May 6. Accommodations are first-class; stop-over privileges at Philadelphia and New York. Send for illustrated itinerary and "Guide to Washington" to A. J. Simmons, N. E. A., 211 Washington Street, Boston.

Marriages.

The charge for marriage notices is twenty-five cents.

BISSELL—WHEELER—In North Stonington, Ct., Mar. 4, by Rev. H. G. Bissell, brother of the groom, assisted by Rev. William B. Cory, Dwight Walter Bissell and Mary Brown Wheeler.

Deaths.

The charge for notices of deaths is twenty-five cents. Each additional line ten cents, counting eight words to a line. The money should be sent with the notice.

ANDREWS—In Millbury, Feb. 20, Mary Farnsworth Andrews, aged 81 yrs., 6 mos.
DEWEY—In Northampton, March 3, at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Belden, where she was visiting, Elizabeth W., wife of the late J. N. Dewey of Bernardston, aged 76 yrs.
GOSS—In Concord, N. H., Feb. 8, Mrs. H. A., widow of the late Rev. J. C. Goss, aged 89 yrs., 10 mos.
LAURIE—In Providence, R. I., March 2, Ellen A., wife of Rev. Thomas Laurie, D. D., aged 71 yrs., 2 mos.

HANNAH MATHEWS TUFTS

Died at New Braintree, Mass., Jan. 5, aged 81 yrs., 4 mos. She was a grandniece of General Rufus Putnam and the last but two survivors of forty-eight grandchildren of Major Joseph Bowman, who came from Lexington to New Braintree in 1765. In 1835 she married Danforth K. Tufts, who died in 1852. Until threescore and ten she was constantly active and prominent in church and social life, retaining her mental and physical powers but slightly impaired until fourscore. She was a member of the church choir nearly forty years, a faithful and devoted wife and mother, true to every interest committed to her, "bright, dignified and ladylike" in manner, of whom no truer description can be given than the one by King Lemuel in Prov. 31.

trust him

You want Scott's Emulsion. If you ask your druggist for it and get it—you can trust that man. But if he offers you "something just as good," he will do the same when your doctor writes a prescription for which he wants to get a special effect — play the game of life and death for the sake of a penny or two more profit. You can't trust that man. Get what you ask for, and pay for, whether it is Scott's Emulsion or anything else.

SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists, New York. 50c. and $1.00

The woman pinned down to one or two uses of Pearline will have to be talked to. Why is she throwing away all the gain and help that she can get from it in other ways? If you have proved to yourself that Pearline washes clothes, for instance, in the easiest, quickest, safest way, you ought to be ready to believe that Pearline is the best for washing and cleaning everything. That's the truth, anyway. Try it and see. Into every drop of water that's to be used for cleansing anything, put some Pearline. 476

Millions NOW USE Pearline

WHEN You fry fish or oysters in Cottolene they will not be greasy. Always have the skillet or frying pan cold when the COTTOLENE is put in. Remember that COTTOLENE heats to the cooking point sooner than lard and that it must not be allowed to burn.

COTTOLENE

when rightly used, never imparts to food any disagreeable greasy odor or flavor. For pastry or any shortening purpose, but ⅔ the quantity that was formerly used of lard, is necessary, if Cottolene IS USED

Look for the trade-marks—"Cottolene" and steer's head in cotton-plant wreath—on every tin.
THE N. K. FAIRBANK COMPANY, CHICAGO, 224 State Street, BOSTON, PORTLAND, ME.

USE "DURKEE'S SALAD DRESSING"

ANOTHER FRIENDLY GREETING.

Too late to be grouped with the broadside from his confrères, published on pages 422 and 423, we receive this breezy communication.

OFFICE OF THE INTERIOR,
CHICAGO.

I wish to congratulate The Congregationalist on its anniversary. Long ago, thirty years or so, your paper attracted my attention by the elevation of its tone and the finish of its work, and I read it from a journalist's point of view. I remember to have scanned it with interest and admiration from week to week, and with something of curiosity to discover why The Congregationalist should be so much finer than any other religious newspaper that I saw. I was then myself in the rough-and-tumble of political journalism, and thought what a haven of rest, what a garden of Eden that must be for the happy bee-workers therein. When I think of it, philosophically, I am not disposed to give you so much credit. Your paper was produced under the beams of the brightest literary galaxy in America. It breathed the ozone and the perfume of the purest literary atmosphere. You could not help being good, any more than one can who is in heaven and wants to stay there. And you cannot now. It is an alternative of got to, or quit.

My opinion is that The Congregationalist exercised a larger influence indirectly, by bringing the general religious press up to excellence, than it did directly by influencing its readers—just as the New York Tribune under Greeley gave the key to the Whig and afterward to the Republican press all over the Union, and did more by guiding other pens than by wielding his own. I will not say that The Congregationalist now holds the same relation to the religious press in points of superiority that it once did, because, with the exception of itself, religious newspapers were monuments of dullness and prolixity, enlivened only by acrimonious polemics; but they have made great progress, especially in the last score of years. I am ten years older than my brother. When he was a year old I was ten times as old as he. But to keep up that proportion I should now have to be six hundred years old. So The Congregationalist cannot, in the nature of things, expect to be forty or fifty thousand times as good as any other religious paper in the world. It must content itself and not gainsay Providence with less.

While I congratulate you, I sympathize with you as well. How few have any appreciation of the task of making such a paper, week after week, and year after year, that ceaseless toil, care and endeavor! One can climb a hill and be there. But the path of ascent of such a paper, no matter where he is in it, he sees that there is more to climb than he has climbed, and it would be so if the angel Gabriel were chief editor, Uzziel his associate, and Ithuriel looking after the schemes of the devil. W. C. GRAY.

---

The decision of the Federal Supreme Court in the case of the United States against Jane L. Stanford, executrix of the estate of the late Leland Stanford, is adverse to the nation and insures to the cause of culture on the Pacific coast the perpetuation of Leland Stanford, Jr., University, which during the long legal controversy Mrs. Stanford has shown admirable pluck and self-sacrifice in sustaining. If the estate had been found a debtor to the United States in the sum of $15,000,000, as was the contention of the United States, the university would have had to close its doors.

---

Teachers and Students should Take Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

It supplies just the material that is most wasted by brain work and nervous exertion—the phosphates.

ARMSTRONG & McKELVY Pittsburgh.
BEYMER-BAUMAN Pittsburgh.
DAVIS-CHAMBERS Pittsburgh.
FAHNESTOCK Pittsburgh.
ANCHOR, ECKSTEIN } Cincinnati.
ATLANTIC, BRADLEY, BROOKLYN, JEWETT, ULSTER, UNION } New York.
SOUTHERN, SHIPMAN } Chicago.
COLLIER, MISSOURI, RED SEAL, SOUTHERN } St. Louis.
JOHN T. LEWIS & BROS. CO Philadelphia.
MORLEY Cleveland.
SALEM Salem, Mass.
CORNELL Buffalo.
KENTUCKY Louisville.

IT IS JUST AS EASY, and a heap more sensible, to use a little care in the selection of materials when having painting done and secure the best result as it is to take chances and use mixtures of which you know nothing. To be sure of getting examine the brand (see list genuine brands). Any shade or color desired can be easily obtained by using NATIONAL LEAD CO.'s brands of Pure White Lead and Tinting Colors.

Pure White Lead

Pamphlet giving valuable information and card showing samples of colors free; also cards showing pictures of twelve houses of different designs painted in various styles or combinations of shades forwarded upon application to those intending to paint.

NATIONAL LEAD CO.,
1 Broadway, New York.

KNICKERBOCKER.

No more round shoulders. Shoulder Brace and Suspender combined. Easily adjusted. Worn with comfort. Sizes for men, women, boys and girls. Sold by druggists, appliance stores, general stores, &c. By mail $1 per pair ($1.50 silk). Send chest measure around body under arms. Circulars free. Address

KNICKERBOCKER BRACE CO., EASTON, PENN., U. S. A.

THE CHRISTIAN INDUSTRIAL LEAGUE.

An organization for men inside the church, with religious, social, business, sickness and death benefits. Send for printed matter to the Christian Industrial League, Springfield, Mass.

SANFORD WATERS BILLINGS, A. M.,
SHARON, MASS.
PRIVATE TUTOR.
PUPILS RECEIVED INTO FAMILY.

BURPEE'S SEEDS, Philadelphia

A postal card addressed as above will bring you BURPEE'S FARM ANNUAL for 1896, if you intend to purchase Seeds, otherwise the price is ten cents (less than cost). It is a bright BOOK of 184 pages, with hundreds of illustrations and colored plates painted from nature. It tells all about the BEST SEEDS that Grow!

Warranted Seed

A leading reason for warranting our seed, as per first page of Catalogue, is, we raise a large portion of them. As the original introducers of the Cory and Longfellow Corns, Miller Cream Melon, Ohio and Burbank Potatoes, Warren, Hubbard and Marblehead Squashes, Marblehead Early Marrowfat Pea, Eclipse Beet, Kentucky Wonder and Marblehead Horticultural Beans, Southport Early Globe and Danvers' Red Globe Onions, All Seasons and Marblehead Mammoth Cabbages and numerous other valuable vegetables, we solicit a share of the public patronage. Our Catalog of Vegetables and Flower Seed for 1896, containing many new Vegetables & Flowers & the best of the old will be sent free. J. J. H. GREGORY & SON, Marblehead, Mass.

GLENWOOD RANGES

MAKE

COOKING EASY.

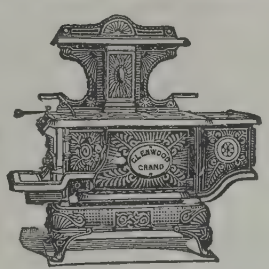
THREE GOLD MEDALS.



WEIR STOVE COMPANY, TAUNTON, MASS.
Agents in All Prominent Cities and Towns in New England.

If you want a sure relief for pains in the back, side, chest, or limbs, use an

Allcock's Porous Plaster

BEAR IN MIND—Not one of the host of counterfeits and imitations is as good as the genuine.

THE GREAT CHURCH LIGHT

FRINK'S PATENT REFLECTORS for electric, gas or oil, give the most powerful, the softest, cheapest and best light known for Churches, Halls and Public Buildings. Send size of room. Book of light and estimate free. I. P. FRINK, 551 Pearl St., New York.

FACTS FOR OUR READERS.

Follow Nature and Keep Well a Good Rule.

The Question is Important, are You Prepared for Spring?

If Not, Here is Some Very Necessary Information for You.

Nature will soon begin her annual struggle for freedom from winter's icy imprisonment. Already beneath the frozen surface giant forces are moving in that direction. Purification is going on.

It is the same with the human system. The lengthening days are approaching when the blood seeks to recover from its sluggish inactivity, and it bears in its course germs of health or disease, as it has stored up the one or the other. It requires therefore to be enriched with vitalizing and health giving qualities to give tone, vigor and health to the system.

For this nothing is so powerful as Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. Like nature's own wondrous remedies in the physical world, which purify the mountains and streams as they leap from their confines to fill the valleys with new life, and cover orchard and field with flower and fruit, it brings new force and health to wasted tissues and enfeebled nerves.

Now is the time when your nature calls for help. Don't mistake; no other remedy equals Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy as a spring medicine. No other remedy will so quickly and certainly strengthen your nerves, invigorate your blood and correct the action of all your organs. It will make you well and strong, as it has done thousands of persons; as it did Mrs. W. A. Cutler of 59 Orchard Street, Worcester, Mass.

"A year ago," she says, "I fell ill with nervous prostration and neuralgia, which affected my whole system. My digestion was also very poor. After eating I would be taken with a smothering sensation, while the palpitation of the heart was terrible.

"Severe nervous headaches made my life miserable in connection with these other troubles. I was in a fearful condition, and became greatly discouraged.

"Finally, as a last resort, I commenced to use Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, which had been wonderfully praised to me. With the first bottle I noticed an improvement, and, persevering in its use, I continued to steadily gain in every respect.

"My nervousness was soon cured. The neuralgia, headaches, palpitation of the heart, indigestion and all my complaints entirely left me. All this was accomplished by Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

"This wonderful medicine did for me what all the doctors and their medicines could not do. I wish to urge all sufferers to try it."

No power of words can describe the wonderful good which this remedy is doing among the sick and suffering. Those who take it are cured. Thousands of people, at the advent of spring, while not exactly sick, are yet out of order or ailing in some way. They do not feel just right, are not well and strong, cannot eat or sleep well, are nervous and have no strength or ambition for work or pleasure. Their stomach, bowels, liver or kidneys are inactive and torpid. Such people need this best of all spring medicines, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, to restore the natural action of these organs, give strength and vigor to the nerves and new life and vitality to the blood.

Why lose time in trying uncertain and untried remedies, when here is a physician's prescription, a discovery made by the greatest specialist in nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene, of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass. If you take this medicine you can consider yourself under Dr. Greene's direct professional care, and you can consult him or write to him about your case freely and without charge. This is a guarantee that this medicine will cure, possessed by no other medicine in the world.

ADDITIONS TO THE CHURCHES.

| | Conf. | Tot |
|---|---|---|
| CONNECTICUT. | | |
| Ansonia, | 1 | 3 |
| Bethel, | 20 | 20 |
| Goshen, | 8 | 8 |
| Leonard's Bridge, | 4 | 4 |
| Mt. Carmel, | 6 | 8 |
| New Haven, Davenport, | 23 | 30 |
| Howard Ave., | 18 | 23 |
| New Milford, | 2 | 5 |
| Norfolk, | — | 9 |
| North Haven, | 14 | 16 |
| So. Glastonbury, | 1 | 3 |
| So. Manchester, | 9 | 11 |
| ILLINOIS. | | |
| Amboy, | 66 | 66 |
| Chicago, Auburn Park, | 1 | 15 |
| Covenant, | 9 | 10 |
| Leavitt St., | 15 | 19 |
| New England, | 3 | 6 |
| Pacific, | 4 | 5 |
| Porter Memorial, | 5 | 5 |
| Ravenswood, | 14 | 26 |
| South, | 8 | 14 |
| Summerdale, | 1 | 4 |
| South Chicago, Second, | — | 12 |
| Tabernacle, | 4 | 8 |
| Union Park, | 3 | 7 |
| Waveland Ave., | 4 | 8 |
| West Pullman, | 4 | 12 |
| De Kalb, | 51 | 51 |
| Evanston, First, | — | 7 |
| Hinsdale, | 2 | 3 |
| Morgan Park, | — | 4 |
| Oak Park, First, | 4 | 9 |
| Paxton, | 6 | 10 |
| Seward, Second, | 17 | 17 |
| Wheaton, College, | 9 | 11 |
| INDIANA. | | |
| Anderson, Hope, | 2 | 3 |
| Corning, | 38 | 45 |
| Cortland, | 13 | 21 |
| Indianapolis, People's, | 19 | 20 |
| IOWA. | | |
| Charles City, | 34 | 39 |
| Genoa Bluffs, | 19 | 19 |
| Gospel Ridge, | — | 13 |
| Grinnell | 5 | 10 |
| Hiteman, | — | 7 |
| Manson, | 3 | 5 |
| Osage, | 55 | 60 |
| Otto, | — | 15 |
| Ottumwa, First, | 2 | 8 |
| Popejoy, | 4 | 7 |
| Salem, | 14 | 14 |
| MAINE. | | |
| Foxcroft and Dover, | 5 | 5 |
| Sanford, | 3 | 3 |
| MASSACHUSETTS. | | |
| Boston, Jamaica Plain, | 7 | 10 |
| Cambridge, Pilgrim, | 5 | 9 |
| Carlisle, | 4 | 5 |
| Clinton, | 7 | 7 |
| Fall River, Broadway, | 5 | 7 |
| Central, | — | 4 |
| French, | 3 | 3 |
| Fisherville, Union, | — | 10 |
| Franklin, First, | 5 | 5 |
| Gilbertville, | 2 | 3 |
| Hudson, First, | 7 | 9 |
| Malden, | 21 | 23 |
| Millbury, | — | 3 |
| Northampton, Edwards, | 1 | 3 |
| Oxford, | — | 9 |
| West Peabody, | — | 5 |
| MICHIGAN. | | |
| Alamo, | 7 | 7 |
| Baldwin, | 25 | 25 |
| Mulliken, | 17 | 24 |
| Belgrade, | 5 | 8 |
| Faribault, | — | 3 |
| Lake City, | 40 | 43 |
| Minneapolis, Como Ave., | 12 | 13 |
| First, | 13 | 23 |
| Open Door, | 2 | 3 |
| Park Ave., | — | 18 |
| Monticello, | — | 9 |
| Springfield, | 7 | 8 |
| Winthrop, | 13 | 13 |
| NEBRASKA. | | |
| Curtis, | 12 | 13 |
| Doniphan, | 5 | 6 |
| Grant, | 15 | 15 |
| Keystone, | — | 18 |
| Newcastle, | — | 30 |
| Omaha, Plymouth, | 9 | 9 |
| St. Mary's Ave., | 6 | 13 |
| Silver Creek, | 4 | 6 |
| NEW HAMPSHIRE. | | |
| Goffstown, | 9 | 10 |
| Lyme, | — | 5 |
| Manchester, First, | 1 | 6 |
| Milford, N. H., | — | 17 |
| Salem, | 1 | 6 |
| NEW JERSEY. | | |
| Park Ridge, First, | 6 | 6 |
| Passaic, | 4 | 6 |
| NORTH DAKOTA. | | |
| Abercrombie, | 3 | 3 |
| Dickinson, | 3 | 8 |
| OHIO. | | |
| Akron, West, | 2 | 5 |
| Cleveland, Archwood Ave., | 3 | 3 |
| East Madison Ave., | 8 | 8 |
| Hough Ave., | 2 | 14 |
| Pilgrim, | 7 | 13 |
| Union, | 6 | 8 |
| Croton, Hartford, | 4 | 4 |
| Kent, | 3 | 7 |
| Oberlin, First, | 3 | 6 |
| Second, | — | 7 |
| Painesville, First, | 27 | 30 |
| Shandon, | — | 10 |
| Toledo, Second, | 9 | 16 |
| Twinsburg and Macedonia Branch, | 6 | 6 |
| Wellington, | 3 | 3 |
| RHODE ISLAND. | | |
| Providence, Academy Ave., | 6 | 8 |
| Plymouth, | 4 | 7 |
| VERMONT. | | |
| Newport, | 9 | 12 |
| Rutland, | 4 | 9 |
| Sheldon, | 3 | 4 |
| WISCONSIN. | | |
| Clinton, | 13 | 15 |
| Mondovi, | — | 7 |
| Shullsburg, | 17 | 17 |
| OTHER CHURCHES. | | |
| Atlanta, Ga., First, | 35 | 35 |
| Baltimore, Md., Second, | 3 | 6 |
| Colfax, Wn., Plymouth, | 6 | 11 |
| Redlands, Cal., First, | 1 | 8 |
| Salt Lake, U., | 13 | 25 |
| Siloam Springs, Ark., | 1 | 14 |
| Sherburne, N. Y., | 14 | 14 |
| Churches with less than three, | 15 | 30 |

Conf., 1,181; Tot., 1,614.

Total since Jan. 1. Conf., 4,641; Tot., 7,599.

Jesus has never slept for an hour while one of his disciples watched and prayed in agony. —H. Clay Trumbull.

A CURIOUS DESIGN.—One of the most startling sets of furniture which has ever been seen in this city is now on sale at the Paine warerooms on Canal Street. It is projected on the lines of the old winged corner chairs of fifty years ago. It has the charm of originality and of extreme comfort and its historical significance cannot fail to attract attention. Tastes differ, but for ourselves we should choose this set ahead of any other that Boston has seen in the last dozen years. It is not at all expensive.

THE proper time, when the most benefit is to be derived from a good medicine, is early in the year. This is the season when the tired body, weakened organs and nervous system yearn for a building-up medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla. Many wait for the open spring weather and, in fact, delay giving attention to their physical condition so long that a long siege of sickness is inevitable. To rid the system of the impurities accumulated during the winter season, to purify the blood and to invigorate the whole system, there is nothing equal to Hood's Sarsaparilla. Don't put it off, but take Hood's Sarsaparilla now. It will do you good. Read the testimonials published in behalf of Hood's Sarsaparilla, all from reliable, grateful people. They tell the story.

What's Wrong?

Oh! everything, you say. If that's the case, your nervous system needs toning up. When everything is wrong, there's just one way to right it. Buy a bottle of Dr. Miles' Nervine from the druggist. He will refund the money if it fails to benefit.

Book on Heart and Nerves FREE.

Dr. Miles' Nervine Restores ...Health

MADAME PORTER'S BALSAM

"To-morrow may be too late!" This lady believed that. It's common sense.

She has made hosts of friends, because she knew how to prepare this Balsam, and they say: "Had it not been for 'Madame Porter's,' the cold and cough would have been worse, perhaps fatal." Madame Porter's portrait has appeared for sixty years on every bottle of Balsam sold, and has become familiar in homes without number. It is a Balsam perfectly safe and pleasant to take. Everybody likes it.

Druggists everywhere sell it, with their approval. It costs but 25 and 50 cts. (two sizes).

Proprietors: HALL & RUCKEL, Wholesale Druggists, New York.

MR. ZADOC PORTER'S BITTERS

THE GENUINE DR BLAUD'S IRON PILLS

have been prescribed with great success for more than 50 years by the leading physicians of Europe, in the treatment of female patients. Specially recommended for

Poorness of the Blood and Constitutional Weakness.

Imported by E. Fougera & Co., N. Y.

To avoid imitations BLAUD is stamped on each pill.

DENT'S CORN GUM

Cures Corns, Warts, Bunions, etc. So easy to apply—it sticks fast. Ask for Dent's; take no other. Sold everywhere, or by mail 10 cents. C. S. DENT & CO. DETROIT, MICH.

Try Dent's Toothache Gum.

The NEW Form of Admission

The committee appointed by the National Council to prepare a new Form of Admission have reported, and their Form of Admission is now printed in convenient form as an 8 pp. leaflet, No. 7 of the Congregationalist Leaflet series.

Sent, postpaid, for 3 cts.; 10 copies, 25 cts.; 100 copies, $2.00.

CHURCH CARPETS AT MANUFACTURERS PRICES. JOHN H. PRAY, SONS & CO., CARPETS AND UPHOLSTERY, 658 WASHINGTON ST., OPP. BOYLSTON ST. BOSTON.

THE MEMORIAL ROSE AS IT GROWS.

Growing in sun or shade, possessing the hardiness of the Oak, with a distinctive charm entirely its own, the Memorial Rose (Rosa Wichuraiana) will be found a singularly appropriate plant for beautifying Cemetery plots. It creeps along the ground just as an Ivy does, growing ten feet in a single season, forming a dense mat of dark green lustrous foliage, with thornless stems. The flowers are single, snow-white with a golden yellow disc, are from 5 to 6 inches in circumference, and have the delicious fragrance of the Banksia Roses. The flowers, in clusters, are produced in the most lavish profusion, and are in their fullest glory just after the June Roses are past. Seen then the clusters look like great masses of snow, and are a sight long to be remembered. But its use is not confined to Cemeteries, for not only is it also perfectly adapted for garden culture, but for screening rocky slopes, embankments and such places as it is desirable to quickly cover with verdure it is unsurpassed. Indeed, it adapts itself to every condition of growth, whether barren or fertile soil, rocky ledge, shady nook or sun-kissed slope.

Prices (free by mail), good plants, 40c. each, 3 for $1.00, 7 for $2.00, 12 for $3.00; extra strong plants, 60c. each, 2 for $1.00, 5 for $2.00, 12 for $4.50.

All purchasers of the Memorial Rose who will state where they saw this advertisement will be sent our MANUAL FOR 1896 of "EVERYTHING FOR THE GARDEN" (160 pages, 6 colored plates and over 500 engravings). To those desiring the MANUAL only, we will mail it on receipt of 20 cents (in stamps), which is less than cost.

PETER HENDERSON & Co.
35 & 37 CORTLANDT ST. NEW YORK.

ELY'S CREAM BALM CATARRH HAY-FEVER CURES COLD IN HEAD DEAFNESS HEADACHE ELY BROS. NEW YORK

I used Ely's Cream Balm for catarrh and have received great benefit. I believe it a safe and certain cure. Very pleasant to take.—Wm. Fraser, Rochester, N. Y.

CATARRH

ELY'S CREAM BALM Opens and cleanses the Nasal Passages. Allays Pain and Inflammation, Heals the Sores, Protects the Membrane from colds, Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell. The Balm is quickly absorbed and gives relief at once.

A particle is applied to each nostril and is agreeable. Price 50 cents at Druggists or by mail.

ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren Street, New York.

WHOOPING COUGH CROUP

Can be cured by using ROCHE'S HERBAL EMBROCATION

The celebrated and effectual English cure, without internal medicine. W. EDWARD & SON, Props., London, Eng. Wholesale. E. FOUGERA & CO., New York

INTER-SEMINARY MISSIONARY ALLIANCE.

At the ninth annual convention of the central district of the alliance, at Hartford Seminary, Feb. 27–March 1, fourteen seminaries in this section sent delegates, making the attendance larger than ever before, eighty-eight besides the Hartford students.

Thursday was a day for preparation. The first service was marked by great spiritual power and set the keynote for the convention. The evening address, after the welcome by Pres. C. D. Hartranft, was by Dr. E. B. Webb on The Condition of Non-Christian Peoples According to the New Testament. A reception in the library followed.

Friday was a day of observation. The condition and needs of China, Turkey and East Africa were outlined by returned missionaries. Rev. C. W. Shelton also spoke on Home Missionary Problems, and Rev. A. F. Schauffler pleaded for City Mission Work. Rev. J. K. Browne of Harpoot spoke on The Missionary Spirit the Essential Spirit of Christianity and Rev. J. W. A. Stewart on The Breadth of This Spirit and Its Center.

Saturday was consultation day. One session centered around the seminaries with the topics: The Seminary Ideal in Spiritual Life and Missionary Interest, and The Seminary as a Center of Missionary Interest and Work. The Use of Facts, Organizations, The Pulpit, and Prayer in Arousing Missionary Interest were discussed, and Rev. H. P. Beach spoke on The Lines of Appeal. Mr. W. G. Waterman spoke on Work among the College Students of India, and Rev. J. L. Barton gave an address on Missionary Heroism.

The theme Sunday was Consecration. All the sessions had been characterized by deep earnestness, greatly increased by the meetings of Sunday. Rev. J. T. Gracey spoke on The Present Outlook for Missions, maintaining that there is a supernatural supervision of the affairs of this world in the interests of Christianity. At the young people's meetings in most of the city churches the delegates spoke on missions. Then they gathered at the Fourth Church for the closing session. Rev. H. C. Mabie gave a helpful address on The Normal Type of Consecration, and the tender farewell meeting, led by Mr. Beach, was a fitting close to these sessions of great spiritual power. Many of the delegates seemed to realize for the first time the true spirit of the Christian life, and all returned home resolved for a new consecration. E. W. C.

Five Cents Per Cake

COCO

TRADE MARK.

The Perfect Soap

At your dealers.
Made only by
The N. K. Fairbank Company,
Chicago, New York, St. Louis.

A Superior "Picked up" Codfish,
Is unequalled in quality, economy, and convenience.

Fish Balls and Fish Cream are prepared by its use in 10 to 15 minutes.

It requires no boiling or soaking, therefore creates NO ODOR.

Order a box from your grocer and try it. You see it don't cost much.

PREPARED ONLY BY
J. W. Beardsley's Sons,
179 & 180 West St., New York.
Makers of the Celebrated Acme Sliced Smoked Beef.

When you Buy Entire Wheat Flour
See that the barrel is marked with our Trade-Mark WWW
Franklin Mills Co., Lockport, N. Y.

Religious Notices.

Religious and ecclesiastical notices, addresses of ministers, etc, published under this heading at ten cents a line.

BOSTON AUXILIARY OF THE AM. MCALL ASSOC.—Treasurer, Miss Edith Stearns, The Charlesgate, Boston.

GORDON MISSIONARY TRAINING SCHOOL, Clarendon Street Baptist Church, Boston, opens Oct. 2. Evening classes Oct. 10.

PRESIDENT STEPHEN B. L. PENROSE of Whitman College will be in the East until June 1, and desires opportunity to tell the patriotic story of Marcus Whitman before churches, societies, etc. Address 182 Chelten Avenue, Germantown, Pa.

THE AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION has been at work seventy-one years for the retired rural districts. Its union methods specially commend it to communities of sparse populations divided in religious sentiments. Its missionaries visit families, distribute religious literature, hold evangelistic meetings and organize Sunday Schools. Probably no evangelizing agency has larger results for the amount expended. 11,000,000 children are yet out of Sunday School. Will you help to save them? Send to Rev. Addison P. Foster, D. D., New England Secretary, 1 Beacon St., Room 40, Boston.

AMERICAN SEAMEN'S FRIEND SOCIETY, No. 76 Wall St., New York. Incorporated April, 1833. Object: to improve the moral and social condition of seamen. Sustains chaplains and missionaries; promotes temperance homes and boarding houses in leading seaports at home and abroad; provides libraries for outgoing vessels; publishes the Sailor's Magazine, Seamen's Friend and Life Boat.

Contributions to sustain its work are solicited, and remittances of same are requested to be made direct to the main office of the Society at New York.

CHARLES H. TRASK, President.
REV. W. C. STITT, Secretary.
W. C. STURGES Treasurer.

Subscribers' Wants.

Notices under this heading, not exceeding five lines (eight words to the line), cost subscribers fifty cents each insertion. Additional lines ten cents each per insertion.

Wanted, a situation as Organist and Director of Music by a gentleman of large experience. Address "Organist," P. O. Box, 1944, Boston.

Orphan Wanted. Any one wishing to find a good home for an orphan or motherless girl can address B. T. M., Box 15, Shrewsbury, Mass. Good references given.

BOOKKEEPER WANTED—A young man of some experience and the best of references, to take charge of the books of a manufactory in the country. Address, giving references and experience,

The Vermont Farm Machine Co., Bellows Falls, Vt.

RISIBLES.

"Don't you think Dr. Flowery makes charming Lenten addresses?" "Yes; and they're so appropriate, too. There's so little meat in them."—Puck.

Bobby: "Papa, what do they have to have a man to pray for Congress for?" Astute Parent: "They don't. He takes a look at Congress and then prays for the country."—Calais Times.

"Now, my boy," said a devout Episcopalian mother to her son, "Lent has begun and you must give up something." "What shall I give up?" "Well, something that you like very much, some article of food of which you are very fond." "All right," said the lad, after a few moments' reflection, "I guess I'll give up watermelon."

Two small boys who wanted to fight Indians had gotten some distance from home. The romance had dwindled, and a discouragement which neither liked to confess had taken possession. "Look here," said one of them at last, "I've been playin' I'm Sierra Sam for two days now, haven't I?" "Yes," was the reply. "Well, I'm kind o' tired o' that game. I think I'll play I'm the prodigal son."—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

An ignorant old man, listening to the eulogy of an American statesman, was moved to enthusiasm in his description of it to his wife. "Malviny," he exclaimed, "it was grand. It was the most glowin' paregoric I have ever had 'casion for to listen to!"—Exchange.

Sculptor (to lady who has commissioned him to execute a portrait bust of her late husband): "I can change it in any particular that you may desire, madam." Widow (regarding it with tearful eyes): "The nose is large." Sculptor: "A large nose is an indication of goodness." Widow (wiping away her tears): "Well, then make it larger."—Pick Me Up.

UNOFFICIAL.

"A thousand pardons!" he exclaimed, bowing low. "You mistake, sir," she replied, coldly; "I am not Governor Altgeld."—Truth.

WHILE THE LAMP HOLDS OUT.

Bobby: "I had three fights today, and I didn't get licked once." Bingo (reaching for a strap): "Well, my son, the day is not yet over."—Puck.

A FOOL'S ERRAND.

Saleswoman to Bundle Girl: "Hurry up, Maggie! This customer's got to ketch the deepo."

A SPECIMEN FINANCIER.

It is said to have occurred in Oklahoma. "I'm afraid your pa and me won't be able to git along very well together," said young Jay Green, who was hesitating on the verge of proposing to Miss Debby Grayneck. "Why, he likes you ever so much, Jay," replied the maiden, encouragingly. "I heard him say so only last night." "I s'pose he does, in a general way," said the swain, "but we differ a good deal on the money question. Your pa believes in maintainin' the disparagement of gold and silver, while I am a monogamist myself."—Harper's Drawer.

A PLACE FOR HOSEA.

A quaint story is told by Dr. Greer of a tedious, monotonous preacher, who had exhausted the patience of his hearers by an elaborate dissertation on the four greater prophets; and when, to their sad disgust, he passed on to the minor and asked, "And now, my brethren, where shall we place Hosea?" a man rose from the congregation and made answer, "You can place him here, sir. I'm off."

HE HAS THE QUALIFICATIONS.

"Mr. President," said a recent caller on Mr. Cleveland, "just give the Venezuelan difficulty into my hands, and I'll have it settled in no time."

"What makes you think you could handle the matter so successfully?"

"Why, sir, I once settled a quarrel in a church choir."—Harper's Bazar.

Rev. Israel Ainsworth of Rockport, Mass., gave his C. E. Society an enthusiastic meeting on a recent Sunday evening by assigning five-minute papers on Congregationalism, its origin, growth, peculiarities, missionary work, etc., which, by the help of Dr. Dunning's book, Congregationalists in America, were made interesting and helpful to the young people. Pastors wishing to try this desirable plan can obtain from Rev. George A. Hood, Congregational House, Boston, many helpful items condensed for the Congregational exhibit at the World's Fair.

"BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES" will quickly relieve Bronchitis, Asthma, Catarrh and Throat Diseases. Sold only in boxes.

CHEAP COMFORT.—Those who are troubled with dry, hacking coughs, tickling sensations in the throat, or any irritation which causes difficulty in breathing, will secure immediate relief from a small dose of Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam. Prices 35 and 75 cents. At all druggists.

ATTRACTIVE PACIFIC COAST TOURS.—It is well known that the spring and early summer are most delightful upon the Pacific coast, and no better time can be selected for a sight-seeing tour in those regions. The spring tours announced by Messrs. Raymond & Whitcomb, with April 21 as the date of leaving Boston, are unusually attractive this year. These trips are "personally conducted" throughout, and the participants have thus no cares or responsibilities of travel from the time of departure until their return, everything being arranged in advance for their comfort. Not only Colorado and California, but also Alaska and the marvelous Yellowstone National Park are included in some of the tours. A special circular, just issued, may be obtained at the office of the firm, 296 Washington Street, opposite School Street.

The Pleasures of the Dining Table are determined by the character of the silverware.

STERLING SILVER INLAID

Spoons and Forks are always clean and bright, no worn spots on the back of the bowls and handles. Guaranteed 25 years. Fancy pieces in our special quality are stamped Holmes & Edwards XIV

THE Holmes & Edwards Silver Co
Bridgeport, Conn.
New York Salesroom, 2 Maiden Lane, Second Door from Broadway well begun is half done. Begin well by getting Ferry's Seeds. Don't let chance determine your crop, but plant Ferry's Seeds. Known and sold everywhere.

PLANTING

Before you plant, get

Ferry's Seed Annual

for 1896. Contains more practical information for farmers and gardeners than many high-priced text books. Mailed free.

D. M. FERRY & CO., DETROIT, MICH.

JOEL GOLDTHWAIT & Co.

are showing a fine line of

Oriental Carpets and Rugs

Choice Designs and Rare Colorings

About every steamer is adding to our stock

Also our specialties in

Scotch Axminsters, English Wiltons and Brussels

Our stock of Domestic Wiltons, Brussels and Ingrains was never better—and prices very low

A full line of

Canton and Japanese Mattings in very pretty designs with the Japanese Carpets, Rugs and Mats

Just the thing for the summer home

163 to 169 WASHINGTON STREET, NEAR CORNHILL, BOSTON.

These Three Epithets

BEST - FITTING
BEST - WEARING
BEST - LOOKING

...ARE FOUND TO BE APPLICABLE TO THE...

Shawknit TRADE MARK. Half-Hose

THEY, OR THEIR EQUIVALENTS, OCCUR IN NEARLY EVERY TESTIMONIAL.

None Genuine unless stamped Shawknit on the toe.

Descriptive Price-List, free, to any applicant.
Beautiful Castle Calendar, free, to any applicant mentioning this publication.

SHAW STOCKING CO.
LOWELL, MASS.

Sozodont
PURE AND FRAGRANT.

is fortunate in being able to present here the portrait of a well-known lady, and a few lines in her own handwriting.

She is noted for her bright smiles and good teeth. The camera shows her pleasure at the result of using Liquid Sozodont every day, tne Powder twice a week. The Powder costs nothing extra, a box accompanying every bottle, together with a sample cake of Sozoderma Soap.

Messrs. Hall & Ruckel, Wholesale Druggists, New York, are the Proprietors of Sozodont, and will send a small Free Sample of liquid Sozodont if you mention this magazine.

I am proud of my teeth and the public know it
Guess who I am and buy Sozodont
I recommend it to every body —
Miss —
New York
Jan 18/
'96

WHAT is the use of Patent Leather?

When I can polish my shoes with . . .

Brown's French Dressing

Ask your dealer for

Brown's French Dressing

and be sure to accept no other.

---

Superior to all others for the following reasons:

1. It gives a superior Polish.
2. It does not crock or rub off on the skirts.
3. Unlike all others, it does not crack or hurt the leather, but on the contrary acts as a preservative.
4. Has been manufactured over forty years and always stood at the head.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

It's Simply Surprising

how much longer my Carpets wear since I used this new Carpet Lining. It really more than saves its cost in one year's wear of the carpet. When you buy your next Carpet Lining be sure that it is the

Norwich Folded Paper Carpet Lining.

It is the most economical because it lasts longest and saves the carpet's wear.

FOR SALE BY BEST CARPET DEALERS.

INSIST on having the "Norwich," and if your Dealer will not supply you, it can be ordered direct from the Factory in any quantity over 20 yards, express prepaid, at 10c. a yard.

FREE. A sample large enough to show its value will be mailed free to any address.

NORWICH CARPET LINING CO., - Norwich, Conn.

The St. Denis

Broadway and Eleventh Street,

NEW YORK.

(Opposite Grace Church.)

EUROPEAN PLAN.

---

The great popularity the St. Denis has acquired can readily be traced to its unique location, its homelike atmosphere, the peculiar excellence of its cuisine and service, and its very moderate prices.

WILLIAM TAYLOR & SON.

Volume LXXXI Number 12

THE CONGREGATIONALIST

Boston Thursday 19 March 1896

CHARLES CARLETON COFFIN.

Born, July 26, 1823; died, March 2, 1896.

THERE are no compensations in life more delightful and soul satisfying than those that come from service and sacrifice for the welfare of our fellowmen. . . . It has never troubled me to be in the minority. If you want real genuine pleasure in a battle go in with a minority on some great principle affecting the welfare of society. You feel the bracing of muscle and nerve, the rising of the will power, the determination not to go down. It is glorious.—From an address by Mr. Coffin in 1885.

I hear of thee very often, Friend Coffin, and always on the right side.—John G. Whittier to Mr. Coffin in 1889.

The Congregationalist's

PILGRIMAGE

to # England

and

Holland

To sail June 4, 1896, by Hamburg-American Express Steamer Columbia, landing at PLYMOUTH, ENGLAND, returning August 1 by the same Line. The Itinerary includes Cologne, the Rhine, Lucerne, Paris, etc.

NEW WORLD PILGRIMS AT OLD WORLD SHRINES . . .

A unique brochure. Besides the full daily Itinerary and all necessary details and directions, much space is given to "English and Dutch Notes," which treat of the historic and architectural features of the tour, and particularly of points of Pilgrim interest. 42 ILLUSTRATIONS. Price of the Itinerary, 10 cents.

Address PILGRIMAGE,
Office of THE CONGREGATIONALIST, Boston,
or Henry Gaze & Sons, Ltd.,
113 Broadway, New York, 201 Washington St., Boston,
Business Managers of the Tour.

The Congregationalist 12 Weeks for 25 Cents and "The Bonnie Brier Bush" FREE.

We celebrate this year our 80th anniversary—the special number of the paper commemorating the event being issued in March. Before that time we wish to secure 40,000 new names, so as to place The Congregationalist, and that particular number, in the hands of as many new readers. We therefore propose that each of our present subscribers shall secure for us one or more names for "12 Weeks' Trial Subscriptions." 25 cents accompanying each name. This payment will entitle the old subscriber to a copy of Ian Maclaren's "BESIDE THE BONNIE BRIER BUSH" for each new name sent, and The Congregationalist will be mailed for twelve weeks to the new subscribers.

The Paper for 12 Weeks & The Bonnie Brier Bush for 25 Cts.

For the purposes of our special offer we have purchased an edition of this remarkable classic by Ian Maclaren from the authorized publishers, Messrs. DODD, MEAD & CO. It is a reprint from new plates of the complete copyrighted edition, which is issued at $1.25; making a dainty volume, cabinet size, bound in cloth, with a unique cover design.

Why We Do This.

WE WISH to signalize the completion of our 80th year by introducing the paper to a multitude of new readers.
WE BELIEVE that our old subscribers will appreciate this unusual offer and will recognize in it an attempt on our part to show our appreciation of any effort they may now make in our behalf as well as their past interest in the paper.
WE ARE WILLING to send the paper for 12 weeks at a loss, believing that twelve such arguments presented weekly will convince the most skeptical.

CONDITIONS—THESE ONLY:

☞ The "12 Weeks for 25 Cents" subscriptions must be for bona fide new names of persons able to subscribe for a religious paper on their own account. The new subscribers must be sent by a present subscriber of the paper, but the former may in their turn send other new names.

☞ We deliver "The Bonnie Brier Bush" at our office in fulfillment of this offer; or we will send copies, postpaid, to any address for 5 cents additional—30 cents for the paper, the book and postage on the latter. An old subscriber sending us trial subscriptions in accordance with this offer has the privilege of ordering ONE additional copy (not more) of "The Bonnie Brier Bush" at 20 cents, which price includes postage on the book.

☞ This offer is made for a limited time only and the publishers of the paper reserve the right to discontinue it with one week's notice. Send stamps, silver or bills at our risk. Packages of books will be sent by express, if desired, at the expense of the person ordering. We expect to fill all orders within two weeks of the date of their receipt.

Address "TRIAL SUBSCRIPTIONS,"
THE CONGREGATIONALIST, 1 Somerset St., Boston.

RAYMOND & WHITCOMB'S TOURS.

ALL TRAVELING EXPENSES INCLUDED.

Parties will leave Boston, April 21, for Grand and Comprehensive Tours (personally escorted throughout) to

COLORADO, CALIFORNIA,

The Pacific Northwest,

ALASKA

AND

THE YELLOWSTONE PARK, The Wonderland of America.

Send for special descriptive circular.

RAYMOND & WHITCOMB,
296 Washington Street, opposite School St., Boston.

VACATION TOURS EUROPE

H. GAZE & SONS, 52d Year.

All expenses—$175 to $800—all expenses.

HIGH CLASS ARRANGEMENTS.

Spring and Summer Vacation Tours, Europe. Thirty Tours, ranging in price from $175 to $800, visiting England, Ireland, Scotland, France, Holland, Rhine, Germany, Italy, Switzerland, Danube, Austria, etc.;

North Cape and Russia Party, June 27.
Annual Round the World Party, Sept.
Holy Land Party (Egypt and the Nile)—
Spring and Autumn—Four tours annually.

Independent tickets for any desired tour in Europe, with or without hotel coupons. Estimates furnished. Agents all lines steamers. Choice rooms secured. Gaze's Tourist Gazette free, gives particulars.

113 Broadway, New York. H. Gaze & Sons, Ltd., 201 Washington St., Boston.

CRUISE OF THE AMERICAN BUILT STEAMER "OHIO."

The largest and finest yacht steamer in the world. Dining room holds 200 persons, and only this number will be taken on the cruise.

March 28th to June 6th. 70-day cruise to the Mediterranean, visiting Spain, Malta, Egypt, Palestine, Turkey, Greece, Italy, France. Ten days longer than any other cruise. Rate, $425 and upwards.

June 27th to August 27th. Cruise to Russia, Sweden, Norway and the Midnight Sun, and the total eclipse of the sun, visible August 8th. Rate, $650.

June 6th, July 1st and 8th. European Tours. Send for descriptive catalogues.

THOMAS FOREIGN TOURIST CO., 1715 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, or Leon L. Collver, New England Agent, 306 Washington Street, Boston.

EUROPE

Application (with references) may now be made for membership in President Capen's (Tufts College) Party, and in the Harvard and Brown Universities' Parties to visit the Historical, Literary, and Art Centers of Europe. Cards of Membership $265 to $630. Address

LEON L. COLLVER, N. E. Agent Clark's Tours,
306 Washington St., Boston.

Cook's Tours to Europe.

All Traveling Expenses Included.

Our Annual May Party, the first of our high-class parties to Europe, will sail by the White Star Line SS. "Majestic" on May 6. Succeeding departures May 16, 23, 28, June 10, 17, 27. All the arrangements for these parties are in every respect first-class.

Illustrated programs free. Railroad and steamship tickets for individual travelers everywhere.

THOS. COOK & SON,
261 and 1225 Broadway, New York.

WHERE? Write Gaze where and when you wish to Travel, and they will inform How and the Cost. Escorted Parties for Winter, Spring or Summer. Tickets issued for Independent Travel Everywhere. Choice Berths on all Steamships—no extra cost. See Tourist Gazette (by mail 10 cts.), and Save Money. State your wishes carefully; full information Free. Address HENRY GAZE & SONS, Ltd., Universal Tourist Agents, 113 Broadway N.Y.; 201 Washington St., Boston; 220 S. Clark St., Chicago, Ill.; 135 S. Fifth St., Philadelphia. WHEN?

85 DAYS IN EUROPE.

Few vacancies in limited party to visit England, France, Germany, Belgium, Switzerland, Italy, Gibraltar. Personally conducted by Prof. Camille Thurwanger, 31 Pierce Building, Boston, Mass.

KIMBALL'S TOURS

in Europe (8th season). Limited party sails June 24, on "St. Louis." Moderate price, comprehensive route.
EDWIN C. KIMBALL, 56 Summer St., Boston, Mass.

THE CONGREGATIONALIST

AND BOSTON RECORDER.

The Recorder founded 1816: The Congregationalist, 1849

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
- Paragraphs 465
- A New Religious Order 465
- Another Debt to Be Faced 466
- Forgiveness of Injuries 466
- Current History 467
- In Brief 468

STAFF CORRESPONDENCE:
- The Interior 469

CONTRIBUTIONS:
- Charles Carleton Coffin. H. A. B. 470
- The Christian Life. IV. Bible Reading. Rev. Floyd W. Tomkins, Jr. 471
- Half-Way. Rev. A. H. Quint, D. D. 472
- The Observance of Passiontide in Congregational Churches. Rev. Lucius H. Thayer 473
- Exciting Days for Italy. M. D. 474

THE HOME:
- A Touch of Nature—a selected poem 475
- Paragraphs 475
- The Science of Food. I. Evolution of Cookery. M. V. Shaler 475
- A "Hearty" Lunch. Mrs. Sarah B. Howland 475
- An Original Scientific Entertainment. K. E. B. 476
- A Novel Way of Raising Charitable Funds 477
- Pussy Willow—a selected poem 477
- Closet and Altar 477
- Mothers in Council 478
- The Conversation Corner. Mr. Martin 479
- Corner Scrap-Book 479

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL—Lesson for March 29 480

Y. P. S. C. E.—Topic for March 29–April 4 481

PROGRESS OF THE KINGDOM 481

LITERATURE 482

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES:
- A Recruit for a Boston Post 484
- Theological Seminaries 492
- Weekly Register 495

MISCELLANEOUS:
- Notices 484
- Professor Curtis at the Old South 488
- Business Outlook 489
- Biographical 489
- Woman's Board Prayer Meeting 490
- Mr. Beach's Farewell Words 491
- Jubilee Year Fund of the American Missionary Association 493
- A Light in Southern Darkness 494
- Marriages and Deaths 495

THE CONGREGATIONALIST

AND BOSTON RECORDER.

The Recorder founded 1816: The Congregationalist, 1849.

Published every Thursday.

PER COPY, 6 CENTS. PER YEAR IN ADVANCE, $3.00.
TWO YEARS IN ADVANCE, $5.00; FIVE YEARS, $10.00.
IF PAYMENT IS DELAYED, $3.50 PER YEAR.
ONE OLD AND ONE NEW SUBSCRIPTION, $5.00.
CLUB OF FIVE, ONE AT LEAST BEING NEW, $10.00.

On Trial, 6 Months, $1.00; 3 Months, 25 Cents.

RECEIPTS for subscriptions are indicated by the date of expiration following the subscriber's address, as printed upon the paper. If a special receipt is wanted a stamp should be sent with remittance.

DISCONTINUANCES.—In accordance with the almost universal wish of our subscribers, papers are continued until there is a specific order to stop. In connection with such an order all arrearages must be paid. An order of discontinuance can be given at any time, to take effect at the expiration of the subscription.

ADVERTISING RATES.—25 cents per agate line each insertion, 14 lines to the inch; 11½ inches to the column. Discounts according to amount of contract.
READING NOTICES, leaded nonpareil, 50 cents per line, each insertion, net.

W. L. GREENE & CO., Proprietors, Boston.

Entered as second-class mail. Composition by Thomas Todd.

Church Equipment.

Church Cushions

Correspondence Solicited.

Ostermoor & Co., 116 Elizabeth St. New York, N.Y.

Individual Communion

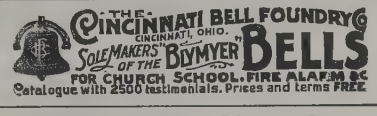
Cups, Cabinets and Tables, adapted to the customs and usages of all branches of the Christian church. Illustrated descriptive catalogue free.
GLOBE FURNITURE CO., Northville, Mich.
Manufacturers of Furniture for Church, Chapel, Sunday Schools and Assembly Rooms.

THE LARGEST MANUFACTUPERS IN THE WORLD OF CHURCH FURNISHINGS
OPERA AND ASSEMBLY CHAIRS
SCHOOL FURNITURE COMPANY
GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.



THE CINCINNATI BELL FOUNDRY CO.
CINCINNATI, OHIO.
SOLE MAKERS OF THE "BLYMYER" BELLS
FOR CHURCH SCHOOL, FIRE ALARM &C
Catalogue with 2500 testimonials. Prices and terms FREE

Blake Bell Foundry

Established in 1820.

Successors to WM. BLAKE & CO.

Manufacture bells of every description, single or chimes, of Copper and Tin. Address

BLAKE BELL CO., Boston, Mass.

Buckeye Bell Foundry
E. W. Vanduzen Co., Cincinnati, Ohio.
Best Pure Copper and Tin Church Bells & Chimes.
Highest Award at World's Fair. Gold Medal Mid-winter Exp'n. Price, terms, etc., supplied free

BELLS

Steel Alloy Church & School Bells. Send for Catalogue. The C. S. BELL CO., Hillsboro, O.

GEO. H. RYDER & CO.,

Church Organs

FACTORY AND HOME OFFICE
READING, MASS.

BOSTON OFFICE:
No. 5 MUSIC HALL BUILDING.

Send for a Catalogue.

Religious Notices.

Religious and ecclesiastical notices, addresses of ministers, etc., published under this heading at ten cents a line.

GORDON MISSIONARY TRAINING SCHOOL, Clarendon Street Baptist Church, Boston, opens Oct. 2. Evening classes Oct. 10.

PRESIDENT STEPHEN B. L. PENROSE of Whitman College will be in the East until June 1, and desires opportunity to tell the patriotic story of Marcus Whitman before churches, societies, etc. Address 182 Chelten Avenue, Germantown, Pa.

COMMITTEE ON THE WORK OF THE CHURCHES.—Pastors who have not sent their reports please forward at once direct to ISAIAH W. SNEATH, Station F, Cambridge, Mass.

THE AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION has been at work seventy-one years for the retired rural districts. Its union methods specially commend it to communities of sparse populations divided in religious sentiments. Its missionaries visit families, distribute religious literature, hold evangelistic meetings and organize Sunday Schools. Probably no evangelizing agency has larger results for the amount expended. 11,000,000 children are yet out of Sunday School. Will you help to save them? Send to Rev. Addison P. Foster, D. D., New England Secretary, 1 Beacon St., Room 40, Boston.

AMERICAN SEAMEN'S FRIEND SOCIETY, No. 76 Wall St., New York. Incorporated April, 1833. Object: to improve the moral and social condition of seamen. Sustains chaplains and missionaries; promotes temperance homes and boarding houses in leading seaports at home and abroad; provides libraries for outgoing vessels; publishes the Sailor's Magazine, Seamen's Friend and Life Boat.

Contributions to sustain its work are solicited, and remittances of same are requested to be made direct to the main office of the Society at New York.

CHARLES H. TRASK, President.
REV. W. C. STITT, Secretary.
W. C. STURGES Treasurer.

THE CHRISTIAN INDUSTRIAL LEAGUE.

An organization for men inside the church, with religious, social, business, sickness and death benefits. Send for printed matter to the Christian Industrial League, Springfield, Mass.

A Great Book.

MORAL EVOLUTION.

By GEORGE HARRIS, D. D., Professor in the Andover Theological Seminary. Crown 8vo, $2.00.

"Christian theorists who have been troubled by the theories and claims of evolutionists will find an antidote for their troubles in this marvelously clear and lucid exposition of the claims of both essential Christianity and evolution, and of the perfect harmony which exists between them." —Boston Advertiser.

"The style is cogent and brilliant, the thought is deep, and a splendid array of learning, with important ideas and facts, is presented readably in a moderate compass."—Worcester Spy.

"Whether viewed in its scientific or religious bearings, or in the application it has to current social ideals, the work is one of the most significant of any that have appeared in its particular field for some time. One might almost venture to say of it that it includes the elements of a new philosophy."—Boston Beacon.

Sold by all Booksellers. Sent, postpaid, by

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO., Boston.

Monday Club Sermons. 20th Series.

Unique expositions of the International Lessons for 1896.

Price, $1.25.

Baptism As Taught in the Scriptures. By R. R. LLOYD, D. D.

A close philological study of the subject of immersion, but popularly stated.

Price, cloth, 50 cts., paper, 35 cts.

Letters on Baptism. 4th Edition.

By Rev. EDMUND B. FAIRFIELD. 75 cts.

Clear and lucid statement of the argument against immersion. "Logical, exhaustive, unanswerable."

Development of Modern Religious Thought.

Especially in Germany. By E. S. CARR

A book of great value to all who are interested in the history of doctrine.

Price, $1.00.

Congregational S.S. & Publishing Society,
BOSTON AND CHICAGO.

EASTER MUSIC

"Messiah Victorious," prepared by J. E. Hall. Is a fine Service containing Responsive Readings, Interspersed with appropriate songs. Price, 5 cents per single copy.

"Easter Selections," Series G, for 1896, contain pretty carols, preceded by a set of selected Responsive Readings. Price, cents per single copy.

A Special Circular.

Containing a list of our large and varied stock of music for Easter will be sent free on application.

The new music for 1896 is very fine, including in addition to the two publications above named splendid solos and duets, and fine anthems for the choir.

CANTATAS FOR SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

Flower Praise (20c.). Festival of the Flowers (30c.). Under the Palms (30c.).

The Musical Visitor for March will contain a supplement of Easter Anthems. Price, 15 cents.

THE JOHN CHURCH COMPANY,
CINCINNATI, NEW YORK, CHICAGO.

"Stands at the head of its class, without a peer."—Christian Work, New York.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE

MR. LOWELL IN ENGLAND
By GEORGE W. SMALLEY.

A SPRING FLOOD IN BROADWAY. A Story.
(Illustrated by W. T. Smedley.)
By BRANDER MATTHEWS.

THE GERMAN STRUGGLE FOR LIBERTY
(Illustrated by Caton Woodville.)
By POULTNEY BIGELOW.

A PHASE OF MODERN COLLEGE LIFE
(The Christian Associations),
By HENRY T. FOWLER.

MAD ANTHONY WAYNE'S VICTORY
(Illustrated by R. F. Zogbaum.)
By THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

BRISEIS
(Illustrated by W. T. Smedley.)
By WILLIAM BLACK.

CONCLUDING CHAPTERS OF
JOAN OF ARC,
(Illustrated by F. V. Du Mond.)
AND
ON SNOW-SHOES TO THE BARREN GROUNDS.
(Illustrated by Frederic Remington.)
By CASPAR WHITNEY.

SHORT STORIES, POEMS, Etc.

APRIL ISSUE
NOW READY

HARPER & BROTHERS - - PUBLISHERS - - NEW YORK

"Miss Phelps's book is one which men and women will be better for reading. The very heart of life, pure and true, passionate and strong, pulses in it, and to that heart of life no one can approach save with reverent footsteps. Every line in the book is worth re-reading. . . . Miss Phelps is satisfied with nothing less than the best—in life, in love, and in religion," says The Christian World, of London, of

A SINGULAR LIFE

Miss PHELPS'S remarkable novel which everybody is reading. Price, $1.25. Sold by all Booksellers; sent by the Publishers,

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO., Boston, Mass.

3 Distinct Courses PILGRIM Bible Studies

PILGRIM SUNDAY SCHOOL PAPERS.

Congregational Sunday School and Publishing Society, Boston and Chicago.

SONGS FOR SPRING TIME.

HIGHEST PRAISE FOR THE SABBATH SCHOOL.
$30 per 100 copies.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HYMNS, for YOUNG PEOPLE.
$30 per 100 copies.

Do not substitute inferior books because of lower price. The best are cheapest!!

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO.,
76 East 9th St., New York. 215 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

EASTER MUSIC. PILGRIM SERVICES.

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED MUSIC.
8 Services. 4c. and 2c.

Samples 1 Cent Each.

Congregational S. S. & Publishing Society,
BOSTON AND CHICAGO.

Prophecy;

or, Speaking for God.

By the Rev. EVERETT S. STACKPOLE, D. D.
One vol., 167 pages, 16mo, gilt top, 75 cents.

The author believes that the modern preacher is the legitimate successor of the Hebrew prophet, and makes his picture of the prophet serve as a model for the preacher. While his work will doubtless be sharply criticised, the majority of his readers will feel that Dr. Stackpole has done them a real service in bringing the prophets within their comprehension and in furnishing a higher ideal of the ministry

For sale by all booksellers.

THOMAS Y. CROWELL & CO.,
New York, 40 East 14th St.
Boston, 100 Purchase St.

THE CONGREGATIONALIST

Volume LXXXI Boston Thursday 19 March 1896 Number 12

✠ 80th ANNIVERSARY OFFER ✠

The Congregationalist for twelve weeks and The onnie Brier Bush for 25 cents (and 5 cents addi- onal for postage on the book if sent by mail).

✠ TRIAL SUBSCRIPTIONS. ✠

Months for . . . . . $1.00
Months for 25 cts. 4 Weeks Free.

✠ THE 1896 HANDBOOK. ✠

Prayer meeting topics and other valuable and nportant matter.

100 copies, postpaid, $1.25. 50 copies, 75 cts.

THE CONGREGATIONALIST SERVICES. ✠

Thirty-three services. Samples free.

rice, 100 copies of one number, 60 cts., postpaid.

WE wish that the scenes attending the dismissal of Rev. D. N. Beach from his Cambridge pas- orate could be so accurately reproduced hat every community might feel their in- uence. The result would be to magnify he Christian ministry beyond the position sually in these days accorded to it. First, epresentative citizens of all faiths and arties gathered in large numbers on one f the stormiest nights of the season, to estify to their appreciation of his services o the city, to render what Professor Peabody f Harvard termed "municipal gratitude." hen at the council next day members of is church and congregation sought the rivilege of speaking their affection for him. Ien unused to showing their feelings, in mple, dignified, self-restrained but most ender words, told of the devotion of this inister to them personally and of their ense of the value of his friendship. It was pparent that he had made their interests is own, and had sought with single-hearted arnestness the highest welfare of all his eople. Some who thus spoke had been tudents in Harvard University and were nly for a time under his care, but all nowed the same warm attachment which uring the eleven years of his pastorate ad constantly been drawing him and his ntire congregation closer together. Men ame from his former charge at Wakefield o testify that his interest in them had not essened since he left them. In these days f short pastorates we have seldom witnessed scene more encouraging to ministers and hurches than this one. Mr. Beach's suc- ess has been due to his consecrated spirit, horough mental training, unselfish devotion o the welfare of his people and the public ood, and an excellent wife. No New ngland ministry of earlier days was more onored than his is. He came to a divided hurch; he leaves it united. His people horoughly appreciate his services and their ffection for him is as creditable to them- elves as to him. May not any minister, ith similar gifts and opportunities, expect s great successes?

Without arrogating to itself more than s just dues New England, and particu- arly that section of it which lies in the vi- cinity of Boston, may take much satisfac- tion in the noble part which it had in clear- ing off the debt of the American Board. Certainly if our local givers had not done more than was expected of them the defi- ciencies arising from failures in other parts of the country to pledge the sums allotted would not have been made good and the debt would still be burdening the Board. To Col. Charles A. Hopkins and Henry D. Hyde, Esq., of the Prudential Committee and to Henry E. Cobb of the New England committee special credit is due for their faithful and persistent efforts. Not only were they themselves a pattern to others in respect to giving, but at their own expense they journeyed hither and thither, wrote numerous letters and labored personally with wealthy men. Fit successors are they of Alpheus Hardy, Ezra Farnsworth and others of a past generation, whose names are so intimately associated with the pros- perity of the Board. The Board and the churches ought to be grateful that men as prominent in the business world as are the gentlemen who have been so instrumental in securing the payment of the debt are ready to give, without reward, their time, their substance and themselves to the for- eign missionary cause.

If Frederick T. Greenhalge and James Jeffrey Roche had remained in the land of their fathers they would have disliked each other as Englishmen and Irishmen usually do. But they came to the United States, were transformed into tolerant American citizens and when the English born Unita- rian governor died the Irish-born Roman Catholic editor and poet could write:

> The demagogue and the bigot low,
> Narrow of soul and shallow of brain,
> Hated and feared; but the manly foe
> Found him a knight without fear or stain.
>
> For truth and courage and charity
> Ruled and directed his word and deed;
> He held no brief and he took no fee
> From party pillage or private greed.
>
> After the long day's sorrow and strife
> Cometh the night with its peace and rest,
> And the Mother State he loved in life
> Taketh him tenderly to her breast.

O America, thou dissolver of race and creed hatreds!

The comments on the recent home mis- sionary rally at Carnegie Music Hall, New York, are instructive. They ought not to pass unnoticed by those who are responsi- ble for keeping up the interest of the churches in our missionary societies. In securing general public attention the meet- ing was an unqualified success, but in the effort to pay the debt of the Presbyterian Home Missionary Society, which was the object of the meeting, it was a failure. This might have been expected. The in- terest which brought the assembly together was not that of self-sacrifice, but of curi- osity. People go to such a meeting for what they can get, not in order to give, and they buy what they seek at as low a rate as possible. The chief speakers were not chosen because the burden of that debt lay on their hearts, but because they would draw an audience. Probably no church in the Presbyterian denomination has given as little to the home missionary cause, in pro- portion to its numbers, as the one to which Dr. Talmage has ministered for twenty-five years. President Cleveland's address was dignified, appropriate and forcible. What he said of the perils and vices of frontier communities is truth too well known to be challenged, and the attempt of certain Western politicians in Congress to make political capital by attacking him for say- ing it was discreditable only to them- selves. The most important suggestion from the meeting is that the real business of missions will best be furthered by bring- ing together those already interested in the work rather than by providing an unusual attraction to stimulate the curiosity of all sorts of people.

A NEW RELIGIOUS ORDER.

It is not strange that Mr. and Mrs. Ball- ington Booth find it difficult to fix on a name for the new religious society which they are forming. In the first place, about every important religious idea in history has been utilized to give a name to some organization which has adopted it as a basis of belief or service. In the second place, the Booths do not yet know what the thing is to be which is to be named. This second consideration is of far the greater impor- tance.

The Salvation Army, now about eighteen years old, has a history more remarkable than was that of Mohammedanism at the same age, and it has some elements strik- ingly similar to that movement. It has one human leader, Gen. William Booth, ab- solute and supreme. It claims the whole world as its field and its organization re- tains all authority in the family of its founder. Three sons and four daughters are "commanders in chief" of divisions of the army in different countries. This fam- ily authority is maintained by military dis- cipline. The aim is to reach those who will submit to this discipline and who most need it, the most ignorant and degraded classes. The army forms no affiliation with Chris- tian churches, but asks their sympathy and money. For the money given no account- ing is rendered and no vote or voice allowed in its distribution. Rank, pay, place and work depend on the decisions of officers who are responsible to one head and from whom there is no appeal. The financial organization of the army is admirable for securing revenue. Besides tithes, special sums to be raised by particular actions of self denial and voluntary contributions, ap- peals are made to the churches, individuals become auxiliary members by payment of annual fees and army literature is persist- ently peddled by "hallelujah lassies." A flamboyant militarism, which makes prayers into knee drills and emphasizes praises to God by trombones and shouts, is effectively used to advertise the organization. En- thusiasm is fostered by variety and excitement in work and loyalty is cultivated by promotion in rank and by promises of future rewards. One cannot fail to note the resemblances between this organization and that which Mohammed created.

But the power of the army does not lie in its accompaniments. It is to be found in the gospel which it proclaims. Jesus Christ is preached as the one sufficient Saviour from sin, the new birth the supreme necessity, the Holy Spirit the one efficient power to create holiness in those who seek him. The army represents the organization, but salvation represents the aim. A divine ideal is presented to the degraded and a sympathetic Saviour with infinite power on whom they can lay hold to lift them to the ideal. Many have been saved from conditions physically and morally so gross that their salvation has been so conspicuous as to appear glorious. Therefore Christians have looked beyond the grotesque and childish accompaniments and have rejoiced in the great good done, and some men and women of refinement have joined the army and accepted its discipline for Christ's sake, believing that they could thus best rescue souls.

Yet it was not to be expected that the Salvation Army would, without great modifications, long continue its growth in this country. It is an anomaly in American life and its method is repugnant to American institutions. It is of small consequence what was the nature of the family dispute which resulted in the removal from office of Ballington Booth and his wife and the appointment in his place of "Commissioner" Eva Booth. Mr. and Mrs. Booth have won esteem and following not because of their family relations but because of their Christian spirit and their wise apprehension of means to reach neglected classes. It is in their power to adapt what is good in the organization they have left to conditions in this country which they have come to understand. They have the sympathy of the Christian public in the attempt, and they seem likely to secure a generous portion of the army as their followers.

We hope, then, that the new religious order will not conspicuously parade the army idea. We do not object to military terms or military discipline in their proper place. Bible writers used them and described some elements of Christian character in terms of the battlefield. But in a time when military organizations were much more conspicuous than now, Jesus and his disciples carried no weapons, wore no uniforms, assumed no military titles. We do not forget that the twelve managed once to muster two swords, but one of the most foolish things Peter ever did was the attempt to use one of them, and the only military command of Jesus on record is his order to Peter, "Put up thy sword into the sheath." We honor the soldier whose business is to defend his country, but we are not enamored with shoulder straps and gilt buttons and other insignia of war decorating those who claim the commission to preach the gospel of peace. Nor do we believe they will gain more attention to their message by being called colonel or major or captain.

We hope, also, that the democratic idea will eclipse the prominence of the Booth family. The autocracy which General Booth has created is signally antagonistic to the spirit and teaching of Christ, who said, Neither be ye called masters; for one is your master, even Christ." It is more offensive than the papacy, for that has the prestige of a great church and centuries of history to support it. The spirit of our land and of our time demands that men should share the responsibilities of government in church and state. A man may be saved by obedience to Christ, even when his obedience to ecclesiastical superiors is abject; but he remains a poor specimen of a saved man. The successful assumption of a single English family to plant its standard in every nation and organize a following under its absolute control is one of the most remarkable achievements of this generation; but in the nature of things it cannot long continue.

If, then, Mr. and Mrs. Ballington Booth, having cast off an authority which claimed far more than its due, being now familiar with the spirit of our institutions and having a multitude of loyal friends, can gather together the elements of the Salvation Army in this country worthy to be preserved, and can lead a movement to rescue the degraded and help the poor and bridge the chasm between them and the better and more prosperous classes, only to lead those who most need their help across to the purer atmosphere and firmer ground, all good citizens will bid them Godspeed. That they can do this work only in the name and spirit of Christ and that they mean to do it depending wholly on him they have abundantly shown in their works.

ANOTHER DEBT TO BE FACED.

The jubilee of the American Missionary Association will be celebrated in Boston next October. A half-century of work involving an outlay of millions of dollars and the heroic sacrifice of thousands of missionaries is nearly completed. This association has posted its missionaries across the continent from Alaska to Florida. They look out upon Siberia and upon Cuba. It has planted its kindergartens and universities thickly among the Southern mountains and in the great Black Belt. This great missionary enterprise is worthy to be placed side by side with the other missionary work of Congregationalists, which has made evident around the world their faith in God and their love for humanity. The pathway of this mighty undertaking has been from the outset strewn thick with discouragements and dangers. Its missionaries have always faced privations, social ostracism and sometimes death.

The A. M. A. has 12,000 pupils in its Southern schools, has organized fifty-one Congregational churches among the Southern highlanders, gathered 1,000 Mongolians into its schools in California and ordained last year the first Chinese minister on the American continent. Last year it preached the gospel to twenty tribes of Indians in five different States, and is making over wild Indians into preachers, deacons, worthy citizens. It has persuaded the Indian woman to send her children to school. To accomplish this work it employs the Bible, the spelling-book, industrial training. It aims to produce leaders and convert men and women. The achievement of the past is the foundation and promise for the future.

Such a work undertaken for the lowly and despised ones bears upon it the very marks of Christ. From the first it has been a triumphant task. Its jubilee music has no note of discouragement in it. Its success is its greatest burden today. Even its debt, in behalf of which the rallying cry now goes forth, is evidence of the far-sightedness of its managers. For fourteen years previous to the present panic the A. M. A. had no debt, and if the Congregational churches had replaced by their gifts the Government money which at Hartford they forbade the association longer to receive there would be scarcely any debt today. And yet this degree of freedom from debt has been purchased at a great price.

For its continued efficiency and wise conservation of the great investments of fifty years it must once more, and soon, be delivered from the financial load by which it is now burdened.

FORGIVENESS OF INJURIES.

Forgiveness often seems to be more divine than any other virtue because it costs so much and is such an unmistakable proof of love. It cuts directly athwart that self-interest which is the gravest temptation, the deadliest danger, of our lives. He who can and does forgive in anything like God's own spirit and manner has taken a long step towards ideal righteousness.

We are to forgive those who have injured us both for our own sakes and for theirs. For our own, because we need to learn to repress that indignant self-justification which is far too eager to exalt our own rights and belittle those of others; because we cannot consistently ask of them the forgiveness which we too so often need unless we are willing to grant it in turn; and because we never can be sure that in their circumstances we might not have given offense, equal to, perhaps even greater than, theirs.

For their sakes, also, because they may have battled long and nobly with the temptation to wrong us before yielding, and deserve credit for it; because they need to be encouraged to begin again and do better; because they are our brothers and sisters before God; and because, if we continue implacable, they will have good reason to doubt whether our spirit is truly that of our Heavenly Father, and such a doubt is an injury to them which we can prevent.

Moreover, forgiveness ought to be hearty and convincing, not merely that of the tongue but evidently the glad renewal of confidence. And, if we are to imitate the divine example set us, it ought to be renewed in all its sincerity as often as needed, provided it be sought with equal honesty. Seventy times seven! That means indefinitely—if the offender be in earnest.

This suggests a limitation which is right and inevitable. He who seeks and receives forgiveness must prove his sincerity by the effort to avoid renewed offense. A merely formal request for forgiveness does not necessarily involve genuine penitence, and nobody has the right to impose upon one whom he has injured by pretending to be sorry when he is not sorry. Such a hypocritical wrongdoer must, for his own sake and for the general good, be refused forgiveness until he seeks it in the proper spirit. Travesties of penitence need rebuke, not pardon. Christian dignity, and the very dignity of God himself, must not be thus mocked. But with this exception it is both a sweet privilege and a solemn duty to forgive indefinitely, even as we hope to be forgiven.

CURRENT HISTORY.

"God's American Volunteers."

It cannot be said that the Ballington Booths have been inspired in the selection of the above name, which their new organization for Christian labor among the masses is to bear. Still name does not count if a proper spirit pervades and wisdom otherwise directs. The standard or flag which is to float over the volunteers is thoroughly American as well as Christian in its symbolism. Each branch of the new army will be called a post, and each meeting place or headquarters an armory. The G. A. V., as it is to be called familiarly, certainly is growing in numbers. Some of the ablest and stanchest of the Salvation Army's officers in and around New York city have resigned and gone over to the Ballington Booths. General Booth has returned to London from India, and expressed opinions concerning his rebellious children which certainly will not conduce to reconciliation. The way for such a reconciliation is still open, as the resignations of the Booths from the army have not been accepted and the general even now is pleading for their renewal of loyalty. He probably will visit this country soon, and pending further developments orders have been issued naming the Booth-Tuckers as in charge of the army in this country, and American born Salvationists, holding important posts in the British ranks, are arriving to buttress up the cause of the army here.

Great Britain, the Transvaal and Venezuela.

The formal trial of Dr. Jameson and fourteen British officers has begun, they having exceedingly able counsel at their command and the moral support of the presence in the courtroom of not a few of the most aristocratic and wealthy of the English people, some of them parents of the youthful filibusters, others officials or stockholders in the British South Africa Company, which would have profited most if Jameson's raid had succeeded and Mr. Chamberlain been less resolute. They are charged with violating the foreign enlistment act, and the penalty, if found guilty, is a fine and imprisonment, or either, at the discretion of the court. Unfortunately the case already has been postponed to await the receipt of more evidence from South Africa, and already the skeptical insinuate that the British Government will not act strenuously in the matter. No important steps toward a settlement of the difficulties between Great Britain and the Transvaal can be reported.

The London Daily Chronicle and The Speaker have not hesitated to criticise severely the British Blue Book, giving the British case in the dispute with Venezuela, and other London journals, although less severe, have conceded that it is far from reassuring to find it put together with such inaccuracy, as it must stand the scrutiny of the trained jurists of our commission. Mr. Olney and Lord Salisbury are quietly working toward an agreement upon a joint commission—if the reports of the most reliable correspondents in London are to be trusted. Sir H. Stafford Northcote, M. P., an experienced English diplomat, is in Washington now, presumably charged with important duties as a special commissioner. Our commissioners have decided to send experts to The Hague and Madrid to study documents there.

Carrying the War into Africa

There are some indications now of a saner attitude of mind in Italy and a determination to limit the expenditure which the nation will incur in carrying on the war, if it must be continued, and a willingness to make peace with the Abyssinians if it can be done with honor. Pressure from Germany and Austria has been brought to bear upon King Humbert to bring this about, for these nations realize that Italy's plight is their own to a degree and that all weakening of her military and financial resources affects the strength of the Triple Alliance in the same ratio. Great Britain has decided to give substantial assistance to Italy in an indirect way by ordering a campaign against the dervishes of the Soudan, who, prior to the defeat of the Italians at Adowa, had been offensively belligerent, but since that time have become so warlike and contemptuous that it is felt that they must be given to understand that European supremacy in and around the Soudan is not to be questioned. This decision on the part of Great Britain certainly will not hasten any rapprochement with France relative to Great Britain's permanent control of Egypt, for the ostensible reason given for the war is the preservation of Egypt from invasion, and a portion of the expense will be borne by Egypt and its army will be drawn upon for many of the British combatants; nor has it passed without the criticism of men at home like Henry Labouchere, Sir Charles Dilke and those who condemn England's retention of Egypt and others who are known as the "Little England" party. Moreover, once entered upon the war with opponents who are by no means to be despised, being relentless religious fanatics as well as well-armed, disciplined fighters, there is no telling what the subsequent complications may be, or where it will lead Great Britain. Not a few Englishmen frankly describe it as another of Lord Salisbury's fatal blunders.

It is gratifying to learn that Germany proposes to investigate the charges at last openly made against some of her colonists and colonial agents in Africa. The Reichstag last week resembled Babel while Herr Bebel hurled his charges of cruelty and immorality against Dr. Carl Peters, but the charges were too explicit and the evidence offered too consequential to be overlooked, even though the indictment was drawn by a despised Socialist, and the ministry the following day wisely announced that a full investigation would be made and that Dr. Peters courts it. Too often native Africans have found that the vice and cruelty of the Christian European official was equal to the greed and cruelty of the Mohammedan slave trader whom he displaced.

Russian Gains in Diplomacy.

Mr. Gladstone accepts as unquestionable the fact of a Russian-Turkish alliance and holds Russia answerable for all future massacres that may occur in Turkey. He has declined to introduce a deputation to urge upon Lord Salisbury the establishment of an Armenian relief fund under government patronage, but he sees no reason why such fund should not be established and so patronized. Were any evidence lacking of Russia's grip on affairs at Constantinople it would be furnished by Turkey's recent bestowal of high honors on Prince Lobanoff, the Russian foreign minister, and M. Neidoff, the Russian ambassador to Turkey, and by Miss Barton's statement in her letter of Feb. 25, in which she reports that Mr. Terrell, our minister in Constantinople, renewed, through the Russian ambassador at Constantinople, his demands upon the sultan for passports for her and her assistants, proof, of course, that Mr. Terrell knows that M. Neidoff just now is more influential than Sir Phillip Currie. Mr. Terrell has left Constantinople for this country on leave of absence. He apparently either thinks that the worst is over and that the sultan's promises to him concerning the safety of American's lives and property are to be relied upon, or that Russia is so dominant now that the sultan will be held in check. We hope he is not too optimistic. We wonder whether Russian protection of Protestant American missionaries and missions will be quite as effective and stalwart as the British has been in the past when we have been compelled to rely on foreign Powers for aid that our representatives could not afford.

There is a splendid tribute to the converts of the American Board in Armenia in that appeal to Christendom which the Gregorian clergy of Oorfa wrote just before five of them were slain before their altars while celebrating sacrament:

> To the Christians of the United States of America we say farewell. We have been strenuously opposed to your mission work among us, but these bloody days have shown that some of our Protestant brethren have been stanch defenders of our honor and our faith. You, at least, know that our crime in the eyes of the Turk has been that we adopted the civilization you commended to us. Behold now the missions and schools which you planted among us at the cost of many millions of dollars and hundreds of precious lives! They are in ruins, and the Turk is planning to rid himself of the missionaries and teachers by leaving them nobody among whom to labor.

A treaty between Russia and China has just been signed, and, while its provisions are not definitely known, it may be safely assumed that they bode ill to the interests of Great Britain, Japan and to some extent the United States. The emperor of China has suppressed a newspaper and club, organized by some of the younger Chinese literati and led by American missionaries, as inimical to the welfare of conservatism and the empire. Nor do innovations in industry and transportation receive as much encouragement as was expected after the defeat suffered at the hands of Japan, but a rehabilitation of the army seems to be under way under the guidance of German and Russian officials. As for Korea, it is now in the hands of the anti-Japanese, Russian party, and Japan seems unwilling to risk a contest in fighting to retain control in the nation for whose independence she went to war with China. But Japan is wise. While Europe is busy seeing to it that neither she nor China rise to too high rank as military powers, both of them, as Lafcadio Hearn points out in the April Atlantic, are making ready to challenge Occidental civilization along industrial and economic lines. Oriental facility and low standards of living plus Occidental machinery and organization will undersell the manufacturers of Europe and America.

NOTES.

Chess is such a strenuous, lofty form of combat, it is so free from the trickery and vulgarity of many games, that we have reason to be proud of the result of the international contest in chess played by cable last week, in which the American team, including Pillsbury, Showalter and Barry, defeated Blackburne, Bird and Tinsley and other leading English players.

The Republican State conventions held last week in Rhode Island, Ohio and Kansas and Iowa indorsed Messrs. Reed, McKinley and Allison. Neither of them formulated a platform sufficiently unequivocal in its definition of the party's position relative to silver to suit the many East and West who are tired of compromise. The plank in the Ohio platform is particularly obnoxious and most significant as it was drafted by Mr. McKinley.

While sympathizing with Dr. Parkhurst in most of his criticism of the New York legislature's treatment of the Greater New York consolidation scheme, there are many who will dissent from his statement that a legislator "is nothing but a citizen doing important chores for his fellow-citizens, for which he is to be truly paid, with the understanding, however, that he does those chores as his employers want them done." We have too many "chore-boy" legislators now.

Senator Chandler of New Hampshire is to be commended for his effort to curtail the extravagance of the Senate. As he says: "It cannot be possible that 338 officers and employés at an annual salary of $460,000 plus $165,000 in extra expenses" are necessary for the comfort or best service of ninety senators. If Congress will investigate this cause of leakage and as well remedy the defect in the judiciary system, which gives fees instead of salaries to marshals and clerks, we shall display more prudence and thrift as a nation.

Dr. Storrs's correspondence with Lieut.-Governor Saxton relative to the Greater New York legislation revealed his contempt for legislators who jump when Mr. Platt pulls the string, and caused a dramatic scene between Senator Lexow and Mr. Saxton in which the latter affirmed his right to have his own opinion and express it as a citizen should, a sentiment which few of New York's legislators can echo, judging them by their record up to date, they having passed the Raines Bill without debate and rushed the Greater New York Bill through the Senate in a most high-handed way.

IN BRIEF.

Many thanks, kind friends, for your cordial congratulations on our anniversary number.

Since our Congressmen will not or cannot discuss the defects of our currency system in a statesmanlike way, it has been left to the debaters of Harvard and Princeton to do it, and they succeeded admirably in their joint debate last week.

We have wondered at some of the heartless comments upon Mr. Alfred Austin in Roman Catholic papers—assuming that he was a Catholic. But it seems according to the testimony of a friend, writing in the English Illustrated Magazine, that he is an agnostic.

The Christian Work would recommend the Scriptures as a proper substitute for a church paper. The church news in the Scriptures is remarkably interesting, but somewhat too distant in time and space to take the place of that department in our columns.

The Presbyterian Union of New York had a chance the other night to learn what sort of a peaker our Mr. Puddefoot is. His subject was True Patriotism, and he came upon his audience like an army with banners, captured them at once and held them captive for an hour.

One of the leading Baptist churches of Richmond, Va., recently lost its splendid church edifice by fire. "The most grateful surprise" it received, as it contemplated its loss and braced itself for rebuilding, was the gift of $100 from the First Colored Baptist Church of the city.

The pyramids of Egypt represent slave labor. The leaders of organized labor in this country are said to be considering the feasibility and desirability of shipping all able-bodied convicts in this country to serve as laborers in constructing the Nicaragua canal. Punishment indeed, punitive entirely.

Referring to existing excitement in Spain the papers say that the regular presence of crowds at the "usual Sunday bull fight" afforded opportunity for trouble. Is the phrase, "the usual Sunday bull fight," significant of Spanish civilization and the dominant type of Spanish Christianity?

A Boston daily announces that the interesting revival in one of our city churches is to be suspended on account of the pressure of other church work. Probably, then, the revival was stopped by the same power which set it going, but it is not that power which makes men new in Christ Jesus.

The Bible is ever a new book, whatever changes in its meaning are made necessary by critical study, to those who turn to read it by the light of the Holy Spirit revealing the will of God to them. Rev. Floyd Tomkins beautifully and comfortingly illustrates this in his article on Bible Reading which we print this week.

Dean Hole of Rochester, Eng., who recently attracted considerable attention in a visit to this country, has written a book about A Little Tour in America. He is not at all complimentary toward Unitarianism. He describes it as "the heresy most repulsive to the Christian faith, that subtle form of anti-Christ, the foe who pretends to be a friend."

The ruin of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad is traced to the garrulousness of Robert Garrett, who, at a champagne dinner, revealed a secret, which was overheard by a Pennsylvania railroad adherent. The news was instantly transmitted to Philadelphia, and Mr. Garrett's deal was upset. That champagne supper cost $8,000,000. Moral: Drink water and keep "mum."

Elsewhere we comment on Salvation Army affairs. It is interesting to find in the London Christian Commonwealth a confirmation of our position: "Democracy is too deeply rooted in American breasts to be long tolerant of any purely autocratic religious government. Some modification of the army, if it was to succeed in America, in its religious, as distinct from its social, work was bound to be made sooner or later."

The world needs trained men. It is the universal cry. Critics of Britain's naval policy, English critics too, point out that she is building ships four times faster than she can train officers and men to handle them. Accelerated construction of machinery in philanthropy without an equal pace in providing and training workers is an evil to be deplored, and yet are we not in these latter days open to such an indictment?

Out of forty pew-holders in Hartford churches to whom circulars were addressed, thirty-seven decidedly objected to the use of the pulpit for the discussion of municipal reform. We do not know how the question was put, and therefore have no criticism to make of the answers. But we should like to hear a sermon on the subject from one of the most illustrious citizens of Hartford of the last generation, Horace Bushnell.

Dr. Arthur T. Pierson has replied to his English and American critics, chiefly the former. He denies that he was privately immersed at Croydon, that he had any ulterior design in so doing or in addressing the Tabernacle congregation as he did, and he affirms that he has not the least intention or thought of taking any pastoral charge. "God," he thinks, is calling him to "a different, and, in a sense, wider work." What, pray?

If a man were always talking about patriotism while he refused to recognize his neighbors as citizens unless they would live under his roof, he would soon become a bore. The very first step for any denomination to take toward church unity is to recognize other Christian denominations as composed of genuine churches of Christ. Any sect which claims to be the only one, and excludes all others from recognition and fellowship, wastes its breath and tires its neighbors by talking of church unity.

Two Congregational churches in Cambridge have within a few months dismissed their pastors: one amid painful and stormy experiences, in which many of the members lost their tempers and uttered hasty words, the other with remarkable unanimity and an affection for their pastor which is a most cheering tribute to the noble influence of the Christian ministry. The daily newspapers gave far more space to the scenes in the former parish than in the latter. Strange, isn't it?

Mrs. Craigie (John Oliver Hobbes), the English writer of fiction, upon her return to England was asked for her impressions of the United States. She named first "the sincere religious sentiment" underlying the life of the people, which sentiment "is not aggressive, is not paraded to the view in any obtrusive way, has no suggestion of hypocrisy," but permeates everywhere. She found us ambitious, non-mercenary, intensely patriotic, our women free from scandal-mongering and indirectly, but none the less powerfully, shaping our national ideals and politics.

Massachusetts has had many governors whose administrations have added to the honor of the Commonwealth, though few of them have had their services commemorated by public statues. If Gen. B. F. Butler's administration, which was too notorious to be forgotten, is to be officially recalled to the people by a statue of him on the State House grounds, we hope the names of all the members of the legislature who vote for it may be carved on its pedestal, in order that our citizens may be reminded to whom they are indebted for such a revival of a very disagreeable memory.

We did not put it half strongly enough last week when we said that Rev. Theodore L. Cuyler, D.D., preached "occasionally." The fact is that with the exception of this last month, when he has not been quite well, he has preached as steadily as when he was the pastor of the Lafayette Avenue Church, Brooklyn. On Easter Sunday he hopes to deliver his fiftieth anniversary sermon. Much as the good doctor enjoys writing for the religious press, preaching is a still keener delight, and we trust he may long be spared to utter face to face with men the ringing, cheery, gospel message that he loves to proclaim.

It is curious to see in these self-styled "civilized" times a recrudescence of such a barbarous custom as that of tattooing. Already, in certain quarters not noted for an over-supply of brains, it seems to have become fashionable, in imitation, we suppose, of an English royal duke who was a sailor, and signs are out on the streets of our cities that electricity and a skilled operator are at the service of those who desire indelible anchors or stars upon their arms, or a picture above their heart of the girl they love. The fashion will soon go by, even among the silliest, but the tattooings will remain to recall the time of folly.

Two years ago Nebraska farmers suffered severely from failure of crops, and aid was sent to them from many quarters. Last year they had better success. Some of them who had received a gift of $103 from the Commercial Club of St. Joseph, Mo., have returned it with interest. They have done in this act much more than to restore the gift. They have made charity more free and delightful wherever their spirit of independence shall be known. And none will be readier to help brethren in need than those Nebraska farmers who were willing to receive help when they were in distress, but too proud to remain under obligation when prosperity returned.

When our Roman Catholic friends point out to us the fact that the earliest churches of the United States were those of their own faith in New Mexico and elsewhere, we wonder whether they ever stop to think what the history of the country might have been if the type of those Spanish-Indian settlements had become the type of American life from ocean to ocean. If the United States is today a good place for all men to live and grow strong in, it is because the hand of God held back the tide of Spanish settlement under the control of priest and the Spanish type of king and governor, and gave the land to a people who were trained to think and build for themselves.

We not only suspect, we know that the Mid-Continent's slur at Mr. D. Willis James is most unjust and unworthy a religious journal. He has given lavishly and regularly to Presbyterian mission work and because he and William E. Dodge and a few other well-to-do Presbyterian laymen also help the American Board, as their fathers did before them, they should not be subjected to the sneers of narrow-gauge Presbyterians. In pleasant contrast with the Mid-Continent's treatment of Mr. James is the Christian Register's (Unitarian) statement that "one cannot easily compute or pay the debt of gratitude which people of all lands owe to the Board for its educational, civilizing, humanizing work."

One of the States in which we should least expect to find in these days a trial for heresy is Connecticut. Yet one is set down for March 24 at Madison, where the pastor of the Congregational church, Rev. W. T. Brown, is expected to appear before a council duly called and answer to charges that his belief is not in accordance with that of Congregational churches on the doctrines of the Trinity, incarnation, atonement and inspiration. The newspapers tell us that the young minister is popular, is much interested in public affairs and is loyally supported by two-thirds of his congregation and nearly all the people of the town. These facts, we suppose, would hardly be put in evidence as showing what is his religious belief. But he is a graduate of Yale Divinity School, and New Haven ministers and professors seem to be in the majority among those who are expected to decide on his orthodoxy. We do not anticipate a long trial or much excitement over the matter.

Charges of venality against British editors have been rather uncommon, certainly more infrequent than similar charges against French or American journalists. But the social and financial influences which Sir Cecil Rhodes and the British South African Company can bring to bear are so tremendous that it is not surprising to find that certain newspapers in London are departing from the expectations of their former supporters and that queries respecting the sudden change of tone are rife. Thus Dr. J. Guinness Rogers is found in The Chronicle, over his own signature, saying that the present attitude of The Daily News toward Cecil Rhodes is causing consternation among some of the oldest and most loyal friends of that hitherto highly esteemed Liberal organ. The Spectator, in a recent editorial, said that partisanship must not be allowed to prevent a most thorough investigation of the Transvaal raid if Great Britain is "to be guarded against the terrible dangers of a Panama scandal"; and a venal Parisian press was one of the most saddening revelations of that great scandal.

STAFF CORRESPONDENCE.

FROM THE INTERIOR.

A Just Sentence.

Judge Grosscup has refused to change the sentence already pronounced against Mr. Dunlop, the editor and publisher of the Chicago Dispatch. Unless a new trial is granted or the Supreme Court sets aside the decision Mr. Dunlop will have to go to Joliet for two years and pay a fine in addition. He was arrested at the instance of the Western Society for the Suppression of Vice, which collected the evidence against him and which for twenty years has done yeoman service in the interest of good morals. The charge on which conviction was secured was using the United States mail for the circulation of immoral publications. These publications were in advertisements of a character which no parent would willingly allow a son or daughter to see. The judge declared himself unable legally to alter the decision, either by an increase of the fine as an equivalent for imprisonment, or on account of health to allow him to serve out his sentence elsewhere than in Joliet. A physician whom the judge summoned to report as to the alleged danger to Mr. Dunlop's health gave it as his opinion that his health would be benefited rather than injured by the regular life which is led within prison walls. Whatever be the final outcome of this case, it is certain that managers of newspapers in Chicago will hereafter be a little careful as to the character of the material they furnish the public.

The Salvation Army.

Colonel Eadie has been here using his best endeavors to prevent the Chicago contingent from going with Ballington Booth. For the present, it is reported, the old relations to General Booth will be maintained, but the final decision is more than doubtful. Unquestionably public sentiment, outside army circles, is almost entirely with the son rather than with the father. This is because it seems absurd that an American army should in any way be dependent on England or receive its orders from England. Still there is real regret here that these differences should have occurred at all.

The Church Militant.

This organization seems to be living up to the privileges conferred by its name. It is not only contending against evils of every kind, but just now is in a dispute with the managers of Willard Hall, where it meets for worship. This hall, owned by the W. C. T. U. and sacredly set apart to religious uses, is, according to the notions of some, likely to be desecrated by the presence of Col. Robert Ingersoll, whom Pastor Rust has asked to speak for him some Sunday morning. The women are urging Mr. Rust to give up his lease and go elsewhere. This Mr. Rust declines to do. The church, too, has begun a crusade against the Common Council because it has not yet voted money for a dormitory at the Bridewell for boys convicted of crime. The Woman's Club had taken the matter in hand and had obtained a quasi promise that something should be done just as soon as funds would allow, but it is feared that the criticisms by the Church Militant and other independent organizations may put the council on the defensive and push over the reform to another year.

The Overcomers.

This peculiar sect, once well known in Chicago and still better known through its colony in Jerusalem, has been somewhat straitened for funds for several years. Mrs. H. G. Spofford, who is regarded as the leader of the sect, Mrs. Amelia Gould and Mrs. Whiting have for more than a year been in Chicago trying to restore broken fortunes and obtain recruits. Thursday evening, March 5, the leaders with about eighty followers started for Palestine and their home in Jerusalem on the wall near the Damascus Gate. It is not easy to state their doctrinal belief. They profess to follow the directions of the Bible, but they still claim that revelations are made to them even now, and that the latter are as trustworthy as those contained in the written Word. Most of the recruits from Chicago are Swedes. The Overcomers look for the speedy coming of Christ, and, as they are sure he will first appear in or near Jerusalem, they wish to be there to greet him.

Monday Noon Lectures.

These lectures, given under the auspices of the University of Chicago at Steinway Hall, have been given as a sort of an experiment. First came President Harper's course on Prophecy, cut short by the state of his health and his retirement from the university for the present quarter. Another course of six lectures on History, chiefly American, by Prof. H. P. Judson, acting president of the university, closed last Monday. They did not appeal to a large audience, but they were among the most instructive lectures recently heard in the city. They were clear statements of facts which even students of American history are liable to overlook. Under the comprehensive title of The Larger Politics, the special topics were The Expansion of Europe, The Expansion of the United States, The Foreign Policy of the United States, The Mississippi Valley, Local Self Government, The World State.

Sweat Shop Iniquity.

A large meeting was held in Central Music Hall Sunday afternoon, March 8, in the interests of the Sulzer Bill now pending in Congress. Miss Jane Addams of the Hull House presided and spoke upon the feasibility of getting rid of the sweating system in the factories, especially in the sewing trade. The three methods proposed and to some extent adopted, State legislation, union labels and national legislation were discussed, with a decided inclination to the latter as most desirable. The Sulzer Bill really taxes the system out of existence. The methods of the middle men, who get their profits by farming out the contracts they obtain directly from the tailors to others, who work in rooms illy ventilated and unhealthy, and for starvation wages, were fully described and denounced. Dr. Thomas Hall, Presbyterian, Rabbi Stolz, Mr. Mangasarian, ethical culture, Rabbi Levy, Mrs. Florence Kelley, factory inspector, and Judge Tuley spoke in favor of the bill and against the system. The system has no friends anywhere. The only question is as to the best way to secure its destruction.

Chicago, March 14. FRANKLIN

Charles Carleton Coffin.*

A Typical American, and a Faithful Servant of God and Man.

When a life as strong and pure and useful as that of Charles Carleton Coffin passes from earth to heaven we owe it to ourselves, as well as to him who has gone, to pause long enough to estimate the character at its true worth. With the swift passage of time, with present scenes and interests thrusting themselves upon our attention, the outlines of well-known figures grow dim all too soon. The ranks of workers in the forefront of which they stood and battled for the right close up, and save to the near circle of friends and kindred the loved and honored character becomes a memory only. There is all the more reason, then, why while the shadow cast by the death of Mr. Coffin is still on many hearts we should find what comfort and stimulus we may by asking what were the sources of his greatness and goodness and what lessons may be learned from his long and honorable career.

His is one of those rare lives, which, touched at almost any period of its history, interests and attracts the student of men. Edwin D. Mead comprehends it well when he said: "It was a full, rich, fruitful, overflowing life with every talent put to service." It might, perhaps, admit of being divided into three periods—that of his boyhood and youth in a typical New Hampshire rural community, that of his participation in the war and of his travel round the globe, and that which followed his return to this country and extended to his death—the years when he wrote most of his books, delivered lectures and historical addresses and served the church and state, not only as an official representative of the people, but in countless unremunerated and often unrecognized ways.

Yet it is hard to bound off one section of his years from another and differentiate them save as respects what may be called the surroundings and accessories of his life. From boyhood to old age moved continuously and with cumulative force the stream of his purpose. When the boy of sixteen gathered about him the awkward, homespun lads of his native town and formed them into a military company, which was so well drilled as to excite the admiration of their elders, young Coffin was but expressing, with the material at hand, the military ardor which twenty years later made him one of the first to spring to the defense of his country. When a young man engaged in arduous outdoor work from four o'clock in the morning until long after sundown he reserved the later evening hours for study and reading, he was exercising the talent for patient research which has given his historical writings such an honorable place in literature. When in the church of his boyhood he took the lead in a movement to secure an organ he was evincing an appreciation of music which years afterwards took form in melodious hymns and tunes. Even the hard manual labor by which he sought to wrest an honest living from the rocky soil of the Granite State was, in the providence of God, a preparation for the rough and tumble of camp life, for the strenuous days and sleepless nights that only a war correspondent knows.

Thus it was that each stage of his career was dovetailed into the next. One cannot speak of a period of preparation and acquisition, for all his life long he was preparing for something better and nobler, he was acquiring, bit by bit, information that should serve him well in future emergencies.

One is impressed, too, by the variety and richness of the scenes in which Mr. Coffin figured either as a spectator or a participant. Little did the boy growing up amid the privations of a New Hampshire home, attending school and church as did his mates, sharing in the simple and wholesome pleasures of rural life, dream that one day he would be privileged to look upon kings and potentates. Little would a stranger approaching him in his later years realize that this modest, self-contained man had passed through so many martial and memorable experiences. Few men in this century have witnessed more of the occasions that shine out as the conspicuous events of the hundred years now drawing to their close. The opening of the Ohio & Mississippi Railway, the festivities in Canada and this country incidental to the visit of the Prince of Wales, the Republican convention in Chicago which nominated Lincoln, thirty great battles of the Civil War, the entrance at its close into Richmond, the night in the House of Commons when Disraeli brought in the Reform Bill, the Paris Exhibition of 1867, the great banquet in London given to Charles Dickens, the review of the Prussian army at Berlin before William I., the czar of Russia and Bismarck, the coronation of the emperor and empress of Austria as king and queen of Hungary, the entrance of Victor Emmanuel into Venice—these were some of the great occasions of the century which he beheld. He might certainly apply to himself the lines of the Roman poet:

All of which I saw and a part of which I was.

It was this gift of vision which made Mr. Coffin the prince of letter writers and the author of historical works which will never lose their popularity. There are city libraries in this country which keep in constant circulation as many as a dozen copies of The Boys of '76. Mr. Coffin never had to manufacture his material, to "pad" what the newspaper men call his "story," but, seeing the scene in its proportions and detail and master of a clear, straightforward style, he reproduced what he saw in lines and colors that will make his pictures endure. Much has been written since his letters describing his journey around the world appeared, but they leave little to be desired by the reader today in their combination of information with picturesque and racy description of character and customs.

It is no wonder that childhood feels under special obligation to the man who has made the days of '76 and of the early sixties live again, and it reveals the hold he had on little hearts that the children in one of the Brookline schools asked to have the flag on their edifice put at half mast on the day of his funeral, and that his picture in their schoolroom might be wreathed with laurel.

But if Mr. Coffin's sight had comprehended only that which appeals to the eye he would never have been the power he was. He could see principles as clearly and definitely as he saw battlefields and the glories of foreign cities. Nay, more, he could make others see those principles as cogently and persistently he unfolded to duller minds the basal ethical truths which should govern public and private action.

See him in the Massachusetts House of Representatives in the winter of 1885, leading the forces that were striving to secure a better police system for the city of Boston. Out-voted at the start in the committee of which he was chairman, he made his fight in the open House, appealing to the moral sense of the State to sustain him. His battle against the combined resistance of an unscrupulous lobby, a powerful liquor interest and a set of self-seeking politicians, and his final triumph after days of the most stubborn fighting, will go down into history as one of the most noteworthy struggles ever waged in the Massachusetts legislature. Only the consciousness that he was right could have nerved and sustained him in the great contest, and only the ability to communicate his own sense of right to others could have gained for him the allies without whom the fight would have been a hopeless one.

Two traits rise conspicuously above many other commendable ones in Mr. Coffin's character. The first was its symmetry. Earnest believer though he was, splendid fighter though he could be, he was far from being an extremist. He recognized the limitations which must arise from association with others. He would take half a loaf in temperance and Sunday legislation when he could not get the whole loaf. He would adjust himself to the existing degree of public sentiment and from that as a basis work for concrete results. This toleration and consideration for others characterized his religious feeling. He knew history too well, he had too profound a philosophy of life and too large a conception of the character of God to care anything for the minutiæ of theological debate. Without knowing it, perhaps, Mr. Coffin was a reconciler and a mediator in this time of transition. Dr. Griffis was right in saying at his funeral that in this particular he was a Middle States man rather than a representative of the sternest and most uncompromising type of New England belief. It was this ability to see both sides of a question that enabled him to help many out of their intellectual darkness into the liberty of the sons of God. Because he had "fought his doubts and gathered strength," he could help other doubters.

*Charles Carleton Coffin was born July 26, 1823, at Boscawen, N. H. His earlier years were spent at home on the farm, his education being confined to the district school and several terms at local academies. Farming and civil engineering claimed him in turn and it was not until he settled in Boston in 1854 that he found his life work. Connected successively with several daily papers, he went to the front as correspondent of the Journal at the beginning of the war and gained a wide and honorable reputation through his letters. A trip around the world, many years of literary labor and lecture and platform work sum up the chief activities of his maturer life. He published no less than twenty volumes besides a multitude of pamphlets and newspaper articles and delivered as many as two thousand addresses. He died suddenly at his new home in Brookline, March 2, leaving a wife, the sister of the inventor, Prof. Moses G. Farmer.

The other beautiful and commanding quality was his disinterestedness. His honest hands grasped, during his threescore years and ten, various and honorable implements of toil, but they never carried about an ax of his own to be ground at somebody else's expense. How many citizens among Boston's five hundred and seventy-five thousand can take rank with him in the interest which, to the very hour of his death, he maintained in everything that might affect the welfare of the community?

He held office for only a small fraction of the time that he has been in the truest sense the servant of the people. No respectable reform appealed in vain for his sympathy. And it was in line with all his public work that only the week before his death, when a distressing condition of affairs in one of the public institutions hereabouts was brought to his attention, his eye kindled and he said, "O, I wish I had time to try to help to make matters right!" He wrote many books, from which he derived a moderate pecuniary gain, but no one will ever reckon up the number of public addresses and newspaper articles for which he received no financial reward. No one will ever compute the hours he has given to committee work and to untiring effort in behalf of good causes. So it was no perfunctory impulse that led Acting-Governor Wolcott to say that Charles Carleton Coffin's death robs the commonwealth of one of her best citizens.

We should miss the best lesson if we did not record the part his religion had in making him the man he was. The first hymn he ever learned began,

Life is the time to serve the Lord.

And it was that passionate sense of obligation to his Master and his Redeemer which made him from his boyhood covet earnestly the best gifts, that thereby he might prove his devotion by service and by sacrifice.

The night before he died he talked in a familiar way at the supper table about the magnetic power of the cross of Christ and said that to him its great attractiveness was that it represented service. In the twinkling of an eye he has passed from an abundant and untiring earthly service of his Master into that sphere where his servants still serve him but in the gladness and strength of the open vision and with his name written upon their foreheads.

H. A. B.

THE CHRISTIAN LIFE.

IV. BIBLE READING.

BY REV. FLOYD W. TOMKINS, JR.

The Bible is God's message to us. Not the only message, for we must never think that we honor the Bible by making it the sole medium of communication between God and his children. God speaks to us through prayer and all the other means of grace. He speaks to us through history and the voices of the past, and in this age we are learning that he speaks to us through nature and all her wonders. The Psalmist knew this when, long ago, he sang: "The heavens declare the glory of God. Day unto day uttereth speech." And our Lord taught it when he said: "Consider the lilies." And the great dramatist said:

Our life, exempt from public haunt,
Finds tongues in trees, books in the running brooks,
Sermons in stones and good in everything.

We are to learn God's lessons wherever they are found. But the Bible is pre-eminently the book of revelation, because it means just one thing—Christ. Jesus is the center. Nature only indirectly proclaims a Redeemer. She suggests redemption through evolution and through human invention and discovery and mastery, but she does not centralize it or make it personal. Through the Bible we know that Christ is the great Redeemer through whom all lesser redeemers work, because he leads in all redemptive advance. We must keep this truth in mind, then, in all our Bible study. It is impossible to understand the book, it is impossible to gain from it the true help we need, unless we find this kernel, this dear center, sometimes hidden but always there—the Christ.

There are three especial ways in which the Bible helps us. (1) It tells us of God. (2) It tells us of ourselves. (3) It reveals the future. It tells us of God as he was progressively revealed. It is a wonderful study to mark how a personal God comes out of the mist of uncertainty—first as suggested in Genesis, where we find the crude conception of his being simply a man with great powers; then in the Hebrew history, as he revealed his might and truth in experiences and laws; and finally in the prophecies, as he became the Jehovah, the guide and the Guardian of his people. And then in the New Testament Christ revealed him as the Father, the Friend, the Healer and Comforter. If any man doubts God or wonders who and what he is let him intelligently study the Old and the New Testaments and see how plainly he who made us is revealed. Then the Bible tells us about ourselves again with graded step. At first men are children seeking pleasure, curious, afraid, discouraged. Then they come to youth, aspiring, daring, even impertinent and hating restraint. Then in maturity they recognize themselves as God's sons with great longings to be satisfied and great victories to be won.

And side by side with this the Bible gives the laws of growth, the plan by which man is shaped into perfect sonship, from the A B C of the Old Testament law, "thou shalt," and "thou shalt not," to the rich culture and art of the New Testament, where one word, love, opens all secrets and breaks down all obstacles. And, finally, having told us of God and of ourselves, the Bible opens—not widely lest we be blinded by the light, but widely enough for us to see and believe—the gates of the future. Life, once thought to be a probation, becomes an education for something higher and better. Work, once hated as the part of a slave, becomes the sharing with divinity of the power of creating and blessing. Friendships open into the fullness of joy never to be broken; and death, from the horror of a dark river, becomes the jeweled gate opening into God's full glory. Everywhere, from Genesis to Revelation, these are the messages: God, Man, Eternity. O, the rest in finding here these enigmas solved! From their united clearness life steps out before us as a brave, beautiful, strong, significant thing. We can live high and noble lives because we know God and ourselves and our destiny!

Before suggesting some ways of using the Bible, let me say—and it is timely to say it—that we must not be disturbed by the treatment which this book is receiving now at the hands of critics. There never was an age when interest in religion was as great as it is today. But with the interest has come a spirit of examination and dissection which is very bold and fearless, and a great many old ideas and opinions are being overturned. We need not be afraid. God's truth will stand. And if any dress in which that truth has appeared before us is changed, it will only result in the truth itself becoming richer and dearer and more beautiful in its new adornment. Real faith is not afraid of any examination or discovery; it wants only the truth.

And now let us think how we can study the Bible. There are two kinds of Bible study, intellectual and devotional. The former is good. It leads us, as good Bishop Hurst said years ago in my hearing, to find all we should know as educated men and women, of persons and places, dates, doings, doctrines and duties, in the most interesting book of the ages. But the devotional study is the more important.

1. First, then, we must not begin with Genesis and read through to Revelation chapter by chapter. We can gain no real benefit for our souls and lives in that way, for the chapters and verses are arbitrary divisions, and so is the present chronological arrangement of the books. But we must open our Bible to any part we will and read a few words, or many words, as we please, and then think of them and apply them to ourselves, for they are a message from God. Suppose, for instance, that I am about to read my Bible at the time of my evening devotions. I open to Isa. 55—"Ho, every one that thirsteth." Perhaps I stop just there. I have my message and I apply it: "The dear God calls me, hails me in the very on-rush of my life! Ah, the joy of his love! And not to me only, but to all he calls. And knowing our desires he appeals to them. He knows how thirsty we are!" So I think what God means as he speaks his message to me. Or I turn to the 121st Psalm in the morning and carry the thought of aspiration with me all through the day. Or I read John 15 and learn the lesson of strength through Jesus.

That is what we mean by devotional reading. It is the taking and the applying of a word from our Father. And to make this the more real it is always well before reading to hold the unopened Bible in our hands and with closed eyes ask God to show us his will in our reading: "Open thou mine eyes, that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law." And after we have found and pondered upon the message again we should utter a little petition: "Bless this thy message to me, O God, and may I live by it today," or "rest in its comfort tonight." How real that makes it all! It is just like a talk with God or a spoken message from him. Don't question the number of verses or the minutes. Sometimes your devotion must be very brief; sometimes it can be continued. Don't wonder whether you ought to read the Old Testament or the New. But just open to any book you please and read. You cannot fail of help, and help is what you need and what the Bible should mean to you.

There are, of course, certain parts of the Bible to which we instinctively turn. The Psalms and Isaiah in the Old Testament, the gospels, especially Christ's own words, and the epistles of James and John in the New Testament—these never grow too familiar. But the whole Bible is good.

I have no doubt the dear old woman who said her favorite text was, "At Michmash he hath laid up his carriages" [Isa. 10: 28], found a message of comfort even in those words. If ravens fed Elijah, may not strange words sometimes feed us?

2 It is well to know by heart certain parts of the Bible. What a great joy to be able to repeat verses or chapters at times—when we cannot sleep, when we are ill, when traveling or walking, or when talking to a sick person! It is good to take the morning's verse or verses and repeat them all through the day, letting them be the "secret strain" of the day. For as Keble so beautifully says:

There are in this loud, stunning tide
Of human care and crime,
With whom the melodies abide
Of the everlasting chime;
Who carry music in their heart
Through dusky lane and wrangling mart,
Plying their daily task with busier feet,
Because their secret souls a holy strain repeat.

In this particular I do think it is one of the dearest plans to have a Scripture calendar with a text for each day. When you tear off the old date in the morning, how often a rich, sweet message comes to meet you with the new date! And it speaks all through the day. I remember so well a day of trouble in my life when all seemed lost. Work was a failure, I was disappointed in a friend, and the way was dark, and I said: "Shall I go on?" Then I looked at my little calendar, and the text was: "Whatsoever He saith unto you, do it." What an inspiration! At once I seized my hat and ran to see a sick person who needed comfort, and a poor woman who wanted food, and a young lad who was in trouble, and when I came back the old burden had vanished. The way was clear. It was "doing the next thing" that drove away the clouds and brought the sunshine.

From an old English parsonage, down by the sea,
There came in the twilight a message to me.
Its quaint Saxon legend, deeply engraven,
Hath, as it seems to me, teaching for heaven;
And all through the hours the quiet words ring
Like a low inspiration—"Doe ye nexte thynge."

3. The Bible has help for all needs and conditions. We must accustom ourselves to go to it as a book of God's words. I need comfort? Then I go to the Bible, and wherever I turn there is the message of peace. My desire brings out new phases of old truths. I need strength, and in the words I read there rests the assurance of God's power. We can come here in sorrow, and there is consolation; in doubt, and there is wisdom; in joy, and there is sympathy. We are inclined to laugh at the habit which some old-time Christians had of opening the Bible at random, and taking the first word they read as a message. Yet I am inclined to think such use was not so far astray. For if we look for help we will not have to read very long before the help will speak. And we do need—yes, we strong, intelligent, nineteenth century men and women need the help which thus comes.

Fewer mistakes would be made by public men, fewer failures would shake the business world, fewer experiences of awful despair would startle humanity with that fatal, suicidal cry, so often heard since Shakespeare made it real—"Drown'd! Drown'd!"—if we humans used this Book of comfort and help more constantly. A dear friend, now in Paradise, had on her desk, always facing her, a sweet motto: "What would Jesus do?" If his life was the model for us all, then, surely, only as we find from the Bible story an answer to the question as often as it comes to us, can we hope to walk aright.

4. If prayer is communion with God then Bible reading must be listening to God. Now we need to listen to God all day long. Like Jesus, we must meet temptation with, "It is written." So we must have a message always near. We cannot always have our Bible, but as we walk, as we work, as we wait for a moment in the "pauses" of the heated day, we can bring the morning's reading, or any other word which God speaks to us, to meet the exigencies of the time. Ah! here is where, sometimes, we find our greatest help from the Bible. Like great pearls the words come and before them temptation flies. Like piercing rays they show the way and we walk on without doubt. Like sweet waters they make green the barrenness of duty and toil, and the very desert of struggle blossoms and is fragrant.

God give us grace and wisdom to use this dear book constantly. It can never fail to help and cheer us. And the more faithfully we read it the clearer and the dearer will its messages grow.

O, precious, holy book of God,
There are no words like thine;
The tones that angels bend to hear
Breathe through these lines divine,
And come with love's own melody
From the King's heart to mine.

HALF-WAY.

BY REV. A. H. QUINT, D. D.

Dr. A. H. Quint, D. D., the warm and confidential friend for many years of Dr. Dexter, was born March 22, 1828, graduated from Dartmouth College in 1846 and from Andover Seminary in 1852, taking a fourth year of study there. His pastorates have been at Jamaica Plain, Boston, New Bedford and Allston. He was secretary of the Massachusetts General Association from 1856 till 1881; chairman of the committee which prepared the constitution of the National Council, and he presided at the opening of its first session at Oberlin; secretary of the body from 1871 till 1883, and moderator of the same 1892–95. From 1861 to 1864 "Chaplain Quint" cared for the spiritual interests of the Second Massachusetts Infantry. From 1859 to 1876 he was an editor and a proprietor of The Congregational Quarterly. He is the ablest living interpreter of our denominational polity. His signed and unsigned contributions to our columns are to be numbered by the thousand, and have shaped powerfully the history of our societies, our churches and our readers. Dr. Quint is a consulting ecclesiastical lawyer, whose income is in exact inverse ratio to the amount of advice which he bestows upon churches and pastors throughout the length and breadth of the land.

---

I am betrayed into exposing the fact that I furnished some short communications to the Recorder and to The Congregationalist forty years ago. The word "half-way" struck my fancy, and insured the betrayal. Half the life of this newspaper is a long period, not altogether because of years, but also because of structural life. I was at that time too modest to affix my name, and quite a long article of mine, printed early in 1858, bore the appropriate signature "A. B. C." It was a controversial article upon a feature of church order. A council had decided that a certain pastorate had legally ceased, but ecclesiastically remained. If I were now to sum up the argument, I should quote the Irishman who said regarding a hole in the bank, that he had dug the bank all away and left the hole sticking up all by itself.

There were two papers in 1856, the old Recorder and the new Congregationalist. The Recorder was edited by Rev. Parsons Cooke and Rev. Samuel H. Riddel. Each of these was an able man. Parsons Cooke was an extremely powerful man, and thoroughly orthodox. On the page of The Congregationalist was modestly printed, "Edited by pastors of Congregational churches." I was not in the secret, and I did not know who these were, excepting, of course, Henry M. Dexter and Andrew L. Stone. Dr. Dexter had won my undying regard in 1852 by a kindly complimentary editorial sentence regarding a so-called oration given by me at the Porter Rhetorical anniversary in the Old South Church at Andover when our class graduated. There was a great throng present at the double anniversary, which included the Society of Inquiry also, two speakers being chosen for each society by the whole body of students. Fancy my consternation two years ago, when temporarily engaged in some homiletic work at Andover, I did not find a single student who had ever heard of the "Porter Rhet." I feel sure that the abandonment of its weekly debates, of the discussions in theology by students in turn, and of the Thursday afternoon orations has been a serious injury to Andover.

However, that kind sentence by Dr. Dexter has influenced my life in one particular. It impressed me, as I grew older, with the value of a kindly appreciative remark to an earnest young man. It also led me into a warm friendship with Dr. Dexter, beginning in 1853. In looking over the Minutes of 1855 I find the astounding fact that "Rev. Alonzo H. Quint, Rev. Parsons Cooke and Rev. Thomas T. Richmond" were made publishing committee by the General Association, which meant the commencement of my statistical work, and, the following year, the secretaryship of the General Association, which lasted for twenty-five years. For twenty-three years of that period the work which now commands $500 a year was done gratuitously.

The two papers were going on side by side. Theologically I preferred the Recorder. By personal intimacies I preferred The Congregationalist. What I preferred, however, made no difference to either of them. Good men, grand men were engaged upon each. Their lives flowed into the organic life of these two papers. The two started from different sources, but under similar laws of life and really from a common origin. The two were destined to come together when the sharpness of divergencies once needful had worn off.

I have stood at Jefferson's Rock upon the hight of Harper's Ferry in springtime. The view had the beauty of which Jefferson wrote. On the right hand came down the Shenandoah and on the left came the Potomac. The two met at the foot of the headland. In the enormous rise of the spring waters the two had different colors. So strong was the contrast that one could see the two rivers flowing side by side in the one river so far as the eye could reach. Scarcely any imaginary line divided them.

Far down below the distinction began to fade and the two intermingled and went on to the ocean in color which was neither the one nor the other.

There are different ways of editorial management. I think that Parsons Cooke remained a pastor while editing the Recorder. Pastors edited The Congregationalist. It was not considered so great a task then to edit a religious newspaper but that pastors could do their work in their leisure hours. I suppose the story is well known that when a religious editorial article was demanded of Dr. Stone he would hastily seize one of his sermons, tear out three or four leaves, quickly prefix a slight introduction, and give the papers to the boy who was waiting. Perhaps this was just as well as to write an editorial in a hurry. But it was not editorial work.

Dr. Dexter took personal charge in 1856, half way between 1816 and 1896. In due time it became an apparent necessity that he should relinquish the pastorate or the paper. I think I was moderator of the council called upon his dismissal from the pastorate. I remember that it was seriously questioned by some persons in the council whether it was proper for a minister of Christ to abandon the pastorate and become an editor. May I be permitted to record the fact that in the council which a few years ago ordained one of the present editors of this paper to the work of the ministry, and of which I was moderator, the question was again raised whether we could properly ordain a man to the work of the ministry whose main, though not exclusive, life service was to be that of an editor of a religious newspaper. The few doubting brethren were finally satisfied that it was proper to proceed.

One thing is certain. The religious newspaper has come to have that importance that, if a pastor is to be at the head of its editorial force, the substantial editing and practical management must be in the hands of executive officers. Perhaps here I may correct a misapprehension. I am not on the staff of this paper. They give me quite liberal range for communications, but I have been aching to say that I differed entirely from the Venezuela position of the editorial page. I believed in the President's message through and through. Now that I have freed my mind I feel better. In fact, not being on the staff, I can express my appreciation of the work done so faithfully and so conscientiously upon this paper.

Once I came near having an antiquarian treasure. In 1816 a Dover boy was learning the business of a druggist in Boston. The first number of the Recorder was just ready for the press. The boy's employer, a leading man and much interested, sent him to the office for a copy. The boy was told that if he would wait a few minutes he could have one. The first impression, which was taken in his sight, was delivered to him, and he took it to the master. Other copies were had, but the boy kept the first one as a curiosity. He kept it many years, and with all the early volumes of the paper. After the war of 1861 I went to the family hoping it would give me that copy. With all the early volumes that special prize had been sold for old paper and had been fed into the mill.

When I went to the war the Recorder asked me to write as a regular correspondent, and offered as an inducement to send me a copy of the paper every week. Mr. Richardson, the managing editor, whose value to this paper was scarcely less than of Dr. Dexter and whose memory I warmly cherish, made a similar proposal for The Congregationalist, except that he offered regular payment and as many copies as I wished to distribute among the soldiers. Such was the difference in the business management.

"Half-way" seems a long way back. The indispensable person who writes my every article is saying to me, "Why do you write about forty years ago? The young men don't care what happened then." Perhaps they do not, but they will let some of us remember Parsons Cooke and Henry M. Dexter, the great editors of forty years ago. And I am sure that no one will grudge me the remembrance of the forty years of a somewhat tender relation to the readers of this paper.

THE OBSERVANCE OF PASSIONTIDE IN CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES.

BY REV. LUCIUS H. THAYER, PORTSMOUTH, N. H.

In the Congregationalist Handbook for the current year is printed a list of Topics for Passiontide. These appear in response to requests which came to the office of the paper, and these particular topics are the outgrowth of a pastor's work in one of our churches. These facts are indicative of a custom that is gradually establishing itself in some churches of our order, and we may hope that the facts are also prophetic of a general observance which would increase the religious power and spirituality of the Congregational churches. In these churches the widespread observance of the Easter festival is a matter of recent years, and the unreserved celebration of the day has proved itself a grateful and helpful custom. In some quarters it is esteemed as a necessary part of the church life. We need not fear to face the recognition of Palm Sunday, and we can expect nothing but blessing to come from a wise and devout observance of Holy Week.

Surely, our denominational consciousness is strong enough to avert any supposed dangers from churchly associations. The time has come when we can well assert our catholicity by showing ourselves able and willing to appropriate and use any general customs which have in them reality, and which are capable of being made spiritually fruitful. We belong to the church universal, and by some outward observance of Holy Week we shall but indicate our inheritance in historical Christianity, and manifest our unity of spirit.

This by no means involves the acceptance by the Congregational churches of any particular customs or established forms, nor does it necessitate any uniformity of practice in the denomination itself. There is open to us as a denomination the natural and vital procedure of interpreting and using the Passiontide in accordance with our own genius, while the individual churches may each accommodate the observance to its own circumstances. The services may be exceedingly simple or rich and elaborate, but they will be adapted to local conditions. This very possibility of variety will tend to make the observance vital instead of formal.

A round of worship which has a dramatic movement and a strong representative character is for some types of mind and grades of culture religiously valuable, though it is largely foreign to the Congregational spirit. Such elements of worship, however, will appear as we make the Holy Week a time especially for study and meditation upon the incidents of the last days of our Lord. Such a use of the week is as profitable for occasional years as it is natural, and the topics for the meetings would be determined by the daily incidents as narrated in the gospel story.

The gospel material, however, is not well distributed over the days, and for this reason, as well as for other considerations, an interpretation of the truth of the week may well be made in connection with general topics, which will, indeed, on some of the days take a strong coloring from the occurrences recorded in Scripture. The considerations referred to above are these. The whole life of Jesus gathers itself up and comes to its full revelation in the last week. It is then that the principle, the power and the full devotion of his life appear. Then the truth of his relationship to God, to man and to duty becomes clear. It is then that the true humanity of Jesus is recognized and felt by us beyond a peradventure, while in the self-disclosures of his parting words and of his obedience to the Father's will we know Jesus to be the Son of God. No study of the history of the week alone, no narrow range of topics restricted to the death of Jesus considered apart from his life can adequately interpret Holy Week. We must hope to elicit and understand somewhat fully the spirit of the Master which came to full revelation in the circumstances of Passiontide. We must come anew into full sympathy with this spirit and appropriate it for ourselves, thus coming consciously into fellowship with Christ.

The services of the week will appeal most strongly to the professed followers of Jesus. In these services the devotional element should predominate and discourse should be largely quiet and meditative in its character. Yet many of the themes suggested by the week allow of the highest type of forceful and formal utterance and the sermon may rightly have a place in the services. It would not be out of place to make the week a time for direct evangelistic effort if the local circumstances should demand it, but ordinarily it is much to be preferred that the services have a character of their own and that the great themes and the natural associations of the week be trusted to make their strong appeal for personal allegiance to Christ and to render the services in the truest sense evangelistic.

A true observance of the week should then strongly influence the personal religious life, but, though the effect be intensely individual, it should also be widely social. No round of meditation and no series of sermons will be complete that does not remember the social and industrial need of the present day. No consecration can be entire that does not fit the individual for Christlike contact with the world and ready and righteous service in it.

Such a turning of the thought outward will guard against an undue self consciousness and a morbid contemplation of the sufferings of Jesus and will thus avert the danger of sentimentality which lurks in the observance of Passiontide. There is a needed suggestiveness in the words of Jesus to the women of Jerusalem: "Weep not for me." Christian worship should ever be incomparably different from that cultus of Dionysus, where the devotees bewail their god and, with symbolic action, appear to share with the divinity the deepest pains and terrors of death. For sane and reverent souls Holy Week will be not a time for sentimentality, but a time to arouse and re-enforce the truest sentiments.

It will usually be undesirable at Passiontide to inaugurate a week of prayer and conference meetings. The regular weekly meeting may often be retained, and a subject chosen which will be in harmony with the other meetings of the week, and which will also allow of the participation of all the persons present. Some churches will find a service centering about the Lord's Supper a most helpful one for Thursday evening. For Good Friday a preaching service with a sermon following a carefully arranged order of worship is greatly to be desired. The Congregationalist Service, No. 9, in whole or in part, is well adapted for such a use. Often some helpful speaker from abroad may be secured for the sermon. Special music may be arranged and a general invitation to attend extended to the community. Best of all the service on Friday may be a union service of different denominations. A number of speakers may take part in the service when desirable, and the spectacle of a large number of Christians forgetting their differences in common worship can but make impressive the great truth of the day.

As a form of service available for any church, large or small, and a form which may be used for all or for a part of the week, we venture to suggest something that has been tried with good success. It is a devotional service conducted by the pastor. A late afternoon or early evening hour is chosen. The service lasts for thirty minutes. It opens with a piano rendering of some suitable composition. This is followed by a prayer and the reading of a passage of Scripture referring to the day or pertinent to the address which follows. This address is of the character of a meditation, and it may be spoken from the chair. The singing of a few stanzas of a carefully chosen and familiar hymn closes the meeting. In connection with such a service there need be no anxiety about numbers, as the service is suitable in its form for few or many persons. The holding of such a series of meetings will prove a good way to test the willingness of the people to cooperate in the observance of Holy Week.

It is possible for music to have an important place in the worship of the week, and those churches which are able to arrange musical services will find much available material. With a good organist and a soloist a Passiontide service of organ and vocal music may be given, which will be entirely worshipful and which will attract and impress a full church. After the first half of such an organ recital the minister may enter the pulpit and lead in the responsive reading of a passage of Scripture which has been printed on the program. This may be followed by a short prayer and a moment of silent prayer. After this the organ begins the Chorale from the Passion Music of Bach, "O, sacred head now wounded," and after it has been played through the congregation rises and sings the words of the hymn. To render the service most effective the musical numbers must be selected and arranged with reference to the Scripture and prayer, and also with an idea of progress. Bach, Handel, Gounod, Guilmant, Thomas, Franck and Mailly are among the composers whose works may find a place in such a service. With a shorter musical program and the addition of a Scripture lesson such a service as above described makes a strong setting for the sermon of Good Friday.

But the number and character of the services may well be left to the pastor, who will truly interest himself in the matter and study the possibilities of his parish. There are some places doubtless where any observance of Passiontide would not be grateful or where for other reasons it is impracticable, but it is probable that many Congregational churches would broaden their religious life and deepen their spirituality by acting upon the suggestion for an observance of Holy Week.

EXCITING DAYS FOR ITALY.

Rome cannot be other than interesting, and the progress of the work of excavating and rendering accessible its many striking ruins and other relics of antiquity has added greatly to its interest during recent years. The usual spring throng of visitors imparts additional bustle to its streets and one meets English and American faces everywhere. For a city of its population it is surprisingly small. One can easily walk from its eastern to its western border, say from the Pincian hill to the Janiculan, in a half-hour, and fifteen minutes more gives time enough to traverse its greater length from north to south. This is an advantage in sight-seeing, since points of interest are so near each other, but it takes new-comers much by surprise.

One misses this year, however, the popular gayety of which so much has been written. The carnival season has just ended, but the only evidence of its occurrence was the occasional appearance of a group of masked and costumed boys and girls in the streets. The famous battles of flowers and confetti and the horse-racing in the Corso have been abandoned, and even the usual court festivities were omitted this year. The nation is almost, if not actually, on the verge of bankruptcy, the people in general are very poor and are taxed more heavily than ever, and a depression of spirits prevails which is apparent to even the most careless visitor. Parliament will meet within a week and a cabinet crisis seems inevitable. Signor Crispi, the prime minister, probably is the most unpopular man in Italy and a fierce attack is to be made upon his policy. If he retains power matters seem destined to go from bad to worse, yet no other man seems competent to manage affairs any better.

The chief present cause of distress and of his unpopularity is the evil fortune of Italy in Abyssinia. As my latest American papers seem unconscious of the importance of this war, I devote a little space to the subject. Some years ago Italy made the mistake of establishing a colony in Abyssinia. A year or two ago a disagreement arose between the colonial authorities and Menelik, the king, or negus, of the remainder of the country. They were so foolish as to treat him contemptuously and war resulted. But he is a man of considerable ability and the head of a brave and powerful people and he has reduced his European foes to extremities. He has killed many, captured many, completely checked their movements, taken one or two of their fortified posts—generously releasing their defenders under safe escort, however, and without even paroling them—and now bids fair to surround them entirely and cut off their retreat as well as their supplies.

Their campaign has been bungled at the seat of war by apparent official incompetency and at home by neglect to send out sufficient troops and supplies, and now, when it appears to be too late, the government is hurrying off more soldiers who cannot arrive until just as the rainy season sets in and prohibits offensive operations until autumn. Menelik pursues the Fabian policy and avoids a decisive battle. The Italian general professes to be eager for one but is not believed here to be in earnest. Should one take place it is not unlikely to go against him, as Menelik's army is fairly well armed, full of fight, on its own territory, and three times as large. Should it be favorable to Italy, even then it will be terribly costly and the climate will decimate the Italian survivors before autumn. Defeat will be a grave disaster for Italy and victory will afford her only a narrow and temporary escape.

Moreover, the struggle has a larger importance than appears at first, and this is why it is of special interest to Americans. It may prove the cause of grave events in Europe. France and Russia are suspected, and not without some evidence, of secretly backing Menelik, in the hope of discrediting Italy as a military power and of thus destroying the Triple Alliance, in which Germany and Austria are now united with Italy for mutual offense and defense. It is not impossible—strange although it would be—for a decisive victory by this petty African ruler to result in a change of the whole European political situation, perhaps even of the map of Europe. There is ground, therefore, for the anxiety of the Italians, and their distrust of Crispi, who seems to suppress much of the news from Abyssinia and certainly has prohibited all public meetings for criticism of the government's policy, together with their restlessness because of the severe financial cost of the war have created an undercurrent of indignation so deep and general that some do not hesitate to prophesy not merely the downfall of Crispi but even the overthrow of the monarchy, in spite of the well-merited personal popularity of the royal family. No war ever was more unpopular than this Abyssinian war is in Italy.

Meanwhile American foreigners congratulate themselves more heartily than ever that they belong to a country which has avoided European political complications, has not been beguiled into the planting of colonies, and is not burdened with a large standing army. As we cannot help our Italian friends, except by our sympathy, we have been enjoying the lovely weather, and have surfeited ourselves with sight-seeing. But at this season this part of Italy is not strikingly beautiful, but as brown, except in sheltered spots, as New England and is hardly wooded at all. Yet the views of the distant Alban and Sabine mountains are fine, and although Rome no longer is the mistress of the world, she certainly is unsurpassed in her peculiar kind of attractions.

Feb. 26. M. D.

A genuine revival means a trimming of personal lamps.—Theodore L. Cuyler.

The Home

A TOUCH OF NATURE.

When first the crocus thrusts its point of gold
Up through the still snow-drifted garden-mold,
And folded green things in dim woods unclose
Their crinkled spears, a sudden tremor goes
Into my veins and makes me kith and kin
To every wild-born thing that thrills and blows.
Sitting beside this crumbling sea-coal fire,
Here in the city's ceaseless roar and din,
Far from the brambly paths I used to know,
Far from the rustling brooks that slip and shine
Where the Neponset alders take their glow,
I share the tremulous sense of bud and briar
And inarticulate ardors of the vine.

—T. B. Aldrich.

The series of articles which we begin this week on The Science of Food will have no interest for women who are wedded to the traditions of their grandmothers in respect to methods of cookery. But earnest, intelligent mothers, who cannot understand why their children have no physical stamina when an abundance of good food is provided for them, will welcome a scientific treatment of the subject by one who is a recognized authority in all such matters. The general standpoint of the writer corresponds with that taken by Mrs. Helen Campbell and others in the March Review of Reviews, and the fact that a leading magazine devotes so much space to an article on Household Economics is indicative of how important the topic seems to educated men and women. No doubt a reform in cooking means a mitigation of disease, intemperance and sin, and, therefore, this series of articles will appeal to philanthropists no less than to housekeepers.

Busy women often fear to lose their hold on friends because they have not leisure to meet the small obligations of friendship. It is true that we ignore too often the need of steady purpose to show the one for whom we have a sincere regard that she is not forgotten. Particularly in the matter of correspondence is steady loyalty necessary, but this does not require many sheets of paper and hours of precious time. A few lines sent frequently might contain the reassuring message. In her pleasant little book Charm and Courtesy in Letter Writing the author strongly emphasizes the mission of a friendly letter to express remembrance and love, to give not instruction, but comfort and joy. "It is sympathy, kind feeling, affection, your friend hungers and thirsts for," she says truly, and George Eliot had the same conception of the aim of a letter when she wrote to a friend, "What I want my letters to tell you is that I love you truly, gratefully, unchangeably."

THE SCIENCE OF FOOD.

I. EVOLUTION OF COOKERY.

BY M. V. SHALER.

Cooking food is a development of civilization, but we must hark back to primitive man for its origin. He doubtless discovered by accident the greater palatableness of flesh when submitted to the influences of heat. He had no means of knowing whether the food so treated would possess any greater value as a builder of "brawn and muscle." Instinct, the palate and accident were his only guides. Whether he cooked on the coals or under, or on a spit or in a stew pot, his methods in point of healthfulness, nutrition and economy have not been improved upon by modern cookery.

"The whole science of cooking is coming back at last to something like that one simple process—the slow boiling in a clay pot—excepting where nutritious and economical diet is not the thing demanded. People in this age require composite cookery, and among certain classes the demands of a cloyed sense and a satiated appetite have created most elaborate and useless dishes," says Dr. Mary Green in her interesting history, Food Products of the World.

The ancestral bean pot, dear to the New England heart, is almost identical with those found in mummy pits of Peru. Mound builders of Ohio, cliff dwellers of Colorado, three thousand years ago, used similar vessels, and wherever relics of an ancient race are unearthed the rough clay pot has been commonly found. To the archæologist the remains of cooking utensils serve as valuable data upon which he builds his theory of the plane of civilization occupied by the race of people using them.

Elaboration of food to an unhealthful degree is peculiar to civilization. Much relating to cooking is a matter of education rather than physiological necessity. With the autocratic chef it is a question of palate, which demands a novelty because of satiety. He commands his princely price and guards the secret of some concoction which it requires a doctor to rectify when eaten. Our methods are almost wholly empirical, for "science has stopped outside the kitchen door."

The subject of cooking, the establishment of cooking classes, the publication of recipes, reference to various nutritious foods by the paragrapher, and other methods of bringing before the people the study of diet, has attracted wide attention, and is all very well so far as it goes, but it is one-sided. It mainly increases knowledge as to variety by giving directions for combining and mixing materials, and thus promoting a commercial value to that skill. It does not go to the root of the subject and correct the fact that we eat too fast, too much at a time, do not take the proper proportion of nutrients, or that our cooking is bad. It praises the efforts of many teachers who charge large fees for showing women how to "fry cream," "cook chicken livers with rum sauce" and "sweet breads" (at a dollar a pound) and the like, all of which a child could do with a cook-book.

In the minds of most people there is a vague and indefinite conception of what is a proper diet, and the terms "food values," "nutrients," "calorics," "potential energy," and the rest are meaningless. Fortunately for us, by a process of natural selection, man has chosen certain kinds and formed combinations of food which give substantially correct proportions of nutrients called nitrogen (protein), starch and fat, which are necessary to the proper nourishment and development of the body. But he has also, through ignorance of the chemistry of food, destroyed by bad cooking a considerable amount of these nutrients which his system required. Cooking does not add to nutritive qualities. In fact, it frequently destroys or removes a considerable portion of nutrition. Our generosity and extravagance are largely to blame for this. In countries where fuel is scarce there is found the best cooked food. The Frenchman and the Italian stand cool and composed over a handful of live coals, watching their material grow appetizing, digestible and nutritious. We Americans lavishly feed the great coal range, which answers back in scorching heat and "renders unfit for food everything put upon it."

Another phase of our unintelligent methods is our haphazard supply which furnishes Bridget an abundance to overflow ash cans, clog pipes, choke cesspools, draw vermin and offer culture medium for the ubiquitous microbe. The lack of robustness afflicting many people proves to investigators the want of proper proportions of nutrients to build up the overwrought body which must endure somehow the stress and strain of American life and climate. Workers in philanthropy recognize the craving for stimulants as due to this fact. Fifty years ago nothing was known of the constituent parts of food. Today investigation is proving how different ingredients serve their purpose, how much of each is needed to supply the demand of different ages, sex and occupation and how best to adjust the diet to the wants of the user, to quite a definite degree. These points will be treated in subsequent articles.

A "HEARTY" LUNCH.

BY MRS. SARA B. HOWLAND, GUADALAJARA, MEXICO.

It was a sad day in the little home of the Blossoms. Helen Parker was going away from Lakeville, never to return in the dear old way. "I will come again if I live," she had promised the little ones, who were inconsolable at the thought of losing Auntie Helen, their friend and playmate; but the next moment her own eyes filled with tears, and she stretched out her hand impulsively to Mrs. Blossom. There are long days between goings and comings again, even for those who are not children.

There had been many happy hours since the day when the "yellow medicine" had wrought its cure, and now, whenever a night came when there were no examination papers to correct or evening meeting to attend, it found Helen in the nursery with Mrs. Blossom, putting the children to bed. Then, when all was quiet, the stories told and the prayers said, the two friends would curl down together in the billowy depths of an old-fashioned lounge and have a good talk. Sometimes it would be of ways and means, of plans for concocting various articles of feminine apparel, or of the strong points of Mrs. Ward's story. Then, sometimes, would come one of Helen's tired nights, when her nerves were quivering with the long strain of the schoolroom, and she only cared to sit in silence, until the very quietness rested her and she felt like talking over the day's annoyances. Friends must understand each other well before they can enjoy being silent together.

But these are only the outside thoughts of woman's life, and best of all were the nights when there were talks about the deep things, when the "obstinate questionings and blank misgivings" of one would find their answers in the calm faith of the other, as each had wrought out different problems from the different experiences of her life—times when the "fine fret of daily care" would seem insignificant in the thought of eternal truths. No wonder that the moments would fly until the opening of the study door would announce that Mr

Blossom had finished his evening's study and was coming up to find the little mother. Often Helen would stay for the short, earnest prayer with which he closed the day, and would then run across the back yards to her boarding place, thankful that she could share in the sweetness and rest of a real home.

The good times had come to an end in an unexpected way. It was three months ago when Helen, with a white, strained face, came in, clasping a crumpled yellow envelope in her hand. Mrs. Blossom took it from her, read it silently, passed it to her husband, and gently drawing her into her own room she shut the door. The dear mother, known to them all through Helen's loving pictures and the letters constantly shared with her friend, had died suddenly, and there could not even be the comfort of a last word.

Ah, what secrets of the strange mystery of sorrow did the two friends learn in the hours that followed! Grief must have its way for a while, though the sufferer be the saintliest of Christians, and next to the bitterest pang is that of the friend who is so helpless to give any real comfort. But the great heart of God is infinite in compassion, and human tenderness does help more than we know; so, by and by, Helen could meet the kind looks of the village people with a brave smile, and went back again to her duty, though she said wearily one night to Mrs. Blossom, who always went down to the gate to meet her now, "It seems as though the heart had gone out of everything."

The lonely home in California needed her, and she had only waited to close the term, expecting to start on her journey the second week in June. It was hard to go, and, as the children came the last day to throw their arms around her neck and give their good-by tokens she wondered how she could ever have felt impatient with their small sins.

Mrs. Blossom, meanwhile, was spending the last afternoon in flying busily about the kitchen, putting her latest idea into execution. Helen would have many days of lunching at railroad stations, for she could not afford to take all her meals in the dining car. She would get her dinners there and pick up the rest as best she could, so Mrs. Blossom was planning to give her the daintiest possible lunch that would last her for a few days and put off the "snatched-up" meals until the last, when she would be too near home to mind. She knew too well of the sinking of heart that comes when the good-bys have been said and the train shoots away, bearing one into a new life. Going towards home or from it there is always somebody left behind, and was there ever a good-by that was wholly joyous? A pleasant surprise in the way of an unexpected message would turn the current of thought, and so Mrs. Blossom worked all the afternoon experimenting. At dusk she carried a large tray of successes to the seclusion of the cellar, while all failures, owing to the tendency of pies to ooze a sticky liquid in the wrong place, of tarts to project an airy bubble in the center and of cakes to rise in a comical one sided manner, were laid aside to be disposed of in the convenient stomachs of the little Blossoms.

Early the next morning the whole family assembled to watch the packing, the babies being placed in high chairs at a respectful distance lest their small fingers should be tempted in an evil moment to poke the frosting or to pick off the artistic crinkles of the tarts. She had selected a large white pasteboard box and had lined it again with white printing paper. Near by were squares of white paraffine paper, as many of tissue and a piece of narrow white ribbon, bought for a rosette for baby's bonnet but gladly sacrificed on the altar of friendship. There were thin sandwiches of tongue and ham, cut with a cooky cutter in the shape of hearts, laid in pairs and rolled first in the waxed paper and then in the tissue and tied with dainty bows of the ribbon. These were packed carefully in even layers, and on top of the pile was a heart-shaped card of Bristol board on which was written:

While sunshine reminds you,
So brave and so clear,
Whatever your task is,
Put heart in it, dear.

Then came a layer of paper and a stratum of delicious heart-shaped cookies, tied in threes, and above them little cakes, plain and fruit, all heart-shaped, and frosted in chocolate and white to make a pleasing variety. The crullers had given Mrs. Blossom great anguish of spirit. Being cut with the utmost care they persisted in rising to such an extent as to utterly destroy their chaste shape, and after several trials she decided that there was no help for it, "It was their nature to." So she took some pieces of clean broom corn and skewered them together, two and two, after the manner of Cupid's hearts, and on the oddly-shaped bundle she pinned another card with this effusion:

Here are hearts for you, my dear,
But they'll make you laugh, I fear.
They are not the shape designed,
As you'll very quickly find.
They were flat as they could be,
Cut with careful nicety,
And I cannot understand
What possessed them to expand,
But they never ceased to rise
Till they're twice their normal size.

You see what they typify,
Don't you, dear, as well as I?

How to pack the tarts was a serious question, but the currant jelly was very firm and the little heart-shaped shells were so distracting that they could not be left out. They were wrapped like the other things, only each by itself, and they did not wet the paper—at least before the box started on its journey! The little ones of mince were made with a top crust and all sticky ones were discarded. This was the motto of the tart layer:

Dear Queen of Hearts,
Please take these tarts
And eat them for my sake.
They're filled with spice
And all that's nice,
As good as I can make.

But still I sigh,
And wonder why
They do not seem complete.
Alas, 'tis true,
Compared with you
There's nothing very sweet!

There was still room for a heart-shaped box that had once held wedding cake, and this was filled with candy of the desired shape, and then four fringed napkins, made of the best parts of an old damask table cloth that had reached the limit of its usefulness as a whole, were carefully tucked over all. These would be useful on the journey and quite appropriate to "get lost," as lunch napkins have a way of doing. A few tightly closed white rosebuds, some sweet-scented geranium leaves and bits of smilax were laid on the very top and another card, saying:

Grace before Meat.
Whatsoever ye do, do it heartily, as unto the Lord.

With a last admiring look from the little ones the cover was put on, the box wrapped and tied with white, with some fresh roses tucked under the ribbon, and everybody said that it looked nice enough for a "truly bride." Well, the train came, as it always does, and the good-bys were said, as they always have to be, in spite of trembling lips and tearful eyes. The real good-by went in Helen's pocket, in a letter "To Be Opened Tomorrow," but you will never know what it said.

There came back a letter, as fast as the mail could bring it, and you may peep at a bit of that over Mrs. Blossom's shoulder: "I cried over your lunch, Rose darling, and then I laughed and cried again. It was the daintiest bit of packing I ever saw, and I read your love for me in every detail. And let me tell you that I am following the good counsel that you so delicately tucked into the box, and am trying to do every hard duty "heartily, as unto the Lord"; and so dear, your "hearty" lunch may prove to be one of the most helpful gifts of all my lifetime."

AN ORIGINAL SCIENTIFIC ENTERTAINMENT.

The cards of invitation, bearing the name and address of the hostess, were worded thus:

AN EXHIBITION OF X RAISE.
PROMPTLY AT EIGHT O'CLOCK.
ADMISSION TEN CENTS.

The entertainment in this instance was originated and carried out for the benefit of a young ladies' missionary society, therefore the admission fee—and the Raise. Eight o'clock found an expectant party of about seventy persons seated in a large parlor, at one end of which was placed a camera. Two screens were so arranged as to cut off a small space at one end of the room, while in the opening between the screens stood a small table covered with a dark spread which reached to the floor on the side toward the audience. Resting upon the table and reaching to the top of the screens was a large sheet of black cardboard (cloth would do as well), and near the top was cut a hole just large enough to admit the face of a "bull's eye" lantern, not as yet lighted, however.

A song and recitation were given by way of prelude, and then the hostess informed her guests that she had been fortunate in securing the services of one of Doctor Röntgen's most expert assistants to entertain them during the evening, and introduced the operator, a young man in evening dress, known to most of the company who, being good at impersonation, started off with quite a professional air.

After reading a few short paragraphs regarding the operation of the much talked of X rays and their wonderful power, he announced that he proposed making a few experiments during the evening and would begin by asking Mr. B. if he would kindly rise and remain standing a moment that he might direct the rays upon his heart. The operator then stepped behind the screens, lighted the bull's-eye, started up a small battery, the murmur of which added greatly to the general effect, especially as the room had been partially darkened, and directed the "rays" towards Mr. B.

He then went to the camera, which stood on a tripod reaching just above the screen where all could see, and manipulating the plate for two or three seconds handed it to a lady attendant to "develop," and turned his attention to a new victim. Thus hurriedly, and in a very businesslike manner, he went on calling upon one and another, and when he had gone about half through with the prepared list the lights were turned on and the pictures which had been "developed" were brought in, and after some bright remarks by the operator in regard to the revelations he had made were handed around for inspection.

An artist had been let into the secret and had prepared eighteen or twenty pen pictures upon large sheets of brown paper, representing upon a hazy background various heads, hearts, brains and hands which were "adapted" to many of the guests, exposing some evident characteristic or some fad or hobby which in certain cases was most ludicrous.

For instance, a scientist had a picture of a brain filled with wheels of all sorts standing out upon the hazy background of his head; the heart of an affable lady's man contained heads of numerous girls; a young professor of biology had his brain filled with crawfish and various living things wonderful to behold; a dressy young lady had her head full of fashion designs, sleeves, capes, collars, etc. A woman famed for her canvassing propensities for missionary objects had a piece of money revealed imbedded in the skeleton of her hand, and, as the entertainment was for the benefit of the missionary society, she was advised to have it extracted. A young lady singer was found to have a nickel lodged in her throat, and thus the fun went on amid shouts of laughter, until the entertainment closed with repeated declarations from the guests that they had spent a delightful as well as an entirely original evening, and the "raise" was a good one for the missionary society. K. E. B.

A NOVEL WAY OF RAISING CHARITABLE FUNDS.

BY ALICE CHAPMAN ATWOOD.

In one of the smaller cities near Boston a novel expedient has been employed among some of the women to raise money for charitable purposes. Early last fall, after the successful issue of a Woman's Edition, one of the leading daily papers offered to give a certain per cent. of the proceeds if a number of women would be responsible daily for one column of literary matter and twe of advertisements. The sum thus raised was to go to such local charities as the editors of the columns should agree upon, and the plan, being enthusiastically adopted, went into practical effect in October.

As regards the management, different women are responsible for the literary and advertising departments, and the former, known as the Woman's Column, is carried on in the following way. Each editor is responsible for the column on a fixed day in each month, the same person always keeping the same date. As for the contents of the column it varies with the individuality of the editor, whose name is at its head. Sometimes, in fact often, it starts with an editorial followed by one or two short articles and a poem. Sometimes these are original, often clippings from other papers. The editorials are usually reflections on the season, current events, musical topics and the like; the shorter articles are often on literary matters, books and reading, and sometimes there are puzzles and anagrams. Almost every edition contains a poem, for the column never seems complete without at least one such effusion.

Sometimes queer mistakes arise. One day three articles were run together and it was hard to tell just where the College Club reception left off and the Nonsense Rime in Child Literature began, while a whole anagram letter had to be left out because an obdurate printer absolutely refused to put the necessary words in italics. Such, however, is the usual fate of literary aspirants, and the only sad part of it all is the feeling that if you fail to do your part it's charity, not yourself, that suffers. Thus far, though, there has been little of failure. The proper manipulation of 1,200 words once a month is, after all, little enough to do for charity, and the editors have already had the satisfaction of distributing about $200 for different charitable objects.

The advertising department has been rather harder to manage as most of the possible advertisers have already patronized the paper, but still there has been fairly good success even here. The only real objection to the plan is that the literary matter is called a Woman's Column. Now wherein a woman's column differs from a man's, provided they are both interesting, it is hard to tell. We must trust to time and common sense to eliminate this distinction from the public mind, but meanwhile we take advantage of the temporary delusion for "sweet charity's sake."

PUSSY WILLOW.

The brook is brimmed with melting snow,
The maple sap is running,
And on the highest elm a crow
His coal-black wings is sunning.
A close, green bud, the mayflower lies
Upon its mossy pillow;
And sweet and low the south wind blows,
And through the brown fields calling goes,
"Come, Pussy! Pussy Willow!
Within your close, brown wrapper stir;
Come out and show your silver fur;
Come, Pussy! Pussy Willow!"

Soon red will bud the maple trees,
The bluebirds will be singing,
And yellow tassels in the breeze
Be from the poplars swinging;
And rosy will the mayflower lie
Upon its mossy pillow;
"But you must come the first of all—Come, Pussy!" is the south wind's call—
"Come, Pussy! Pussy Willow!
A fairy gift to children dear,
The downy firstling of the year—
Come, Pussy! Pussy Willow!"

—Selected.

We always feel specially complimented when we discover that gentlemen read the Home Department. We have made a strenuous effort to save it from degenerating into a "woman's corner," for we maintain that the home and the family concern the father quite as much as the mother. And we are honestly grateful to our masculine readers for even adverse criticism, accepting it as proof of their desire to hold us to our own ideal of excellence. Therefore we accept the good-natured rebuke of the gentleman who picks a flaw in one rule of etiquette recently published in this department, which said that in helping a guest to a dish the second time the hostess should avoid using the word "again," and thus ignore the fact of having been served once. This rule, we frankly admit, is finical, although found in books on etiquette which by common consent are admitted to be standard. But in the last analysis all codes of courtesy should have a basis of common sense, and we thank our friend for pointing out, in a communication too long to print, its inherent weakness. Now let other gentlemen be bold to speak on topics treated in the Home!

He who never looks up to a living God, to a heavenly presence, loses the power of perceiving that presence, and the universe slowly turns into a dead machine, clashing and grinding on without purpose or end.—J. F. Clarke.

Closet and Altar

If thou canst for a while cease from thine own speaking and willing thou shalt hear unspeakable words from God.

It is our privilege to take refuge where the world is wont to fear. What perfect love casts out our growing love already robs of terror. We have trusted in God's mercy, let us also trust his justice, who stands committed in Christ to our salvation. We have claimed our Lord's compassion, we may also remember that it would be inconsistent with his self respect to allow the least of those who trust him to go down to death. The consuming fire itself becomes our refuge when we consider that it is not the will of our Father in heaven that "one of these little ones should perish."

As in private prayer our thoughts are turned to that God who seeth in secret, so in public worship we should seek to realize a rather more definite conception of the presence of the incarnate God. The human presence visibly around us in the church is the pledge, the token, the sacrament of his. He is among them in all the sympathies of his humanity, in all the glories of his divinity, in all the precious virtues of his mediatorial work. And it will be found useful before the commencement of the service, and at any of the necessary breaks which occur in the course of it, to occupy the mind with the thought of his presence. The apprehension of it will impart to public worship a mingled sweetness and solemnity.—E. M. Goulburn.

I look to thee in every need and never look in vain;
I feel thy strong and tender love and all is well again;
The thought of thee is mightier far
Than sin and pain and sorrow are.

Thy calmness bends serene above my restlessness to still;
Around me flows thy quickening life to nerve my faltering will;
Thy presence fills my solitude;
Thy providence turns all to good.

Lord Jesus, giver of all good gifts, grant us thy peace; not as the world giveth dost thou give, for there is no begrudging in thy love and no withdrawment of thy grace. Help us to empty ourselves of all vanity, worldliness and self-love, and enable us to throw open our whole heart to receive the Father, Son and Holy Ghost; thus create heaven in our souls. While we are upon earth give us visions celestial, confidences that cannot be shaken, sure tokens of thy presence and nearness and love. Saviour of the world, wounded and pierced, crowned with thorns, remember us in thy kingdom; by thy holy blood purge us from sin; by thy sacred agony take away our sorrow; by thy mysterious propitiation grant us eternal cleansing from all corruption. Work in us the mighty miracle of holiness that, because of a mind free from all the dominion of the flesh, we may see the invisible kingdom and feel how near is the throne of the living God. The Lord bear us in these things and grant unto us by means of his providence and spiritual instruction and silent monition that we may come to be perfect in Christ Jesus. Amen.

Mothers in Council.

A KINDERGARTEN FOR MOTHERS.

II.

Our mother helper began her second talk by saying that Froebel felt that in nature and her laws we have the answer to all questions concerning education. In accordance with natural law, the process of education is going on from all time to all time. In nature all things hold together to one purpose, and if in nature, so in man. In this connection it was suggested that children should be taught that nothing can be wasted; that the hand of man cannot make nature disconnected. They should be given many examples of things which, seemingly valueless, are made use of in nature's economy. The sphere, Froebel thought, would not have been placed so commonly among us in nature if it had not its great truth to teach—development from the center equally to all points. All things exist because of the divine that is in them. All things proceed from God, and God is the limit of all.

The first principle of education should be noninterference. To observe this principle is simply to treat a child with the same wisdom as that we use in training a plant. We put the very best elements we can secure about the plant and then are ourselves passive, allowing the plant to take to itself what it needs. We do not force its unfolding or interfere unless it is interfering with itself, when we interfere to rescue it. The mother should live with the child, as well as for the child.

The will of the child is at the root of his whole development. It is behind the self-activity and determines its direction. Make the child will the best. Make it a pleasure as well as an inner necessity. He should have about him such influences as shall invite his will to a higher plane each day. Do not invite him by generalities. Generalities do not appeal to a child. He must have a definite conception of something better than himself. Teach him he can do what he wills, and little by little show him how to have his will strong for good. (To make a play conception realistic a child will suffer real privation.) Study into times when his will is most receptive to good and then help him to form his own ideals. Present things for his guidance in forming it by asking him what he thinks of a boy who does so and so; what he would do in certain circumstances. Directions are so often given to a child as to a mature mind. Invite him, unconsciously, to form his ideal and then draw him sympathetically to his conception and not to yours.

This brought a practical question from

The Minister's Wife: "Is it well to bring up to a child, as a model, some other child of his acquaintance?"

The Mother Helper: "No, it is usually far from wise. It is, you see, interposing between the child and his own ideal a third person, which destroys the feeling of unity which we should be very careful to preserve. The child suggested by you as a model may give to your child's mind quite another ideal, than that which is presented to yours."

The Mother of Five: "But I know it is very helpful sometimes. For instance, my little boy, when walking with me the other day, was careful to take the outside of the walk, saying as he did it, 'All gentlemen do so—Charlie says so.' And I, seizing this chance, said, 'And have you noticed how Charlie always lifts his cap to the people who speak to him?' Was that wrong?"

The Mother Helper: "O, no indeed. Do you not see that you were only sympathizing with your child's ideal and not presenting his friend as your model?"

A Kindergarten Teacher: "I am troubled in my school by a bright little boy who persists in talking to himself. Can you suggest any way of helping him?"

The Mother Helper: "If the child can be made to feel that his love for his teacher can be shown by trying to cure this habit, he will succeed. His will must be made so desirous of showing his love that he can conquer himself. Ask him, after telling him how happy it will make you, to try hard not to say one word for a half-hour or so, or while you are talking, or while your guest stays. Then help him to do it for a little longer time on the next day, and when he sees he can do it the success is secured."

A New Mother: "What can one do to help a little baby when a look of disobedience is in its eyes?"

The Mother Helper: "There is not much that one can do, I think. I should try quietly holding the little hands firmly, remembering that a short time to you is a long time to a baby, and I think that the help of the mother may show even a very young child that it can control itself."

A Mother of Daughters: "How can I help my little girls to be more orderly? I have tried for years with but little apparent success?"

The Mother Helper: "If the child is too young to understand the womanliness of it, or the value of order in cases of emergency, I should try attracting her attention to the orderliness of things in nature—to the bees and the neatness of their work, to the birds and even the flowers and their symmetry, until she is perfectly imbued with the spirit of order. Then give her, to begin with, one small drawer or box to keep in exquisite order and lead on to greater things."

A Little Mother: "Should one when a distinct gain is made in such a case praise the child warmly for success."

The Mother Helper: "I think not. Sympathize with the child, but do not allow her to think that she should be praised unduly for what she ought to do as well, at least, as bees and flowers. If the child sees the mother happy, the best praise is received in that way."

MRS. H. W. BOYNTON.

FOR MOTHERS.

The pastor's wife who inquired [Feb. 20] for a list of books suitable for private use in the Wives' and Mothers' Scientific Club will find the home leaflets (published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, Chicago), full of practical hints along this line. A monthly paper called The New Crusade, published by the same house and edited by Dr. Mary Wood Allen, will also be found useful.

H. W. C.

DRUGGED CANDIES.

The recent warning in this department against the demoralizing pictures which accompany cigar advertisements should be followed by another against candies that are drugged with alcohol. The sale of such stuff is far more extensive than parents realize and they cannot watch too carefully the confectionery that the children buy on their way to and from school. In this, as in so many matters of child training, eternal vigilance is the price of safety.

KEEP THE HOME PURE.

In a trenchant article in the North American Review Mrs. M. A. Livermore says:

It is the most serious and widespread evil of our time, the drunkenness of husbands, alike in high life and low life, and it portends the direst consequences to posterity. The woman who dares marry a libertine, or a drunkard, with the hope of reforming him or the expectation of finding happiness with him, ought to have a chance in a lunatic asylum or a home for imbeciles.

Before all forms of government, all types of civilization, all advance in education, the relations of the husband and wife make the everlasting granite on which the whole world rests. Just so fast and just so far as these relations are what they ought to be, and what God intends they shall be, just so fast and just so far will society be uplifted—no faster, no farther. "How shall we purify public life?" is the great question of the hour. We can purify public life no faster than we purify the private life in the home, for the public life is only the public expression of the private life of a people. The advance of a nation comes only through the improvement of the homes of a nation. As the aggregate of these may be, so will the nation be. For it is in the home, conducted by the harmonious and right-minded husband and wife, that the real harmonizing and civilizing are carried forward.

The scientific aspect of food must be united in the bonds of holy matrimony with a practical knowledge of the cook's art before a man can discourse learnedly of food.—Fothergill.

Cleveland's
Baking Powder,

manufactured originally by the Cleveland Brothers, Albany, N. Y., now by the Cleveland Baking Powder Co., New York, has been used by American housewives for twenty-five years, and those who have used it longest praise it most.

It is perfectly pure and wholesome.

Its composition is stated on every can.

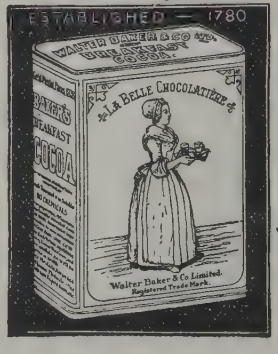
It is always uniform and reliable.

It does the most work and the best work.

It is the strongest of all pure cream of tartar powders, as shown by the U. S. and Canadian Govt. Reports.

All the leading teachers of cookery and writers on domestic science use and recommend it.

·Absolutely Pure-Delicious-Nutritious·



The Breakfast Cocoa
MADE BY
WALTER BAKER & CO. LIMITED
DORCHESTER, MASS.

COSTS LESS THAN ONE CENT A CUP.
NO CHEMICALS.
ALWAYS ASK YOUR GROCER FOR
WALTER BAKER & CO'S. BREAKFAST COCOA
MADE AT DORCHESTER, MASS. IT BEARS
THEIR TRADE MARK LA BELLE CHOCOLATIÈRE ON EVERY CAN.
·AVOID IMITATIONS·

The Conversation Corner.

You know what this cut means—that under its shelter all sorts of members, old and young, honorary and "active," can come in and have a chance to say their say. For instance, here are three letters about the winter supplies of the squirrels, etc. The first defines the word "rough," used in the discussion (Corner, Dec. 5).

AFTON, IO.

Mr. Martin: In the West, where the groves encroach on the prairie, the avant garde is always hazel. Severe frosts lift their roots above the general level of the ground. The leaves and dead twigs, falling among the roots decay and presently become soil, so that if you were to mow off the hazel itself the surface of the ground would be very lumpy. For this reason, hazel thickets are often spoken of as "hazel-roughs," a compound word that exactly expresses their appearance. These roughs are favorite places for birds, chewinks in summer and snowbirds in winter, also for chipmunks and mice—the white-footed mouse, the kangaroo mouse (Zapus Hudsonius) and, occasionally, meadow mice. I think the kangaroo mouse can jump farther than any animal of its size in the world. These little creatures are all good winter providers. E. B. H.

Yes, the ant "provides her meat in the summer," and Solomon tells the sluggard to visit her and observe her way of doing it—but not, I am sure, to steal what she had provided for winter. I see that a lady and a boy agree with me in this.

WEST FITCHBURG, MASS.

Dear Mr. Martin: We are not ready to let it go that it is right to take away the winter store of the squirrels and mice. I remember when I was a little girl going chestnuting and finding a generous hoard of chestnuts carefully stowed away under the roots of a tree. Not feeling sure of my companion's treatment of such a case, I covered them a little more securely with leaves and led her away in another direction, lest she should find them and steal them. Isn't that the right word to use? I should do the same thing today. In the long, happy walks which my little boy and I used to take so often, but which can never again be, we used to carry wheat and corn and scatter it where we saw the birds and squirrels and leave little heaps of it on flat rocks in the woods and by the roadside for them to find. That was pleasure! J. E. C.

This little boy, who was a favorite member of our Corner, closed his life, as you remember, suddenly and sadly on the Fourth of July last. But will not the little seeds of kindness which he sowed—in imitation of the Father in heaven who feedeth the birds—bear fruit of joy for him as he walks in the "Eden above"? "There are pleasures for evermore!"

WORCESTER, N. Y.

Dear Mr. Martin: . . . My papa cut down a hollow tree and in a hollow limb were about four quarts of beech nuts, carried there by deer mice. The shells were all taken off. I felt very sorry for the poor mice, but it was before the snow came and they could gather more. I do not think it right to take them away from them or from squirrels. I am very much interested in the Corner. They are read to me every week. HERBERT P.

And now an "old Cornerer in Spain" writes of larger animals treated with luxurious care by their owners, for which, however, they regularly and promptly pay!

I wonder if any of your farmer boys ever saw four cows and two calves in an elegant parlor, on a fashionable street in a city of 150,000 people? But here, where there is a host of drinking saloons crowded nearly all day, there is close by me a milk saloon or lecheria. It is in the same block as our hotel. The room is ornamented with pictures and mirrors on the walls, rich Moorish dadoes in tiles, ceilings painted in delicate colors, with marble tables, cut glasses, etc. In one end the cows are waiting to be milked (rooming here over night), in the other the guests are seated and served with the warm beverage. The animals are nice and clean—a contrast to the horde of beggars we everywhere meet.

Another old Cornerer in "York State" sends a reminiscence of his boyhood on a Penobscot River raft:

These rafts were built of sawed lumber and were twenty feet wide, fifty to sixty feet long, and three feet thick, usually carrying also a "deck load" of laths. I took passage on one of these rafts and all went well till we came to a large dam across the river at Orono. It was about twenty feet high, and the water poured over it in torrents. As we got near the dam and I saw where we must go, I was frightened. I looked towards the shore, but it was too far to jump. The big raft plunged over the dam, and I thought it was my last journey. But the raft came out on the smooth water below as graceful as a duck. We went over three more dams before we got to the city [Bangor?], but they were passed with pleasure after seeing how well the big raft conducted itself at the first. W. R. C.

That will interest boys in Maine who know all about it, and boys elsewhere who know nothing about it. It interests me by recalling my early experience in British North America, shooting river rapids on loads of wood—not always as gracefully as a duck. But boys would have had rough times rafting on Maine rivers during the freshets of the last week!

The following has been waiting its turn a long time in the "old folks'" package:

WORCESTER, MASS.

Dear Mr. Martin: Can you tell me why the name of Moses Gill is always omitted from the list of governors of Massachusetts? If I am not mistaken he was lieutenant governor in 1800 and re-elected in 1801, but, the governor dying, he succeeded to the office of governor. The vice-presidents of the United States who have sustained the same relation to the presidency are always included in the list. I have a table Governor Gill brought from England, which I prize very highly. The top is four and one-half feet square, in three leaves of solid San Domingo mahogany, an inch thick, with molded edge, standing upon old-style bird legs, with claw feet, each foot clasping a ball. R. N. M.

Moses Gill was elected lieutenant governor in 1794 (with Samuel Adams as governor), and continued as such until June 7, 1799, when, by the death of Governor Increase Sumner, he became acting governor. Mr. Gill died himself May 20, 1800, and there was then neither governor nor lieutenant governor until Governor Caleb Strong took his seat ten days later. (Before 1832 the political year began on the last Wednesday of May, when the new governor was inaugurated. That was called "General Election," or, commonly, "Election," and was a great day in Boston—some of your parents who did not live in Boston may remember eating "election cake"!) The "Civil Government Class" will find that the Constitution provides that the lieutenant governor, in case of a vacancy, "shall perform all the duties of the governor," and this language Lieut.-Governor Wolcott has just now quoted, as I write, in his proclamation announcing the death of Governor Greenhalge. But is he really governor?

I hope there is room now to say that I have just received the card of a very young candidate for membership and have promised her a certificate on the condition that she will write to the Corner on or before her first birthday, which will be Feb. 29, 1904. Do you understand it?

Mr. Martin

CORNER SCRAP-BOOK.

A Japanese Business Card. The following is an exact copy of a business man's card in Yokohama, which has been furnished for the Corner Scrap-Book. It shows that the trader must have many English-speaking customers or he would not advertise his wares in our language:

SHOW THIS —CARD TO
Mark of Japanese Jinrikishamen

JEWELRY MAKER,
A Finest in Town
WHISKYBOY
No. 17, Aioicho Itchome, (Minatobashidori.)
YOKOHAMA JAPAN.

Our shop is best and obliging worker that have every body known, and haveing articles Genuine Japanese Crystal and all kinds of Curious Stones, Shells, Ivory Catseyes, Pearl and pure Tortoise Shell, etc, worked for ladies hair ornaments, Earrings, Lace Pin, Collor-Cuffs Buttons and Fingerrings, also for Gent's scarf pin, Buttons, Charm, and Spectacles, Gold and Silver articles, etc, etc, and (Repairs) gildings gold or Silver plate in electroplate or plainmending Sword, Fan, Chine, Lockets and Charms etc, Carveing, in Laid, work own name ormonograms or any design according to orders we can works how much difficult Job with lowest Price insure, please try, once try.

don't forget name WHISKY.

If readers think this is rather poor English, let them imagine an attempt of theirs to translate a similar advertisement into Japanese, and how our idioms and order of words would sound in the foreign tongue. We think "Whiskyboy" deserves credit for his enterprise and his success. But why should he have that peculiar name? The question was sent to a well-known missionary, now in this country, and this is the explanation:

Several years ago there lived in Tokyo a foreigner, in whose house this jeweler, then young, was a servant—the boy, as servants are so generally called in the East. It was his duty to attend to the personal wants of the master. Now it happened that this master was very fond of whisky, and as soon as he entered the house, and frequently during the evening as well, he would call for his favorite beverage, with the words, "whisky, boy." This was done so often that the servant became known as "Whiskyboy," and so he was addressed by the foreign friends of the master and others. When, therefore, he started in business for himself, desiring the patronage of foreigners, he kept the name by which he was known to them, putting it on his business card, the Japanese characters on the card giving his true name and place of business.

If any of our readers, traveling in Japan, should patronize this "obliging worker," they might properly advise him not to think so much of his American name as to swallow any part of it!

A New School Globe. An eminent French geographer has conceived the idea of having an immense terrestrial globe, 400 feet in diameter, so as to show off the relative hights and distances of the earth's surface, as they should be. He asks for help and criticisms from geographers in carrying out the project. We suggest that the locomotive power to make it revolve be a boy, and that a place be arranged on the North Pole or the equator—perhaps on the summit of Chimborazo—for him to sit and work the apparatus! Then the boy who behaved the best in school might be given the job of running the world for that day's geography lesson.

What the Boy Said About the Earthquake. It was in the Hawaiian Islands. A small boy was awakened by a smaller one screaming and he said, "What is it?" When it was explained to him he turned over and remarked, sleepily, "Well, I guess I'll get to sleep before the next one comes—I usually sleep when it's earthquaking."

L. H. M.

The Sunday School

LESSON FOR MARCH 29. REVIEW.

BY SOPHIA C. STEDMAN.

Our lessons for the past three months cover nearly the whole of the earthly life of our Lord as recorded by Luke, and yet they in no sense furnish even an outline of that life. They simply bring before us certain incidents which illustrate the personality of the man Christ Jesus.

It is a significant fact that Luke's gospel, which emphasizes the humanity of Christ, records, more fully than any other, the miraculous events connected with the birth of our Saviour, and is the only one which has preserved for us the song of the angels and the poems in which Zacharias, Mary and Simeon gave utterance to the emotions and hopes inspired by the Holy Spirit, psalms which are Messianic rather than Christian, and which bridge the chasm between the Old Testament and the New.

Thus the "gospel of the humanity of Christ" makes plain the divinity of the Son of Man, and, though written especially for Gentile Christians, presents him not only as a "light to lighten the Gentiles," but also as the "glory of Israel."

Any study of Christ which was not introduced by a survey of the work of John the Baptist would be incomplete, for his appearance marked the "beginning of the gospel." Stern and uncompromising his message was, "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand," and when he had baptized Jesus and pointed him out as the "Lamb of God," his public career ended, with little apparent result. But his work was not a failure, for it had accomplished its end in arousing the nation from its apathy and fixing attention upon Christ, and thus inaugurating a new dispensation.

His work was negative rather than positive, and his personality is overshadowed by one mightier than he. To us John the Baptist is not so much a man as a "voice," but it was his glory to prepare the way for the Messiah.

As we turn from this last of the Hebrew prophets and recall the normal, healthy growth and development of Jesus during his obscure, uneventful life in the little village of Nazareth, and then follow him as he entered upon his public ministry, we are filled with gratitude that he came, not as one of the old prophets, but as the "friend of sinners." Let us notice how the personality of Christ is revealed in his words and in his works.

While we know almost nothing of his early life, we learn from his first recorded words that at the age of twelve years he was conscious of his divine Sonship, but that this did not lessen his sense of the duty he, as a member of a human family, owed in the home. Cherishing this consciousness he returned to Nazareth that he might live his perfect human life filled with its homely duties. Thus he became our example, and in those years of seclusion accomplished a large part of his work as the "second Adam," through whose obedience many are made righteous. As his public life opened the knowledge of his representative humanity led Jesus to submit to the baptism of John, and the visible descent upon him of the Holy Spirit was at once the seal of his Father's approval and his anointing for his official work.

As he entered upon his public ministry we notice:

1. Christ made himself the center of his teaching. He claimed in himself the fulfillment of a familiar Messianic prophecy. He asserted and proved his power to forgive sin. He foretold his own death and resurrection. He exercised authority over the hearts and lives of men; his word must be heard and obeyed, his cross must be borne.

And yet, stupendous as were these claims, they were advanced without arrogance or absurdity, for his miracles attested his supernatural power and the beneficent ends for which that power was exerted proved his right to supremacy. As he restored the sick to health and raised the dead to life, he was only expressing in his works the divine self-consciousness which found utterance in his words.

2. Christ called himself the Son of Man. The humanity of our Lord was no less real than his divinity. It entered into both his words and his works and it was this which gave such power to his teaching. He presented the highest truth in an attractive form, to this end making use of parables which revealed his intimate knowledge both of nature and of men. This power to express great truths in "gracious words" enabled him to hold the attention of the masses, while it aroused the wonder of those among whom he had grown up and who knew him as a plain man like themselves.

But his humanity is revealed in his works even more clearly than in his words. The tact which adapted methods to the varying conditions of those who came to him for help, the kindness which invited such appeals and repulsed not even the most importunate, the emotions — wonder and compassion — called out by the faith of a centurion and the sorrow of a childless widow, the tender sympathy for the bereaved parents, the wisdom which encouraged a shrinking woman to confess her cure, and so led her out from superstition to faith, all these prove Jesus to have been "made in all things like unto his brethren."

3. Christ placed before men the highest standard. He taught that professions of loyalty to himself were worthless unless embodied in the life; that self-denial was the condition of entrance into his service; that love, expressing itself to all men irrespective of race or creed, was the law of his kingdom. He taught the efficacy of prayer, and gave a form of prayer which reveals God as our Father. He encouraged faithfulness and foretold judgment upon the unfaithful.

But what he required he fully exemplified. Self-denial was the keynote of his life. Not only did our Saviour prosecute his work with the certainty of rejection and death as his reward, but, although possessing infinite power, he subjected himself to the limitations of his humanity, using his divine power only for the help of the suffering. His heart so overflowed with love that the parable of The Good Samaritan seems like a portrayal of his own life in allegory. When he taught his disciples to pray he spoke of that which he knew, for prayer was the atmosphere in which he lived.

Such is the Christ of whom we have been studying. It has been well said:

> It takes his greatness with his limitations, his strength and his weakness, his divinity and his humanity to affect us most. . . . We want a being that shall come down to our sympathies, and so stand on the same plane with us, with the tides of feeling flowing through us both; and at the same time one before whom we shall bow with reverence and awe—the very being we have in Christ, one whose thoughts and feelings span the mighty void between God and man . . . the God-with-us, the Man-divine—that Being who towers above our reason, but grasps and holds our hearts.

THE CHURCH PRAYER MEETING.

Topic, March 22-28. Forgiveness of Injuries. Matt. 18: 21-35.

In what spirit; to what extent; with what limitations.

(See prayer meeting editorial.)

Montaigne believed that the object of education was to fill a boy or girl "with an honest curiosity for information about everything." We are at last coming to understand that any kind of knowledge which the child cares nothing about and that he acquires against his will is of small profit to him. The great success in teaching is to stimulate in the pupil a wish to learn.—Childhood.

A big wash looks discouraging.

But when you have the right weapon to attack the great stack of soiled clothes with, the battle is half won already.

Sunlight Soap

is the weapon to use. It will make that big wash look like a pile of driven snow.

All the sheets and blankets as well as the delicate fabrics will be saved by Sunlight Soap, and there won't be any tearing or ripping, because you don't have to rub.

Less Labor
Greater Comfort

Lever Bros., Ltd., Hudson & Harrison Sts., N.Y.

The Salt "just as good" as "Yorkshire" does not exist. If your dealer offers a substitute, say you want Bradley's

"Yorkshire" Salt

—let some one else have the just as good."

For the dairy it is supreme, for it is the only salt absolutely free from lime, and the only brand (without damaging adulterations) that won't lump and harden. We will send you a sample bag free if you will send your address.

BRADLEY SALT CO.,
49 Jay St., New York. 4 Commercial St., Boston.

Purest Best

A Palatable Stimulant for Invalids

Liebig COMPANY'S Extract of Beef

An indispensable aid to the best cooking

The Original and Genuine

CHURCH REMODELING.
THOMAS W. SILLOWAY, Church Architect,
10 Park Square, Boston.

Mr. Silloway's long practice in building or remodeling over 400 church edifices enables him to save and utilize all the valuable parts, and for a comparatively small outlay produce a building preferable to a new one of much greater cost. He proposes to continue the work of remodeling as a specialty, and tenders his services to committees who would practice economy, and where the means are limited.

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE ROLLERS
NOTICE NAME THUS Stewart Hartshorn ON LABEL AND SEE THAT THE GENUINE HARTSHORN

PROGRESS OF THE KINGDOM.

OUR OWN WORK.

Help to Build. It is interesting to be brought into touch, through one of her letters to Mr. Hood, with work which its pastor, an enterprising, earnest young Boston woman is doing in a little Colorado church. The C. C. B. S. has pledged its aid in the erection of a new building, and Miss Bumstead has succeeded in arousing the enthusiasm of her parishioners. She writes: "Thus far a blessing has been on the work and many unwilling hands have been made willing. One old mountaineer who, I believe, would never have anything to do with our church in the past, has hauled four loads of rock. He has also visited the pastor, and now attends church services regularly, morning and evening."

An example of the urgent appeals which the Church Building Society is constantly receiving is a recent letter from a pastor in a Nebraska town where there are three saloons but no house of worship and no church services except those carried on by this loyal Congregational minister in a schoolhouse. He writes: "The work is hard and necessarily slow owing to opposition from the saloon element. They even went so far as to hire their children to stay away from us." Nevertheless, forty-two members have been received into the church during the seventeen months of his pastorate. The pastor adds that he would like to hold special meetings, but there is no suitable place as the schoolhouse is available only on Sundays, and makes the need of a church edifice still more apparent when he says, "My field is twenty miles east and west and I don't know how far north and south, as I have not had time to cover the whole ground. I have been eight miles both ways from home and all the territory seems to be in my parish, as no one else claims it, and I am trying to take possession for the Lord and Congregationalism." What better arguments could the C. C. B. S. have for claiming the support of our churches than such letters as this?

Hope for Mongolia. There is a prospect of reaching the Mongols with the gospel at last, according to Mr. Roberts of our North China Mission. In company with two missionaries of other denominations he made a week's tour in Mongolia, last fall, with a view to opening a new mission station at Hara Oso, fifty miles northwest from Kalgan, where James Gilmour formerly labored and where lives Boynito, a well-known Mongol convert. Decided opposition on the part of petty local officials was manifested when Mr. Larson of Dr. Simpson's mission took up his residence in Boynito's house and the enterprise had to be abandoned. However, Mr. Roberts succeeded in obtaining the support of a high magistrate in Kalgan, who informed the Mongolians governed by him that the foreigners have the privilege of preaching the Christian religion in Hara Oso and the natives have a right to believe in it, and our worker writes at a later date that he is sure that Boynito and the missionaries will be protected from harm in the future. Mr. Roberts has finished revising the Mongolian catechism and has had his Mongol teacher carve two blocks for printing sheet tracts of the Lord's Prayer and the Ten Commandments, while others have been copying the Mongol grammar and translating the Mongol-German-Russian dictionary into English. Already a Norwegian missionary has succeeded in buying land and locating at Urga and reports that his teacher, a Lama, has been converted and become a true helper. "These facts," writes Mr. Roberts, "with the added hope of the speedy coming of other missionaries for Mongolia, seem to give some hope for the evangelization of that country."

Church Extension in India. Mr. Chandler of Madura reports the organization of a new church and the ordination of another native pastor, making four churches now in that city under the oversight of the American Board. The new organization, which is to be called the South Gate Church, is composed of Christians living in the southern part of Madura together with some scattered in villages south of the city as far as ten miles away. Forty-two persons brought letters of recommendation from other churches. The usual exercises of organization and ordination of the pastor, who is the son of a deacon of the West Gate Church, were in charge of a local association of seven churches, known as the East Local Church Union. A portion of the new pastor's salary is to be paid from the offerings of the English congregation and some of them attended the exercises as a proof of their interest, while a third of the amount necessary will be given by the Native Evangelical Society, with the understanding that its aid is to be reduced each year.

American Board Receipts. The following is a statement of the receipts of the American Board for the month of February, and for the first six months of the financial year compared with the receipts for the corresponding periods of the previous year, not including the sums contributed for the debt:

| | Feb., 1895. | Feb., 1896. |
|---|---|---|
| Regular donations, | $28,221.06 | $34,735.80 |
| Donations for special objects, | 9,184.53 | 2,787.12 |
| Legacies, | 7,775.56 | 19,632.25 |
| | $45,181.15 | $57,155.17 |
| | Six mos. last year. | Six mos. this year. |
| Regular donations, | $204,001.21 | $200,620.11 |
| Donations for special objects, | 25,674.19 | 21,957.57 |
| Legacies, | 80,698.83 | 55,522.95 |
| | $310,374.23 | $278,100.63 |

THE WORLD AROUND.

Progressive Movement in China. From Dr. Griffith John comes the news that judging by a visit he has recently paid to points far inland the Chinese people are now quiet and accessible. Another encouraging sign from China is a reform club recently organized in Peking under the deep shadow of imperial conservatism, its members being young men of official position or literary prominence. They advocate change and improvement and propose to bring it about through educational methods. Rev. Gilbert Reid, a Presbyterian missionary who is making a marked impression on members of the higher classes in China, has interested himself in this Association for Enlightenment, as the organization is called, and is known as one of the foreign advisers. These young progressives desire to bring about a change in the government system of education, abolishing many cumbrous regulations and introducing the Western studies. They are planning a library, a reading-room and a polytechnic, collecting the books on foreign topics and the sciences and they have started a paper issued every other day. While terming this enterprise "the most hopeful sign of the government at present," Mr. Reid frankly admits that its weakness is in lack of moral grip and in the danger that, being entirely confined to the Chinese and not friendly to the Manchus, the imperial family may oppose it as an insurrectionary movement.

African Pioneer Gone. The announcement of the death of William Anderson of Old Calabar follows close upon the brief sketch of his life which we published a few weeks ago. In the providence of God he was permitted to return to Africa to die as he wished among the people whom he loved, although it is a cause for regret that he did not live to witness the jubilee of the Old Calabar Mission, which is close at hand. The missionary periodicals contain many hearty tributes to the work and character of this pioneer, who was not an explorer nor a creator of native literature, but simply an evangelist and teacher, preaching the gospel, organizing and educating the native church. A characteristic incident is told concerning his retirement from active missionary service. He sent a letter to the mission board of the United Presbyterian Church complaining that his retiring allowance of $600 was much too large, and asking that half of it might be divided between the Aged Ministers' Fund and the foreign missionary work. In many ways the attention of the Scotch churches is being turned to Old Calabar. During the past year the three fathers of the mission—Hope Waddell, aged ninety; Hugh Goldie, aged eighty; and now William Anderson, aged eighty-four—have been called away, and the jubilee must be celebrated around their fresh-made graves. Six new missionaries are to be sent out this month, but the appeal is going forth for still larger re-enforcements.

Y. P. S. C. E.

PRAYER MEETING.

BY REV. H. A. BRIDGMAN.

Topic, March 29–April 4. Things That Keep Us from God. Prov. 6: 16–19; 8: 13–17.

It is a solemn thought that despite the omnipotence of God a barrier between him and the human soul may be erected by means of which he is, as it were, practically absent. The light of the sun pervades every corner of the universe, and yet tombs and catacombs can be constructed in which the blackest darkness reigns. We touch here one of the great mysteries of the human life—no limitation on God's part of his desire to bless and save, but such action by man as virtually defeats his purpose.

There is nothing in one's circumstances that keeps him from God. In the midst of the hardest earthly conditions and the keenest sorrow men have recognized their Maker and their Redeemer. The barriers between God and the soul are entirely of its own construction. They differ in the case of different persons. With the rich man in the parable it was his splendid houses and goods; with the captain of the Syrian host it was superior national pride; with any of us it may be this or that indulgence, trifling enough in itself, perhaps, yet so dear and indispensable that rather than give it up we are willing to do without the help and care of God. No one can say for another what his hindrance is, but in general it is true that the objectionable thing is some manifestation of pride or selfishness. The way to get rid of it is not to lop off the flower but to seek the taproot and eradicate that however much it costs.

It is encouraging to remember that the very things that now keep us from God may through a reconstruction of our thought and purpose be transformed into helps in our Christian life and channels for our Christian service. These verses in Proverbs, for instance, refer to the hand, the eyes, the mouth, the feet and the heart as under certain circumstances servants of the evil one and hateful to God. But we know very well that the mouth which now speaks cursing can be made to utter blessing; the eyes which see only that which feeds the fires of passion and only that which is unlovely in their fellowmen can also be trained to behold that which is lovable, yea, even to gaze into the face of God; that the hands and feet which now move at the impulse of selfishness may be set to perform the Master's tasks and that the heart, foul though it may now be, can, by the influence of God's spirit, be transformed into a dwelling place of lofty thoughts and noble purposes.

The first convention of the Young Women's Christian Associations of Vermont was held with the Middlebury College Association, Feb. 25, 26. Miss Simms, national college secretary, and Miss Wing, State secretary of Massachusetts, assisted in the services. The meetings were well attended and enthusiastic and steps were taken for forming a permanent State organization. The next convention will be held at Montpelier.——S. M. Sayford, the college evangelist, was here for three days, commencing Feb. 17. In addition to the regular services a great deal of personal work was done which counts for a higher spiritual life. Mr. Sayford went from here to Michigan University.

Literature

RHETORIC AND LITERATURE.

The question of the study of English is one which is always with us, and it carries along with it the other question of rhetorical training which never seems to reach a settlement. To the ordinary mind it would seem a simple proposition enough, and quite beyond the reach of controversy, that one must know a thing at its best before he can be expected to use it at its best, but there have been times and places within the memory of many of us in which boys and girls, who may be said to have known nothing whatever about the best English, have been taken in hand by teachers who undertook to teach them how to write well by certain processes of synthesis according to which words were to be put together correctly.

Aside from the question whether in this age of overflowing literary productions and an extraordinarily overstocked market it is not cruelty to teach any one to write good English—about which there may well be two opinions—the question of method and order is so important, and the cart has so often been harnessed in front of the horse, that we are glad to welcome the assistance of the editor of the Century in what seems to us the only rational and possible view of the matter. "After a costly experience of the drudgery that composition work forces on teacher and pupil, we would say emphatically," he writes, "that there is no educational method at present that involves so enormous an outlay of time, energy and money, with so correspondingly small a result. To neglect the teaching of literature for the teaching of composition is like showing a hungry man how to work his jaws instead of giving him something to eat." To support this view he cites the case of "a specialist who investigated the question by reading many hundred Sophomore compositions in two of our leading colleges. In one college every Freshman wrote themes steadily through the year, with an accompaniment of sound instruction in rhetorical principles; in the other college every Freshman studied Shakespeare, with absolutely no training in rhetoric and no practice in composition. A comparison of the themes written in their Sophomore year by these students showed that these students were technically on a par." In a word the rhetoricians undertake to show a man how to express himself on the chance that he may have thoughts. The teachers of literature wish to be sure that their students have thoughts, being well enough assured that those who think will care to express themselves intelligibly. In our opinion one of the chief uses of formal rhetoric at the critical stage in a young man's thinking is to keep down the number of competitors for the few places which are open to those who have learned to write good English, but we suppose this is hardly what the teachers themselves have in view.

BOOK REVIEWS.

SERMONS.

The Religion of Hope by Philip S. Moxom. These sermons are garnered fruit from a busy and successful ministry—selections from the accumulated product of thirteen years of labor. Their keynote is that Christian optimism which suggested the title and which finds direct expression in the first sermon of the book. Mr. Moxom is in thorough sympathy with the modern thought of progress—progress in teaching in the older life of the church and progress in life and teaching in the present age—and he feels the power of the presence of God's spirit. "Because revelation is progressive, corresponding to man's growing power of apprehension and depending upon it, there are many features of the revelatory process that are incidental and transient. Learning is, in part, a process of discarding. Low ideas of the divine nature are constantly replaced by higher. New points of view necessitate an abandonment of the old. . . . This progress is not in any sense artificial, nor is it a mere order of sequence; it is vital and experimental and has an indestructible continuity. . . . The real progress of Christian thought is advance in power to understand and interpret Jesus. A book may be exhausted, for the capacity of 'the letter' is limited, but a personality —such a personality—is inexhaustible." With this conception of the power and order of Christ's reign, these sermons are tonic for the indecisive and despairing times in which we live. We find ourselves quarreling with Mr. Moxom's choice of words at times, as, for example, with "revelatory" in the sentence quoted above, a word which seems to us clumsy and unnecessary, though it has the recognition of the dictionaries, but we commend the book to our readers for their enjoyment as well as profit. [Roberts Brothers. $1.25.]

Among the speakers at Northfield last summer was Prebendary Webb-Peploe of London. His addresses have been gathered into a volume called The Victorious Life, which has been edited by Delavan L. Pierson and contains a good portrait of the author. The decision to print the addresses was taken too late to secure a full report of all of them, and the book shows the lack of the author's personal care in more than one particular. It is, indeed, not a book, in the sense of being a matured and fully considered utterance upon a great theme, but a collection of reports of extemporary addresses, which must have been far more effective as delivered than they are in cold print. They are the utterance of a man who is filled with the Word and has an unusual power of seeing the relation of its truth to daily life. The effect upon those who heard him was stimulating and inspiring, and those who read will find themselves reminded constantly of the great demands and sufficient helps of God's kingdom. It is good to spend a little time with one whose faith is so unquestioning and his enthusiasm so infectious as Mr. Webb-Peploe's. The introduction, with its somewhat fulsome eulogy, adds nothing to the force of the book. [Baker & Taylor Co. $1.25.]

LITERARY STUDY.

A History of Nineteenth Century Literature (1780–1895), by George Saintsbury, professor in the University of Edinburgh, is the fourth and concluding volume in the series of histories of English literature, the first of which, by Rev. Stopford A. Brooke, takes up the early literature; the second, by Professor Saintsbury, that of the age of Elizabeth; the third, by Edmund Gosse, that of the eighteenth century. Professor Saintsbury had in this volume the most difficult task of all, both on account of the overwhelming mass of material requiring to be sifted and the lack of perspective. These difficulties he has partly eliminated by confining his history to the authors who have died, and partly met by an admirable order, industry and balance of critical judgment. In addition to these qualities the style of the book is easy, picturesque and humorous, thoroughly readable in and for itself, and therefore the book is far more than a book of reference. It is not to be expected that any reader will find himself in exact agreement with all the author's critical judgments, for the writers considered are not yet sifted by the years and prejudice concerning some of them is strong, but he will find it necessary to give reasons to himself for his disagreements and in this respect the book will be educative as well as enjoyable. [Macmillan & Co. $1.50.]

Edward Everett Hale has written a characteristic and interesting introduction for Two Unpublished Essays by Ralph Waldo Emerson. The essays themselves are Bowdoin prize dissertations of Emerson's college days, printed from the manuscripts preserved in the Harvard University library, one on The Character of Socrates, the other on The Present State of Ethical Philosophy. They prefigure both the style and method of thought of their distinguished author in the years of his maturity, but are of special interest only to students of his life and works. No one would be wise to begin an acquaintance with Emerson by reading them. [Lamson, Wolfe & Co. $1.00]

POETRY.

Fleet Street Ecologues, by John Davidson, comes to us with the double imprint of Dodd, Mead & Co., and of John Lane, The Bodley Head, London. After being much ridiculed and greatly overpraised in England, we are glad to have an American copyright edition, beautifully printed and in every way pleasant to the eyes. With some qualifications, we are inclined to take decidedly the part of its eulogists. It revives a form of verse used by Theocritus, Vergil and Spenser, and laughed to death for England by Gay a century and a half ago, and revives it with an assured strength which never leaves the result in doubt for a moment. In spite of the title, and the invariable opening of London doubt and discontent, the poems are really poems of the country side, and display a loving knowledge of fields and forests which sweeps like a clear wind through the windows of the town. The book is characteristic of the age in its sorrowful view of life and its groping in the dark for consolation, but the effect at bottom is that of courage and hope. [$1.25.]

Goethe and Schiller's Xenions, selected and translated by Paul Carus. It was a good thought to make a comprehensive selection from these famous critical and satirical epigrams with translations for English readers. In German literature they stand for the castigation of bombast and artificiality, as Pope's Dunciad stands in our own literary history, but their influence is much more far-reaching and effective because they are constructive and not merely denunciatory. The book is well printed in long album form, which lends itself to the isolation and emphasis of the epigrams, each of which, with its rendering, has a page to itself, and the notes are good. Unfortunately the preface prepares us for the radical defect of the book, which is a lack of feeling for the beauty and subtlety of the English tongue. Unequal as the Xenien are we should be sorry to have even the best of them judged by the Eng lish renderings which are here given. Mr. Carus is so anxious lest the reader should miss the point that he drives it in with a mallet. For instance, to take an example which embodies a great and fruitful critical principle, the original reads:

DIE UNBERUFENEN.

Tadeln is leicht, erschaffen so schwer; ihr Tadler des Schwachen,
Habt ihr das treffliche denn auch zu belohnen ein Herz?

The rendering of the book is this:

TO INCOMPETENT REVIEWERS.

Difficult 'tis to achieve; criticism is easy, O critics!
Shrink not, when finding a flaw, freely from praising the good.

But, if we might venture on our own account to follow the original a little more closely, the rendering might be:

THE UNSUMMONED.

Easy is it to blame, and to fashion is hard, O ye critics
Blaming the weak! have ye hearts to acknowledge the excellent too?

A good photograph of the Weimar statue of the two poets is prefixed to the book [Open Court Publishing Co. $1.50.]

Echoes of Battle, by Bushrod Washington James, is a finely printed and illustrated book of martial poems and prose descriptive chapters, all patriotic and most of them devoted to scenes or recollections of the Revolution or the war for the Union. There is a manly as well as martial ring to these lyrics and the author's enthusiasm is all for the great causes to which men gave their lives and not for the mere glory and pomp of war. [Henry T. Coates & Co. $2 00.]

STORIES.

Dr. Warrick's Daughters, by Rebecca Harding Davis. The illustrations in this book are very good indeed, being reduced with care and printed with discretion. The book itself is one of sharp contrasts—of the North and South, of wealth and poverty, of husband and wife, of sister and sister, of brother and brother and of two lovers for each of the heroines. We do not say this in the least in disparagement, for Mrs. Davis has made a strong and interesting story, but by way of illustrating her method of work in this particular case. One is a little sorry for both the sisters, the one who sells herself for millions and the one who would have liked a little more romance in her lover, but the book brings a well-reasoned and enjoyable study of American life to a definite end in which the moral is obvious enough—if any reader nowadays cares for a moral. [Harper & Brothers. $1 50.]

A Princess of the Gutter, by L. T. Meade. This is a story of the London slums told with much but not concentrated power. The real story, the essential building, of the book would be better seen if there were less scaffolding. As it is we sympathize with the story of self-sacrificing toil among the poorest classes and are glad whenever we can get a glimpse of the real heroine—the devoted and admirable princess of the gutter, after whom the book is named. There is much good teaching also in the book as to the essential conditions under which alone Christian help may be brought to those who dislike the very name of religion. Those who feel the stirring of the new brotherhood, which is, after all, as old as Jesus, will do well to read this book. [G. P. Putnam's Sons. $1.25.]

We have had the woman's view of the "New Woman" in books whose titles will occur to many of our readers, and now we are hearing from the other side and stories abound which give a man's view of the same pervasive subject. Such a book is A Clever Wife by W. Pitt Ridge. Whether the author deprecates criticism in certain quarters by dedicating his book "To my dear sisters," or really is thinking of a purely fraternal relation, we do not know, but the former meaning suggests itself as probable. The story is told of a man and woman in the London Bohemian life who are married, only to go on their different pursuits of literary and artistic fame, and of the breaking down of the woman's self-dependence in the face of the need of a man's protection. While the book is not a great book its pictures are cleverly drawn and pertinent to the time. [Harper & Brothers. $1.25.]

NOTES.

—— The Cambridge Magazine for March has an article on Longfellow in Home Life by his daughter, Miss Alice M. Longfellow, who has hitherto steadfastly refused to write anything in the line of recollections of her distinguished father. She has also supplied three hitherto unpublished portraits.

—— The Chicago Record nearly a year ago offered $30,000 in prizes for stories of mystery, and the prize winners have just been announced. The first prize goes to Harry Stillwell Edwards of Macon, Georgia, the second goes to England. Among the successful names is that of Miss Katherine Lee Bates of Wellesley, whose story is called The Turret Chamber.

—— In James Edwin Campbell, who recently died in Pomeroy, O., the Negro race has lost one of their literary pioneers and the nation a strong and successful writer. Much of his work was in the dialect of his own people, which he employed in humorous sketches of considerable power, and in pathetic and didactic work as well, but he was master also of a strong and pure English style.

—— Hartford Seminary has the largest and most important library in the city. Professor Perry has recently put on exhibition its large collection of printed Greek New Testaments, which is unequaled in the country, and this and the other treasures of the library, including the curiosities gathered by missionaries of the American Board, have been thrown open to public inspection. The library is unique among theological libraries also, we believe, in being freely opened to the public both for research and for circulation.

—— The question having been raised why the late Lord Leighton did not leave a larger fortune, Harriet G. Hosmer answers in a letter to the Nation: "It is due to the memory of Leighton, and upon the authority of a life-long friend, to state that more than half of his annual income was devoted to his less prosperous brethren in art. No artist ever appealed in vain to Lord Leighton for aid, and it was this ever kindliness and generosity of heart—this first quality—which endeared him to his friends, and which excited their admiration far more than even his most brilliant achievements."

—— The venerable and learned Prof. Jacob Cooper, LL. D., of Rutgers College, New Brunswick, N. J., is credited with inducing Mr. Gladstone to edit the works of Bishop Butler, and he has read the advance sheets of all of Mr. Gladstone's recent magazine articles on Butler and the edition of Butler just issuing from the press annotated by Mr. Gladstone. Professor Cooper has never been disposed to seek notoriety or popular recognition, but among students of Greek and metaphysics, at home and abroad, he has the highest rank, and his correspondence with Mr. Gladstone has been constant for many years.

—— The old sectional jealousy of which we used to hear when there was so much talk about "Southern writers" seems to be coming to the surface again, as voiced and rebuked by two Virginia newspapers. Says the Alexandria Times:

We are even now having imposed on us by Webster and Worcester a language that neither Washington nor Mason, Jefferson nor Madison, Henry nor Randolph spoke.

To which the Richmond Despatch replies:

Nor wrote. That is all true. But what are we going to do about it? What have we done about it? Discredited and starved, or driven away our literary men of all sorts; maintained outside publishers and broken down our own. We have no Southern literature. Our Southern writers have to write for Northern readers and Northern publishers. That is the truth. Now let us turn in and kick and curse ourselves vigorously for a while. It may do us good. Meanwhile, let Southern authors at least thank God that they do not have to go to England to be heard.

BOOKS OF THE WEEK.

American Book Co. New York.

INTRODUCTION TO AMERICAN LITERATURE. By Brander Matthews. pp. 256. $1.00.
ELEMENTS OF ALGEBRA. By Lyman Hall. pp. 368. $1.00.
OLD STORIES OF THE EAST. By James Baldwin. pp. 215. 45 cents.
AN ENGLISH GRAMMAR. By Baskerville and Sewell. pp. 349. 90 cents.
HOHER ALS DIE KIRCHE. By Wilhelmine von Hillern. Edited by F. A. Dauer. pp. 96. 25 cents.
THE LIFE OF NELSON. By Robert Southey. pp. 394. 40 cents.
HAMLET. By William Shakespeare. pp. 163. 25 cents.

Charles Scribner's Sons. New York.

AGNOSTICISM AND RELIGION. By Jacob G. Schurman. pp. 181. $1.00.
SUNRISE STORIES. By Roger Riordon and Tozo Takayanagi. pp. 281. $1.50.
A LADY OF QUALITY. By Frances Hodgson Burnett. pp. 363. $1.50.
THE COUNCIL OF TRENT. By James Anthony Froude. pp. 294. $2.00.

Macmillan & Co. New York.

LAVENGRO. By George Borrow. pp. 589. $1.25.

Fords, Howard & Hulbert. New York.

A SILVER JUBILEE. The 25th Anniversary of the First Congregational Church, Montclair, N. J. pp. 134. $1.00.

Benziger Bros. New York.

THE CIRCUS RIDER'S DAUGHTER. By F. von Brackel. Translated by Mary A. Mitchell. pp. 317. $1.25.

J. B. Lippincott Co. Philadelphia.

THE LIGHT THAT LIES. By Cockburn Harvey. pp. 163. 75 cents.
CAMEOS. By Marie Corelli. pp. 291. $1.00.

Woodfall Co. New York.

THE YOUTHS' DICTIONARY OF MYTHOLOGY. By E. S. Ellis, M.A. pp. 146. 50 cents.

PAPER COVERS.

Macmillan & Co. New York.

AMIEL'S JOURNAL. By Mrs. Humphry Ward. pp. 319. 25 cents.
MISS STUART'S LEGACY. By Mrs. F. A. Steel. pp. 460. 50 cents.

American Book Co. New York.

SPENCERIAN PENMANSHIP. VERTICAL EDITION. Seven numbers. 6 cents each
GERMANIA TEXTS: Kurz, Wieland's Oberon, Goethe's Die Krönung Josefs II., Gervinus, Lessing's Dramaturgie, Kurz, Lessing's Minna von Barnhelm, Khull Meier Helmbrecht, Wieland aus Goethe's Gedächtnisrede. 10 cents each.

International News Co. New York.

A RICH MAN'S DAUGHTER. By Mrs. J. H. Riddell. pp. 392. 50 cents.

Little, Brown & Co. Boston.

LINES READ AT THE CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION OF THE HASTY PUDDING CLUB OF HARVARD COLLEGE. $1.00.

Rev. Manfred P. Welcher. Peekskill.

A MANUAL FOR LEARNING THE BOOKS OF THE BIBLE. 3 copies 10 cents.

Whittier & Shepperson. Richmond, Va.

BIBLE MEMORY CARDS. By I. T. Avery.

L. Prang & Co. Boston.

PRANG'S EASTER PUBLICATIONS.

Thomas Whittaker. New York.

THE "I WILLS" OF THE PSALMS. By Rev. P. B. Power. pp. 404. 50 cents.

G. P. Putnam's Sons. New York.

THE CRIME OF THE CENTURY. By Rodrigues Ottolengui. pp. 349. 50 cents.

American Book Co. New York.

OBSERVATION BLANKS IN PHYSICS. By W. C. A. Hammell. 30 cents.

MAGAZINES.

March. EDUCATION.—NEW WORLD.—DONAHOE'S. GOOD HOUSEKEEPING.—FORUM.—HOMILETIC REVIEW.—EDUCATIONAL REVIEW.—PHILOSOPHICAL REVIEW.—OUR ANIMAL FRIENDS.—BOOKBUYER.—SUPERINTENDENT AND TEACHER.—SUNDAY.—GOOD WORDS.—PANSY.—KINDERGARTEN NEWS.—BIBLIA.—WOMANKIND.—MUSICAL RECORD.—AMERICAN JOURNAL OF SOCIOLOGY.—PENNY.—CHRISTIAN LITERATURE.—LITERARY NEWS.—AMERICAN MAGAZINE OF CIVICS.—BIBLICAL WORLD.—SCHOOL REVIEW.

News from the Churches

Meetings to Come.

BOSTON MINISTERS' MEETING, Pilgrim Hall, March 23, 10 A.M. Address by Rev. C. E. Harrington, D. D., on The Millstone of Christianity, a review of Goldwin Smith's article in the Century, followed by a speech from Pres. N. G. Frost of Berea.

FOREIGN MISSIONARY PRAYER MEETING under the auspices of the Woman's Board of Missions in Pilgrim Hall, Congregational House, every Friday at 11 A.M.

UNION BIBLE CLASS, conducted by Rev. Alfred A. Wright, D. D., Bromfield Street Church, Boston, Saturday, 3 P.M.

CONFERENCE FOR MINISTERS AND CHRISTIAN WORKERS at Chicago during the month of April. Special lectures by Superintendent Torrey, Prof. W. W. White and Dr. W. J. Erdman. All who desire to avail themselves of this special conference and stopping at the Institute at the reduced price for board and room of $5 per week should make application early of Supt. R. A. Torrey, 80 Institute Place, Chicago, Ill.

SPRING STATE MEETINGS.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Alabama, | | Saturday, March 28. |
| Tennessee, | Nashville, | Wednesday, April 1. |
| Georgia, | Atlanta, | Wednesday, April 1. |
| Arizona, | Tempe, | Wednesday, April 8. |
| Texas, | Cleburne, | Thursday, April 9. |
| New Mexico, | Albuquerque, | Wednesday, April 15. |
| New Jersey, | Newark, | Tuesday, April 21. |
| Oklahoma, | Kingfisher, | Thursday, April 30. |
| Missouri, | Lamar, | Tuesday, May 5. |
| Kansas, | Lawrence, | Thursday, May 7. |
| Ohio, | Marietta, | Tuesday, May 12. |
| Indiana, | Michigan City, | Tuesday, May 12. |
| Illinois, | Aurora, | Monday, May 18. |
| Iowa. | Davenport, | Tuesday, May 19. |
| Massachusetts, | Fall River, | Tuesday, May 19. |
| Michigan, | Greenville, | Tuesday, May 19. |
| New York, | Canandaigua, | Tuesday, May 19. |
| South Dakota, | Pierre, | Tuesday, May 19. |
| Pennsylvania, | Ridgway, | Tuesday, May 26. |
| Rhode Island, | Westerly, | Tuesday, May 26. |
| Vermont, | Bradford, | Tuesday, June 9. |
| Connecticut Asso., | Hartford, | Tuesday, June 16. |

Benevolent Societies.

THE CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY is represented in Massachusetts by the MASSACHUSETTS HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY, No 9 Congregational House, Rev. Joshua Coit, Secretary; Rev. Edwin B. Palmer, Treasurer.

WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION, Room No. 32, Congregational House. Office hours, 9 to 5. Annual membership, $1.00; life membership, $20.00 Contributions solicited. Miss Annie C. Bridgman, Treasurer.

AMERICAN BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS, Congregational House, No 1 Somerset Street, Boston. Frank H. Wiggin, Assistant Treasurer; Charles E. Swett, Publishing and Purchasing Agent. Office in New York, 121 Bible House; in Chicago, 153 La Salle St.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, Rooms 1 and 2 Congregational House. Miss Ellen Carruth, Treasurer; Miss Abbie B. Child, Home Secretary.

THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION, Bible House, New York. Missions in the United States, evangelistic and educational, at the south and in the West among the Indians and Chinese. Boston office, 21 Congregational House; Chicago office, 153 La Salle Street.; Cleveland office Y. M. C. A. Building. Donations may be sent to either of the above offices, or to H. W. Hubbard, Treasurer, 108 Bible House, New York City.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY.—Church and Parsonage Building. Rev L. H. Cobb, D. D., Secretary; H. O. Pinneo, Treasurer, 59 Bible House, New York; Rev. George A. Hood, Congregational House, Boston, Field Secretary.

CONGREGATIONAL EDUCATION SOCIETY.—(Including work of former New West Commission.) Aids four hundred students for the ministry, eight home missionary colleges, twenty academies in the West and South, ten free Christian schools in Utah and New Mexico. S. F. Wilkins, Treasurer. Offices, 10 Congregational House, Boston, 151 Washington St., Chicago, Ill. Address, 10 Congregational House, Boston.

CONG. SUNDAY SCHOOL & PUBLISHING SOCIETY.—Contributions used only for missionary work. Rev. George M. Boynton, D. D, Secretary; W. A. Duncan, Ph. D., Field Secretary; E. Lawrence Barnard, Treasurer, Congregational House, Boston.

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF MINISTERIAL AID.—Treasurer, Mr. Arthur G. Stanwood, 701 Sears Building, Boston. Address applications to Rev A. H. Quint, D. D., Congregational Library, 1 Somerset Street, Boston.

MINISTERIAL RELIEF.—In order to afford a little timely aid to aged and disabled home and foreign missionaries and ministers and their families, the committee of the National Council asks from each church one splendid offering for its permanent invested fund. It also invites generous individual gifts. For fuller information see Minutes of National Council, 1892, and Year-Book, 1893, page 62 Secretary, Rev. N. H. Whittlesey, New Haven, Ct.; Treasurer, Rev. S. B Forbes, Hartford, Ct. Form of a bequest: I bequeath to the "Trustees of the National Council of the Congregational Churches of the United States" (a body corporate chartered under the laws of the State of Connecticut) [here insert the bequest], to be used for the purpose of Ministerial Relief, as provided in the resolution of the National Council of the Congregational Churches of the United States at its session held in Chicago in October, 1886.

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF PASTORAL SUPPLY, established by the Massachusetts General Association, offers its services to churches desiring pastors or pulpit supplies. Careful attention is given to applications from without the State. Room 224, Congregational House, Boston. Rev. Charles B. Rice, Sec.

THE BOSTON SEAMAN'S FRIEND SOCIETY, organized 1827. Chapel and reading-room, 287 Hanover St., Boston. Open day and evening. Sailors and landsmen welcome. Daily prayer meeting, 11 A.M., Bible study, 3 P.M. Sunday services, usual hours. Meetings every evening except Saturday. Branch mission, Wheyard Haven. Is a Congregational society and appeals to all Congregational churches for support. Send donations of money to B. S. Snow, Corresponding Secretary, Room 22, Congregational House, Boston. Send clothing, comfort bags, reading, etc., to Capt. S. S. Nickerson, chaplain, 287 Hanover st. Bequests should read: "I give and bequeath to the Boston Seaman's Friend Society the sum of $——, to be applied to the charitable uses and purposes of said society." Rev. Alexander McKenzie, D. D., President; George Gould, Treasurer.

PASSING COMMENT.

The practical outcome of an Iowa revival is sufficient proof of its genuineness. The decided step taken by so many converts in uniting with the churches must be an untold encouragement.

Since that Washington church joins our order under such direct promptings, it is all the more welcome.

It is refreshing to contrast the simple and always timely subjects which are now engaging the attention of a Connecticut congregation with the sensational and often wearisome announcements which arouse the curiosity and often the disgust of many a parish neighborhood.

A church in Ohio which has just been newly and beautifully housed began its career in a building erected in thirty six hours.

To the cottage prayer meetings frequently held previous to a prospective revival campaign is doubtless due much of the willingness of individuals to labor with a consecrated spirit and in harmony with the general movement. Instances of the effect of such careful preparatory work are almost weekly recorded and often deserve quite as much notice as the later efforts.

It might further the cause of patriotism not a little for some Christian Endeavor good citizenship committee to see that the report from that town in New Mexico had no chance of being repeated.

"Persistence is the order till the reform is accomplished," is the word from our undismayed friends in New Hampshire cities.

Of Special Note.

Large accessions in Iowa and Michigan.

A New York church—a veritable hive of prospective pastors and Christian workers.

A generous gift to Bangor students.

A parsonage playroom in New Mexico.

A "Do Something Club" in New Jersey.

A RECRUIT FOR A BOSTON POST.

REV. C. A. DINSMORE.

Phillips Church, being the only Congregational stronghold in South Boston, receives liberal support from that section and has been for years a vigorous organization of over 700 members—the third largest church of its order in the city. Less than a year ago, by the departure of its last pastor, Rev. W. H. G. Temple, to the Pacific coast, the Phillips pulpit was left vacant, but within six months the new leader, Rev. C. A. Dinsmore, was chosen, and was formally inducted into his position last week Wednesday by a large council. At the evening service a good attendance gathered in spite of a severe storm. The auditorium was beautifully adorned with flowers and plants, and select music was rendered. Dr R. R. Meredith preached the sermon and Dr. E. K. Alden offered the prayer.

Some time before his official connection with the church was completed Mr. Dinsmore had made his home among his new people and had assumed the full duties of pastor. He came from a busy life of great activity in the church and community of Willimantic, Ct., where besides his parish work during a pastorate of about five years he had been associated with the leading reform organizations and other societies working for the elevation of the city. Previously he had preached two years in Whitneyville, Ct., to which place he was called when in his second year at Yale Divinity School. He is a young man, a graduate of Kentucky University, and before his study there had spent two years at Dartmouth. While regaining slightly impaired health, he served under a Government appointment in surveying, his preparation for such service being gained in railroad work in Missouri.

Mr. Dinsmore was born in New York city, but while he was still young his family removed to Woodstock, Vt, where he graduated from the high school preparatory to entering Monson Academy. He now succeeds a line of notable predecessors, including, besides Rev. W. H. G. Temple, Drs. E. K. Alden, R. R Meredith and F. E. Clark.

CONFERENCES AND ASSOCIATIONS.

CT.—The spring meeting of the Middlesex County consociation was held in Westbrook lately, every church in the county being represented. One of the principal topics was System.

IND.—The Northeast Association held an unusually enthusiastic meeting, March 10, 11, in Jamestown. The entertaining church and other fields in the vicinity have experienced extensive revivals this winter. The interest and attendance were large. The opening sermon was on Christian Consecration by Rev. J. S. Ainslie. The topics were: How To Make Churches Self-Supporting, Revivals, Foreign Missions, The Bible, The Pastor in Social Life, and Jonathan Edwards.

CLUBS.

CT.—The New Haven Club met, March 9, at the Davenport meeting house. It was ladies' night, and the addresses were by Miss M. A. Jordan of Smith College, on The Debt of the Women Students of This Generation to the Women Teachers of the Last Generation, and Miss K. G. Lamson of the Woman's Board, on Woman's Opportunity, or the Place of Missions in the Development of Modern Womanhood.

D. C.—The annual meeting of the Washington Club was held March 9 in the social room of the First Church. The election of officers was followed by a collation served by the Ladies' Aid Society. The address by Rev. G. D. Herron, D. D., was upon The Social Nature of the Religion of Jesus.

IND.—The Indianapolis Club met with Fellowship Church, March 10. The topic was The Course of Study in the Public Schools, opened by Prof. William Bryan of the State University who has made a special study of child culture along the lines of the new psychology.

NEW ENGLAND.

Boston.

JAMAICA PLAIN.—Central. At the morning service last Sunday pledges were called for to provide for the floating debt and needed repairs amounting to $4,000. The sum of $4,481 was pledged in a few minutes.

Massachusetts.

QUINCY.—Evangelical. Individual cups were used for the first time at the March communion. A strong chapter of the Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip has been organized. Under its auspices a supper was recently given at which 80 young men were entertained. Rev. E. N. Hardy is pastor.

MILFORD.—After addresses upon Armenia by the pastor, Rev. Webster Woodbury, and Mardiros Bozoian, an Armenian, on a recent Sunday a collection of $80 was taken for Armenian relief. This amount will be increased to $100.

FOXBORO.—This church, Rev. J. W. Flagg, pastor, continues to do excellent work in the community. Some time ago one of its attendants purchased a stereopticon and views. Bible stories are illustrated in a beautiful manner, and over 600 persons attend, many of whom are not regular attendants. The circle of King's Daughters gave a birthday party of late and more than $100 were netted, the amount being devoted to the church repair fund. The Y. P. S. C. E. is doing valuable work.

LYNN.—Chestnut Street is prospering under the ministry of Rev. G. W. Osgood. Congregations, Sunday school and benevolences have greatly increased and its important place in the religious work of the city is widely acknowledged.

BEVERLY.—Dane Street. This city has just experienced the greatest religious movement of its history. After several weeks of preparatory work, an average of 100 cottage prayer meetings being held weekly, Evangelist W. E. Geil held services for 13 days. The churches uniting besides this one were the Baptist, Methodist and North Beverly Congregational. Meetings were held in this meeting house which was packed. About 2,000 people were present on one occasion. Mr. Geil preached straightforward, manly sermons, but above all showed himself a great organizer. The results are 500 cards signed, church members warmed to personal work and the whole community roused to serious religious thought. Rev. F. J. V. Horn is pastor of this church.

NEWBURYPORT.—North. Last Sunday evening the local company of State militia by special invitation attended the service in a body to hear an illustrated lecture by Rev. C. P. Mills on Heroism. The church has an adult C. E. Society, which takes the place of the usual ladies' prayer meeting. The entire city regret the loss of Rev. C. F. Carter, who has just gone to the pastorate of the Hancock Church, Lexington, and Rev. J. W. Dodge will be greatly missed while away for some months in Europe with his daughter.

AMESBURY.—All the pulpits were filled March 15 with delegates attending a district Y. M. C. A. convention. Rev. G. L. Richmond did efficient service in leading the singing at some of the meetings. He has recently given a stirring address before the local C. E. Union in Newburyport.

NEWBURY.—The annual parish meeting disclosed a prosperous condition of the church with a small deficit, which was readily met by those present. Rev. F. W. Sanborn is pastor.

TAUNTON.—Union. The prospectus of the Curtis Club announces a set of interesting and helpful gatherings coming about every two weeks. Topics which well-qualified speakers will discuss are: The Pollard System of Reading, Uses of Biography, Limitations of Luxury, Presidential Outlook, Music, and Cremation. The season closes with a social reunion.

WORCESTER.—Salem Street. Rev. S. A. Harlow read his resignation March 8 after a pastorate of 18 months. This is another step in the consolidation of churches. A supper and social were held March 10 at which 200 persons were present. The Woman's Guild voted to give its money to the Armenian relief fund.——Park has dismissed its choir and will have congregational singing the coming year. By the will of the late Mrs. S. E. Allen the Home Missionary Society receives $1,000.

AUBURN.—The interest at present centers in the rebuilding of the church edifice towards which some steps have already been taken. The present membership is 112. The contributions for missions last year amounted to $230. The pastor is Rev. C. M. Pierce.

Maine.

FRYEBURG.—This church has met with great loss in the death of Miss M. F. Bradley, a faithful worker in all its activities. She leaves $3,000 to the church, $100 to the church circle, $3,000 to Fryeburg Academy, $1,000 to the Home Missionary Society and $500 each to the A. B. C. F. M., Maine Missionary Society and Good Will Farm. The Sunday evening service is increasing in numbers and interest and some are becoming Christians.

RICHMOND.—Progress is reported under the lead of Rev. S. E. McGeehon. The congregations are much increased, attendance at Sunday school is doubled, a monthly parish paper meets with favor, the Y. P. S. C. E. is prospering and helpful, new books have been obtained for the library. There is a quickening of spiritual power in the church.

CAMDEN.—A series of meetings without extra help has been greatly blessed and has quickened the church. Several additions were received to membership and more are in prospect. The congregations are large and attentive, the prayer meetings, C. E. Society, Sunday school and other departments are prosperous. The pastor is Rev. L. D. Evans.

AUGUSTA.—South. Last week Sunday occurred the dedication of two fine memorial windows, presented in memory of Hon. J. G. Blaine by his wife, and in memory of his wife by Hon. J. W. Bradbury. The symbol of the first is a Greek cross set in flowers, and of the other a Madonna by a French artist.

SOUTH GARDINER.—The pastor, Rev. A. L. Struthers, has had special meetings and there is unusual interest. Several members of leading families have been converted.

AUBURN.—Reports of the number of conversions during the recent awakening have been rather larger than were warranted by facts. However they number nearly 400.

New Hampshire.

MANCHESTER.—On petition of the ministers, who have been waging a hot crusade against the saloons of the city during the past year, a hearing before the governor and council lasting for two days brought out charges against the police commissioners of the city for failure to execute the law, and asking for their removal. But after two weeks the announcement was made that sufficient reason was not found for removal of the commissioners, but the crusade will still go on.——First recently held a birthday anniversary service to perpetuate the memory of Rev. Cyrus Wallace, pastor from 1839-73, during which time the church membership increased from 27 to 507. Addresses were made and reminiscences given.

HANOVER.—College. The latest manual of the church seems to be as nearly complete in its make-up and appearance as is possible, and is a worthy product of the careful preparation of its compilers, Professors C. F. Emerson and C. D. Adams. The work involved a thorough revision of the roll. The pastor, Rev. S. P. Leeds, D. D., furnished much of the material and a historical sketch of the church from the beginning in 1771. Special descriptive reviews deal with the church buildings, Dartmouth, the C. E. Society, and the rules, covenant, etc., are added. The catalogue of members is especially full and correct, the names appearing in groups by years and alphabetically. An extended list of all the persons ever connected with the church is also appended. The pastorates have numbered nine.

EXETER.—The churches have united in two rallies for the enforcement of the prohibitory law in the town, the last of which was held in the town hall, March 8, completely filling it. Frank Foxcroft, Esq., of Cambridge, Mass., gave a powerful address, sketching the work for no license in his own city, and clearly and forcibly stating the issue before the town. The practical result was seen in a pronounced victory at the polls on the following Tuesday's election, assuring the enforcement of the law the coming year, and, it is hoped, perpetually.

Vermont.

Rev. E. A. Whittier, who has been conducting successful revival meetings at several places in northern Vermont, has just closed a series at Jericho, where about 50 persons expressed a desire for a new life.——The church in Bridport has recently put a new furnace into its vestry.

Rhode Island.

PROVIDENCE.—Beneficent. A union service at which Miss Rebecca Krikorian spoke in behalf of her people in Armenia was held Monday evening, March 9. She also spoke at the Union Church on Sunday evening. A considerable sum for the Armenian fund was the result.——Union. A larger and an illustrated weekly calendar is one of the first signs of the Men's Union League's energy.——Swedish. Steadily growing strength marks the work of this church under Rev. J. P. Eagle's faithful leadership. A number of new members are to be received at the next communion.——Academy Avenue. The church and parsonage property have been repaired. Congregations morning and evening have largely increased in numbers since the beginning of Rev. W. E. Smedley's pastorate. A warm spiritual atmosphere pervades the church throughout and 28 new members have been received since Jan. 1.——Highland. A reward for reaching a certain attendance mark in Sunday school was arranged by Rev. L. S. Woodworth in the form of an illustrated lecture on California given by Rev. F. B. Pullan of Pilgrim Church.

PAWTUCKET.—Weeden Street. Special meetings for a week under Evangelist Joel Bassett began last Sunday, March 15. The temperance campaign in which the churches of all denominations joined, led by Mr. T. E. Murphy under the management of the Christian Citizenship League, resulted in large and enthusiastic gatherings and 1,200 signatures to the pledge. At a closing service 2,000 persons were present.

WOONSOCKET.—Globe. The church has voted to start at once on raising money for the contemplated repairs and enlargement of the church building. The work will probably be done in August.

Connecticut.

NEW HAVEN.—United. Last Sunday evening Bishop J. H. Vincent addressed the Men's Club service on the subject At School—Out of School, giving a description of the purpose and work of the Chautauqua Circles.——Redeemer. The pastor, Dr. W. L. Phillips, is preaching a series of Sunday evening sermons on Jesus and Common Duties.——Howard Avenue. Rev. W. J. Mutch is delivering a series of Sunday evening discourses on Qualities of Character, among his subjects being The Long Pull, A Cool Head, Old Reliable and Good Sense.——Dwight Place. Twenty-four new members were received on confession, March 8, and nine by letter. Among the former was an entire Sunday school class. The senior pastor, Dr. J. E. Twitchell, left last week for a month's vacation in Florida.

The New Haven Branch of the Woman's Board was addressed in Center Chapel last week Tuesday by Miss K. G. Lamson of the junior department of that organization.

SOUTHINGTON.—The interior of the house of worship is being thoroughly renovated, painted and frescoed. The pews are finished anew, also a fresh carpet is laid. Evangelist W. E. Biederwolf ended his religious labors last week after a successful campaign. The meetings were held under the auspices of the Congregational and Baptist churches, and a great increase to the membership of both is the result. Not only have the conversions been many, but there has been a general awakening such as has not been felt for years. Mr. Biederwolf leaves next month to spend two years in study in Germany, on a scholarship received while a student at Princeton.

SOUTH GLASTONBURY.—At the annual meeting lately reports showed the present membership to be 107, a gain of nine during the year. There were 11 additions, five on confession. The Ladies' Aid Society has raised $202, with which they have purchased new carpets for the chapel and made extensive repairs on it and on the parsonage. The Ladies' Missionary Society, although of recent origin, has done much excellent work and contributed $100 toward a share in the General Howard Roll of Honor. A new pipe organ has also been put in, in memory of the late W. S. Williams, at a cost of $2,000.

LITCHFIELD.—The church narrowly escaped destruction by fire last week Sunday afternoon. Two men who were passing gave the alarm and the prompt response of the fire department prevented the destruction of the entire edifice. It is supposed that it caught from the furnace. The loss was chiefly from water and will amount to about $500.

FAIRFIELD.—The recent basket entertainment netted $11 for the Home Missionary Society debt. In the Sunday school a special collection realized $40 for the same purpose, making over $200 in all that have been contributed by this church towards the debt.

SHELTON.—Twenty persons united with the church recently, most of them on confession. The church is in a flourishing condition, having over 200 members, although only organized a little over three years ago. Rev. L. M. Kenneston is the pastor.

STRATFORD.—The meeting house had a narrow escape from burning recently, the room under the lecture-room catching from an overloaded stove. The fire was fortunately discovered in time and put out with but little difficulty.

CENTRAL VILLAGE.—The 50th anniversary occurs April 15. Former members are urged to attend. Dr. L. W. Bacon will preach the evening sermon. Rev. O. M. Lord, the pastor, will preach the historical sermon.

PLANTSVILLE.—Nearly 100 pledge cards of persons signifying their desire to lead a Christian life have been received by the church as a result of the recent revival.

FALLS VILLAGE.—Rev. C. W. Hanna has recently purchased a stereopticon for use in connection with his Sunday school quarterly expositions and his Sunday evening talks.

BOZRAHVILLE.—Although there is no church here services are regularly held by Rev. Marcus Burr, and a Sunday school conducted. A flourising C. E. Society has lately been organized.

MIDDLE STATES.

New York.

NEW YORK.—Pilgrim has had eight of its young men enter the ministry, studying in Yale, Hartford, Andover and Union Seminaries; three of its young women have become wives of ministers; two of its members are now in Union Seminary and one a missionary in South Africa. Of the twelve clergymen in its membership at various times five are now on the roll.

The weekly missionary prayer meeting at the Bible House, March 13, was led by Mrs. Washington Choate. Miss Pickens of the C. H. M. S. spoke of the prayer meeting held at the Woman's Board in Boston and the power going out from such meetings. Mrs. Woodbury spoke of the difficulty of reaching some women who were members of the church but uninterested in missions. Mrs. Davis, Mrs. Bonne and others spoke. Earnest prayer was offered for the missionaries at this time in special need of guidance.

FRANKLIN.—In this old town of 800 population, a few years ago the two churches, Congregational and Presbyterian, united to become Congregational, selling the Presbyterian parsonage and the Congregational edifice. Rev. John Marsland is the pastor. The house of worship has been entirely overhauled at an expense of $2,000 and is now one of the most attractive of the town edifices. Twenty-three members were added to the church during the past year, making the present membership over 300. City visitors come here in increasing numbers.

CORTLAND.—This church has recently had a large addition to its membership, the result of special services carried on by the pastor, Rev. W. H. Pound, at its East Side Mission. The young people of the congregation have manifested their affection for their pastor by presenting him with a fine copy of the Standard Dictionary, also putting his portrait on the wall of the chapel with those of preceding pastors. This will be one of the large churches in the State, so rapid and constant has been its growth.

OWEGO.—Last week Sunday was made a glad day by the reception of several new accessions. At the next communion others will be received. Rev. R. S. Underwood of Northampton, Mass., has lately been holding meetings here and great good has been done. The pastor, Rev. C. M. Bartholomew, and his people are much encouraged. The church choir has been greatly improved by recent additions. All departments are taking on new life.

CORNING —This church has recently received the largest addition since its organization six years ago, raising its membership to 263. The building committee have strong evidences that they will soon have pledged $10,000 for the much needed new edifice. Rev. N. E. Fuller is its first and present pastor.

MAINE.—At the annual meeting Rev. A. S. Wood was engaged as pastor for the coming year. At the Union Center Branch Mr. W. L. Edson gave an interesting lecture on his travels in South America, the proceeds to go toward the church.

Rev. G. M. Rowland of Japan is making a three weeks' tour among the churches of the Black River and St. Lawrence Association. Between March 13 and April 5 he will have addressed about 25 churches in the interest of the American Board. Mr. Rowland is a native of this country.

New Jersey.

EAST ORANGE.— Trinity. The Church Guild, which does all of the women's work of the church and is virtually an institutional church in itself, has had a successful year, having raised and expended in benevolent lines about $900. Its eight committees controlling the various branches for mission work, foreign and home, charitable work of several forms, hospitality, pastor's aid and girls' and children's clubs continue to do efficient work. One branch has given away about 400 garments during a year and has provided many dinners. Another branch conducting industrial work has produced a new idea in the form of a Girl's Social Club, one feature of which is a cooking class. The total beneficence of the church, over $2,000, came chiefly from plate collections, Sunday school offerings, missionary concert offerings and the Ladies' Guild. More than one-third of it came from the last-named source.

CLOSTER —The church continues to prosper under pastorate of Rev. C. A. S. Dwight. A Do Something Band of little girls, organized by the pastor's wife, has justified its name and lived up to a very practical motto, by regular fortnightly contributions and meetings at which they sew and make scrap-books for hospitals and the New York Flower Mission. They have also sent provisions to that mission and "comfort bags" to the sailor's home in New York. By means of a sale they were able to contribute $25 toward paying the debt of the C. H. M. S., and still have a considerable balance for a home missionary box. The band, which began with four members, now numbers over 30 and the fortnightly dues are but two cents.

ORANGE.—This church in Orange Valley has passed a prosperous year, 18 persons having been added to its membership, making a total of about 300. The Sunday school is growing, and the contributions for home work and missions show a healthy increase. The beneficence was a little over $2,500, a gain of about $500. Over $150 were recently contributed toward the Armenian fund.

THE INTERIOR.

Ohio.

CLEVELAND.—Trinity. The new and beautiful edifice was dedicated March 5. Rev. R. H. Conwell, D. D., of Philadelphia preached the dedication sermon in the morning and gave an evening address on The Institutional Church. Crowds thronged the house at both services. The exercises continued through the week closing with the reception of members and the communion on Sunday. In the evening Pres. W. G. Ballantine of Oberlin preached on The Coming Church. The new building is one of the most beautiful edifices in the city, being old English in style. It is built so that when thrown together it seats 1,300 persons. The building includes 25 distinct rooms. Institutional methods will be used and to that end there are reading, recreation, bath, dressing and dining-rooms, besides a kitchen, pantries, parlors and an office and study. The cost was less than $35,000. The church was organized less than two years ago and has now a property valued at nearly $50,000 and nearly 300 active members. The Endeavor Societies furnished one of the large windows. The Ladies' Aid Society erected a beautiful window representing an Easter scene in memory of the founding of the church, the first service being held on Easter Sunday two years ago. The third large window of the new building has been erected by the people as a tribute of love to their pastor, Rev. R. A. George. The future of the church is bright with such workers and equipment as it has.

Plymouth holds neighborhood prayer meetings in preparation for Passion Week services. Mr. Pratt, the musical director, conducts a class in music study one evening each week. The pastor, Rev. L. L. Taylor, holds a special service every Friday afternoon after school for young people between the ages of 12 and 18. As a part of its observance of the Lenten season the church arranged for an illustrated lecture on the Passion Play of Oberammergau, which was largely attended and impressive and helpful. The recent address of Prof. H. C. King of Oberlin before the Congregational Club awakened so great interest that Rev. L. L. Taylor invited to his own home a few evenings later about 60 of the men of his congregation to meet him and hear him speak on the same topic, The Spiritual Life—the Manly Life. Plymouth Church has recently added to its other lines of activity a sewing school for the children of its down-town neighborhood.——Euclid Avenue. The Choristers is a recently organized musical society of the church. The Women's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies hold an all day meeting every Tuesday preparing missionary boxes, serving lunch at noon, and devoting the closing hour to a missionary program. Nearly 100 women were present at the meeting last week.——Franklin Avenue. Rev. H. O. Allen has resigned to take effect May 31. He came to the church on graduating from Oberlin Seminary seven years ago, has done strong pulpit work and wise and faithful pastoral work from the first and has greatly endeared himself to his people and brethren in the ministry.

FAIRPORT AND RICHMOND.—This field is distinctly frontier. The pastor, Rev. M. B. Morris, ably assisted by his wife and daughter, has held this winter a month's special meetings in each place. Richmond has paid $150 of its $900 debt, besides keeping up interest and current expenses in his pastorate of one year. Neighborhood prayer circles and largely attended men's meetings were features of the special work at Fairport and Mrs. Morris has organized a fortnightly mother's meeting. The pastor has not been absent a Sunday in the year, but all three are now compelled to rest from the heavy labor.

WINDHAM.—In Rev. D. D. Davies's pastorate of a little less than two years there have been from three to nine accessions at every communion save one, the Y. P. S. C. E. has been reorganized on the basis of the pledge, which has greatly improved its work, a debt which had encumbered the church for years has all been provided for, the morning congregation has increased till it fills the house and the evening attendance is growing rapidly.

CHARDON.—Within two weeks this church lost three of its most valued members, Mrs. M. A. Woodbury, a charter member and liberal supporter, Mrs. J. S. Wright and Mrs. E. L. Manly. From their estates the churches at Chardon and Huntsburgh receive $200 each and the C. H. M. S. and A. B. C. F. M. $100 each. From the latter the C. H. M. S. receives $50 and the Woman's Board $100.

COLLINWOOD.—In Rev. Owen Jenkins's five years' pastorate, just closed, the membership has doubled, a new house of worship has been built, the congregations have reached their highest mark and the Sunday school has had a steady growth. He leaves the church in an excellent condition and bears with him the good wishes of the church.

MEDINA.—First. In 1819, Feb. 18, seven persons were organized as a Congregational church. On the 77th anniversary this year, Rev. J. R. Nichols and wife gave a reception to the congregation, about 200 being present. The pastor arranged a week of Lenten services the last week in February, with Cleveland ministers as preachers.

Illinois.

SHAW.—The evangelistic work, which resulted in the organization of a new church during the labors of Rev. Van Auken, shows anew the power of the gospel and also the adaptation of the Congregational polity to unite all Christian people in one organization. Until this work was inaugurated no church existed in this village. Occasional services were held by neighboring pastors. During the meetings the interest became so intense that, although the roads were almost impassable, yet plans were made for conveying the people to the church. Large congregations gathered every evening. The religious interest was deep and extended. In the homes and in places of business, not only in the village but in the surrounding country, people discussed the question of their relation to God. At the close of the meetings a church of 67 members was organized. Others pledged to lead a Christian life.

ROCK FALLS.—Rev. E. A. Fredenhagen has been diligent in caring for the regions round about. He has held occasional services in Hume. Recently he started special meetings, dividing the time between two schoolhouses in that township. Evangelist Van Auken has assisted him. A blessed work crowned the joint labor. The whole community was stirred as never before. At the close it was decided to organize the Plymouth Church of Hume. Fifty-seven members entered into fellowship. More than 60 others have signified a deep personal interest in the work and most of them have signed cards. The church expects to erect a house of worship at once.

WINSLOW.—A series of meetings near this town, in Stephenson County, was recently conducted by Evangelist R. W. Purdue, under the auspices of the H. M. S. The whole community was much interested and many gave themselves to the Lord. Twenty-two persons were organized into a new church. It is expected that as many more will soon join. The church has a fine edifice previously erected by those who now compose the church. It was dedicated free from debt three months ago. The field is under the care of Rev. A. J. Baldwin.

Indiana.

MICHIGAN CITY.—First has received 12 adult members this month, making a gain of 83 members during Rev. W. C. Gordon's pastorate. The second anniversary of the Men's Club in the evening brought the largest attendance in the history of the church. The lecture-room was packed besides the main room. A valuable feature of the program was a paper by Professor Teale on Sunday Evening Music.

ALEXANDRIA.—In this growing town in the gas regions the Congregationalists have begun work under the lead of Deacon C. T. Rogers, the father of Rev. W. C. Rogers of Brecksville, O. A hall has been rented and a Sunday school and cottage prayer meeting are maintained. It is hoped soon to perfect the organization and secure regular services.

TERRE HAUTE.—First. Deacon Harry Ross celebrated his 94th birthday, March 4. He moved from Stillwater, N. Y., in 1820, and has been identified with this church since the time of its organization.

Special meetings have been held in Washington and Fremont with good results.

Michigan.

HANCOCK.—This church, Dr. J. E. Reilly, pastor, rejoices in the addition of 64 members at its March communion service, 61 on confession. This is the largest number ever received at one time by the church.

THE WEST.

Iowa.

CEDAR FALLS.—Five churches united in a series of evangelistic meetings led by Mr. M. B. Williams. They were well attended from the beginning, and after the first week the Opera House was uniformly crowded. The interest was intense. Many persons were led to think deeply of their spiritual needs and Christians were shown how to do personal work. The result was an unprecedented quickening, about 500 persons already having united with the various churches, and the prospect is that others will follow. Money was immediately raised and steps taken to organize a Y. M. C. A., and a Christian Citizenship League of over 400 members was formed. The Congregational Church, Rev. S. J. Beach, pastor, has received 60 accessions, 48 on confession.

DUBUQUE.— First. Seventy-one persons united with this church March 8 on confession. The majority of these were among the leading business men of the city. This accession gives the church a membership of nearly 700 and makes it one of the largest in Iowa. During the five years' pastorate of Rev. F. E. Hopkins over 300 persons have joined the church.

OSAGE.—The recent revival, which increased the membership by 60, has also greatly strengthened all lines of work. At a recent midweek prayer meeting, the attendance reaching 200, it was found necessary to adjourn to the auditorium.

SIOUX CITY.—Pilgrim. The church voted not to ask for home missionary aid after the coming year.

Minnesota.

ST. PAUL.—Atlantic. The Men's Club is filling the house each Sunday evening. Rev. S. W. Dickinson is the pastor.——Pacific. This church which, as a mission of Plymouth and as an independent organization, has existed for nearly 20 years and has done excellent work, especially among railroad men, has received overtures from a neighboring Presbyterian church to unite with it upon a Congregational basis, moving its church building a distance of about half a mile. After a prolonged discussion, Rev. Messrs. J. H. Morley, E. P. Ingersoll, D. D., and W. B. Millard being present and participating, the church voted by a large majority to accept the proposition. The Pacific property, costing over $8,000, has been secured by outside Congregationalists, who have given $5,000 and by railroad people who have given nearly $3,000. On this account the church felt that it could not leave its own denomination and that it should remain near the railroad shops. The Presbyterians recognized the justice of these claims and proposed to unite with Pacific Church, selecting a site convenient for the railroad people. The prospect is that the union will be effected, although unforeseen contingencies may arise. The Presbyterian vote was practically unanimous, while with the Congregationalists the majority at first were opposed to removal, but later withdrew their objections.

MINNEAPOLIS.— Pilgrim. Rev. C. B. Moody is giving a series of Sunday evening addresses to large congregations on The Young Woman in Her Various Social Relations in Life.——Lowry Hill. This Sunday school is growing so rapidly that it will be necessary to enlarge the building.——Lyndale will receive large accessions from the revival just closed.——Como Avenue. Maple Hill, a branch of this church, is preparing to erect a mission building in the spring. Rev. J. A. Stemen is the pastor.

FREEDOM.—Rev. Wilbur Fisk reports interest at some of the stations on his large field where revival services have been held in connection with the United Brethren, several conversions and larger hopefulness resulting.

LAKE PARK.—Services have been commenced in out-districts otherwise unsupplied with preaching and special services have been held at the home church. Armenia Day was observed with a liberal contribution.

VERNDALE.—Increased spiritual life, several conversions and more interest in the church on the part of the community are results of a series of meetings conducted by Rev. Alexander McAllister.

Church building is in progress at Randall and preaching is sustained at several out-stations.

Rev. R. P. Herrick has just issued his eighth annual report as State superintendent of Sunday schools. The number of schools has grown from 144 to 351 and the membership from 14,000 to 28,583. This remarkable increase is attributed to co-operation with the pastors and the home missionary superintendent. Under the efficient management of Superintendent Herrick the coming year promises to be still more successful.

Nebraska.

AURORA.—Home missionary rally day, March 8, proved a delightful occasion. The pastor, Rev. S. I. Hanford, had made thorough preparation and Superintendent Bross presented the work at the morning service. In the evening there was a general program, which interested all, the older people taking special delight in seeing the pennies counted out of their birthday box. The combined offerings are expected to reach $50.

CRETE.—The sudden death, March 9, of the pastor, Rev. W. P. Bennett, cast a gloom over the entire community. He has ministered here for more than 12 years and has been intimately associated with the denominational work of the State, especially in educational affairs. During his pastorate the church membership has grown from 185 to nearly 400. Three of his children are in educational work.

PALISADE.—Rev. T. C. Moffatt, in his earnest desire to reserve Sunday mornings and evenings for service at this point, preaches alternately on Sunday afternoons to the Hayes County First Church, seven miles distant and the Hayes Center Church, 15 miles away. At Palisade a number of associate members of the Y. P. S. C. E. have lately become active members in service as well as in name.

TRENTON.—The missionary concert, when different branches of the work are considered, is the most interesting prayer meeting of the month. A missionary reading circle has also been started, meeting weekly at the homes of the members. The pastor, Rev. David Donaldson, made a personal canvass of his field in the interest of the C. H. M. S., with good results.

LINCOLN.—Swedish. A destructive fire, March 4, consumed the large brick building containing the hall where services were held. The organ was saved, but all the hymn-books, many chairs and other furniture were burned. The church has rented a small room for the present and will at once take steps to secure a lot and build a house of worship. Rev. J. M. Tillberg is pastor.

CHADRON.—The work is progressing under the vigorous leadership of Rev. A. E. Ricker. A large Junior C. E. has lately been organized. The pastor recently presented the overdue claims of the C. C. B. S. on the parsonage loan and $50 were pledged.

Rev. G. W. James of Creighton has been maintaining for some time an out-station at Salem, three and a half miles to the east, where interest is steadily growing.

North Dakota.

ARGUSVILLE.—This church is being supplied for the present by two laymen from Rose Valley, who visit the people and conduct a Sunday evening service. Much interest is already manifested and there is hope that the church will be revived and enlarged and enabled to hold regular services henceforth.

KELSO.—The new meeting house is nearly ready for plastering. The work here is growing in every respect, 21 persons attending a recent prayer meeting Two persons have lately united with the church and others are expected soon. Rev. N. P. McQuarrie is untiring in his labors both here and at Hillsboro.

REYNOLDS.—This is a growing town on the Great Northern R. R., and is cared for by Rev. J. D. Whitelaw in connection with Cummings and Buxton. A Sunday school has been formed and is greatly prospered. A church will be organized in the near future.

HARVEY.—Substantial progress is being made under the lead of Mr. A. G. Young. The congregations are good and interest is deepening.

The church at Cooperstown received additions at the last communion and others are expected soon.——A council has been called to organize a new church at Havana, Sargent County.——Evangelist Gimblett is assisting Mr. Kevan at Forman.

South Dakota

ARMOUR.—This field has suffered severely from failure of crops and removal of members, but pastor and people are making every effort to advance Christian interests in the community. Beside the Sunday school, which is full of life and increasing in membership, Rev. W. B. Hubbard has a class for outline Bible study, which meets during the week. A literary club has recently been organized. The pastor also cares for the Wheeler field, 30 miles away, preaching there fortnightly, and devoting Sunday afternoon to the Prosper Sunday school, a mission six miles distant.

DE SMET.—Twenty-seven persons were received into membership, March 5. The meetings begun by Miss E. K. Henry have been continued during the past 10 weeks by the Congregational, Methodist and Baptist pastors. About 200 conversions are reported, all the churches sharing in the harvest and the joy.

ACADEMY.—This church and the school have sustained a severe loss in the recent death of Mr. Shepard, his son, and a son of Mr. Liebee. The young men were leaders in the academy and in every good work. Evangelists Thomson and Gamble are conducting a convention of Christian workers.

LAKE PRESTON.—Rev. R. M. Keyes is serving acceptably this and the Lake Henry church. He has recently closed a series of meetings which have proved a great blessing. At Lake Henry nine persons were received at the last communion, and the Sunday school is showing new life.

REDSTONE.—The meetings conducted here by Rev. G. W. Crater gave a new impetus to religious work. Neighborhood prayer meetings are held, and three persons have recently united with this new church, while others expect to join at the next communion.

MECKLING.—The meetings here, conducted by Miss E. K. Henry, have been productive of great good in the community. Miss Henry is now laboring at Letcher.

The two weeks' meetings held at Winfred, by Rev. Micajah Doty, have been helpful.——The work at Willow Lake and Pitrodie, in charge of the new pastor, Rev. W. C. Cleworth, is hopeful.——The work in Plankinton is promising in spite of many removals. The Sunday school is growing in numbers and interest.

The Plankinton Association has divided its territory into districts, in each of which a spring fellowship meeting will be held. The annual meeting of the association will be held at a central point and in the fall, as formerly.

Montana.

HELENA.—Through a generous proposition of one of the members of the congregation, who more than once has lent a helping hand, the church is soon to be relieved from the burdensome debt which has been crippling its efficiency. The work of the Ladies' Missionary Society is in a prosperous condition. At a recent meeting five new members were received and others are expected to join soon.

BILLINGS.—Two weeks' special services, in which the pastor, Rev. P. B. Jackson, was assisted by Superintendent Bell, were recently held. They were well attended and aroused deep interest. It is believed that increased spiritual efficiency will result.

LIVINGSTON.—The beneficial results of the recent series of revival meetings in which Evangelist McGregor assisted become more and more apparent Fifteen persons, all adults, were added to the church March 1.

Arizona.

TEMPE.—A Mexican Sunday school has been organized by Rev. Stephen Edwards, the supplies for which are furnished by the Y. P. S. C. E. of this church.

New Mexico.

SAN RAFAEL.—Mexican. A room in the parsonage is devoted to the use of the young people who gather there evenings to play games. A girls' sewing class and a boys' brigade have been formed. The requirements for joining the latter are membership in the Sunday school and abstinence from intoxicating liquors, tobacco and gambling. Special meetings were held during the last week in February, in which the pastor was assisted by Miguel and Jesus Moya. The attendance was good and interest was awakened.

SAN MATEO.—The people of this Mexican village have given a hearty welcome to the mission school established by the Education Society last fall. They have no public school and the mission affords them the only educational opportunities they have. Patriotic entertainments were given Feb. 22 here and at San Rafael. Few of the people had ever seen a United States flag before.

GALLUP.—Twenty-two persons have been received into the church since Jan. 1. The evening congregations have increased until the seating capacity of the hall is insufficient.

WHITE OAKS.—The church has been without a pastor since Aug. 1. It is taking fresh courage from the arrival of Rev. J. A. Hollars of Chicago who began work March 8.

PACIFIC COAST.

California.

ADIN.—Special services were held for eight days, Rev. J. A. Spencer of Alturas aiding Rev. J. A. Jones. There were full houses, earnest inquirers and several conversions.

PARADISE.—At the annual meeting easy-chairs were substituted for the ordinary seats and the room was prettily decorated. About $150 have been spent in improvements on the parsonage, now one of the coziest dwellings in the village. New carpet and chairs adorn the pulpit platform. Five weeks' meetings have been held with marked interest. Christian people were aroused and the influence extended through the C. E. Society and the Sunday school, where boys and girls have confessed Christ. Seven persons have united with the church and others are to follow.

NILES.—Rev. F. H. Maar has established a men's meeting held at different homes. Growing out of this a reading-room has been opened at a cost of $5 per month, where any may spend their evenings. A Christian Endeavorer is to be in charge, who will close the evening with prayer, inviting those present to remain. Mr. Maar is about breaking ground for a church edifice at Decoto, three miles from Niles, where for some years he has been preaching in the schoolhouse.

TULARE.—The Boys' Brigade is growing under the wise management of its new captain, Hon. E. T. Cooper, a leading lawyer of the county, and promises to be one of the best on the list. The Sunday school membership is also increasing. The Junior C. E. recently gave an entertainment, thereby adding to its funds, all of which are devoted to benevolences. The Ladies' Aid Society has just given $100 to the church treasury.

SAN FRANCISCO.—First is enjoying the ministrations of Professor Lloyd of Pacific Seminary. This church is called to mourn the loss by death of two excellent men, C. S. Eaton, for 33 years a member and for a long time deacon, and F. A. Frank, an efficient trustee.

Washington.

COLUMBIA CITY.—At their prayer meeting, March 5, the Methodist Protestant church voted to become Congregational and at once organized with 18 members, adopted articles of incorporation and chose officers. The property of the church will be transferred to the new organization. This change is made with the approval of the Methodist Protestant churches of Seattle, of which Columbia is a suburb.

SEATTLE.—Plymouth. Rev. W. H. G. Temple anticipated the city election by a timely sermon, emphasizing such truths as voters ought to consider. The Endeavorers of the city were active on election day and a good ticket was elected. These Christian young men thus encouraged will yet become a purifying power in city government.

ROY.—Rev. and Mrs. H. E. Gregory held a short series of meetings at Hart Lake, one of their outstations, the people coming long distances to attend though the services were held in an uncomfortable, poorly lighted schoolhouse. Such isolated communities are specially responsive to Christian effort.

WALLA WALLA.—Union revival services, in which four churches participate, are being conducted by Evangelists Holdridge and Dickson with good results. A religious census of the town has just been taken.

ADDITIONS TO THE CHURCHES.

| | Conf. | Tot. |
|---|---|---|
| CALIFORNIA. | | |
| Auburn, | 1 | 3 |
| Paradise, | — | 7 |
| Tulare, | 6 | 9 |
| Weaverville, | 7 | 10 |
| CONNECTICUT. | | |
| New Haven, Dwight Pl., | 24 | 33 |
| Norwich, Second, | 4 | 9 |
| Oxford, | 4 | 8 |
| Shelton, | 20 | 20 |
| Torrington, Third, | — | 10 |
| Windsor Locks, | — | 3 |
| ILLINOIS. | | |
| Bunker Hill, | 19 | 19 |
| Centralia, | 44 | 44 |
| Chicago, Millard Ave., | 19 | 23 |
| Plymouth, | 4 | 11 |
| Hume, | — | 57 |
| Illini, | — | 3 |
| Sandwich, | 4 | 8 |
| Shaw, | 67 | 67 |
| Winslow, | — | 22 |
| IOWA. | | |
| Agency, | 13 | 13 |
| Cedar Falls, | 48 | 60 |
| Dubuque, First, | 71 | 74 |
| Eldon, | — | 28 |
| Fayette, | 16 | 16 |
| Grand River, | 15 | 15 |
| Salem, | — | 58 |
| Sioux City, Pilgrim, | — | 60 |
| MAINE. | | |
| Brownville, | 4 | 4 |
| Camden, | 9 | 13 |
| MASSACHUSETTS. | | |
| Cambridge, Wood Memorial, | 2 | 6 |
| Chelsea, Central, | 3 | 7 |
| Needham, | 65 | 65 |
| Sheffield, | 5 | 5 |
| Springfield, First, | 12 | 20 |
| MICHIGAN. | | |
| Grand Blanc, | 33 | 41 |
| Hancock, | 61 | 64 |
| Hopkins, First, | 23 | 23 |
| Lawrence, | 5 | 7 |
| Olivet, | — | 3 |
| Rockford, | 5 | 7 |
| Town Line, | — | 20 |
| MINNESOTA. | | |
| Minneapolis, Lowry Hill, | — | 5 |
| Stewart, | — | 9 |
| MISSOURI. | | |
| St. Louis, Central, | 1 | 8 |
| Compton Hill, | 13 | 15 |
| First, | 5 | 23 |
| Hyde Park, | 10 | 10 |
| Pilgrim, | 4 | 8 |
| Tabernacle, | 3 | 6 |
| Third, | 9 | 12 |
| Reber Place, | 3 | 3 |
| NEBRASKA. | | |
| Blair, | 2 | 4 |
| Chadron, | 3 | 4 |
| De Soto, | 20 | 20 |
| Fairmont, | — | 9 |
| NEBRASKA. | | |
| Fairview Schoolhouse, | — | 10 |
| Grafton, | 9 | 9 |
| Grant, | 16 | 16 |
| Lincoln, Plymouth, | 17 | 19 |
| Newcastle, | — | 22 |
| North Hastings, | 4 | 4 |
| Ravenna, | 4 | 4 |
| Trenton, | 6 | 12 |
| West Hamilton, | 5 | 5 |
| NEW HAMPSHIRE. | | |
| Concord, | — | 5 |
| Hinsdale, | 2 | 3 |
| NEW YORK. | | |
| Antwerp, | 7 | 7 |
| Corning, | 38 | 45 |
| Cortland, | 13 | 21 |
| New York, Pilgrim, | 12 | 26 |
| Norfolk, | 10 | 10 |
| Owego, | 4 | 5 |
| Wellsville, | — | 3 |
| OHIO. | | |
| Cleveland, Swedish, | 5 | 7 |
| Columbus, Eastwood, | 2 | 3 |
| First, | 4 | 8 |
| Mayflower, | 2 | 2 |
| Plymouth, | 2 | 9 |
| Wauseon, | 4 | 4 |
| OREGON. | | |
| Freewater, | 12 | 15 |
| Ione, | — | 25 |
| Sherwood, | — | 22 |
| SOUTH DAKOTA. | | |
| De Smet, | 13 | 13 |
| Holabird, | 8 | 14 |
| Lake Henry, | — | 9 |
| Redstone, | — | 3 |
| Watertown, | — | 6 |
| UTAH. | | |
| Salt Lake City, First, | 14 | 19 |
| Phillips, | 2 | 3 |
| VERMONT. | | |
| Bradford, | 5 | 5 |
| Clarendon, | 6 | 6 |
| East Brookfield, | 2 | 6 |
| Milton, | 8 | 10 |
| Orwell, | 8 | 8 |
| Rochester, | 6 | 7 |
| St. Johnsbury, North, | 6 | 6 |
| WASHINGTON. | | |
| Almira, | — | 8 |
| Medical Lake, | — | 5 |
| Spokane, Second, | — | 9 |
| Walla Walla, | 3 | 4 |
| WISCONSIN. | | |
| Columbia City, | — | 18 |
| Elkhorn, | 5 | 9 |
| OTHER CHURCHES. | | |
| Gallup, N. M., | — | 12 |
| Havana, N. D., | — | 8 |
| Livingston, Mont., | 15 | 15 |
| Michigan City, Ind., First, | 4 | 12 |
| Nashville, Tenn., Union, | 3 | 3 |
| Woonsocket, R. I., | 1 | 3 |
| Churches with less than three, | 23 | 32 |

Conf., 1,026; Tot., 1,685.

Total since Jan. 1. Conf., 5,667; Tot., 9,284

For Weekly Register see page 495.

PROFESSOR CURTIS AT THE OLD SOUTH.

The great and important period of Israel's history under the kings was ably considered by Prof. E. L. Curtis of Yale University in the fourth lecture of the course on The Old Testament and Modern Scholarship. Before turning to the development of religious thought and practice he summarized briefly the political growth and social and material progress of Israel indicated by the consolidation of isolated tribes into a nation which advanced to the position of a first-class power. This period has been regarded as one of backsliding, both of practice and belief, but modern scholarship has demonstrated that in the course of it Israel took a great step forward.

The two great religious influences were the priests and the prophets. The priestly power appears in the development of the sanctuary, worship in many places being concentrated into a single spot—the temple at Jerusalem; in an organized priesthood, finally restricted to a single tribe; and in a national, written, canonical law, of which Jehovah was regarded as the author and Moses as the means of its communication. The prophets represented the mystical teachers of religion and their great business was to give the people revelations of Jehovah. They were kingmakers and men of great influence in political affairs, for religion and patriotism were synonymous terms, but their chief function was as the conscience of the state. Through the teachings of later prophets, Amos, Hosea, Isaiah, Micah, Jeremiah, Israel's religion ceased to be national and became universal. Guilt, judgment and redemption were the themes of prophetic discourse. The ethical conception of Jehovah was strongly emphasized, Israel's sins—unrighteousness, immorality and impurity of worship—passionately denounced, and foreign invasion constituted the punishment always threatened by the prophets, although they represented the divine purpose as being not to destroy completely but to save, and they always gave hope of future redemption.

In closing, the lecturer declared that at the beginning of this epoch Jehovah was Israel's God, but at the end he was the one living and true God of righteousness, revealed not only as the Judge and Controller of all the world but as the God of grace and love, the Redeemer of mankind. Professor Curtis's hearers went away with a new conception of the spirit of divine revelation and a fresh impulse to read and study the prophetic writings.

Pure

Blood means sound health. With pure, rich, healthy blood, the stomach and digestive organs will be vigorous, and there will be no dyspepsia. Rheumatism and Neuralgia will be unknown. Scrofula and Salt Rheum will disappear. With pure

Blood

Your nerves will be strong, and your sleep sound, sweet and refreshing. Hood's Sarsaparilla makes pure blood. That is why it cures so many diseases. That is why so many thousands take it to cure disease, retain good health, prevent sickness and suffering. Remember

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is the One True Blood Purifier. $1 per bottle.

Hood's Pills cure Liver Ills; easy to take, easy to operate. 25c.

Christian Entertainments!

No church ought to be without facilities for furnishing pure recreation. With a Stereopticon the interesting places of the world can be shown; inspiring moral and temperance stories illustrated; humor made realistic; choicest statuary and artistic gems flashed upon the screen. Do you know of anything better? We don't.

Write for free literature. Large illustrated catalogue 20 cen's.

RILEY BROTHERS,

Branches: 16 Beekman St., New York.

BOSTON: 244 Washington St. CHICAGO: 196 La Salle St. KANSAS CITY (Mo.): 515 East 14th St. MINNEAPOLIS: 1564 Hennepin Ave. CHATTANOOGA: 708 Market St. SAN FRANCISCO: 430 Kearny St. PORTLAND: 411 Couch St.

REX BRAND Extract of BEEF FLAVOR

Sample, 4 cents. Book free. CUDAHY - - SO. OMAHA

IT SPEAKS.

You recall the story of the woman who called her dog "Chauncey Depew" because she always made him speak for his dinner.

There is nothing that speaks as eloquently to the guests at your table as a stately sideboard. In calling attention to this subject we wish also to call attention to a very remarkable design at moderate cost.

Here is only a 5 foot Board, but it looks every inch of seven feet. It stands nearly 90 inches in hight. The top is about 32 inches deep. There are three upper shelves, 2 plate closets, a china closet, a silver drawer, a 50-inch linen drawer and a serviette drawer.

The carving of the pillars and capitals, of the panels and columns, is worthy of close study. The China Cabinet has heavy plate glass sides and a 30 inch plate glass door with steel lock. The mirror is over four feet in width. The general appearance of this Sideboard is very imposing.

PAINE FURNITURE CO.,

48 CANAL STREET, BOSTON.

Not a Patent Medicine.

Old Age

is usually another name for debility. Too much food, and improper food is eaten, overtaxing the impaired digestive organs; the kidneys do not properly carry off the effete products; the brain is sluggish. All these troubles are overcome by the use of

Freligh's Tonic

A Phosphorized Cerebro-Spinant

Digestion is improved; kidneys stimulated; brain brightened; new energy given. Absolutely harmless.

Prescribed by over forty thousand physicians or ten years past. Regular bottle, $1.00, 100 doses. All druggists, or by mail. Sample by mail, 25 cents. Concentrated, prompt, powerful. Descriptive pamphlet, formula, testimonials, etc., mailed to any address.

I. O. Woodruff & Co.,
Manufacturing Chemists,
106-108 FULTON STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

Formula on Every Bottle.

Guaranty Trust Co.

of New York.

Formerly New York Guaranty and Indemnity Co.
Mutual Life Building,
65 CEDAR STREET, N. Y.

CAPITAL, - - - - - $2,000,000
SURPLUS, - - - - - - $2,000,000

ACTS AS TRUSTEE FOR CORPORATIONS, FIRMS AND INDIVIDUALS, AS GUARDIAN, EXECUTOR AND ADMINISTRATOR. TAKES ENTIRE CHARGE OF REAL AND PERSONAL ESTATES.

INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSITS
subject to check or on certificate.

WALTER G. OAKMAN, President.
ADRIAN ISELIN, JR., Vice-President.
GEORGE R. TURNBULL, 2d Vice-President.
HENRY A. MURRAY, Treas. and Sec.
J. NELSON BORLAND, Assist. Treas. and Sec.

DIRECTORS.

| | |
|---|---|
| Samuel D. Babcock, | Adrian Iselin, Jr., |
| George F. Baker, | Augustus D. Juilliard, |
| George S. Bowdoin, | James N. Jarvie, |
| Frederic C. Bromwell, | Richard A. McCurdy, |
| Walter R. Gillette, | Walter G. Oakman, |
| Robert Goelet, | Alexander E. Orr, |
| G. G. Haven, | Henry H. Rogers, |
| Oliver Harriman, | Henry W. Smith, |
| R. Somers Hayes, | H. McK. Twombly, |
| Charles R. Henderson, | Frederick W. Vanderbilt, |
| William C. Whitney. | |

HOME INSURANCE COMPANY

OF NEW YORK,
OFFICE, NO. 119 BROADWAY.

Eighty-Fifth Semi-Annual Statement, January, 1896.

SUMMARY OF ASSETS.

| | |
|---|---|
| Cash in Banks | $469,914 59 |
| Real Estate | 1,705,895.91 |
| United States Stocks (market value) | 1,418,425.00 |
| Bank, Trust Co., and Railroad Stocks and Bonds (market value) | 3,946,493.00 |
| State and City Bonds (market value) | 855,927.93 |
| Bonds and Mortgages, being first lien on Real Estate | 463,009.13 |
| Loans on Stocks, payable on demand | 426,550 00 |
| Premiums uncollected and in hands of Agents | 515,227.06 |
| Interest due and accrued on 1st January, 1896 | 52 185.92 |
| | $9,853,628.54 |

LIABILITIES.

| | |
|---|---|
| Cash Capital | $3,000,000.00 |
| Reserve Premium Fund | 4,395,659.00 |
| Reserve for Unpaid Losses and Claims | 752,514.13 |
| Net Surplus | 1,705,455.41 |
| | $9,853,628.54 |

D. A. HEALD, President.
J. H. WASHBURN, E. G. SNOW, Vice-Presidents.
W. L. BIGELOW, T. B. GREENE, Secretaries.
H. J. FERRIS, A. M. BURTIS, Ass't Secretaries.
NEW YORK, January 7, 1896.

YOU SELL WE BUY

DO YOU WANT TO SELL A Western Mortgage
or Western Land—avoid foreclosure costs—stop sending good money after bad—get a good 5% investment instead? State exact location, condition of title, and your lowest price. Over $2,000,000 in Western securities successfully handled by the present management of this corporation.
THE BOSTON REALTY, INDEMNITY AND TRUST CO
Send for our Bond List. 38 Equitable Building, Boston.

THE BUSINESS OUTLOOK.

There is no marked change in the general trade situation of the country. Spring business is backward owing to the low temperature. The outlook is promising, although no such movement is expected this spring as was witnessed last year. As a rule, commodity values are somewhat higher than a year ago, although they have receded considerably from the high point of last summer.

An unfavorable factor in the situation is the slowness of collections in the South and West and in the country districts of New England, which, of course, operates to retard movements of merchandise. Business failures are slightly in excess of last year, a fact due to the high rates of money, which have prevailed in some sections. Last summer the outlook for business was so good that many merchants stocked up rather heavily with both imported and domestic goods, but the expected brisk trade did not come, and as a result financial institutions have been carrying these people, lending funds on warehouse receipts, etc.

In cotton goods the demand is unsatisfactory and there are heavy stocks on hand. A temporary shut-down of factories would not be surprising. The wool market is stagnant and iron and steel show little improvement. Bank clearings last week were eleven per cent smaller than the previous week, but five per cent. larger than in the second week of March, 1895.

The speculative markets need little mention. Trading on the stock exchange has been excessively dull, but prices hold fairly well notwithstanding. The fact that they do so, in the face of unfavorable factors, indicates that stocks are in strong hands and are not for sale at current prices. The feature of the week has been the advance and activity in general electric stock. The cause was the perfection of an agreement between the General Electric and the Westinghouse Companies relative to the joint use of patents. Undoubtedly the price of electrical apparatus will soon be advanced.

BIOGRAPHICAL.

REV. JAMES BREWER

Died in Wheaton, Ill, Jan. 22. He was born in Westhampton, Mass., in 1821, secured his early education under difficulties, but graduated from Williams College at the age of twenty. Then he taught in the South until his removal to Illinois, where he began to preach. He held pastorates at Twin Grove, Lee Center, Bristol, Ill., Allen's Grove, Clinton and Hartland, Wis., and Gladbrook, Io. It was his lot to toil in difficult and often unpromising fields with meager remuneration, but his friends testify to his sweet and lovable spirit.

REV SYLVESTER DANA STORRS.

By the death of Mr. Storrs, in Topeka, March 7, Kansas has lost a stanch pioneer missionary. He was born in Virgil, N. Y., 1820, graduated from Dartmouth College and from Andover Theological Seminary in 1857. He conceived the idea of a Kansas Band, interested his fellow-students in missionary work in this field and, immediately after graduation, a little party of four went to Kansas under the direction of the Home Missionary Society. In 1858 the first council ever called in that State met in Quindaro to ordain Mr. Storrs. He became superintendent of home missions in 1872 and held that position for twelve years, organizing nearly 100 churches in new regions and meeting with ceaseless activity incessant calls for religious work. Subsequently he spent six years of similar service for the American Bible Society. The marked characteristics of the man were tireless energy and unflinching fidelity.

WESTERN MORTGAGES
DEFAULTED AND OTHERWISE,
Bought for Cash.
CHAS. E. GIBSON, 45 Milk St. Boston, Mass.

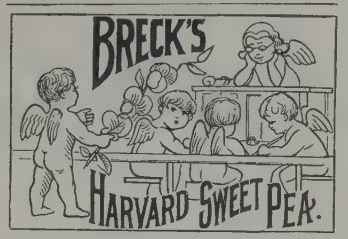
ESTABLISHED 1822.



Evidence is not lacking to prove that Breck's American Grown Sweet Peas are possessed of every excellence attainable in this family of fragrance and beauty; Harvard, the fashionable shade of crimson, is grown and recommended by thousands, Blushing Bride, the florists pride and the public's favorite, were introduced by us. Our Boston mixture contains over 60 distinct named sorts. We mail either of these for 5c. pkt., 10c. oz., $1.00 pound. See "Breck's New Method Sweet Pea Culture," mailed free, also our illustrated Indexed Catalogue, (170 pages) for descriptions of nearly 80 varieties. It contains news about novelties and standard varieties of Flowers, Bulbs, Plants and Vegetables, approved agricultural and horticultural implements, cultural directions, information how to prevent and destroy plant pests, particulars of our offer to duplicate first prizes offered by all agricultural and horticultural societies, and Free Delivery. We Mail it Free, and with it, to those who mention this paper, either of the following selections for 15c, or both for 25c.

(1.) 3 Tuberous Begonia Bulbs, distinct colors. 3 Gladoli Bulbs, distinct colors. (2.) 1 pkt. Breck's New Life Pea, 1 pkt. Breck's Premier Sweet Corn.

Everything for Farm, Garden and Lawn.

JOS. BRECK & SONS, BOSTON, MASS.

NEW MAMMOTH POULTRY GUIDE showing colored plate of chickens in natural colors. Finest book ever published. Almost 100 pages. Tells all about Poultry for Profit or Pleasure. Price only 15c.
JOHN BAUSCHER, JR., Box 262, Freeport, Ills.

7 PER CENT. NET.

First Mortgage Loans on Improved Farms in the Wonderfully Fertile Red River Valley

and in North Dakota and Minnesota. 20 years of experience in the business, and an actual residence of over 8 years in the Red River Valley and of over 22 in Minnesota and North Dakota. A personal knowledge of lands and values. Loans only made to industrious, thrifty farmers, on well improved farms. I give my personal supervision to the business. Loans made in your name and interest coupon-notes and mortgages and applications sent to you and held by you. Interest collected by me and forwarded to you by New York Check. Funds now earning you only 2, 3, or 4 per cent. in Savings Banks will here earn you 7 per cent.—about doubling your income. Remit funds for investment by New York or Boston Draft, or by personal check payable to my order. Address

E. P. CATES,
2628 Portland Avenue, Minneapolis, Minn.

References: Nat'l Bank of Commerce, Minneapolis, Minn.; Importers and Traders Nat'l Bank, New York City.

P. S.—I will be at Young's Hotel, Boston, Tuesday and Wednesday next, March 3 and 4.

Iowa Loan & Trust Co.,

of Des Moines, Iowa.

Capital, $500,000. Surplus, $335,000.

This old and reliable company has been in successful business operation for over 23 years, and has always met every obligation promptly at maturity.

Its Surplus is now larger than ever before, and the company continues under the same careful management. Its Debenture Bonds are amply secured by

FIRST MORTGAGES ON REAL ESTATE,

$105,000 of such mortgages being deposited for the security of each series of $100,000 Bonds.

Bonds in sums of $200, $300, $500 and $1,000 for sale by

FREEMAN A. SMITH,
Ex-Treasurer American Baptist Missionary Union,
Office, 31 Milk St., Room 22,
Correspondence solicited. Boston.

Safe Mortgages
On improved Chicago property.
Send for list
These investments are certain for income.
Principal always safe.
For Example, we offer.

| Amount | Term | Rate | Security |
|---|---|---|---|
| $1200 | 5 years | 6% | $4800 |
| 1600 | 5 years | 6% | 3400 |
| 2500 | 5 years | 6% | 5500 |
| 5000 | 5 years | 5½% | 16000 |
| 7000 | 5 years | 5% | 35000 |

H. O. Stone & Co.
206 La Salle St. Chicago.

WOMAN'S BOARD PRAYER MEETING.

CONGREGATIONAL HOUSE, BOSTON, MARCH 13.

Again Pilgrim Hall proved itself to be the convenient and appropriate place, as a large company of ladies gathered for the meeting. Miss Nathalie Lord presided and, after reading the parable of the sower, spoke of "the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven" which it was given the disciples to know, especially the mystery which puts that kingdom first among the objects of life. Mrs. Pratt spoke of growth as one of the mysteries of the spiritual life, likening all faithful disciples to gardeners who sow the seed and water it, working together with God who gives the sunshine and rain.

Mrs. Annie M. Fay of Kamundongo, West Africa, was mentioned in the calendar, and a letter was read from her, written at Bailundu, where it has seemed best for Mr. and Mrs. Fay to reside since Mr. Stover was obliged to leave. She says, "Most of the young people accompanied Mr. Stover to the coast and are expected back in a day or two, and we hope to win their confidence." While they find some discouragements, she writes hopefully, and says, "We realize more and more our own weakness, and that we can simply plant and water, pray and work, and leave the increase with God."

Miss Lamson read letters from Dr. Rose A. Bower of the same station, where she has a school of thirty-nine pupils, only twenty-five of whom attend regularly, and where she also does medical work as the way opens, often having ten or twelve patients a day. She gave an interesting account of a medical visit to an old chief, which involved riding several miles upon oxen and calling at villages on the way, where they informed the people that the next day was Sunday and invited them to attend service.

Mrs. Kellogg reported the use of the W. B. M. prayer calendar in a colored school in Cotton Valley, Ala., where the pupils keep track of the various topics and pray for the missionaries and the work, and said that the calendar had also been given to other schools in the South. Mrs. Billings spoke of the interest she had recently found in schools in Asheville and Hot Springs, N. C.

Miss Washburn told of an Armenian boy, who was cut to pieces in a most cruel manner and then beheaded, and who said with his last breath: "I cannot deny my Saviour. Lord Jesus, into thy hands I commit my spirit." His pastor said that he had learned a lesson from the heroic Christian spirit of this boy, whom he had not considered worthy of church membership.

Mrs. J. K. Browne read a long and interesting letter from Miss Bush of Harpoot, giving an account of relief work, and hymn singing and prayers filled the hour.

Holiness is an unselfing of ourselves.—F. W. Faber.

ONE of the greatest injustices practiced upon liberal advertisers is by dealers who try to palm off other goods upon customers as something "just as good." The reason for such irregular, not to say dishonest, action is usually traceable to the fact that the dealers who practice it are anxious to substitute something upon which they realize a larger profit and which is generally much inferior. Such a practice simply amounts to robbing the enterprising advertiser, after he has, in many instances, spent a fortune in placing good goods properly before the public. It is neither fair nor honest dealing, and those who descend to such practices are seldom worthy of public confidence. In a very large majority of cases goods which have pushed their way to the front through liberal advertising and sheer merit are the very best and most satisfactory of their class, while the "something just as good," which lies molding upon the dealers' shelves, has failed to acquire a reputation, because of general or special unfitness and unworthiness. It is natural for dealers with elastic consciences to try to get rid of goods by substituting them for those through which their neighbors have acquired a reputation and made money. This fact, however, does not detract from the dishonesty of the practice. It is a well-established fact that the only articles placed before the public which have established a permanent reputation and given general satisfaction through actual merit are those which have been extensively advertised. Such being the case, unscrupulous manufacturers cannot afford to invest their money in advertising their goods which are inferior, or wholly without merit. It is always safe to presume that the man who is spending large sums of money in advertising his goods knows that they are all that is claimed for them. If the reverse were true he would be running the risk of losing all he spent in placing them before the public.—Detroit Evening News, Jan. 15, 1896.

CHANDLER & CO.'S

Duchesse Perfect Fitting Glove.

We invite the attention of the ladies of Boston and New England to this most justly celebrated glove as the greatest triumph of the glove maker's art. In shapeliness, beauty and wearing qualities we have never seen it equaled during the many years of our catering to the wants of the New England family trade.

We will send this glove anywhere by mail, on receipt of price, and guarantee perfect satisfaction to the purchaser.

We do not hesitate to recommend this glove as the very best made.

| | |
|---|---|
| Four Button Kid, in Colors, Plain Back . . . . . | $1 50 per pair. |
| Four Button Kid, in Black, Plain Back . . . . . | $1.75 " " |
| Four Button Kid, in Colors, Embroidered Back . . . | $1.75 " " |
| Seven Hook, Black and Colors, Embroidered Back | $1.75 " " |

CHANDLER & CO.,

Winter Street, Boston.

Easter Flower Vases.

American Cut Glass Specimens just received of the DIAMOND FINISH cuttings, which, in our judgment, are superior to any foreign or American Cut Glass ware, and for which we are the sole distributors in Boston.

Rich Colors and Designs of VIENNA and MUNICH Glass (now displayed on Main Floor Tables) to which we invite those interested in seeing the newest productions of artistic glassware.

Low shape Flower Holders for Dinner Table decoration, in Crystal and Porcelain. The above and other novelties adapted to presentation, now on view in Art Pottery rooms (3d floor) and Main Floor.

On Gallery Tables will be found novelties in Paris Café Fireproof Entrée Dishes, including Shirred Egg Dishes, Welsh Rarebit Dishes, also Omelet and Terrapin Dishes.

China anti-tannic Tea Infusers, fit any size cup.

London Corrugated Pie Dish Collars, fit any size, rendering dishes with burnt edges from the oven presentable.

By steamer "Monmouthshire" from Hong Kong, we have landed 84 packages, including the Old Blues and the Medallion Canton China.

By steamer "Ascania," from Hamburg, novelties from Germania and the old standard Blue Meissen Dresden Onion China.

Our stock was never larger, more valuable and comprehensive at this season of the year than now. Largest variety to choose from, and best values guaranteed.

INSPECTION INVITED.

Jones, McDuffee & Stratton Co.,

Pottery, Glass and Lamps,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL,

120 FRANKLIN ST.

Insist

On a good (the best) skirt binding as strenuously as on a good cloth for the skirt.

Ask for (and take no other) the

TRADE-S·H·&M·-MARK

Bias Velveteen Skirt Binding.

If your dealer will not supply you w will.

Send for samples, showing labels and materials, to the S. H, & M. Co., P. O. Box 699, New York City.

HALE PLUM, TRIUMPH PEACH, BOUNCER STRAWBERRY

and all other best fruits from Hale, who makes more money in fruit culture than any man in America. Free book, tells whole story, no secrets. Address HALE, South Glastonbury, CONN.

Subscribers' Wants.

Notices under this heading, not exceeding five lines (eight words to the line), cost subscribers fifty cents each insertion. Additional lines ten cents each per insertion.

A woman of experience, competent and willing, desires to enter a home of means and refinement, and manage its domestic economy and exert a helpful influence on its children. Address, Box 413, Swampscott, Mass.

Wanted, a situation as Organist and Director of Music by a gentleman of large experience. Address "Organist," P. O. Box, 1944, Boston.

Orphan Wanted. Any one wishing to find a good home for an orphan or motherless girl can address B. T. M., Box 15, Shrewsbury, Mass. Good references given.

CHOICEST SEED FREE! If you have not received my 1896 Catalogue of Seeds and Plants send ten cents for postage and packing, before April 10, mentioning this paper, and I will send it with ten packets choicest flower seeds for trial, free (well worth 50 cents). Double Asters, 100 varieties mixed; Improved Double Poppies, 38 sorts mixed. New Double Fairy Zinnias, 18 colors; Mammoth Brazilian Morning Glory, climbs 50 feet, pink flowers; Japanese Pinks, 50 varieties, mixed; New Giant Hibiscus, gorgeous flowers, 8 inches across; Chrysanthemum; Callopsis, 15 colors; Large-flowered Prize Annual Phlox, 30 varieties mixed; Mist Flowers. For fifteen cents I will add to the above a packet of the new Giant Japanese Morning Glories, mixed colors of every shade of red, blue, brown, maroon brown, bronze, slate, etc., many elegantly striped, spotted, blotched and edged, with golden and variegated foliage.

L. W. GOODELL, Seed Grower,

Pansy Park, Dwight, Mass.

MR. BEACH'S FAREWELL WORDS.

Those who were privileged to hear Rev. D. N. Beach's profound and prophetic paper on Reconstructive Theology at the Ministers' Meeting last Monday morning realize anew what a loss Cambridge and all New England will sustain in his removal to Minneapolis. The paper was read originally at the Summer School of Theology in Cleveland last season, and only those who heard the writer's impassioned utterance can understand its power of insight and inspiration.

Taking the letter to the Romans and the book of Job as the heart of the canons of the Old and New Testaments he showed that what God has to say constitutes the moral pith of the Scriptures. This is God's world, he is in it, and men may know him, not by logic, but by spiritual insight and imagination. He has spoken to us in his Son. The Son wrote no book for he is himself the revelation. The Word, not words, became flesh. Moreover, the same philosophy which we find in Paul and Job is confirmed by the voice of science and by the practical necessities of human experience. The unprogressiveness of theology, however, has hindered us from this life-giving thought of God. Hence, we need a reconstruction of theology on broader and deeper lines. In this connection Mr. Beach paid a glowing tribute to the teachings of such modern writers as Tulloch, Cairns and Fairbairn, Bushnell, Mulford and Stearns. German theology, he said, is unsatisfactory because it lacks practical application to life.

But while pleading with characteristic intensity for a theology which is broader, and yet more simple and profound, stress was laid upon the unchangeableness of Christ himself. Theories about him are movable, but he remains primary, factual, basal. We need, also, to remember that while all Scripture is inbreathed of God, the Bible is not his highest form of speaking to man. The kindling of the soul, a sense of the peerless presence of Christ, that sublime recognition of him which led the Greeks to say to Philip "We would see Jesus," is the highest revelation. By this new study of him, God will become to each of us, as to Paul, to Isaiah, to John, a speaking presence. We must of necessity grow more studious and teachable, more spiritual and intense. Our one transcendent motive will be, "the love of Christ constraineth" me.

In closing Mr. Beach pictured the results of substituting, in our theological seminaries, this inspirational thought of God for decadent and lifeless beliefs. Missions would gain new meaning, the problem of "reaching the masses" would be solved, churches would be filled, because the lamp of Christian living would blaze like a beacon fire in individual character.

AN ounce of prevention is cheaper than any quantity of cure. Don't give children narcotics or sedatives. They are unnecessary when the infant is properly nourished, as it will be if brought up on the Gail Borden Eagle Brand Condensed Milk.

DRIVE away from the face all lines of care and pain by bathing with Pond's Extract.

"CONGRESS IN SESSION."—Now is the best season of the year to visit Washington, D. C. Royal Blue Line personally conducted tours leave Boston April 3 and 15 and May 6. Accommodations are first-class; stop-over privileges at Philadelphia and New York. Send for illustrated itinerary and "Guide to Washington" to A. J. Simmons, N. E. A., 211 Washington Street, Boston.

A GOOD TELL-TALE.—"The pledge and cue of a full feast" is the sideboard. No man of liberality ever owned a poor one and no mean man ever afforded a fine one. It remains to be seen what kind of man you are by the board you choose. Go to the warerooms of the Paine Furniture Co. this month and you will find such a superb assortment of fine sideboards as was doubtless never before collected in Boston. The prices this month are very low.

You have not read this before!

The "Pass-It-On-Society."

Probably many of our readers have already heard of this society and its work. It was started on a suggestion made by the Rev. J. M. Farrar, D.D., of Brooklyn, who writes, on February 8, 1895: "My Dear Sir: Booth's Pocket Inhaler works like a charm. The first inhalation gave relief. It is a blessing to humanity, and I am sorry it is not better known. I add my name to the 'Pass-It-On-Society.'" On December 5, 1895 (ten months later), Dr. Farrar writes: "I believe it is a real blessing to the afflicted." If you are suffering with Catarrh, Asthma, Bronchitis, Catarrhal Deafness, Hay Fever, Rose Cold, or any similar disease of the respiratory organs, send for HYOMEI, the new and wonderful Australian "Dry-Air" treatment comprised in

Booth's "Hyomei" Pocket Inhaler Outfit, by mail, $1.00.

Your friend would not "pass-it-on" to you unless convinced of its merit. In ASTHMA Hyomei gives instant relief, stops the cough, the wheezing and gasping, and makes breathing easy in a few moments time. In CATARRH it removes the offensive accumulations, clears the head, removes catarrhal deafness and purifies the breath. It cures BRONCHITIS permanently and robs CROUP of its terrors.

HOW THE "PASS-IT-ON-SOCIETY" GROWS.

Griffin, Ga., July 8, 1895.
Like Dr. Farrar, I want to join the "Pass-It-On-Society." I am so grateful for the good results that I have received from the use of Hyomei, and I have already spoken of it to a number of my friends.
C. I. STACY, Sec'y Y. M. C. A.

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 21, 1895.
In thirty years' experience in the practice of medicine I have never given my name in support of a proprietary remedy, until I met with Hyomei, which I indorse with all my heart (professional ethics to the contrary notwithstanding). Since testing Hyomei in Laryngitis, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, Hay Fever, I believe in it for itself, for what it has done, and I gladly add my name to the "Pass-It-On-Society."
S. H. MORRIS, M.D., 159 Franklin St.
P. S.—You are at liberty to use this as you may deem best.

Pass Christian, Miss.
I have been a sufferer from Catarrh and Bronchitis ever since last August; my pastor, Rev. O. W. Flowers, advised me to try your remedy. He has been using one of your Pocket Inhalers ever since last Spring, and has derived much benefit from it.
MISS BERTHA B. STEWARD, Harrison County.

New York, Feb. 1, 1895.
I have been troubled with Bronchitis for about four years. No medicine helped me. About two weeks ago I tried one of your Pocket Inhalers, which gave me immediate relief. Sunday evening our pastor, the Rev. Dr. Farrar, spoke with great difficulty, apparently from a heavy cold settled in his chest. I sent him one of your Pocket Inhalers. I inclose his reply.
HALSEY FITCH, 170-172 Chambers Street.
(Dr. Farrar's reply is given above).

Greensboro, Ala., Sept. 15, 1895.
Your Hyomei cured me of Catarrh after other remedies failed; will add my name to the "Pass-It-On-Society."
Yours truly,
W. M. SEAY.

New York, Sept. 20, 1895.
I take pleasure in adding my name to the long list of those whose lives have been made happier by the use of Hyomei. It is not only an instant relief to Catarrh sufferers, but will cure this disease entirely. I have been the instrument of inducing many friends and acquaintances to seek relief through its use. I have yet to learn of one who has not been benefited I want to "pass-it-on."
A. G. THOMPSON, 33 Wall Street.

AMERICAN UNION LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY, 44, 46, 48, Cedar St., New York, February 19, 1896.
Please find enclosed one dollar for which send me Pocket Inhaler Outfit to my friend, D. S. Walton, 134 Franklin St., City. It has done me so much good that I never cease recommending it to my friends and as you know have bought as many as 12 or 15 which I have given to personal friends, and have influenced more than twice this number to buy them, and I have yet to meet one who has not thanked me for recommending it. It has completely cured my little daughter of Catarrh, from which she has been suffering for years.
Very truly yours,
J. S. NUGENT (Treasurer).

Albany, N. Y., July 3, 1895.
I will tell you candidly your remedy has given me more relief from my Asthma than anything I have used, and really I have been so enthusiastic over it that I have made a great many converts, not only in Albany, but West Troy. The effect Hyomei has on me is very pleasant; when I am oppressed for breath, I inhale a short time, and the great desire to cough is gone. The little Inhaler is my constant companion.
MRS. SARAH E. BANTHAM, 359 Clinton Avenue.

HYOMEI is a purely vegetable antiseptic, and destroys the germs and microbes which cause diseases of the respiratory organs.

The air, thoroughly charged with Hyomei, is inhaled through the Pocket Inhaler at the mouth, and, after permeating the minutest air cells, is slowly exhaled through the nose. It is aromatic, delightful to inhale, and gives immediate relief. It stops all spasmodic coughing instantly, clears the voice, expands the lungs, and increases the breathing capacity.

Pocket Inhaler Outfit, Complete, by Mail, $1.00, consisting of pocket inhaler (made of deodorized hard rubber, beautifully polished), a bottle of Hyomei, a dropper, and full directions for using. If you are still skeptical, send me your address, and my pamphlet shall prove that Hyomei does cure. Consultation and trial treatment free at my office.

Hyomei Balm.—An antiseptic skin food for weak chests, burns, scalds, chapped lips, rough hands, frost bites, eczema, etc. Nothing has been discovered so effective for the purposes named. Price by mail, 50 cents.

Cures by Inhalation

R. T. BOOTH, 23 East 20th St., New York.

Chosen by the Government

The War Department proposes to test the bicycle thoroughly for army use, and recently advertised for proposals for furnishing five bicycles for the purpose. Result: Bids from $50 to $85 each for other machines; our bid of $100 each for Columbias, their invariable price. And the Government selected

Columbia Bicycles

STANDARD OF THE WORLD

The experts who made the choice decided that Columbias were worth every dollar of the $100 asked for them.

If you are willing to pay $100 for a bicycle, why be content with anything but a Columbia?

POPE MANUFACTURING CO., Hartford, Conn.

From the days of the Warwick Knight,
Whose fame and honor bright,
Made them of men supreme;
By deeds that wonderous seem.
Up to the present time
This name's stood forth sublime,
Descended now to the Warwick Wheel,
That nineteenth century steed of steel.

"IF THE RIMS ARE VERMILION IT IS A WARWICK" THE BICYCLE THAT IS "BUILT ON HONOR" 1896 MODELS $85 AND $100
CATALOGUE FREE
WARWICK CYCLE M'F'G CO.
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

245 Columbus Ave., Boston, and 34 Union Sq., N. Y.

THE ONLY PERFECT Cycle Seat

Patented. Demand this Seat. Insist upon it! Any dealer will get it for you. Can be widened to fit any rider and adjusted to any pitch.

Latest improved and only automatic seat, each side seperate; works naturally with each leg

NO PRESSURE AGAINST SENSITIVE PARTS. YOUR DOCTOR WILL ENDORSE IT.

DR. M. A. WALKER, Denver, Colo.—"Received your saddle and put it on at once. Am very much pleased with it as it certainly does away with the harmful pressure exerted by other saddles." IT IS AN ESPECIALLY GOOD LADIES SADDLE. Every dealer should send for our circulars and price list. This is the coming seat. We make Cane, Wood, Leather or Padded Seat, with or without springs. Illustrated circulars explain why and how this is the only safe and perfect saddle on the market. Write us,

AUTOMATIC CYCLE SEAT CO.,
429 Rood Block, Grand Rapids, Mich.

(A Swell Affair.)

DENT'S TOOTHACHE GUM

STOPS TOOTHACHE INSTANTLY.

Ask for DENT'S; take no other. Sold everywhere, or by mail 15 cts. C. S. DENT & CO., DETROIT, MICH.

Dent's Corn Gum Cures Corns, Bunions, Warts.

THEOLOGICAL SEMINARIES.

Bangor.

Mrs. C. D. Dill of New Haven, Ct., has presented Finney's Autobiography to each member of the Senior Class. Earlier in the year Hon. E. R. Burpee of Bangor made a similar gift of Stearn's Present Day Theology.——Professor Sewall gave an enjoyable reception last Thursday evening.——Some of the Seniors are supplying vacant churches with a view to settlement.——The appointments of the other students for summer work in the Maine missionary field will soon be made.——The Middlers are taking an extra course in the Exegesis of Romans under Professor Ropes.——Rev. Dr. Newman Smyth's lectures on the Relation of the Minister to Social and Municipal Work in the Bond Lectureship Course will be eight in number, and are arranged for March 31, April 2, 3, 13, 16, 17, 21 and 22.

Andover.

Prof. J. M. English of Newton Theological Institution, who was engaged to fill the chair of sacred rhetoric at Andover temporarily, finished his course in homiletics Feb. 1, and has since been giving informal talks on pastoral theology.——The Senior preaching for criticism has exhausted the list of names. A second sermon is expected from each member of the class, though not required.——R. L. Hartt of the Senior Class and R. W. Dunbar of the Junior Class will attend the coming meeting of the Inter-Seminary Alliance as delegates from Andover. ——The spring recess of four days occurs March 26–30.——Recent preachers in the seminary church have been Rev. F. A. Wilson of the Andover Free Church and Rev. Dr. G. E. Hall of Dover, N. H.

Hartford.

Three helpful chapel talks were given last week by Professor Perry on True and False Conscientiousness and the extent to which we are responsible for our beliefs and feelings.——Professor Merriam has been unable to meet his classes for several days on account of illness.——The Juniors who took Professor Jacobus's Junior elective are just completing the analysis of Paul's epistles.——Since the missionary convention there have been on exhibition in the museum and library 235 missionary versions of the Bible, 16 of the ancient versions of the Bible, seven of the great codices of the New Testament, fragments of a Syriac manuscript of the gospels, dating from the eighth century and 35 of the most notable editions of the Greek Testament, published between 1522 and 1881.

Yale.

The sixth in Prof. J. C. Griggs's course of illustrated lectures on Worship Music was given last Friday evening on The Oratorio, the German Passion Music and Modern Motet. The cantata, the orchestra and the dramatic element in worship music were discussed. The lecture was illustrated by a quartet and chorus.——The Leonard Bacon Club last week discussed the question, Resolved, That Public Assent to a Creed Should Not Be Made a Condition of Church Membership. The affirmative was presented by Messrs. Wyckoff and Ladd and the negative by Messrs. Ferris and Hodges.—— The Student Volunteer Study Class is giving its attention to South America, using as a text-book The Neglected Continent by Miss Guinness. Mr. J. P. Deane is the leader ——Dr. Ward of the Independent delivered his concluding lecture on The Hittites and Their History last Wednesday evening.—— Messrs S. E. Lord of the Middle Class and E. S. Todd of the Junior Class have left the seminary on account of ill health.

Chicago.

The ladies of the faculty gave a musical and literary entertainment in the interest of the W. B. M. I. Monday evening. A paper was read by Mrs. G. B. Wilcox.——Rev. Frederick Campbell, pastor of a Presbyterian church, spoke at the conference, Thursday afternoon, on How to Adjust an Old Church to New Conditions.——The Seminary Social Settlement issues this month the first copy of an eight-page monthly called Chicago Commons, devoted to the settlement movement.——The Chicago City Missionary Society is greatly indebted to the students for the development of its work. Ten students are serving as pastors of its churches, not to speak of many more whose work is concentrated at such centers as the Tabernacle and the Bohemian Bethlehem Church. Others are employed in independent fields in the city or more or less remote from it. Only those students are encouraged to take pastoral charges who would otherwise be unable to get a theological education.——Students for the degree of B. D. prepare theses on theological study and take an examination on one major and two minor subjects.

THROAT diseases commence with a cough, cold or sore throat. Brown's Bronchial Troches give immediate and sure relief.

A
Delicate, Delicious Dish
For Breakfast.

Superior to Oatmeal as Wheat does not overheat the blood; Economical, costing less than 1 cent each person when cooked as mush,

WHEATLET

Is absolutely the Best Cereal Food in the world. Uncooked by steam it retains the Rich Nut-like Flavor of wheat in its natural condition.

Sold in 2 lb packages by All Leading Grocers.

FRANKLIN MILLS CO., LOCKPORT, N. Y.

The Lawton Simplex Printer

saves time and labor; money too—100 letters, postal cards, copies of music, drawings, or typewritten copy, in almost no time, and exact copies at that, by using the Lawton Simplex. Requires no washing or cleaning, and saves its cost over and again in sending out notices. Costs but little ($3 to $10).

CAUTION.—Other things are being made and called Simplex Printers. The only way to be sure of getting the genuine is to see that yours is the Lawton Simplex Printer. Send for circulars. Agents wanted.

LAWTON & CO., 20 Vesey St., New York

Made in a Minute!

A delicious drink instantly made from WHITMAN'S INSTANTANEOUS CHOCOLATE. Perfect in flavor and quality. Put up in pound and half-pound tins.

Stephen F. Whitman & Son, Sole Mfrs., Philadelphia.

$1 a bottle.

"Just like a bunch."

Forest Fringe Violet

is the F. F. V. of Perfumes, and has the odor of the freshly gathered flowers of the wood. There is no violet odor made that equals "Forest Fringe." It is delicate and very lasting. Ask your dealer for it.

Special Introductory Offer.

Actual bottle five times larger than above cut. IF within the next 30 days you will order direct of us one large size bottle of Forest Fringe Violet (sending $1.00 in money order, postal note or postage stamps) and mention the name The Congregationalist we will send you the bottle of perfume, in beautiful embossed case and include without extra charge ¼ dozen cakes of Cold Cream and Glycerine Soap free, prepaying all express charges on soap and perfume.

HUNDREDS OF READERS of the various journals in which we have advertised have availed themselves of our liberal offer and have expressed their delight upon receipt of the goods.

David S. Brown & Co., Bank St., N. Y. City.

JUBILEE YEAR FUND OF THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

It is now fifty years since the A. M. A. was organized. Its work and history are before the churches. We have reason to rejoice in the accomplishment of the past. We are grateful to God for this ministry of grace to his needy ones. We have come now to the semi-centennial year of the association. We propose to celebrate the fiftieth year and to acknowledge the goodness of God to us in the past.

But we find ourselves in this present time in distress. Our work has been severely affected by the adverse times. Our mission schools and churches are suffering. For the last three years our average current receipts have been $93,000 less per year than during the previous three years. The work has been cut $184,000 during these three years. If it had been fully maintained the debt would have been three times as great as it is.

We are now confronted with the question of further and more disastrous reductions, for our obligations must be met. The $100,000 borrowed for mission work must be paid. We do not believe that the churches wish this to be done by closing more schools and church doors against the poorest of our countrymen throughout the Southern lowlands and mountains, amid the Dakotas and Montana, from California to Florida.

The association has come to the last half of its fiscal year. Up to this time it has made no special plea for help. It has waited fraternally until kindred organizations have received the aid they so greatly needed. This vast Christian service in the most necessitous fields of the continent is as distinctively the trust of the churches as any of their enterprises are. Shall it not now have the same equitable relief as has been given to others? Has not the time now come for helping this suffering work? Will not those who have charged the association with this burden of service now consecrate anew their benevolence to its relief, and make this a year of jubilee to wipe out the last vestige of debt?

It is proposed to raise during the next six months a special Jubilee Year Fund of $100,000 in shares of $50 each, with the hope and expectation that these shares will be taken by the friends of missions without lessening those regular contributions which must be depended upon to sustain the current work.

The plea is urgent because the need is urgent. Will not all friends of this great work, pastor and people, now heartily unite in one special Christian endeavor to raise this American Missionary Association Jubilee Year Fund?

Charles L. Mead, Samuel Holmes, Samuel S. Marples, William H. Strong, Elijah Horr, William Hayes Ward, James W. Cooper, Lucien C. Warner, Joseph H. Twichell, Charles P. Peirce, Charles A. Hull, Addison P. Foster, Albert J. Lyman, Nehemiah Boynton, A. J. F. Behrends.

Executive Committee of the American Missionary Association.

---

THE "Diamond Finish," American Cut Glass exhibit exemplifies the wonderful degree of excellence of American skill in this line. Jones, McDuffee & Stratton in Boston and Tiffany & Co., New York, have the sale in their respective cities.

---

NOTHING LIKE HOOD'S FOR BUILDING UP.—"I was all run down from hard work, and went away for my health but did not get any better. On returning I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and I believe there is nothing like it to build up a person who is run down in health." Mrs. A. D. Cayting, 411½ Broadway, Chelsea, Mass.

HOOD'S PILLS cure biliousness, indigestion.

32-Freezing. A Cold? TRY Madame Porter's BALSAM A safe, sure and pleasant way to get rid of a cold, cough, tickling or hoarseness in the throat. The best way for 60 years. Two sizes, 25 and 50 cts. All druggists, or by mail for the price, if you mention this publication. Address, HALL & RUCKEL, Proprietors, New York. 0-Zero.

ARMSTRONG & McKELVY Pittsburgh.
BEYMER-BAUMAN Pittsburgh.
DAVIS-CHAMBERS Pittsburgh.
FAHNESTOCK Pittsburgh.
ANCHOR, ECKSTEIN } Cincinnati.
ATLANTIC, BRADLEY, BROOKLYN, JEWETT, ULSTER, UNION } New York.
SOUTHERN, SHIPMAN } Chicago.
COLLIER, MISSOURI, RED SEAL, SOUTHERN } St. Louis.
JOHN T. LEWIS & BROS. CO Philadelphia.
MORLEY Cleveland.
SALEM Salem, Mass.
CORNELL Buffalo.
KENTUCKY Louisville.

WHAT IS BRIGHTER, more attractive, than the homestead painted white, with green blinds? It may not suit the critic, but we like it and it will please the owner. Painted with and Pure Linseed Oil, it will look fresh and clean longer than anything else; if properly applied, it will not scale, chip, or chalk off, but forms a perfect base for subsequent repainting; is therefore economical

Pure White Lead

To be sure of getting Pure White Lead, examine the brand (see list of genuine brands). Any shade of color desired can be easily obtained by using NATIONAL LEAD CO.'s brands of Pure White Lead and Tinting Colors.

Pamphlet giving valuable information and card showing samples of colors free; also cards showing pictures of twelve houses of different designs painted in various styles or combinations of shades forwarded upon application to those intending to paint.

NATIONAL LEAD CO., 1 Broadway, New York.

"THERE'S A BEST IN EVERYTHING" HAVE YOU SEEN THE NEW STEARNS BICYCLE THE YELLOW FELLOW CATALOGUE FREE F. C. STEARNS & CO., MAKERS, SYRACUSE, N.Y. TORONTO, ONT. BUFFALO, N.Y. SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

PIANOS! ORGANS! FREE!
TEST TRIAL FOR 30 DAYS IN YOUR OWN HOME, NO MONEY REQUIRED
PIANOS-ORGANS FROM $25.00 UP
Including a Complete Musical Outfit. CASH or EASY PAYMENTS.
NEW SOUVENIR CATALOGUE
A work of art illustrated in 10 colors. Worth its Weight in Gold. We pay charges on it and send it FREE, all you have to do is to ask for it to-day please. Remember this is the old established house of CORNISH & CO., the only firm in the world selling exclusively from Factory to Family direct. A single instrument at wholesale price. We save you from $25.00 to $250.00. Write at once to Mention Paper. CORNISH & CO., Estab. 30 years, Washington, N. J.
$160.00 UP
Special Offers Now Ready
ORGANS FROM $25.00

CRITERION STEREOPTICONS, MAGIC LANTERNS, ELECTRIC FOCUSING LAMPS, &c.
J. B. COLT & CO., 115-117 NASSAU ST., AND 59 FIFTH AVE., NEW YORK.
SEND FOR CATALOG.
AGENCIES 50 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass. 33-39 South 10th St., Philadelphia, Pa. 126 Erie Co. Savings Bk., Buffalo, N. Y. 131 Post St., San Francisco, Cal. 615 N. Broadway, St. Louis, Mo. 89 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill. 39 Marietta St., Atlanta, Ga.

AGENTS WANTED—To present to Christian people the grandest, best-selling book of the age, THE PEOPLE'S BIBLE HISTORY. Exclusive territory and attractive commissions given. THE HENRY O. SHEPARD CO., Chicago, Ill.

WANTED, by a N. E. Conservatory graduate, position as director or organist in Boston or vicinity. Large chorus library, years of experience, best of references. Can furnish good soprano if desired. Address "C. B. S.," 126 Bowdoin Street, Boston.

ELY'S CREAM BALM CATARRH CURES COLD IN HEAD HAY-FEVER DEAFNESS HEADACHE ELY BROS. NEW YORK

It is the medicine above all others for catarrh, and is worth its weight in gold. I can use Ely's Cream Balm with safety and it does all that is claimed for it.—B. W. Sperry, Hartford, Conn.

CATARRH

ELY'S CREAM BALM Opens and cleanses the Nasal Passages. Allays Pain and Inflammation, Heals the Sores, Protects the Membrane from colds, Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell. The Balm is quickly absorbed and gives relief at once.

A particle is applied to each nostril and is agreeable. Price 50 cents at Druggists or by mail.

ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren Street, New York.

SCHERMERHORN'S TEACHERS' AGENCY. Oldest and best known in U. S. Established, 1855. 3 EAST 14TH STREET, N. Y.

THE FISK TEACHERS' AGENCIES.
4 Ashburton Pl., Boston, Mass.; New York, N. Y.; Chicago, Ill.; and Los Angeles, Cal. 100-paged Agency Manual free. EVERETT O. FISK & Co.

MAINE, BANGOR.
BANGOR THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY.
Course of study complete, thorough, Biblical and practical. Also an elective English course. Advanced Semitic study optional. Entrance examination on Wednesday, Sept. 4. Address Prof. F. B. DENIO, Bangor, Me.

BRADFORD ACADEMY.
For the higher education of young women. Buildings unsurpassed for comfort and health. Twenty-five acres—twelve in grove; lake for rowing and skating. Classical and general course of study; also, preparatory and optional. Year commences Sept. 11, 1895. Apply to MISS IDA C. ALLEN, Principal Bradford, Mass.

MASSACHUSETTS, BRADFORD.
CARLETON SCHOOL for Young Men and Boys. College preparatory and general course of study. Individual teaching. Gymnasium bowling alley, etc. Circulars. I. N. CARLETON, Ph. D.

CHURCH CARPETS AT MANUFACTURERS' PRICES. JOHN H. PRAY, SONS & CO., CARPETS AND UPHOLSTERY, 658 WASHINGTON ST., OPP. BOYLSTON ST. BOSTON.

A LIGHT IN SOUTHERN DARKNESS.

It is a bright day for a community which gathers to discuss its shortcomings and the remedies for them. Such an occasion was that at the Negro Conference at Tuskegee, March 5. Many who attended had traveled far. Five hundred farmers with bronzed faces from the interior of the "black belt" of Alabama gazed upon the countenance of the Moses of their recently emancipated race. Just returned from the North at the hour for the assembly, his face seemed to shine as one of old, and he came with good tidings.

What a picturesque gathering! Fathers, with their staves, bending under the weight of unfriendly years; old mothers with hoary heads; young men, stalwart but untrained, and eager to catch a glimpse of the new way. One young man, trained in the foremost schools of the land, sat in their midst, studying the conditions of his people in regions remote from the conveniences of modern civilization. Here also were representatives of different stations, sections and races, gathered to take part in the assembly, to collect facts and to receive inspiration for the work of raising a race into selfhood.

The story of these simple people telling in a frank way the difficulties that beset them and of the progress they were making left its impression. They spoke out of the abundance of their hearts. A gray-haired father in broken English electrified the audience with good words about his community. Another from a dismal swamp told of deterioration, and others told of better crops, better morals, and pleaded for better teachers and more consecrated preachers, "wise men for foolish places!" Mothers broke down in tears of joy telling of the new opportunities for their children. The whole conference burst all bounds in enthusiasm over the narration of mortgages canceled. By popular subscription the regular school term in some cases has been more than doubled in length. Economy in a great variety of instances has increased. Throughout the impressive story was mingled with humor, pathos and hope.

The central figure of the gathering was the originator, Booker T. Washington, whose name is alike familiar in the homes of New England and in the cabins of the South. One cannot stand on these school grounds, amid the forty buildings that have arisen like magic within a few years, and behold the thousand students going to and fro, amid the general activity and spirit of the place instinct with industrial life, without realizing that its moving spirit is a born leader. The school has developed from a one-room log cabin to its present extensive proportions. Considering the difficulties incident to the achievement the task seems Herculean. The voice of the schoolmaster and the military tread of the pupils on parade speak for it. The carpenter shop replaces the slave pen and the rostrum the auction block.

In his plans Mr. Washington has shown a superior grasp of the situation. He understands the white man North and South and he knows the black man, and his methods are practical in uniting them in bonds of helpfulness. His program deals largely if not wholly with the ills which the Negro himself can remedy, so that his philosophy is, in a word, make prejudice unreasonable.

To this end he has enlisted the richest of the North in the cause of the poorest of the South. The aim is to develop the black man so that his white neighbor in the South shall willingly concede his full rights. While the leadership of the race is disputed to Mr. Washington by certain colored men the devotion to him by the masses is well-nigh complete.

H. H. P.

For Nervous Prostration Use Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

Dr. A. Trau, Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have extensively used it in nervous prostration and kindred affections, and invariably obtained very good results."

fat-food

Fatty food is a life-preserver in consumption. Cod-liver oil in the form of Scott's Emulsion is assimilated when no other fat can be.

Nursery Cloth.

An absolute necessity for every modern nursery. Made of bleached muslin on both sides, with white wadding between, firmly quilted, and 34 inches wide. Highly recommended by physicians for bed pads. Thoroughly absorbent and easily washed.

MATTRESS PROTECTORS

made of it are indispensable, absolutely preventing damage from stains, etc. Made for any size bed, bound and ready for use.

Both articles kept by leading dry goods houses. If your dealer don't keep them, write for sample.

Excelsior Quilting Co., Laight St., New York.

HOOPING-COUGH CROUP.

Roche's Herbal Embrocation.

The celebrated and effectual English Cure without internal medicine. Proprietors, W. Edward & Son, London, England.

E. Fougera & Co., 30 North William St., N. Y.

TO Cure That Cough

or Colds of any kind, Bronchial Troubles, Sore Throats, Asthma, or any Lung Disease, there is nothing equal to

ADAMSON'S BOTANIC Cough Balsam.

It brings relief with the first dose. Soothes irritation, heals the lungs and throat, and in a few days effects a perfect cure. It has been 30 years in existence, and once used is always kept in reach.

10,000 TESTIMONIALS.

$5,000 Reward for a single one not genuine.

PRICES 35 and 75 CTS. A BOTTLE.

C SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

TRADE MARK REGISTERED.

DYSPEPSIA FLOUR.

Also Special Diabetic Food, Barley Crystals, and Patent Biscuit, Cake and Pastry Flour.

Unrivaled in America or Europe.

Pamphlets and Baking Samples Free.

Write Farwell & Rhines, Watertown, N. Y., U.S.A.

The Electropoise (Electropoise TRADE MARK)

CURE WITHOUT MEDICINE.

A SIMPLE HOME TREATMENT OF UNEQUALED VALUE.

Administered by attaching an instrument to the flesh, which aids the system to take on Oxygen from the Atmosphere, to the utmost amount the system can use.

IT IS A TREATMENT OF THE BLOOD, and by purifying, revitalizing, and loading it with Nature's Nerve Food, ejects DISEASE, by removing its causes. It applies of necessity to all diseases as no other treatment ever has.

THE OXYGEN COSTS NOTHING, the price of the instrument being all the expense necessary for years. It can be used by the entire family.

"I sought the aid of a dozen of the best physicians I could find, but they helped me very little. I also tried Compound Oxygen thoroughly, and the Electric battery, but they helped me very little. On Dec. 17, 1891, I commenced using the Electropoise, and continued it about four months. During this time my disabilities were greatly removed. In the course of a year from the time I commenced using it I enjoyed almost perfect health, which has continued to this date. I have great faith in it."

Rev. J. H. Mansfield, Athol, Mass.

And Hundreds More.

NO HOME SHOULD BE WITHOUT IT.

Call or send for Free Illustrated Circular, with Testimonials, Price List, etc.

L. A. BOSWORTH, 36 BROMFIELD STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

GENERAL AGENT FOR THE NEW ENGLAND STATES.

YOU ONLY NEED A GOOD BRUSH AND Sozodont PURE AND FRAGRANT

A bottle of liquid Sozodont and box of Sozodont Powder in every package. (All Druggists.) The Proprietors, Hall & Ruckel, Wholesale Druggists, New York, will send small sample of liquid Sozodont FREE if you mention this publication.

If you want a sure relief for pains in the back, side, chest, or limbs, use an

Allcock's Porous Plaster

Bear in Mind—Not one of the host of counterfeits and imitations is as good as the genuine.

WEEKLY REGISTER.

Calls.

BEDDOES, Arthur E., Chicago, Ill., to Maplewood Ch. of the same city. Accepts.
BONNEY, Jno. R., to supply another year at Orland, Ind. Accepts.
BUTLER, Thos. W., Everett, Wn., to Vancouver. Accepts.
CARTER, Chas. F., formerly of Burlington, Vt., accepts call to Hancock Ch., Lexington, Mass.
CONDO, S. S., to the permanent pasterate at Marion, Ind., where he has been supplying.
CLEMMER, Ephraim B., Austinburg, O., to serve the church there.
DAVIS, G. W., to Buffalo Center, Io. Accepts.
DIBBLE, Wm. L., Ivanhoe, Ill., accepts call to Second Ch., Winona, Minn.
DICKERMAN, Josiah P., Forest Heights Ch, Minneapolis, Minn., to Fairmont.
DOLE, Chas. J., Lorain, O., to Cleburne, Tex. Accepts.
EDWARDS, Rosine M., accepts call to W. Spokane, Wn.
FISHBURN, M. H., Rockvill Center, N. Y., to Northville, Aquebogue. Accepts.
FORREST, Ned, to permanent pastorate, at Vinita, I. T., where he has been supplying. Accepts.
FREEMAN, Sam'l A., formerly of Naperville, Ill., to Pres. Ch , Lyndonville, N. Y. Accepts.
GOODRICH, Jos. A., Senior Class, Andover Sem., to Shelburne, Mass. Accepts, to begin work at once.
HADDEN, R. A., West Pullman, Ill., accepts call to Forest Heights Ch., Minneapolis, Minn.
HALL, Albert E., to remain another year at Canterbury, N. H.
HEYWARD, Jas. W., Hayward, Wis., accepts call to Bethany Ch., Minneapolis, Minn.
HUBBELL, T. M., senior class Chicago Sem. Ill., to Belvidere. Accepts.
HUMPHREYS, Thos. A., formerly of Johnstown, Pa., accepts call to First Ch., Bloomington, Ill.
JONES, J. Rosser, Richville, N. Y., to Pres. Ch., Adams. Accepts.
KLOPP, J. J., to Bethany Ch., Chicago, Ill.
LIPPARD, Jas. H., Rockford, Ill., to Shopiere, Wis. Accepts.
McALLISTER, Alex., Verndale, Minn., to Cottage Grove.
MERRILL, Wm. C., San Francisco, Cal., to First Ch., Lynn, Mass. Accepts.
MYERS, Jno. C., Downer's Grove, Ill., to Beardstown. Accepts.
PALMER, Oscar A., Trenton, Neb., declines call to Avoca.
PANGBURN, Lycurgus E., Morrisville, N. Y., to Mt. Carmel, Ct. Accepts.
POVEY, Jesse, Mt. Hope Ch., Detroit, Mich., to Lake Linden. Accepts.
RAND, Wilbur, to remain another year at Norwich, Mass. Accepts.
SHEPHERD, Alex., to be acting pastor at Fruita, Col. Accepts.
STEARNS, F. B., to Hartford and Lawrence, Mich. Accepts.
WARREN, Edgar L., No. Attleboro, Mass., accepts call to Westerly, R. I.
WRIGHT, Turner, to Ashland, Milner and Holmes, Ala., in addition to his present charge at Millerville. Accepts.
VAN BLARCOM, Grant, to become stated supply at De Peyster, N. Y. Accepts, and has begun work.
WILLIAMS, Frank B., a licentiate of N. E. Association, to Jamestown, Ind. Accepts.

Ordinations and Installations.

BACHELER, Francis P., i. at South Ch., East Hartford, Ct., March 10. Sermon, Rev. Lewellyn Pratt, D. D.; other parts, Rev. Messrs. S. A. Barrett, S. G. W. Rankin, C. H. Barbour, George Waters and W. H. Moore.
BARTLETT, Ernest C., Andover Seminary, o. p. Central Ch., Chelmsford, Mass., March 12. Sermon, Prof. J. W. Churchill.
DINSMORE, Chas. A., i. Phillips Ch., So. Boston, Mass., March 11. Sermon, Rev. R. R. Meredith, D. D.; other parts, Rev. Messrs. W. L. Anderson, W. T. Perrin and Drs. E. K. Alden, F. E. Clark, Nehemiah Boynton.
MASON, Henry B., i. Grace Union Ch., N. Wilbraham, Mass., March 11.
WILSON, John C., i. Puritan Ch., Brooklyn, N. Y., March —. Sermon, Prof. G. B. Stevens; other parts, Rev. Drs. A. J. Lyman, C. H. Richards, J. B. Clark.

Resignations.

ALLEN, Herbert O., Franklin Ave. Ch., Cleveland, O. to take effect May 31.
BELL, Thos., Paisley, Neb.
DYER, Almon J., First Ch., No. Brookfield, Mass., after four years' service.
FISHER, Jesse L., Verdon, Neb., to take effect in May.
HAYES, Jas., Coal Bluff, Ind., after an eight years' pastorate.
HARLOW, Sam'l A., Salem St. Ch., Worcester, Mass.
HOYT, Frederic V., Oaksdale, Wn., on account of ill health.
JORDAN, Israel, First Ch., Bethel, Me., to take effect May 31.
KENT, Lawrence G., First Ch., Muscatine, Io., to take effect in three months.
MACALLUM, D., Maxville and Martintown, Ont.
MICHAEL, Geo., Neillsville, Wis.
NOON, Sam'l A., Taftville, Ct.
PALMER Frank H., E. Bridgewater, Mass., withdraws resignation.
PRESTON, Chas. L., Sheridan and Fenwick, Mich., to take effect June 1.
SANBORN, Francis W., First Ch., Newbury, Mass., to take effect July 31.
SLYFIELD, Fred. A., Brightwood Ch., Indianapolis, Ind., to take effect May 1.
STRICKLAND, Judson H., Chippewa Lake and Mecosta, Mich., to take effect May 1.
WOODS, Nelson R., Central and Beechwood, Ind., to return to Bangor, Mich.

Dismissions.

BEACH, David N., First Ch., Cambridgeport, Mass., March 12.

Churches Organized.

ALMIRA, Wn., March 8, eight members.
COLUMBIA CITY, Wn., March 5, 18 members.
DE SOTO, Neb., March 6, 20 members.
HAVANA, N. D., March 8, eight members.
HOLABIRD, S. D., March 5, 14 members.
HUME, Ill., Plymouth, March —, 57 members.
IONE, Ore., Feb. 19, 25 members.
SHAW, Lee Co., Ill., March —, 67 members.
SHERWOOD, Ore., Feb. 27, 22 members.
TOWN LINE, Mich., branch of Edmore Ch., March —, 20 members.
WINSLOW, Ill., March —, 22 members.

Miscellaneous.

DEXTER, Frank N., received a gold watch as a farewell gift from his people in Clinton, Wis., who also remembered his wife and children with valuable gifts.
DREW, Frank L., of Henry, S. D., being temporarily absent, Mr. James Walton of Redfield College is supplying the pulpit.
MOREHOUSE, Ezra S., of Hopkins, Mich., is under treatment for nervous prostration at the Battle Creek Sanitarium.

PALMER, Edward G., and wife, were welcomed to their new field in Rochester, Mich., by about 200 of their parishioners, who gave them a reception March 3. A pleasant feature was music furnished by the Boys' Band.
SPENCER, Jos. J., and wife, of the Tucker Memorial Ch., N. Brookfield, Mass., are taking a vacation of a few weeks in North Carolina.

Marriages.

The charge for marriage notices is twenty-five cents.

MATHEWS—TUKEY—In Newcastle, Me., Feb. 26, by Rev. R. T. Hack of Portland, Rev. Rupert B. Mathews and Jessie Tukey, both of Newcastle.

Deaths.

The charge for notices of deaths is twenty-five cents. Each additional line ten cents, counting eight words to a line. The money should be sent with the notice.

CORNELIUS—In West Roxbury, March 4, suddenly, Jeremiah Evarts, youngest son of the late Rev. Elias Cornelius, aged 64 yrs. New York papers please copy.
PAXSON—In East Orange, N. J., March 10, of a paralytic shock, Rev. William P. Paxson, superintendent of the work in the Southwest of the American Sunday School Union and son of the famous missionary Stephen Paxson.
SMITH—In Lebanon, N. H., March 6, George H., youngest son of the late Rev. Bezaleel Smith. In the Civil War he was a faithful soldier, serving in the Third New Hampshire Regiment during the entire war.
SMITH—In Randolph, Vt., March 8, Laura Salisbury, widow of Rev. Bezaleel Smith, aged 81 yrs.
WILSON—In East Jefferson, Me., March 1, Mary, widow of the late Ira Wilson and mother of Rev. Messrs. Gowen C. and Edwin P. Wilson of Deering, Me., aged 88 yrs.

Perfect Purity.

There is no product more wholesome, convenient and nutritious than our

Pure Cocoanut Cooking Butter

It makes a shortening that can be eaten by the worst dyspeptic and is guaranteed to contain No Animal Fats. Two pounds of it will accomplish as much as three pounds of lard, butter, or any other shortening. Never becomes rancid. We also make all grades of table butter from the unadulterated fat of selected, fresh cocoanuts.

AT ALL GROCERS.'

Send for descriptive pamphlet to

The Pure Food Product Co.
544 to 554 N. Water St., Chicago, Ill.

A beautiful silk-like preparation of codfish, "picked-up" by a new process, which preserves both flavor and fibre.

CLEAN—WHOLESOME—SWEET

Requires no boiling or soaking—therefore no odor. Unequaled for Breakfast. 10 cents a package—all grocers.

Originated and prepared by J.W. BEARDSLEY'S SONS, 179 and 180 West Street, New York City. Makers of the Celebrated Acme Sliced Smoked Beef.

Sick people well know the value of a tasty and appetizing food—that stays tasty. Here's the value of made by The American Biscuit & Manufacturing Co., New York. Somatose Biscuit are easily digested, increase the appetite, restore strength, increase the weight.

For sale by druggists at 60 cts. per box—or sent by manufacturers, charges paid, on receipt of price.

Pamphlets mailed free by

Schieffelin & Co., New York, Sole Agts.

Grand National Prize of 16,600 FRANCS at Paris

QUINA-LAROCHE

Possesses in the highest degree the entire active properties of Peruvian Bark. Endorsed by the medical faculty as the best remedy for FEVER AND AGUE, MALARIA, POORNESS OF THE BLOOD, GENERAL DEBILITY and WASTING DISEASES; INCREASES THE APPETITE, STRENGTHENS THE NERVES and builds up the entire system.

Paris: 22 Rue Drouot
New York:
E. FOUGERA & CO., 26-30 N. William St.

WHAT BRINGS RELEASE FROM DIRT AND GREASE? WHY, DON'T YOU KNOW?

SAPOLIO!

L P Fisher Jan96

You may Snap your Fingers at Dyspepsia.

LOOK to the kitchen for the remedy. Eat freely three times a day bread, hot biscuit, hot cakes, made light and sweet with ROYAL BAKING POWDER, stop yeast bread, use meat sparingly, take plenty of air and exercise, and you may snap your fingers at Indigestion.

There is a quality in ROYAL BAKING POWDER, coming from the purity and wholesomeness of its ingredients, which promotes digestion. Food raised by it will not distress. This peculiarity of ROYAL has been noted by hygienists and physicians, and they are accordingly earnest in its praise, especially recommending it in the preparation of food for those of delicate digestion.

Alum baking powders cause indigestion.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 WALL STREET, NEW YORK.

---

POND'S EXTRACT

YARDSLEY—Go down to the drug-store and get a bottle of Pond's Extract, will you? —The Bicyclers, by John Kendrick Bangs.

The Bicycler's Necessity

CURES

Piles
Colds
Wounds
Bruises
Sprains
Toothache

Catarrh
Headache
Hoarseness
Chilblains
Rheumatism
Sore Throat

CHECKS BLEEDING REDUCES INFLAMMATION QUIETS PAIN

USE POND'S EXTRACT After Shaving—No Irritation
USE POND'S EXTRACT After Exercising—No Lameness

LIPS chapped or a little rough? Use POND'S EXTRACT LIP SALVE—Healing, Softening, Delicious Odor, Beautiful Color. 25 cents.

POND'S EXTRACT OINTMENT is simply a marvel. How instantly it cures Piles! What relief from excruciating pain! 50 cents.

BUY GENUINE POND'S EXTRACT if you want genuine cures
Buy imitations if you want imitation cures

POND'S EXTRACT CO., 76 Fifth Ave., New York.

---

Stylish Hats

—FOR—

Easter

Your New Hat or Bonnet for Easter will be a very charming and becoming one if made by our Millinery Artists.

Our Hats always excite admiration because of their exclusiveness of design and the refined taste displayed in trimming.

No matter what the cost, whether much or little, your Hat, if made here, will possess the magic touch of style.

Our prices are the lowest possible for work of superior excellence.

Come to our Opening, Monday, March 23.

Wm. S. Butler & Co.,

The Leading Millinery House,

Tremont and Bosworth Streets, Boston.

Volume LXXXI Number 13

THE CONGREGATIONALIST

Boston Thursday 26 March 1896

DAVID NELSON BEACH.

"GOD is love." "God so loved the world." God's claim is based there. God's command of us is fulcrumed there. Not on sovereignty, though there is sovereignty enough: not on law, though there is law enough; not on right, though there is right enough; not on justice, though God is just; but on love, the love of an infinite and eternal sacrifice. . . . And there is only one thing for you and me to do—a thing which, at the best, we never have done enough yet—namely, to throw ourselves into this infinite Christ principle, into this infinite law of the spiritual kingdom, into this divine imperative of the universe and to become the very children and personal presentments of the cross.—Mr. Beach, in The Newer Religious Thinking.

The Congregationalist's PILGRIMAGE to England and Holland

To sail June 4, 1896, by Hamburg-American Express Steamer Columbia, landing at PLYMOUTH, ENGLAND, returning August 1 by the same Line. The Itinerary includes Cologne, the Rhine, Lucerne, Paris, etc.

BOSTON, ENGLAND.

NEW WORLD PILGRIMS AT OLD WORLD SHRINES . . . .

A unique brochure, valuable as a Pilgrim souvenir as well as a record of one of the most delightful routes of travel ever planned for people of cultured tastes. Besides the full daily Itinerary and all necessary details and directions, much space is given to "English and Dutch Notes," which treat of the historic and architectural features of the tour, and particularly of points of Pilgrim interest. 42 ILLUSTRATIONS. Price, 10 Cents.

Address PILGRIMAGE, Office of THE CONGREGATIONALIST, Boston,
or HENRY GAZE & SONS, Ltd., { 113 Broadway, New York, & 201 Washington St., Boston, } Business Managers of the Tour.

Religious Notices.

Religious and ecclesiastical notices, addresses of ministers, etc, published under this heading at ten cents a line.

PRESIDENT STEPHEN B. L. PENROSE of Whitman College will be in the East until June 1, and desires opportunity to tell the patriotic story of Marcus Whitman before churches, societies, etc. Address 182 Chelten Avenue, Germantown, Pa.

COMMITTEE ON THE WORK OF THE CHURCHES.—Pastors who have not sent their reports please forward at once direct to ISAIAH W. SNEATH, Station F, Cambridge, Mass.

THE AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION has been at work seventy-one years for the retired rural districts. Its union methods specially commend it to communities of sparse populations divided in religious sentiments. Its missionaries visit families, distribute religious literature, hold evangelistic meetings and organize Sunday Schools. Probably no evangelizing agency has larger results for the amount expended. 11,000,000 children are yet out of Sunday School. Will you help to save them? Send to Rev. Addison P. Foster, D. D., New England Secretary, 1 Beacon St., Room 40, Boston.

AMERICAN SEAMEN'S FRIEND SOCIETY, No. 76 Wall St., New York. Incorporated April, 1833. Object: to improve the moral and social condition of seamen. Sustains chaplains and missionaries; promotes temperance homes and boarding houses in leading seaports at home and abroad; provides libraries for outgoing vessels; publishes the Sailor's Magazine, Seamen's Friend and Life Boat.

Contributions to sustain its work are solicited, and remittances of same are requested to be made direct to the main office of the Society at New York.

CHARLES H. TRASK, President.
REV. W. C. STITT, Secretary.
W. C. STURGES Treasurer.

Subscribers' Wants.

Notices under this heading, not exceeding five lines (eight words to the line), cost subscribers fifty cents each insertion. Additional lines ten cents each per insertion.

A woman of experience, competent and willing, desires to enter a home of means and refinement, and manage its domestic economy and exert a helpful influence on its children. Address, Box 413, Swampscott, Mass.

Wanted, a situation as Organist and Director of Music by a gentleman of large experience. Address "Organist," P. O. Box, 1944, Boston.

Young man wishes to start at the bottom and work up in some good business. Address "Alpha," Worcester, Mass.

OUR ANNIVERSARY OFFER

The Paper for 12 Weeks & The Bonnie Brier Bush for 25 Cts.

☞ Note carefully the conditions as stated in our advertisement on page 462 of last week's issue.

Address "TRIAL SUBSCRIPTIONS,"
THE CONGREGATIONALIST, 1 Somerset St., Boston.

TO LEASE, in Massachusetts, one of the best boarding school properties in the country. Terms reasonable. Address
WINSHIP TEACHERS' AGENCY,
3 Somerset St., Boston.

300 ORDERS in Three Weeks"; "10 orders in every 12 calls"; "$5 to $10 profit every day"; "130 orders in 3½ days." Terms free. Outfit 30 cents. JAS. H. EARLE, Publisher, Boston.

Church Cushions
Correspondence Solicited.
Ostermoor & Co., 116 Elizabeth St, New York, N.Y.

Blake Bell Foundry
Established in 1820.
Successors to WM. BLAKE & CO.
Manufacture bells of every description, single or chimes of Copper and Tin. Address
BLAKE BELL CO., Boston, Mass.

Buckeye Bell Foundry
E. W. Vanduzen Co., Cincinnati, O.
Best Pure Copper and Tin Church Bells & Chimes.
Highest Award at World's Fair. Gold Medal at Mid-winter Exp'n. Price, terms, etc., supplied free.

BELLS
Steel Alloy Church & School Bells. Send for Catalogue. The C. S. BELL CO., Hillsboro, O.

IMPROVED
Cathedral Tubular Bells,
CHIMES AND PEALS (Harrington and other patents.)
U. S. Tubular Bell Co., Sole Mfrs., Methuen, Mass.

A BELLS all kinds, big and little—for Church and School, for Fire, Factory and Farm.
Catalogue FREE. AMERICAN
BELL FOUNDRY CO., NORTHVILLE, MICH.

PULPIT SUITS and LODGE ROOM FURNITURE. Send for Catalogue.
A. B. & E. L. SHAW, - 27 Sudbury St., Boston, Mass.

CHURCH CARPETS AT MANUFACTURERS' PRICES. JOHN H. PRAY, SONS & CO., CARPETS AND UPHOLSTERY, 658 WASHINGTON ST., OPP. BOYLSTON ST., BOSTON.

Hotels and Travel.

VACATION TOURS EUROPE

H. GAZE & SONS, 52d Year.

All expenses—$175 to $800—all expenses.

HIGH CLASS ARRANGEMENTS.

Spring and Summer Vacation Tours, Europe. Thirty Tours, ranging in price from $175 to $800, visiting England, Ireland, Scotland, France, Holland, Rhine, Germany, Italy, Switzerland, Danube, Austria, etc.;

North Cape and Russia Party, June 27.
Annual Round the World Party, Sept.
Holy Land Party (Egypt and the Nile)—Spring and Autumn—Four tours annually.

Independent tickets for any desired tour in Europe, with or without hotel coupons. Estimates furnished. Agents all lines steamers. Choice rooms secured. Gaze's Tourist Gazette free, gives particulars.

113 Broadway, New York. H. Gaze & Sons, Ltd., 201 Washington St., Boston.

CRUISE OF THE AMERICAN BUILT STEAMER "OHIO."

The largest and finest yacht steamer in the world. Dining room holds 200 persons, and only this number will be taken on the cruise.

June 27th to August 27th. Cruise to Russia, Sweden, Norway and the Midnight Sun, and the total eclipse of the sun, visible August 8th. Rate, $475 upwards.

June 6th, July 1st and 8th. European Tours. Send for descriptive catalogues.

THOMAS FOREIGN TOURIST CO., 1715 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, or Leon L. Collver, New England Agent, 306 Washington Street, Boston.

EUROPE

Application (with references) may now be made for membership in President Capen's (Tufts College) Party, and in the Harvard and Brown Universities' Parties to visit the Historical, Literary, and Art Centers of Europe. Cards of Membership $265 to $630. Address

LEON L. COLLVER, N. E. Agent Clark's Tours, 306 Washington St., Boston.

Cook's Tours to Europe.

All Traveling Expenses Included.

Our Annual May Party, the first of our high-class parties to Europe, will sail by the White Star Line SS. "Majestic" on May 6. Succeeding departures May 16, 23, 28, June 10, 17, 27. All the arrangements for these parties are in every respect first-class.

Illustrated programs free. Railroad and steamship tickets for individual travelers everywhere.

THOS. COOK & SON, 261 and 1225 Broadway, New York.

Going To... EUROPE?

H. Gaze & Sons (Ltd.)

The Universal Tourist Agts. (Est. 1844) will send out

67 Escorted Parties

of the highest-class. Write for the details. Individual Tours Everywhere, and choicest berths on all steamship lines. TOURIST GAZETTE—POST FREE.

113 Broadway, N.Y.

or 201 Washington St., Boston; 220 So. Clark St., Chicago; 135 So. Fifth St., Philadelphia.

EUROPEAN TOURS.

14th Year. Personally conducted by Dr. and Mrs. Paine. Limited party. Terms reasonable. Address H. S. PAINE, M.D., Glens Falls, N. Y.

85 DAYS IN EUROPE.

Few vacancies in limited party to visit England, France, Germany, Belgium, Switzerland, Italy, Gibraltar. Personally conducted by Prof. Camille Thurwanger, 31 Pierce Building, Boston, Mass.

KIMBALL'S TOURS

in Europe (8th season). Limited party sails June 24, on "St. Louis." Moderate price, comprehensive route. EDWIN C. KIMBALL, 56 Summer St., Boston, Mass.

DR. CHENEY'S PARTY TO EUROPE. (9th season.) Conducted by O. D. Cheney, M. D., and wife, of Haverhill, Mass. Limited to 25. 78 days. Cunard steamer "Cephalonia," June 27.

EUROPE for 67 days, or less, starting June 27. Finest Tour going; includes coaching trip. Economical. Write for circulars to Box F., Plainfield, N. J.

ST. DENIS HOTEL

Broadway and Eleventh St.

Opposite Grace Church, NEW YORK.

The most centrally located hotel in the city, conducted on the European plan, at moderate prices. Recently enlarged by a new and handsome addition that doubles its former capacity. The new DINING ROOM is one of the finest specimens of Colonial Decoration in this country.

WILLIAM TAYLOR.

THE CONGREGATIONALIST

AND BOSTON RECORDER.

The Recorder founded 1816: The Congregationalist, 1849

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
- Paragraphs 501
- A Forward Step in Boston Congregationalism 501
- The Flasco in Armenia 502
- Christ Our Sacrifice for Sin 503
- Raleigh and Guiana 518
- Current History 503
- In Brief 504

STAFF CORRESPONDENCE:
- New York 505
- The Interior 505
- The Northwest 506

CURRENT THOUGHT 507

CONTRIBUTIONS:
- The Christian Life. V. Church Worship. Rev. Floyd W. Tomkins, Jr. 507
- A Baritone's Parish. I. Rev. James M. Ludlow, D. D. 508
- David Nelson Beach. G. P. M. 510
- Washington Happenings. L. C. W. 520

THE HOME:
- Gethsemane—a poem. Ella Gilbert Ives 511
- Paragraphs 511
- Last Weeks in Jesus' Life. Mrs. C. L. Goodell 511
- Right Living on a Wrong Plane. Mrs. M. E. Sangster 512
- The Science of Food. II. Its Production and Preservation. M. V. Shaler 512
- Fresh Air Studies: Heralds of Spring. Howard E. Parkhurst 512
- Tobacco and the Will 513
- Closet and Altar 513
- Mrs. Deland's Story Again. Anna S. Huntington 514
- Manners and Social Usages 514
- Tangles 514
- The Conversation Corner. Mr. Martin 515
- Corner Scrap-Book 515

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL—Lesson for April 5 516
- Notes 529

Y. P. S. C. E.—Topic for April 5-11 517

PROGRESS OF THE KINGDOM 517

LITERATURE 518

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES:
- New Pastors in Chicago 521

MISCELLANEOUS:
- Statistics of Massachusetts Churches 517
- Notices 521
- General Howard Roll of Honor 525
- Business Outlook 526
- Biographical 526
- Woman's Board Prayer Meeting 527
- Yale Honors Another Bacon 528
- The Oldest Religious Paper 529
- The Old South Lenten Lectures 530
- The Huguenots of Old Boston 530
- Deaths 531

THE CONGREGATIONALIST

AND BOSTON RECORDER.

The Recorder founded 1816: The Congregationalist, 1849.

Published every Thursday.

PER COPY, 6 CENTS. PER YEAR IN ADVANCE, $3.00.
TWO YEARS IN ADVANCE, $5.00; FIVE YEARS, $10.00.
IF PAYMENT IS DELAYED, $3.50 PER YEAR.
ONE OLD AND ONE NEW SUBSCRIPTION, $5.00.
CLUB OF FIVE, ONE AT LEAST BEING NEW, $10.00.

On Trial, 6 Months, $1.00; 3 Months, 25 Cents.

RECEIPTS for subscriptions are indicated by the date of expiration following the subscriber's address, as printed upon the paper. If a special receipt is wanted a stamp should be sent with remittance.

DISCONTINUANCES.—In accordance with the almost universal wish of our subscribers, papers are continued until there is a specific order to stop. In connection with such an order all arrearages must be paid. An order of discontinuance can be given at any time, to take effect at the expiration of the subscription.

ADVERTISING RATES.—25 cents per agate line each insertion, 14 lines to the inch; 11½ inches to the column. Discounts according to amount of contract. READING NOTICES, leaded nonpareil, 50 cents per line, each insertion, net.

W. L. GREENE & CO., Proprietors, Boston.

Entered as second-class mail. Composition by Thomas Todd.

What Rudyard Kipling Thinks of the Pocket Kodak.

"I can only say that I am amazed at the excellence of the little Kodak's work."

Rudyard Kipling

Booklet free, tells all about it.

Pocket Kodak loaded for 12 pictures, 1½ x 2 in. $5.00.

EASTMAN KODAK CO.

Rochester, N. Y.

CHANDLER & CO.'S Duchesse Perfect Fitting Glove.

We invite the attention of the ladies of Boston and New England to this most justly celebrated glove as the greatest triumph of the glove maker's art. In shapeliness, beauty and wearing qualities we have never seen it equaled during the many years of our catering to the wants of the New England family trade.

We will send this glove anywhere by mail, on receipt of price, and guarantee perfect satisfaction to the purchaser.

We do not hesitate to recommend this glove as the very best made.

| | |
|---|---|
| Four Button Kid, in Colors, Plain Back | $1 50 per pair. |
| Four Button Kid, in Black, Plain Back | $1.75 " " |
| Four Button Kid, in Colors, Embroidered Back | $1.75 " " |
| Seven Hook, Black and Colors, Embroidered Back | $1.75 " " |

CHANDLER & CO.,

Winter Street, Boston.

Our Organ in Christ M. E. Church, Pittsburg, Pa.

FARRAND & VOTEY ORGAN CO.,

Builders of the GREAT ORGANS

in World's Fair, Carnegie Hall, Pittsburg, Scottish Rite Cathedral, Cincinnati and many others. Correspondence solicited. Address

FARRAND & VOTEY ORGAN CO., Detroit, Mich. New York and Chicago.

Monday Club Sermons. 20th Series.

Unique expositions of the International Lessons for 1896.

Price, $1.25.

Baptism As Taught in the Scriptures. By R. R. Lloyd D. D.

A close philological study of the subject of immersion, but popularly stated.

Price, cloth, 50 cts., paper, 35 cts.

Letters on Baptism. 4th Edition.

By Rev. Edmund B. Fairfield. 75 cts.

Clear and lucid statement of the argument against immersion. "Logical, exhaustive, unanswerable."

Development of Modern Religious Thought.

Especially in Germany. By E. S. Carr

A book of great value to all who are interested in the history of doctrine.

Price, $1.00.

Congregational S. S. & Publishing Society,
BOSTON AND CHICAGO.

SONGS FOR SPRING TIME.

HIGHEST PRAISE FOR THE SABBATH SCHOOL.
$30 per 100 copies.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HYMNS, for YOUNG PEOPLE.
$30 per 100 copies.

Do not substitute inferior books because of lower price. The best are cheapest!!

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO.,
76 East 9th St., New York. 215 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

EASTER MUSIC. PILGRIM SERVICES.

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED MUSIC.
8 Services. 4c. and 2c.

Samples 1 Cent Each.

Congregational S. S. & Publishing Society,
BOSTON AND CHICAGO.

Christian Endeavor Topic Cards

Official Badge, Scarf or Catch Pin. Solid gold, $1.00; silver, 25 cents. . . . . Beautiful embossed designs. Send for samples, free. Complete price-list of all supplies sent free.

United Society of Christian Endeavor,
646 Washington St., Boston. 155 La Salle St., Chicago.

OLD BOOKS BOUGHT.

LIBRARIES AND SMALL PARCELS OF BOOKS PURCHASED.
Save the expense and delay of Auction Sales.
N. J. BARTLETT & CO., 28 Cornhill, Boston

SCHERMERHORN'S TEACHERS' AGENCY.
Oldest and best known in U. S.
Established, 1855.
3 EAST 14TH STREET, N. Y.

THE FISK TEACHERS' AGENCIES.
4 Ashburton Pl., Boston, Mass.; New York, N. Y.; Chicago, Ill.; and Los Angeles, Cal. 100-paged Agency Manual free. EVERETT O. FISK & CO.

BRADFORD ACADEMY.
For the higher education of young women. Buildings unsurpassed for comfort and health. Twenty-five acres—twelve in grove; lake for rowing and skating. Classical and general course of study; also, preparatory and optional. Year commences Sept. 11, 1895. Apply to MISS IDA C. ALLEN, Principal Bradford, Mass.

MASSACHUSETTS, BRADFORD.
CARLETON SCHOOL for Young Men and Boys. College preparatory and general course of study. Individual teaching. Gymnasium bowling alley, etc. Circulars.
I. N. CARLETON, Ph. D.

MASSACHUSETTS, NORTON.
WHEATON SEMINARY
For Young Ladies. Regular and elective courses, literary, scientific, classical. Pupils also fitted for advanced courses in leading colleges. Excellent advantages in art and music. Fine library, laboratory, observatory, gymnasium, bowling alley; outdoor sports, careful physical training. Perfect sanitary arrangements. Best home influences. Beautifully situated, 28 miles from Boston.
61st year. Summer term, April 9, 1896. For illustrated prospectus, address
MISS A. E. STANTON, Principal, Norton, Mass.

NEW THEOLOGICAL BOOKS.

(T. & T. CLARK, Edinburgh.)

The Christian Doctrine of Immortality. By Rev. S. D. F. Salmond, D. D. Demy 8vo, net $5.00.

"The word 'Immortality' is used in the large sense which Paul gives it when he speaks of 'this mortal putting on 'immortality.' Life, eternal life, the immortality of the man, not the immortality of the soul, is the message of the Bible. . . . The teaching of Christ and the whole burden of the Christian Revelation make the present life decisive for the future."—From the Author's Preface.

The Resurrection of the Dead. By the late Professor W. Milligan, D. D. Second Edition. Crown 8vo, $1.75.

"There is the touch of the exact scholar on every page, and it brings out beauty that is truth, and truth that is beauty, to our continual enjoyment."—The Expository Times.

The Bible Doctrine of Man; or, The Anthropology of Scripture. By Rev. J. Laidlaw, D. D. New Edition, Revised and Rearranged. Post 8vo, $3.00.

"The standard work in English on the Anthropology and Psychology of the Bible."—Expository Times.

BEYSCHLAG'S NEW TESTAMENT THEOLOGY.

New Testament Theology; or, Historical Account of the Teaching of Jesus and of Primitive Christianity according to the New Testament sources. By Dr. Willibald Beyschlag, Professor of Theology at Halle. Translated by Rev. Neil Buchanan. 2 vols., demy 8vo, net $6.00.

Morality and Religion. By Rev. James Kidd, D. D., Glasgow. Demy 8vo, $4.00.

"Dr. Kidd has written a remarkable volume."—Professor J. Iverach, D. D., in The Thinker.

The Ethics of the Old Testament. By Rev. W. S. Bruce, M. A. Crown 8vo, $1.50.

Introduction to the New Testament. The Epistles of St. Paul. By Professor F. Godet, D. D, Neuchatel. Demy 8vo, net $4.50.

The original edition is to form three large volumes—Vol. I. containing "St. Paul's Epistles" (Translation now ready, as above); Vol. II. "The Gospels, and Acts of the Apostles"; and Vol. III. "Hebrews, Catholic Epistles, and the Apocalypse."

KAFTAN'S TRUTH OF THE CHRISTIAN RELIGION.

The Truth of the Christian Religion. By Professor Julius Kaftan. Berlin. Translated from the German under the author's supervision, by G. Ferries, D. D. With a Prefatory Note by Professor Flint, D. D. 2 vols., 8vo, net $6 00.

"Eminently a work which the times require, and will be cordially welcomed by all students of theology."—Scotsman.

Introduction to the Synoptic Gospels. By Paton J Gloag, D. D, author of "An Introduction to the Pauline Epistles," "The Catholic Epistles," etc. Demy 8vo, $3.00.

The Brotherhood of Mankind; A Study towards a Christian Philosophy of History. By Rev. J. Howard Crawford, M. A. Post 8vo, $2 00.

SCHULTZ'S OLD TESTAMENT THEOLOGY.

Old Testament Theology. The Religion of Revelation in its Pre Christian Stage of Development By Professor Hermann Schultz, D. D. Authorized English Translation by Professor J. A. Paterson, D. D 2 vols., 8vo, Second Edition, net $6.00

"The book to get, beyond all doubt, is this one by Schultz, which Messrs. Clark have just given to us in English. It is one of the most interesting and readable books we have had in our hands for a long time."—Professor A. B. Bruce, D. D.

Sources of New Testament Greek; or, The Influence of the Septuagint on the Vocabulary of the New Testament. By Rev. H. A. A. Kennedy. 8vo, $2.00.

 This book is a study in Biblical Greek, attempting to estimate the influence of the LXX. on the New Testament vocabulary.

The Critical Review. Edited by Professor S. D. F. Salmond, D. D. Containing signed Reviews of all the important Theological and Philosophical books published during the year, and Notices and Record of Select Literature, by the Editor. Published quarterly. Annual (prepaid) Subscription, net $1.50.

The Expository Times. Edited by the Rev. James Hastings, M. A. Annual Subscription, net $1.50.

"The 'Expository Times' is the best preacher's monthly that we have—most various and helpful for all Bible students."—London Quarterly.

New Catalogue, just issued, free by post, on application.

 These books for sale by all booksellers, or will be supplied by

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS, SOLE AGENTS FOR T. & T. CLARK, 153-157 Fifth Ave., New York.

"A decided advance on all other commentaries"—The Outlook.

The International Critical Commentary

On the Holy Scripture of the Old and New Testament.

Issued under the Editorship of Prof. Charles A. Briggs, D. D., Prof. S R. Driver, D. D., Oxford, and Alfred Plummer, D. D., University College, Durham.

FUTURE VOLUMES BY

Prof. T. K. CHEYNE, Oxford
Prof. FRANCIS BROWN, Union Theol. Sem.
Prof. A. B. DAVIDSON, Edinburgh
Pres. W. R. Harper, Chicago
Prof. C. H. TOY, Harvard
Prof. E. D. BURTON, Chicago
Prof. MARVIN R. VINCENT, Union Theol. Sem.
Prof. EDWARD L. CURTIS, Yale
Prof. A. F. KIRKPATRICK, Cambridge
Rev. JOHN P. PETERS, New York
Prof. R. H. CHARLES, Oxford
Prof. E. P. GOULD, Philadelphia, and numerous others.

A NEW VOLUME JUST PUBLISHED.

MARK. By Prof. E. P. Gould, Divinity School, Philadelphia. 8vo, $2.50 net.

PREVIOUSLY ISSUED.

DEUTERONOMY. By Prof. S. R. Driver, D. D, Oxford Crown 8vo, $3.00 net.

"This I find superior to any other commentary, in any language, upon Deuteronomy."—Prof. Edward L. Curtis, Yale University.

JUDGES. By Prof. George Moore, Andover. Crown 8vo, $3.00 net.

"The typographical execution is worthy of the scholarly character of the contents—and higher praise could not be given it.—Prof. C. H. Toy, Harvard University.

ROMANS. By Prof. William Sanday and Rev. A. C. Headlam, Oxford. Crown, 8vo, $3.00 net.

"We do not hesitate to commend this commentary on Romans as the best yet written in English."—Church Standard.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS, 153-157 Fifth Ave., N. Y.

THE CONGREGATIONALIST

Volume LXXXI Boston Thursday 26 March 1896 Number 13

✠ 80th ANNIVERSARY OFFER ✠

The eightieth anniversary offer (The Congregationalist and The Bonnie Brier Bush for 30 cents) will be withdrawn very soon. The large edition of the anniversary number is nearly exhausted and it will not be reprinted. We cannot guarantee to fill orders either for this number or for The Bonnie Brier Bush after April 2.

✠ TRIAL SUBSCRIPTIONS. ✠

6 Months for . . . . . $1.00
3 Months for 25 cts. 4 Weeks Free.

✠ THE CONGREGATIONALIST SERVICES. ✠

Easter and thirty-two other services.
Price, 100 copies of one number, 60 cts., postpaid.

CHRIST'S triumphal entry into Jerusalem, which we remember on Palm Sunday, stands for more than the brief flowering of the people's enthusiasm and the exact fulfillment of ancient prophecy. It is the assertion of Christ's kingship over Israel, but also of the larger and deeper way in which God meets man's need. To the disciples that one day of popular recognition and excited feeling ended in bitter disappointment. It was a declaration of power followed by no deed of adequate power to confirm and advance it. To us it means a revelation of Christ's love for sinners and of the enduring truth of the prophet's message—"For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord." When we are ready to see Christ triumph in our own chosen fashion we may be doomed to bitter disappointment. From the shouting of multitudes and the strewing of palms and garments he may go back to the quiet of Bethany or Gethsemane. But, when we look to see him triumph in his own way, we shall sooner or later see it, though it be by the way of the cross and the sepulcher. All Christ's ways lead to victory, though we can often only see the darkness of the step that follows next for our own walking.

Thirty-five years ago Prof. Austin Phelps preached an impressive sermon before the Massachusetts legislature on The Relation of the Bible to the Civilization of the Future. Among the claims of the Bible which he presented with great force were that it contains the only authentic history of the world before the flood and that its earliest books are the oldest literature in the world. Twenty years later higher critics urged as one of the strongest arguments against the claim that Moses was the writer of the Pentateuch that the art of writing had not, in that early age, advanced far enough for the production of those books. Recent explorations in Egypt and Babylon have unearthed a literature much of which was written before the Biblical date of the flood and which is more extensive than the Old Testament. For example, the Tel el-Amarna tablets, consisting of correspondence with Egypt written by kings of Asia Minor, Armenia, Palestine and other countries, are admitted to date before the Exodus, and would form a volume twice the size of the book of Genesis, and this fact is now cited to show that higher critics are unreliable. Thus positions taken with confidence by scholars like Professor Phelps and later Bible students have been made untenable by discovered facts, while the teachings of the Bible have not abated their force in the consciences and judgments of the Christian world. The power of the Bible is not in those portions of history in it which cannot otherwise be verified, nor in its authorship by those who appear in its pages as heroes, but in its voice, which penetrates to the inner life of man and commands obedience to the will which is recognized as holy and supreme.

A speaker in discussing the modern and the model church recently took objection to our present church management, among other things because of a lack of soul-stirring congregational singing. This is a want which we deprecate, but it is useless to overlook the fact that the Anglo-American people are not naturally endowed with the gift of song. Only careful forethought working in thorough, patient training of the children will give us back the congregational singing which is the ideal in this department of worship. How this is to be provided for it is hard to see. The school time of the children is pretty well taken up already, and what musical training the schools give is too often ineffective. Something might be done in the Sunday school, where the standard of singing is often far too low, but the difficulty is to secure the right sort of teaching. We have sometimes thought that the endowment of a musical department in our churches would be one of the very best uses of money, but even then the temptation would be to spend it in securing highly artistic effects by soloists rather than in training the congregation to sing the best music. And back of this is the difficulty that the congregations often do not wish to sing but to be sung to by those more richly gifted than themselves. Let an effective plan be invented to arouse a musical ambition in the minds of the rank and file of our congregations and some means would be found to teach and get them singing.

When it is said that "corporations have no souls," the true meaning is that managers have ceased to listen to the voice of conscience. There are corporations and corporations, however, and we are glad to know that there are some whose managers contrive to make them witnesses for righteousness and even for Christ. In a recent Missionary Herald, for example, is a letter from Mexico which we fear some of our readers may have overlooked, which says of a mining town in the mountains, "Various circumstances had operated to prepare the way in an unusual manner for the reception of the gospel. The just and Christian conduct of an American mining company located here has been an indirect but powerful influence in favor of Protestant Christianity." When the final books come to be written up we question whether the largest return of dividends of that mining company will not be found to have been along that line of Christian conduct.

Imitating the Roman Catholics, the more loyal and polemic of the Protestant Episcopal fold organized in May, 1895, the American Church League, in order to accomplish two purposes: to answer attacks upon the church and to correct misrepresentations of the church in secular papers; to give wider circulation to items favorable to the church. In the first annual report of the league, just printed, we find the following interesting facts. Fifty-four articles adverse to the church have been answered. In ten cases better reports of church events have been procured. In five instances priests who have been attacked by secular papers have been defended. Priests defending church principles have been supplied with information in about a dozen cases, and church papers have been furnished with 260 longer or shorter articles. One class of members aid in the work by watching the secular papers to which they have access and forward to the officials of the league such as they deem inimical to its interests. Another class of members furnishes the sinews of war—shall we say?—which during the year just closed amounted to $63.50. Several lessons can be drawn from these facts. First, the Congregational polity is as worthy of defense as the Episcopal. Second, editors of secular and religious papers welcome contributions that are pertinent and informing. Third, much can be done quietly and inexpensively without constructing a great machine or paying large salaries. We may say in passing that a denominational paper aims to justify its existence by just such service as this.

A FORWARD STEP IN BOSTON CONGREGATIONALISM.

A definite and promising effort to conserve and promote Congregationalism in this city and its suburbs was initiated last week in the organization of the Congregational Church Union of Boston and vicinity. Those familiar with the history of our denomination hereabouts during the last quarter of a century hardly need to be reminded that from time to time the feeling has been general and strong that Congregationalists were not pursuing a prudent and far-sighted policy with reference to the future. Several attempts have been made to unify and solidify our forces, and four years ago, largely through the instrumentality of Mr. Samuel B. Capen, to whom the city and the denomination are under obligations for so many other fruitful suggestions, the Pilgrim Association was formed. Its two objects were municipal reform and church extension. In due time it was seen that the first end in view could better be accomplished by joining hands with kindred bodies in a municipal league. What this widely representative society has accomplished need not again be rehearsed.

The other branch of the work of the Pilgrim Association, that of church extension, remained for it to pursue. Soon it became apparent that to do the best work in this direction an incorporated society with power to hold and transfer property was necessary. Moreover, the Pilgrim Association being originally confined to representatives of the churches of Boston only, and the most promising fields for new churches being in the suburbs, it was felt that a larger scope was desirable. Hence, the Pilgrim Association has been led along, step by step, to the point of passing over its original functions to two other organizations of which it may justly claim to be the mother.

The second of these, the Congregational Church Union, goes forward now, inheriting its generic idea from the Pilgrim Association and perpetuating its work. It ought, therefore, to be understood that the disbanding of the Pilgrim Association is not due to any lack of interest or of success, but to the conviction that its objects can now better be furthered in another way. The men who have been active in the association will now labor in one or both of the organizations which have grown out of it. This will prevent a multiplication of societies and is a fine illustration of the way in which men who are anxious to accomplish certain definite results are willing to modify their methods as practical experience suggests.

As to the new Congregational Church Union its start has been an encouraging one. When men of the standing of Hon. S. C. Darling of Somerville and Mayor Henry E. Cobb of Newton are willing to accept the positions of president and vice-president, respectively, of an organization, their action establishes it at once in the public confidence. Moreover, the twenty-seven directors of the union, representing both urban and suburban churches, have been selected from the ranks of the substantial and progressive men of this vicinity, the proportion of clergymen being notably small. In its board of directors the wisdom of years and the enthusiasm of youth are combined.

This new society does not propose to reconstruct Boston Congregationalism or to establish many new churches. It recognizes the fact that our denomination locally is still virile and resourceful. We have a splendid proof of this fact in the large gifts to the American Board from Boston, but this society also perceives that the chief defects of our denomination locally have always been an ultra independence and a lack of effective co-operation in caring for the territory just at hand. We have sent our money to the ends of the earth, and have neglected important points and have missed our opportunity in outlying fields.

No organization has existed whose business it was carefully to canvass the region where we are with a view to ascertaining where we are weak and where we are strong, whether we might combine here and colonize there to advantage. The Home Missionary Society in a general way has attended to the propagation of Congregationalism hereabouts, but its field is the whole State, and officers and directors who have to overlook so wide and diverse a territory can hardly be expected to give that minute examination and consideration to local necessities that is demanded. The City Missionary Society confines its ministrations to the poor of Boston, and it has done so large and useful a work that it is perhaps too much to expect that it should at this period of its history broaden its scope.

The need, then, of the new organization, which shall undertake to do for Boston what through its home and foreign societies Boston is trying to do for the rest of the world, is apparent, and we believe that the need was never more pronounced than today. We have grave problems relating to the maintenance of churches in the heart of the city. With a population of over a million within a radius of thirty miles from the State House, and with a constant increase through the natural gravitation from the hill towns to the great centers, there are liable to be regions where new churches ought to be planted. The problem of a Congregational House is a serious one, and, with the likelihood of an International Council here in 1899, no time ought to be lost in deciding upon and endeavoring to accomplish the wisest results. No one expects that this new society could do anything without the sympathy and confidence of the local churches. We believe, however, that these will be forthcoming in proportion as it is understood that this organization is not another dining club, but that it is made up largely of business men, some of whom are willing to give thought and effort to meeting our local opportunities and obligations.

This society does not propose to be a dictator as to this or that project. It knows full well that our Congregational system recognizes no authority save that which goes with consecrated common sense and business ability. The men in it, however, do believe that without abating one whit their loyalty to their individual churches they have a broader debt to the polity in which they have been nourished. They believe that prudent supervision of denominational advancement means, in the end, greater economy and efficiency and they hope through patiently and carefully interesting themselves in local needs to win a standing in the denomination which will make their judgment on important questions weighty and their practical efforts to render Congregationalism strong and aggressive here in its citadel successful.

We bespeak for the new organization a large measure of public sympathy and support, and to bring our account of it to a close in a manner befitting the practical ends it has in view, we would suggest that any member of a Congregational church or society in Boston or vicinity who is desirous of helping it forward can show his interest, not only by his prayers, which are certainly much desired, but by enrolling himself as an annual, a sustaining or a life member, at a cost, respectively, of three dollars, ten dollars or one hundred dollars.

THE FIASCO IN ARMENIA.

The tragedy in Eastern Turkey is practically ended. The nations interested are looking on ruined Armenia as men look on the smoking remains of a newly burned city, and discuss the causes which led to and promoted the disaster. Once more the jealousy of Mohammedan Turks has effectually checked the progress of a Christian people in their midst, who, through the enlarged knowledge and new ambitions created by Christian education, were rising rapidly in wealth and power. That outbreak of fanaticism is easily explained.

But the questions of most solemn significance are these: How could Christian nations permit such deliberate and prolonged succession of massacres of helpless people, whose martyrdoms for the last eighteen months surpass any of the records of history which we have taught to our children to show them the hights of nobility in Christian character? Long lists are being printed of those who have died in Armenia under the cruelest tortures rather than deny their Saviour. But what is to be said of the manhood of those who boast that they govern the leading nations of the world, who profess the same faith, and who have seen their brethren suffer unreportable indignities and awful deaths, with only unavailing remonstrances. Rulers of Christian nations have uttered bold threats during the last few months. But they have not been addressed to murderous Turks. They have been spoken to one another, and they have referred to property, not to endangered lives. It is true that Christian nations today care more for territory than truth, for gain than honor?

Mr. E. J. Dillon in the March Fortnightly has written an article under the title we have herewith adopted, summing up with great force and clearness the dismal history of the disaster to Armenia. He spent several months on the ground studying the situation, and his writings have been among the most effective in enlightening the world concerning it. He shows plainly that the nations most interested, Russia, England, Germany, Austria, France and Italy, cared chiefly for the political advantages to be gained. England and Russia were the leaders in the game which was being played for supremacy in the East. England blustered and threatened the sultan, but she had not provided means to make good her threats in case he did not comply with her demands. She counted on bringing her old enemy into line to co-operate with her, but she blundered. Russia looked on coldly and jealously. England had to admit that she had promised what she could not carry out. The Armenians had been excited by vain hopes which she had kindled. The Turks and Kurds were irritated by vain threats which she had made. They pounced on their defenseless foes. Russia saw what she had desired and striven for—her opportunity to take virtual possession of Turkey and, without a war, thrust England out of her way. Other nations supported her, not because they wanted her to win, but because they could not take possession themselves and preferred that England should lose.

The honor and life of a race of brave Christian people have proved to be of secondary importance in the game which the nations of Europe have been playing for political power. That is the real fiasco. Russia has won Turkey and made her a vassal. She can now consistently defend the territorial integrity of the Turkish Empire, for it is practically in her own power. England has been ignominiously beaten. Her threats have been contemptuously put aside by the sultan, who knew he was safe in the arms of Russia. England has lost the prestige which for half a century she has been struggling to gain. Russia is mistress of the East.

Our own Government has small ground for satisfaction in the part it has taken in this wretched fiasco. True, we were not in the political game. We have sought no territory and therefore have lost none. No American citizens have been murdered, but our minister has threatened and blustered, and the sultan has not been awed by the power of the United States. Our citizens have been maltreated, their property wantonly destroyed, helpless and unoffending Armenians under their protection have been subjected to barbarous and inhuman treatment and murdered by wholesale before their eyes. No idemnity for losses has been made. Our consuls have been shut out from the places to which they were sent. Reasonable requests have been persistently refused, and such concessions as have been gained from the sultan have been accepted by us as favors from the hands of Russian diplomatists. When the history of this most revolting crime of the nineteenth century shall be calmly written, the names of some American citizens will stand in it lustrous with honor, but the United States Government will receive little credit for defending the oppressed or maintaining its own dignity.

Yet the gravest question of all remains unanswered. Where is the faith and courage of Christian nations which a little while ago men were sure would assert themselves and forbid that bloody hands of Moslem murderers should fall unrestrained on thousands of Christian martyrs? Has human nature grown selfish and cruel in these later years? Is Christian statesmanship satisfied with efforts to gain prestige for a party or to prevent encroachments on national territory?

CHRIST OUR SACRIFICE FOR SIN.

Whatever else may be true of the work of Christ for humanity, no theory of it is complete which overlooks or belittles its sacrificial aspect. Perhaps men always will continue to differ as to why it was necessary for him to die for our redemption, and there is an element of truth in each of several different views of the subject. But the Christian Church undoubtedly is right in the belief which it always has held that human forgiveness and salvation are secured through Christ's blood actually shed upon the cross. Even to that theory which puts most emphasis upon his service as our great example his death is essential, and the richest and most precious spiritual experiences recorded have been due chiefly to the conviction that Christ's sacrifice for us has made pardon possible for the guiltiest and opened the way of redemption to every one who chooses to enter therein.

Christ's sacrifice saves us. Yet not as a matter of course. It saves only him who accepts it penitently for himself. Amid all which is mysterious in the divine dealings with mankind these truths stand out clear and definite, that "whosoever will may come" to God through Christ and that he who comes thus "shall in no wise be cast out." But he must will and he must come. He must decide and he must act. He must exercise his more than royal power of free choice. He must realize his need of availing himself of the sacrifice which Jesus has made for him sufficiently to induce him to respond heartily to the divine invitation and command. If his appreciation of his desolation and destitution apart from Christ be less keen than that of others, no matter so it be acute enough to move him to the necessary steps.

Too much speculation has been given to the effects of Christ's sacrifice upon the divine character and upon Jesus himself. Its effects upon ourselves are more to the purpose. Rightly comprehended it promotes the deepest gratitude and devotion to him. The Christian whose thoughts center seldom and indifferently upon Christ's sacrifice is likely to be the one of the most superficial piety, the least consistent behavior, the weakest influence for righteousness. The sincere, strong, growing believer dwells much in thought and loves more and more to dwell upon what Christ has done for him.

CURRENT HISTORY.

The National Legislature.

The resolutions censuring our first ambassador to England, Hon. T. F. Bayard, were passed by the House of Representatives last week by a vote so sharply drawn along partisan lines that they lost much of their force. There are few who defend Mr. Bayard's utterances at Edinburgh and Boston, Eng., judging them by canons of taste or by the precedents of diplomacy, but there are many who feel that Congress by passing these resolutions has failed to make the wisest expenditure of its time and opportunity. Appropriation bills and bellicose resolutions continue to pass with celerity, but constructive legislation on great problems of state seems to be impossible to secure. A committee of the Senate has just reported favorably on the plan of electing United States senators by a popular vote. Here is a proposition involving a radical change in the Constitution and a departure from the teachings of the fathers, and yet one cannot doubt that such contests as Delaware and Kentucky have recently passed through accelerate the radical change which seems to be impending. It is to be regretted that the Senate committee has reported favorably on Arizona's entering the Union as a State.

Excise Laws.

Governor Morton of New York has signed the Raines Bill, which radically changes the Empire State's method of taxing and controlling the trade in intoxicants, turns much of the revenue derived from it into the treasury of the State and calls for a corps of State officials who, unless they are appointed and hold office in accordance with the Civil Service Reform principles, are likely to be manipulated by political bosses, from which, unfortunately, the State is not exempt. The Massachusetts legislature, also, has before it a bill heartily indorsed by some of the leading temperance organizations of the State, which proposes to turn into the State treasury all moneys received from license fees. There is much to be said in favor of any plan which removes from communities the temptation to vote for license in order to derive public revenue and lessen taxation. There is also something to be said against the present drift in legislation, which minimizes the rank and curtails the rights of municipalities to self-government and gives the liquor interest an opportunity to infect State politics with that taint that always accompanies their intrusion.

A Permanent Anglo-American Arbitration Tribunal.

As the outcome of meetings held in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston and other cities of this country a call for a National Conference at Washington, April 22 and 23, has been issued. It bears the signatures of the chief justice of the United States, the commander of the United States army, ex Secretary of State Foster, ex-Secretary of the Treasury Bristow, ex-Minister to Spain Curry, ex-Governor Russell of Massachusetts, Mayors Swift and Warwick of Chicago and Philadelphia, ex Mayor Hewitt of New York, Cardinal Gibbons, Bishop Lawrence of Massachusetts, Bishop Cyrus D. Foss, Presidents Dwight of Yale, Low of Columbia, Eliot of Harvard and Angell of Michigan Universities and other most eminent citizens of the nation. The call has been sent to representative men irrespective of party or creed in every State and territory in the Union. It enters into no argument on the subject, but assumes that those who attend the conference will believe with the signers of the call that "patriotism, philanthropy, statesmanship and religion speak with one voice in favor of the desired end." It is difficult to conceive of a more important gathering than the one which this call heralds. It deserves the support of every patriot. Individuals should make sacrifices to attend, and editors should make it their duty to report its deliberations with that fullness and sympathy which the cause demands.

The fourth congress of the Evangelical Free Churches of England and Wales, which has just met at Nottingham, passed, without discussion and with great enthusiasm, the following resolution:

> Profoundly convinced that war settles no difficulty the congress trusts that the resolutions passed in the House of Commons in favor of the method of arbitration will not be forgotten and that even during the present public disquiet the friends of peace will continue their testimony that international courts for the decision of disputes between nations have proved effective means of settlement.
>
> The congress emphasizes the significance of two facts—first, that negotiations for the fulfillment of treaty obligations in the case of Armenia have failed because the treaties themselves were the outcome of war and the fear of war, and, secondly, that there is the prospect of a satisfactory settlement of the Venezuelan difficulty because the English and the American nations have more than once shown such confidence in one another as to refer to arbitration matters in dispute between them.

In this we have the heart of British Nonconformity speaking its deliberate conviction. Realizing, as Herbert Spencer has so recently said, that "while in the past great incidental benefits have come from war," they believe henceforth there can arise "no such ultimate good as to offset its enormous evils," for "powerful types of men now possess the world, great aggregates of them have been consolidated, societies have been organized and throughout the future . . . social progress is to be achieved . . . only by cessation from those antagonisms which have kept alive the brutal elements of human nature and by persistence in a peaceful life which gives unchecked play to the sympathies."

There is an aspect of the war between Italy and Abyssinia which should not be overlooked, first by Christians, and second by all those who are interested in arbitration. As long ago as last January, King Menelek of Abyssinia offered to submit the dispute between Italy and Abyssinia to the king of the Belgians for arbitration. Menelek, who is a pious believer in the ancient faith of the Coptic Church, as well as a skillful general and national hero, at that time explained that he made this overture tending toward peace not from fear nor from necessity, but

To insure peace to my people, to avoid longer and criminal effusion of Christian blood, I will make all sacrifices compatible with the dignity of my empire. Do not neglect any means of making known to our friends in Europe that I am not an ambitious aggressor or greedy of the property of others. If I have taken up arms it is after having exhausted all means of conciliation. I convoked all my people to the war to protect the independence of our country, the keeping of which God had intrusted to my illustrious ancestors, and has delegated to me as a sacred trust. As to us, we remain here firm and confident in the justice of our cause and in the goodness of our Redeemer.

Spain, Cuba and the United States.

General Weyler's record in Cuba has not been so brilliant as to give much hope or consolation to the ministry at Madrid or to the Spanish people. The ability of the Cuban leaders and the extent of their resources have been underestimated by Spain and the citizens of this country. Despite the cordon of vessels which Spain has placed about the island, the revolutionists since the contest began, and especially during the last fortnight, have had unusual success in landing stores of ammunition and other necessary supplies, and their army has just been re-enforced by General Garcia. The Senate of the United States has deferred from day to day consideration of the conference report on the resolutions favoring the recognition of Cuban revolutionists, and the legislators are beginning to realize, what conservative citizens realized some time since, that while the sympathy of the American people unquestionably is with the revolutionists, neither Congress nor the President should act save after mature deliberation and with judgment based on data of the most reliable nature. And that the Foreign Relations Committee or Congress have had any such information placed before them has not been demonstrated as yet.

The Wars in Africa.

Kassala is still held by Italy. King Menelek has received the highest decoration possible at the hands of the czar, and his latest demands upon Italy as a price of peace indicate a degree of confidence born of inherent strength and knowledge of formidable though secret allies.

The mahdi has declared a holy war against Egypt, and summoned the faithful to take up the sword. Cairo is the scene of bustle and the clamor of war. British and Egyptian troops start up the Nile this week, and fighting sharp and severe is expected soon. Austria, Germany and Italy have consented to the British plan of borrowing liberally from one of the Egyptian reserve funds, and though the sultan will formally protest against the expedition, and France already has protested against this conversion of Egyptian funds, there seems no real impediment to a British advance for the conquest of the Soudan, save the valor of the mahdi and his followers. As was to be expected, the Liberals in the British Parliament, led by John Morley, protested against the reversion of the Soudanese policy—not altogether creditable—of Mr. Gladstone, and the debate, in which Vernon Harcourt, Mr. Chamberlain, Mr. Curzon and Mr. Balfour participated, was strenuous and searching, but the ministry won when the vote came, and Mr. Morley's motion to reduce the appropriation of the foreign office was defeated 288 to 145. The admissions made by the ministry in the debate, and the acts of Germany and Austria's representatives in Cairo, justify, almost confirm, the belief that Great Britain has such new and closer relations with the Triple Alliance as to warrant the term a Quadruple Alliance, and call for a readjustment of speculations concerning the future history, not only of Africa, but Asia and Europe.

The Fiasco in Constantinople.

Elsewhere we discuss The Fiasco in Armenia. It is quite as appropriate to describe the situation in Constantinople by the use of the same word. Miss Barton and her associates are being toyed with by the crafty Turk, his latest demand and their latest concession apparently being that a representative of the sultan must accompany the relief expeditions. The Armenian patriarch, also, a sketch of whom we published in our issue of Feb. 20, whose trials and courage we then described, is being subjected to pressure from the Porte in the effort to induce him to admit over his own signature that he and his fellow-countrymen have been responsible for such exercise of authority as Turkey has felt compelled to display. Moreover, he has been informed that his continuance in office will provoke further massacres. In other words, the sultan cannot use him and is trying to break him, and Russia is abetting the process. The British vice-consul at Oorfa reports that 8,000 persons were killed in the conflict there, and W. W. Howard, who went out to distribute the relief fund of the Christian Herald, has returned to New York and confirms the worst tales that have come to us from Armenia. A conflict between the Christians and Moslems at Beirut has been reported, but how sanguinary it was or how indicative of the situation in that part of the Turkish empire cannot be stated now. Mr. Gladstone has given $500 to the relief fund in Great Britain, and Mr. Curzon in the House of Commons has stated that Great Britain is making representations to the Porte protesting against forced conversions to Mohammedanism, and when this is said all has been said respecting the latest efforts of Great Britain to succor those to whom she promised protection.

NOTES.

The rebellion in Nicaragua seems likely to involve not only the life of the present administration, but also threatens to shatter a recent compact between the other Central American republics, which it was supposed was to have some prospect of enduring.

A committee of experts reports that Boston should spend $300,000 immediately in properly ventilating, heating and draining her schools and protecting the pupils against fire and disease, and Mayor Quincy has officially called on the city fathers to appropriate that amount.

President Cleveland's order extending the authority of the Civil Service law of 1883 to cover practically the entire Indian service is an immense stride forward. May it be ominous of the yet more sweeping order, rumors of which are in the air, an order which, if promulgated, should put the coming presidential campaign on a higher plane than it now bids fair to be.

It is to be hoped that the House of Representatives will indorse the Senate's bill creating a national art commission, and that the Senate will indorse the House bill which requires one year's residence in the Territories before a suit for divorce can be entered. It is interesting to note that Connecticut's latest vital statistics report shows that the divorce rate has not kept pace with the increase of population of recent years.

Mr. Edison has perfected apparatus with which the naked eye has, thanks to the X rays, seen not only the bony structure of the human body, but also its fleshly organs. Wizard as he is, Edison has never used his marvelous powers more splendidly or to greater advantage to his fellowmen than during the weeks of labor night and day that have intervened since Professor Roentgen's discovery was announced. "Seeing through a man" has ceased to be a figure of speech; it is a fact.

The Canadian Parliament has passed to its second reading the Remedial Bill affecting Manitoba's school problem, the authority of which the Conservatives and the Roman Catholics of Canada hope the Province of Manitoba will accept. The ministry's majority was larger than had been predicted and shows that the influence of the Roman Catholic Church is still potential, but there are few who predict a victory for the ministry on the third reading or believe that any such law will be accepted by Manitoba.

The formal alliance between the ministry and the Liberal Party in Japan has been thoroughly tested. The recent coup d'état in Seoul and the increase of Russian power in Korea led the national Unionists, thirty in number, to introduce in the lower house of the Diet a motion expressing want of confidence in the ministry. Taking advantage of a peculiar power granted by the constitution the Government suspended the Diet for ten days, and when it reassembled on Feb. 25 the ministry refused to allow the national Unionists to withdraw the motion, a ballot was taken and the ministry given a majority of sixty-four in a house numbering 265 members. Count Yamagata, field marshal of the Japanese army, en route for St. Petersburg, where he will represent the mikado at the czar's coronation and negotiate with Russia respecting the future of Korea, has arrived in this country.

IN BRIEF.

Our Easter number next week will, as usual, be handsomely illustrated and have for its most notable and seasonable article another of Miss Estelle M. Hurll's productions which deal so sympathetically and accurately with Christian art. Those who have longed to read a well-considered article on the theme, The Face of Jesus in Art, will, we are sure, be satisfied with Miss Hurll's work. Rev. John Watson (Ian Maclaren) will treat of the Trials of Faith.

The Chicago Record is to be congratulated on securing Rev. Dr. John Henry Barrows as correspondent while he travels for fifteen months in Europe and Asia.

Augustine Birrell, M. P., scholar and wit as well, recently described the House of Commons as "the paradise of bores." Our Congress just now is the purgatory of statesmen and the annihilator of business.

In our anniversary number it was said that the Herald of Gospel Liberty was published by Dr. J. J. Summerbell & Co. Dr. Summerbell is editor-in-chief, but the paper is published by the Christian Publishing Association at Dayton, O.

One of the cruelest and truest thrusts at the school of writers, of which Grant Allen is a typical man, is H. D. Traill's remark concerning Allen's work, that in it "you seem to hear the unctuous snuffle of a sort of salacious scientific Stiggins."

The Boys' Brigade of a Chicago Presbyterian church charged with bayonets upon a mob of hoodlums that were hurling missiles at the church and assaulting a watchman. The church militant was the church triumphant. Who says that the Boys' Brigade is useless?

---

The Chicago Congregational Club, following the lead of Professor Mackenzie, a Scotchman, says the United States and Great Britain ought at this time to exert all their wisdom and power to devise and establish an International Court of Final Appeal. So say the Nonconformists of Great Britain. See page 503.

---

Irrigation, after all, depends on God's gift of rain. Southern California has been afflicted with the threat of drought, not merely in the low rainfall of its valleys but the decrease of snow on its mountain tops and the dwindling of its streams. All our machinery utilizes or distributes God's gifts; it cannot dispense with them.

---

All who have read Tom Brown's School Days and Tom Brown at Oxford, all who know how influential Mr. Hughes was in defending the interests of the North during the Civil War, all who admired Lowell and recall how dearly he loved Mr. Hughes, will mourn the death of Judge Thomas Hughes, in Brighton, Eng., March 22, aged 73 years.

---

The extent to which the principles of the higher criticism of the Scriptures are accepted by Christian scholars is indicated by this statement of Dean Farrar in the Outlook:

I cannot name a single student or professor of any eminence in Great Britain who does not accept, with more or less modification, the main conclusions of the German school of critics.

---

The presence of American warships in Eastern waters has done not a little to prevent massacres in Asia Minor during the last year. That they are manned by men of warm hearts may be seen from the fact that the officers and sailors of the San Francisco, which has been lying for some time in the harbor at Smyrna, contributed $550 in gold for the relief of Armenian sufferers.

---

By the will of the late Charles Carleton Coffin the oak desk which he obtained from the house of the parish clerk in Scrooby, and which he believed was in use in the same house when William Brewster preached to the Pilgrims in the Manor House in Scrooby, is left to the Congregational Library. Mr. Coffin's thoughtfulness and generosity are worthy of imitation.

---

The social gospel, as it is called, proclaims that by ameliorating the material and social conditions of men, so that all shall share alike in property and privileges, the higher morality will rise of itself. Prof. George Harris says that this reverses the familiar saying of Christ into, Seek ye first all these things, and the kingdom of God and his righteousness shall be added unto you.

---

The New York Observer agrees with us in displeasure at the Mid-Continent's unjust reference to Mr. D. Willis James:

If it knew Mr. James as well as we do, it would feel small enough to crawl through the eye of a very, very small needle. Mr. James is not unmindful of his duty to Presbyterian benevolences, but being of a liberal and catholic turn of mind, he refuses to limit his gifts. If there is a Presbyterian in the country who begrudges the A. B. C. F. M. the receipt of that money, or Mr. James the joy of giving it, we pity that unregenerate Presbyterian most heartily.

---

If Hon. John Sherman really said what a Washington correspondent reports him as saying, viz.:

Have we not given away the goose to put our missionaries into savage lands to raise them into the competitive arts against ourselves?

I never thought much of the missionary policy. When I was lately applied to for a subscription to uphold the Armenian missionaries I said I would rather contribute to bringing them home.

Then he has added another bit of evidence corroborating the opinion that his mind is not as clear as it once was. Moreover, it would seem to indicate that he never deserved the title of statesman. "I never thought much of the missionary policy." Too bad, but it's worse for Mr. Sherman than for the cause of missions.

---

STAFF CORRESPONDENCE

FROM NEW YORK.

Congregationalism Talked Up.

Our Congregational Club, which doesn't often talk of its peculiar "ism," gave its March meeting wholly to that, inviting well-known representative Congregationalists to speak of the condition, work and prospects of the denomination in their several fields. And when the names of Drs. M. Burnham of St. Louis, S. M. Newman of Washington, and N. Boynton of Boston are given it need not be said that the hundred or more members who faced the pelting storm on Monday evening had a good time.

Opening, as was natural, with a brief glance at the principles of Congregationalism as contrasted with those of Episcopacy, Presbyterianism and Papacy, Dr. Burnham passed to the origin and growth of our nineteen churches in St. Louis, with their 4,000 members. All but one of these have come into life since the war, and in spite of race prejudices and ignorance of our polity are now growing and multiplying with healthful rapidity. This progress he traced under four epochs: the first three under Dr. Post, Dr. Goodell and Dr. Stimson—the last "as true as steel, a wonderful man for raising funds and for organization"—and the fourth epoch, now on, of colonization and centralization.

Dr. Newman spoke chiefly of his own church in Washington, organized in 1865, numbering 1,000 members, held together more by the bond of service than by community of opinion and peculiar in having on its roll a large majority of males.

Dr. Boynton's address was enlivened by poetry and anecdotes told in his characteristically irresistible style, making his hearers wish he would keep on till the storm outside abated. The substance of his message was joy over the growingly harmonious relations between the churches and pastors of Boston and vicinity and the spiritual fruit to be expected therefrom.

Trout and Things.

The successive Madison Square Garden shows of horses, dogs, cattle, poultry and cats have given place to an exhibition of the general run of sportsmen's experience "away down East." Though true in its portrayal of that particular phase of life in Maine, the papers that are referring to it as an accurate reproduction of the ordinary tenor of its citizens' existence are in danger of getting—and they indeed justly—into troubles like those which President Cleveland brought on himself by his home missionary speech in Carnegie Hall.

Camp life among the Maine lakes and hunting grounds is set before our city folks as realistically as it would be by a visit to Maine in the sporting season. There is an Indian camp presided over by the Blackfoot Bear chief, his wife and boy—the last by his pranks a constant source of amusement to the visitors, as the parents are of interest by their handiwork and communication with all who choose to converse with them through an interpreter. He, by the way, was with Custer, Reno, Terry and Miles in their campaigns against the Indians, and has stories worth hearing.

The display of articles adapted to the wants of friends of "the rod and gun" is complete, including the latest improvements in all manner of "shooting irons," canoes, fly and trolling rods, lines, reels, flies in endless variety and all things used in "the contemplative man's recreation."

Boats of aluminum attract much attention. A new style of ducking boat, shown in a tank made expressly for it, was expected to lure the President on from Washington, but he has not appeared yet.

The trouting outfit is shown in an actual camping cabin—the temporary abode of half a dozen famous guides—by a genuine disciple of Izaak Walton—none other than Miss Crosby, the attractive fisher maiden, "Fly Rod," whose trouting articles have delighted thousands of anglers. It is surprising to see how many "contemplative men" have broken away from their business, even in this wretched weather, to compare notes with her and cultivate close acquaintance with the live trout—all the way from a pound or so to four or five, and landlocked salmon claimed to tip the beam at eight pounds—whom she inveigled into accompanying her to the garden to see and be seen.

The Booths.

There arose here so general a dissatisfaction among Ballington Booth's best friends on his announcement of "God's American Volunteers" as the chosen title of his new organization that he decides to modify it at least by dropping the divine name from the title. Whether or not the body shall be called simply "The American Volunteers" is not yet settled. The late "commander" is greatly cheered—as he well may be—by the present outlook of his new enterprise and the number and character of the new friends rallying to his aid. He will have no need—as he has no disposition—to antagonize the old "army" to assure the success of the new movement.

Rev. B. Fay Mills begins a series of revival meetings at Montclair on March 25, to continue until April 5. HUNTINGTON.

---

FROM THE INTERIOR.

The A. M. A. Jubilee Year.

As is well known the next annual meeting of the A. M. A. is to be held in Boston and is to be its fiftieth anniversary gathering. Very wisely, as it seems to many, is the plan which the field secretaries are following of making the entire year an anniversary year instead of holding a meeting of only two or three days in the fall. If the methods of calling attention to the work which this noble society has done are everywhere as successful as were two of the meetings held last Sunday in Chicago at the First and Union Park Churches, too many cannot be held, nor will the year be long enough to give all who wish to attend them an opportunity of doing so. Dr. Roy, who has them in charge, said very little himself, but introduced two men, Rev. George V. Clark of Memphis, once a slave, now a useful pastor and a good speaker, who told the story of his life work and referred hopefully to the future of his people, and Rev. W. G. Olinger, a mountain white, pastor of the church at Williamsburg, Ky., and a fine specimen of the race to which Lincoln belonged. His personal appearance attracts attention. He is seventy-nine inches in hight, and is often introduced as "our Longfellow." His statements as to his field of work and its importance were such as to inspire hope in speedy returns for all investments which Christian benevolence may put into it.

Ministers' Meeting.

Monday the rooms were full. The paper on Expository Preaching by Professor Mackenzie, which had drawn so many to the meeting, proved even more interesting, and one may truthfully say more valuable, than had been anticipated. Professor Mackenzie thinks that expository preaching has been sadly neglected, that many mistakes have been made by those seeking to adopt this method of giving their people the gospel, that there must be as much variety in the methods employed as there is in the Bible itself, and that, if the preacher will prepare himself for the pulpit as carefully as he ought, he will not only awaken interest in his hearers but do himself great good. Many strangers were present at the meeting.

The Congregational Club.

The meeting Monday evening, March 16, was devoted to a consideration of our coming municipal election. Mr. Edwin B. Smith spoke on the Municipal Voters' League and its work, and Mr. Frank H. Scott on the bearing of the next election on civil service reform. Both addresses were well received. There was considerable discussion also over the method in which the meetings of the club shall be conducted. A resolution had been proposed asking the executive committee, so far as possible, to arrange a program the discussion of which shall aim at the enunciation of some principle, or the declaration of some mode of action for the members of the club. While the resolution failed to receive a majority vote, it is evident that its proposal has accomplished all that was desired, viz., to make clear the original purpose for which the club was established—the discussion of important subjects and the furtherance of the interests of our Christian work in the city and the State.

Mr. and Mrs. Ballington Booth.

The W. C. T. U. has invited Mr. and Mrs. Booth to make use of Willard Hall during their coming visit to Chicago. Of the visit of Miss Eva Booth nothing is as yet said. So far as it appears the Salvation Army here is loyal to the London officials, but a very slight attempt to exercise undue authority would be likely to throw the whole army into Ballington Booth's hands.

Dr. Rusk and the W. C. T. U.

The disagreement over Colonel Ingersoll will be amicably settled by having him speak in Hooley's Theater. Probably the Church Militant will soon go to the theater as its regular place of meeting. Audiences are already, so it is reported, too large for Willard Hall. For some time now the women have been conducting noon prayer meetings, under the leadership of Mr. Francis Murphy, with much encouragement. A great many intemperate men have been reached and some hopefully converted.

Governor Altgeld and the Insane Asylum.

The Tribune's assertion that five persons have met their death from neglect or criminal treatment at the insane asylum in Jacksonville bids fair to create an excitement before the charges are proved or disproved. For the sake of humanity it is to be hoped that they will not prove to be true. Governor Altgeld has visited Jacksonville and declares his intention of probing the charges to the bottom. The Tribune will place all its information at the disposal of the governor.

Miscellaneous.

A citizens' meeting in the interests of better city government was held Monday evening at Central Music Hall under the auspices of the Municipal League. Judge Tuley made a scathing speech against corruption among city officials. The Civic Federation, although working very quietly, has by no means ceased its labors. Without mixing at all in politics, it has rendered the nomination of bad men for the council a hazardous operation this year. Neither party is anxious to put up candidates whose record will not bear the scrutiny of the Civic Federation. The federation is also investigating the pay rolls of the South Side tax office with a feeling on the part of those who instigated the examination that a good deal of money has been wasted on officials who have rendered small equivalent for what they have received. Sir Henry Irving addressed the students of the University of Chicago, Tuesday noon, March 17. Kent Hall was too small for his audience. He spoke on Macbeth and gave it as his opinion that Macbeth himself, according to Shakespeare's conception, was the great criminal in the play, and not Lady Macbeth as is so often asserted. The strike of the cutters and trimmers is not yet settled. Many non union men have been prevented from working and the police have more than once prevented violence. A strike among the stone cutters has been submitted to arbitration. Mr. S. M. Moore and his daughter, Mr. E. N. Wiley of Chicago, will soon sail for Constantinople, where they hope to meet Mrs. C. F. Gates and her children, who will leave Harpoot about the middle of April in order to return home. Mrs. Gates, who is a daughter of Mr. Moore, is far from strong, and the experiences through which she has passed render return to the United States necessary.

The Bible Institute.

Another special conference for Bible study, similar to that held last year in connection with this institute, will be held during the month of April. Board and lodging can be secured by writing to Rev. R. A. Torrey, its superintendent. Professor White will speak at three o'clock each day, the first week on the Book of Job, the second on the Psalms, the third on the Gospel of John, the fourth on the Epistle to the Romans. Dr. W. J. Erdman will treat such topics as Sonship, Results of Redemption, The Glory of God. Superintendent Torrey is to treat the First Epistle to the Thessalonians and to speak on Personal Work. The regular course of study is indicated under the topics Studies with Christ in the School of Prayer, Studies in Isaiah, in the Book of Acts with Reference to Homiletical Material, and in Colossians and Galatians. Professor Towner will be in charge of the musical department. The managers say the conference promises to be a large one, and that, as the expense for all its advantages will be only five dollars a week, applications for room and board should be made at once.

University Settlement.

This settlement, which now costs upwards of $3,600 a year, has been sustained chiefly by the students and faculty of the University of Chicago. Situated near the stock yards, its friends say it reaches 2,000 people and has become a source of rich blessing to them. A head resident with assistants varying in number from three to seven have directed the social and philanthropic activity of the settlement. A crèche is supported, musical work is provided for and a gymnasium for boys is kept open during the winter. There is a kindergarten for about seventy children, and several classes for advanced instruction have been formed. A score of clubs have been organized and are successfully maintained. To obtain needed funds this year professors in the university will give lectures on topics of universal interest in houses of leading citizens of the West Side, which have been opened for the purpose.

Chicago, March 21. FRANKLIN.

---

FROM THE NORTHWEST.

Dr. Moulton's Lectures.

Under the management of the Institute of Sacred Literature Dr. R. G. Moulton, University of Chicago, has been delivering a series of lectures in Minneapolis to audiences which have crowded our largest churches. These lectures deal wholly with the Old Testament as literature, regardless of higher or lower criticism. They are masterpieces of insight and comprehension of Hebrew literature, of which the Scriptures are the flower. The orations of Deuteronomy as rendered by him make it a new book, and in the prophecy of Habakkuk he sees rhapsody, and the book stands forth as a thing of life. He makes intensely interesting many portions of the Scripture which have seemed to many to have little meaning. Professor Moulton's book is scholarly, reverent, helpful and stimulating.

Good Citizenship.

The enthusiasm and interest of Minneapolitans in good citizenship organizations is manifesting itself. Mayor Pratt is pushing his crusade against the gambling houses of the city and, at the earnest solicitation of the Congregational ministers, he has revoked the theatrical licenses of two prominent low playhouses. The leading daily paper is making a strong fight against the hitherto lax enforcement of municipal laws, and popular clamor against the city council's questionable methods promises a radical change in city affairs in the near future. In St. Paul the good people are rising up in their might against wine rooms. There are several indictments by the grand jury in these cities which promise to unearth some corruptions in city government which will seriously involve some of our most prominent men. The success of this uprising against deep-seated wrongs is daily made more certain by the added interest of our best business men and heaviest taxpayers.

The Pastor-Elect of Plymouth Church.

This leading church of our denomination in the Northwest eagerly awaits the coming of Rev. David N. Beach, who is expected to preach his first sermon as pastor on Easter Sunday. The foremost problem of this down-town church is so to organize and set to work its forces as to bring the gospel efficiently to the very large numbers in the immediate vicinity of the church who are not being reached. Here is a great open door, a large force of workers and the coming leader will find a parish large enough and sufficient problems awaiting solution to enlist all his powers as a general. Successful work at this center will mean much for the churches in all this region.

Interest in Hampton Institute.

The new interest awakened in this vicinity for the higher education of the black race by the presence of Booker T. Washington has been much increased by the coming of Professor Frissell and some of his students in Hampton, who are touring the upper Mississippi Valley and enlisting some of our business men's sympathy and money. Especially is this true of those men who do not give through any of the regular boards of the churches. Prominent among the benefits resulting from such a tour in this section is the undoing of prejudices formed by people who estimate the Indian's possibilities by the shiftless specimen still native on some of our reservations.

Whither in Church Unity?

Several months ago the Brotherhood of St. Andrew arranged for a series of daily noon hour meetings during Lent, and invited one or more leading clergymen outside of their church to deliver addresses. These men accepted the invitations and were preparing their addresses when they were informed that several of the rectors did not deem it wise to have any non-Churchmen take part. And this, too, from a body which has so much to say about Christian unity. Is Dr. Greer right when he says, "If you look at us real hard you will find out that our unity (Episcopalian) means that we want you all to believe as we do?" We are waiting for light. J. A. S.

CURRENT THOUGHT.

AT HOME.

Professor Shailer Matthews, in the March American Journal of Sociology, discusses Jesus' teaching respecting the State. "Was then Jesus a socialist, a monarchist, a democrat? Again it must be said he was neither. He stands committed to no political teaching. . . . He held himself sternly to the duties of a preacher of religion and morals. It was enough when he had shown the fatherly monarchy of God and the fraternal obedience of men. . . . The test of a theory or a fact of government must not be, Does Jesus teach it? but, Does it make for that fraternity that is his ideal for society."

Zion's Herald publishes an interesting symposium of opinion contributed by the professors of the School of Theology, Boston University, the New England training school for Methodist preachers. In reply to the request, State what should be the attitude of the Methodist minister toward the higher criticism? Pres. William F. Warren says: "He should regard it as one of the 'all things' which he is divinely summoned to 'prove,' that he may hold fast only that which is good." Professor Buell of the chair of New Testament Greek says: "So far as the Methodist minister finds himself called to defend the Bible, he should qualify himself by earnest and systematic study to understand the results of Biblical criticism, to discriminate between the essential and the non-essential in the record of revelation, and to select defensive positions which will prove invulnerable." Professor Sheldon, professor of systematic theology, says: "That type which combines essential reverence for Scriptural ideals with thorough scholarship is entitled to respectful consideration, even when it crosses views which by force of inheritance we prefer to cherish." Professor Rishell, professor of historical theology, holds that the minister "should ever remember that all that is best in it is but a means, not an end. Hence he should preach the saving truth which the Scriptures contain, not critical discussions relative to their origin and composition. And above all he should never drift away from the truth accepted almost universally by the critics, that the Bible contains all that is necessary to salvation, and that, properly interpreted, the Bible is an infallible rule of faith and practice."

ABROAD.

Dr. J. Guinness Rogers, commenting in The Independent on Dr. Rigg's remarkable letter to Cardinal Manning, to which we referred in this department recently says: "If Dr. Rigg entertained this view about those Wesleyans who had the misfortune not to share his passionate antagonism to a man [Gladstone] who has done so much to raise the whole ideal of English statesmanship, the manly course would have been to denounce them [Hugh Price Hughes, Percy Bunting, et als]. The last person in England who would have been made the confidant of any Protestant leader as to the failures of his own church was Cardinal Manning. . . . An alliance between a Methodist leader and a cardinal archbishop such as the correspondence reveals, is a phenomenon, but it need not alarm us [Congregationalists] if we are careful to learn the lessons which it writes in such unmistakable characters."

The Christian Commonwealth publishes some interesting letters from Robert Louis Stevenson to Professor Charteris of the University of Edinburgh, who was an intimate friend of Stevenson's father, concerning whom the son wrote thus: "Yes, my father was a 'distinctly religious man,' but not a pious. The distinction painfully and pleasurably recalls old conflicts. . . . His sentiments were tragic, he was a tragic thinker. Now, granted that life is tragic to the marrow, it seems the proper function of religion to make us accept and serve in that tragedy, as officers in that other and comparable one of war. Service is the word, active service in the military sense, and the religious man—I beg pardon, the pious man—is he who has a military joy in duty, not he who weeps over the wounded. We can do no more than try to do our best."

The Australian Independent says that a high military authority in one of the colonies told a crowd of schoolboys recently that the one thing Australia needed was a big war. "No doubt it is the kind of thing that the professional soldier needs. But it is the one thing not needful for the best and highest interests of the human race," replies the Independent. The same journal tells of thousands of people in the colonies who have allowed themselves to assume obligations from which there is no possible relief except in insolvency or the grave, and it adds: "We have sometimes thought it might be a wise thing to introduce into our modern life some such provision as that of the Hebrew jubilee, which periodically freed all men and families from their commercial obligations and liabilities and enabled them to make a fresh start."

Dr. E J. Dillon, describing The Fiasco in Armenia in the March Fortnightly Review, attributes Great Britain's crushing diplomatic defeat "to the unceremonious manner in which the sultan was baited from the very first, without reflecting that he was being driven into the arms of Russia, and without taking means to prevent his cordial reception by that Power; to the reasonable distrust of our Eastern policy felt by the czar's government, who are masters of the situation—a feeling which pains to dispel were taken; to ignorance of the fact that Germany was resolved to follow Russia through thick and thin, not merely against England, but even to the detriment of what heretofore were considered the interests of her Austrian ally; and to our taking it for granted that the co operation promised and duly given to us by Russia, in a purely academic inquiry, would, as a matter of course, be continued to the extent of employing force against the Ottoman Empire." He places the blame, not on Lord Salisbury, who had to play the last act of the farce, but upon Lord Rosebery and Lord Kimberly, who started in with high tragedy, but failed to shed gore when the crisis came. Lord Rosebery of course denies this charge, and has done it in and out of Parliament.

THE CHRISTIAN LIFE.

V. CHURCH WORSHIP.

BY REV. FLOYD W. TOMKINS, JR.

We miss much of the help which might come to us from worship, because we have such a faulty idea of what true worship is. We have always heard of "going to church," and our early experiences have given a certain color to the Sunday gathering of which it is difficult to rid ourselves. Formality has led to unreality and that, perhaps, to unbelief in any strength to be derived from worship. We ought to worship, not from any obedience to the law of propriety, not because we were taught to worship, not even because we think God asks it of us, but because we need it, and the satisfying of need creates a true, healthy love for that which grants the satisfaction.

Before thinking of the parts of worship let us remember that the church building and Sunday are simply incidentals in our worship, that is, the building where we gather and which is consecrated to God, and so called "God's house," is to make our worship convenient and fitting, and Sunday is chosen, not as the only day, but as a special day for worship. When men realize that the scientist, who talks of the field, the wood and the river as places for adoration and uplifting meditation, has a great truth at the foundation of his independence—for "the groves were God's first temples"—then the material building of man's erection will not grow less but more important as being the emphatic proof of God's presence on earth everywhere. And when men think of everyday as God's day then Sunday will only be dearer as declaring the truth of the sanctity of all time. We must not grow narrow and try to confine God and his love within four walls or twenty-four hours. The spire and the cross declare that God is on earth to meet us, and the rest and quiet of the "first and best of days," as Keble so beautifully calls it, make us know that God "breathes his peace through all the days." Perhaps, sometime, when our churches are always open and the rushing man of business can mark the sanctuary inviting him to "come in, rest and pray," and the tired woman of many cares can remember that one door to quiet is never closed, worship will become a more real thing. Nothing is a more cruel sarcasm on our modern Protestant Christianity than a great building opened once a week for a few hours and then shut, locked, barred, gated and padlocked as if God had gone away and would not be back till the next Sunday. Of course the man thinks God is nowhere if the place specially built to emphasize his presence is held shut against his children. Nothing so biting in the way of practical unbelief is found, even in this nineteenth century, as a week bounded by two Sundays, but left without an opportunity for worship except, perhaps, a "midweek" service and that in a "second hand," weekday place called a "vestry" or "chapel."

1. The parts of worship are three, namely, praise, prayer and instruction. If any one of these is wanting the worship cannot be complete. We are meeting God. (Hence the good old term "meeting house," which means a place not where man meets man, but where man meets God.) So we praise as we see the King in his beauty; we pray as we see the King in his might; we listen as the King in his wisdom speaks.

Praise and thanksgiving lift the soul upward. Most of us have very low ideals in life. Money, pleasure, power—these are the little hillocks we try to climb, and when we reach the top we feel ashamed, for we are still so low. To lift eyes and feet to the mountains is to see God. I suppose the reason we sing so feebly (if we sing at all), and why we sometimes even sit down while we sing, is to be found in our lack of real healthy enthusiasm; and there can be no real enthusiasm where we do not glory in some great vision, some noble hope. "My God, gracious, good, eternal, I love thee!" Who can say such words intelligently and not feel a thrill? We feel it when we praise a friend. Not long ago I listened to a great pianist. He held his audience at first, then he inspired them, and finally he aroused them and they crowded forward, clapping, waving handkerchiefs, tears in eyes, throats swelling with suppressed emotion. Is not God greater and his harmonies are they not richer than any human can bring from strings or pipes? We think of history, and God is there in a divine symphony. We think of nature, and God is there in one unending yet ever varying song. We think of our lives, and God is there again with strange harmonies which grow richer and sweeter as their tones ring in after years.

2. Of prayer we can hardly say enough, it forms so full a part of all true worship. We come empty, and must be filled; tired, and must be rested; anxious, and must be calmed; troubled, and must be comforted. But we must not forget that we worship not selfishly but as a family; it is "common" worship.

> We share our mutual woes,
> Our mutual burdens bear.

Hence the importance of repeating in concert our petitions, happily so much more frequently done than formerly. How real the dear Lord's Prayer becomes when "Our Father" is said not by minister alone, nor by each in the silence of his own heart, but by all "with one mouth." So, too, we pray for common blessings. There would be fewer church quarrels and fewer heart-broken ministers if the people prayed for each other, for their church, for their pastor. It used to be the custom once for the minister to guide the united, though silent, petitions of the people by giving subjects for prayer, while all knelt before God, thus: "Let us now pray for our church, that we may be united, spiritual, earnest." And then, after a pause: "Let us pray for the sick and the afflicted." And then, again: "Let us pray for parents, brothers, children not yet serving Christ." One can readily imagine such common petitions arising as would make heaven full of joy. The most helpful "mid-week" meeting I have ever heard of was thus made an opportunity for common prayer by each praying for his neighbor who lived next to him, and then for his neighbor in the seat by his side, and then for the servants at home or the business companion. We may be sure there was little bitterness left when that service was over, for bitterness cannot live in the face of prayer. But, if there is no such custom in my church or yours, still there is opportunity enough for common prayer if only we will use it. How much time we lose in church "waiting for the service to begin!" Why, it has already begun as soon as we are there. And the precious moments before the minister enters may be made the best part of all the worship.

3. Instruction is commonly thought to lie only in the sermon, but that is a great error. God's minister indeed speaks to us, if he is true, the message God has given him. But we must know that in worship God himself speaks directly by the Holy Spirit. He speaks through the Bible as it is read to us and we learn so of his will. He speaks to our hearts as that quiet motion touches us, so strange and yet so real a motion, calling to duty or restraining from wrong. He speaks in the peace which follows prayer, in the inspiration which a hymn gives, in the longing which comes from a thought of our need and, if we are quick to learn, we can have no difficulty in comprehending the lesson.

I would not minimize preaching. There is a quick response to earnest, sincere sermons spoken as man to man. A sermon which has been thought out on the knees and prepared in God's sight and by his grace must do good. But after all it is the human element which enters into the speech and we are bound, in listening intelligently, to judge taking what we need and leaving the rest. The great difference between modern and mediæval Christianity is that now men do not act because some one tells them to act but because they are impelled by a nobler guiding Then faith and action were simple obedience to what the Christian leaders said. It was necessary then because men were not generally educated. But it can never be in this era that I will accept, without examination and judgment, that which another declares. Sermons can persuade, they can instruct if they lead, through persuasion, to truth in practice, but they can never compel, and it would be well for some young ministers to realize this. But in all ages for the last 1,800 years men have accepted alike God's word spoken in the Bible or heard through conscience. When God speaks we listen, even though our understanding cannot follow.

What can we do to make our worship more really helpful? First, we can believe in it. Never speak of it as a mere "going to church," or a "preaching service," but as a meeting with God. Second, we can accustom ourselves to bring our burdens here and give them to Jesus. Sometimes men and women are told to leave their business and their household cares behind when they enter the church. I think Christ would say, "Bring them with you that I may give you strength and wisdom to bear them." The reason there is so much godless business and such fretful household service is because people have left them outside, as our fathers used to tie their horses in the shed back of the church, and after the service they were taken up again until the next Sunday. Worship means consecration, that is, asking God to bless everything. Third, we can join more heartily in the worship. Our voices, as well as our hearts, God asks for. "When my mouth praiseth thee with joyful lips," sang the Psalmist, and Miss Havergal phrases it in modern poetry:

> Take my mouth, and let me sing
> Always, only, for my King;
> Take my lips, and let them be > Filled with messages from thee.

And, lastly, we can be reverent. If God is in church to meet us, let us meet him reverently, not as afraid, but as overcome with honor and love. "The Lord is in his holy temple." "This is the house of God."

A BARITONE'S PARISH.

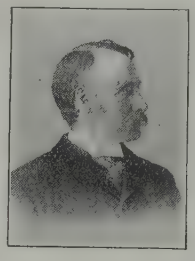
I.

BY REV. JAMES M. LUDLOW, D. D.



Rev. J. M. Ludlow, now pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of East Orange, N. J., was graduated at Princeton in 1861. His story, The Captain of the Janizaries, issued in 1886, gave him a position as a writer of historical fiction which was most complimentary to his veracity as a historian, his gifts as a stylist and an author endowed with imagination.

The pulpit and the choir gallery are closely related in our city churches. It is, however, a sad fact that the sons of the prophets and the sons of Korah usually know little of one another. To the musicians the minister often seems to be a mere recluse, and the clergyman comes to look upon his choir as a band of itinerant minstrels.

It is therefore very refreshing to note that between the pastor of St. Philemon's, the Rev. Dr. Wesley Knox, and Mr. Philip Vox there sprang up an intimacy almost from the day when the new baritone sang his first solo. It was Shelley's Resurrection, which had been rendered as an offertory after one of the Doctor's finest efforts at an Easter sermon.

Deacon Frisk, the chairman of the music committee, met the preacher at the chancel rail within fifteen seconds after the benediction had been pronounced—before the sexton was able to announce to the pastor that a parishioner was in momentary expectation of death and required his immediate attendance; before Lawyer Codey had adjusted his silk hat upon his wrist, like a falcon, preparatory to his stately march down the middle aisle; and even before the soprano had adjusted her handsome face and bonnet over the front of the choir gallery to inspect, or be inspected by, the passers out. Deacon Frisk was like most music committee men in that he knew little about the musical art, but he was a hustler in getting the worth of his money in whatever job he tackled. Rubbing his hands in self-congratulation upon the new baritone's engagement, he delivered himself of a panegyric which he had spent the time of the closing prayer in composing.

"I tell you, Doctor, Vox was a catch. Why, he sang,

> In slumber lay the brooding world,

so sweetly that you could almost hear the stars twinkle through the music, and when he struck,

> Let heaven's vaulted arches ring, it seemed that the sky were tumbling down through the church roof. That's great singing. Eh! Doctor? Cost only three hundred extra. Worth a thousand on the church market."

"Yes," said the Doctor, "I was pleased with the man's voice. I am impressed with the idea that there is more than larynx and training in him. There must be bigness and sweetness of soul behind those tones. Men can't sing that way to order. Come, Frisk, introduce us when those young women get through talking to him. I know I shall like him."

The dominie is a bachelor. That is a pity, for a wife and family of ten could home themselves in his heart without detracting from the love he has for everybody else.

But having no wife to console him after the efforts of a hard Sunday, he was accustomed to ask one or another of the young men to come to the study and "curry him down" after evening service.

Soon Vox came to permanently occupy this place of clerical groom. The saintly folk who thought that the light burning until Sunday midnight in the sanctum was a sign of the protracted devotions of their pastor would, on one occasion, have been astounded to see the reality. On the lounge was stretched the tired preacher, his feet on a pile of "skimmed" newspapers, reserved for the more thorough perusal they would never get. In his lap lay the head of a big collie, whose eyes were fixed on the handsome face of his master. Do dogs have religious instinct? If so, this was a canine hour of worship, and the dog was a genuine mystic. In some famous pictures of the Adoration of the Magi there is less reverence and love depicted on the faces than gleamed from beneath the shaggy eyebrows of the brute.

By the study table sat Vox, his big, bushy head and square, Schiller-cut face (except for a very unpoetic mustache) bending over a chafing dish that sent up the incense of a Welsh rarebit, the ingredients of which were the offering of the landlady's piety.

"Doctor," said Vox, suddenly, poising the spoon as if it were a baton, and dripping the melted cheese onto the manuscript of the night's sermon before the preacher had decided whether to put it into his "barrel" or his wastebasket; "Doctor, do you know that I feel like a hypocrite singing in a Christian church?"

"You a hypocrite, Vox? You couldn't act a false part any more than you could sing a false note without having the shivers go all through you."

"Well," replied the singer, "that is just what is the matter with me. The shivers do go through me. I am shocked at the moral discord I am making. I am striking false notes all the time. My life doesn't follow the score of my conscience. I sometimes put no more heart into my singing than the organ pipe does."

In evident self-vexation Vox strode across the room, holding his plate of rarebit as he would have held a sheet of music, and managed in his nervousness to jerk the toasted cheese off it as he sometimes seemed to jerk the notes off the paper. The doctor slipped from the lounge just in time to escape having a savory splash lodge itself between his vest and shirt bosom. The dog growled at the apparent attack upon his master, but was diverted from further warlike demonstrations by the bit of toast that fell under his nose.

"Your dog is as good as a special policeman for you, Doctor."

"Yes, he defends me in more ways than one. You know why I call him Caleb? Caleb is Hebrew for "God's dog." One day, when he was a pup, I forgot myself and dropped into a regular pessimist over some materialistic trash I was reading. The pup seemed to notice my sour face, and put his paws upon my knees, lolled out his tongue and looked me through and through with those bright eyes of his. It was as much as to say, 'Master, you're a fool. Look at me. Didn't it take a God to make such a marvelous creature as I am?' So I have called him Caleb ever since. He tackles many a doubt for me, as he would any other robber."

"I wish I had your faith, Doctor," said Vox, putting his arm around Caleb's neck and dropping another piece of toast into the waiting jaws.

"Faith? You have got it, Phil, only you don't know it."

"Nonsense, Doctor! I suppose I believe the creed; at least, I don't disbelieve it. But I don't feel these things. That's what makes me say that I am a hypocrite to sing in a Christian church. Tonight I saw a woman crying during my solo. I felt like stopping. What right have I to make another feel what I don't feel myself? I tell you, Doctor, I am nothing but a bellowing hypocrite. I'm going into the opera, where it's all make believe. You know that I have had offers that would tempt a singing devil, and I believe I would become one if it were not for you."

The Doctor eyed his guest quizzically for a moment, then deliberately stretched himself again on the lounge.

"Phil, that cheese has gone to your head. I didn't think it was so strong. Yet I can understand your mistake. I used to talk to myself that way. I would scratch out the best sentences from my sermons, because I didn't feel all they meant, and would accuse myself of duplicity and cant, because my experience wasn't up to my doctrine. But how could it be? My brain isn't as big as the Bible. My conscience isn't as true as Moses' was when he wrote down the Ten Commandments. My heart isn't as tender as Christ's. If I should say from the pulpit only what I feel at the moment there would be poor pasturage for the people. So it is all through life. People talk in society on a higher level than they habitually think on. That is what society life is for, to tune up to key the sagging strings of common, humdrum life. I suppose, Phil, that you will refuse hereafter to say good morning to your neighbors, because at the moment you are not thinking and not caring whether their day is to be a happy one or not. Feel! Do you suppose that old violin feels anything of the thrill that goes through its fibers? Shall I smash it for a hypocritical contrivance of wood and catgut? Did I kick Dr. Cutts out of the study the other day because the hard-hearted wretch didn't realize how much good he had done me in reducing the swelling about my sprained ankle? Yet you want me to let you kick yourself out of the church because you don't feel like one of the Angels of Jesus, or haven't had all the joy of life crushed out of you by affliction so that you feel Weary of Life as you sing."

The Doctor warmed with his theme until, standing up, he put his big hands on Vox's shoulders and fairly shouted at him: "Sing, Phil! Sing the brightest, happiest things God ever inspired poet and musician to write. But don't go croaking like an owl because you don't feel like a nightingale."

"Well!" said Vox, drawing a long breath and letting it out in a whistle, "that cheese or something else has inspired you, Doctor. I never heard you so eloquent in the pulpit. Why don't you preach at us that way, as if we were individuals, instead of firing at us in the lump? I'll sing hymns for you even if I do it as heartlessly as a hand organ. But now, Doctor, for the other six days in the week you'll have to confess that they are full of husks that do nobody any good. Here's my diary. Isn't it wretched for a man with a conscience? Monday: sung at Checkley's musicale for $50 and a score of female compliments. Tuesday: in oratorio for $100 and some newspaper puffs which were all wrong from a critical standpoint. Wednesday: moped all day because I had a sore throat and couldn't sing. Thursday: made believe teach a lot of tone-deaf girls who can never sing any more than cats, and took their fathers' money for the imposition. Friday: ditto. Saturday: rehearsal. Now tell me, who am I helping by peddling my chinwares?"

Vox had to stop from lack of breath as well as from the fact that his week had run out.

"Go on," said the Doctor, nonchalantly. "You can certainly slander yourself worse than that. What! No more? I am inclined to think that you are a hypocrite, pretending to make a father confessor of me, and then giving me only that meager list of your sins. I know that you are not such a sweet saint as to have only the faults you have mentioned. If they were all I would have a glass case made for you in the choir gallery and put your image in wax there, with a basin of holy water by the side of it. But now soberly, Phil, I think I can size you up, or down."

"All right! Try it. I imagine you will find so big a fool that it will take some time to get the measure."

With that Vox stretched himself to his full hight and posed with his thumbs in his vest armholes. The attitude interested Caleb, who imitated him by stretching himself out to almost corresponding dimensions along the floor, recovering his legs slowly to the accompaniment of a long and dismal whine.

"He does that," said the Doctor, "only when there is going to be a death in the neighborhood, or when I have been reading out loud from my sermons. He knows when I have got it long enough. More than once I have taken that dog's hint and saved the people from being bored on the following Sunday. I wouldn't venture to lecture you any more, Phil, without Caleb's consent. So you may thank him for your escape. But I think I can help you size yourself up. Will you go with me tomorrow night?"

"Where?"

"Leave that to me. Will you go?"

"That's a blind sort of invitation. But, of course, I will go anywhere you want me to. But what is it? Some Sorosis? That reformed theater you talk about? Any charge for admittance, or collection? Of course, going with a distinguished clergyman, I shall have to appear in swallow-tails and Arctic shirt front."

"Not a bit of it Phil; your oldest clothes, so that you will look just as mean as you say you feel; then for once you can't accuse yourself of being a hypocrite."

[To be continued.]

David Nelson Beach.*

Disciple, Prophet, Citizen.

If I should come to high renown,
And compass things divinely great,
And stand a pillar of the state,
And count an empire all my own,

And miss myself—I were a child
That sold himself to slavery
In that fair castle by the sea
That glimmered toward his mountain wild.

Thus sang the student at Yale a score of years and more ago. One wonders whether these lines have reverberated in his soul once more as during the past few weeks the man in his prime has been receiving the loving homage of his fellow-Christians and fellow-citizens. He has come to "high renown"; he has "compassed things divinely great"; he stands "a pillar of the state," and has not missed himself, yea, rather found himself, and how? By losing himself, by learning the occult meaning, the dynamic force of that divine paradox, "Whosoever shall seek to gain his life shall lose it; but whosoever shall lose his life shall preserve it." Apprehending that great principle and living close to him who first announced it to frail humanity, all in his life that has been, now is, or is to come has followed, follows, or will follow naturally.

You can explain his record and his influence in no other way. Other men are greater scholars, greater orators, have larger stores of knowledge, have more thoroughly worked out the details of their philosophical and theological system, created more literature, constructed more parish and ecclesiastical machinery, and as citizens made greater gifts of money or framed more lasting laws. But here is one who, though a scholar, has forsaken the temptations of the study and the library; who, though an orator, cares little for the form of his message so long as it is proclaimed, enters men's ears and kindles their souls; who, though not unmindful of the ever widening horizon of human thought, nevertheless believes more in bringing men in touch with divine life than in feeding their intellects; who, though intensely eager to speculate concerning the deepest mysteries of God and man, has found that "religion is not a dogma nor an emotion, but a service"; who, though a poet and prose stylist of no ordinary power, has chosen human hearts for manuscripts and heart-throbs as quills; who, though wondrously fertile, patient and gentle in devising and perfecting schemes for transforming energy into results, never confounds means with ends, machinery with life; who, though poor in this world's goods, has given himself so absolutely to bettering civic life in Cambridge during the last eleven years that, as he leaves it for a new field, its citizens, irrespective of creed, party and rank, have joined in saying:

To your sincerity and fidelity, your ardor and patience, your skill in devising plans for the common good and your energy in fulfilling them they pay the tribute of their grateful admiration. Every useful cause has readily found a place in your heart and every worthy enterprise has equally enlisted your hand. The city is stronger and more upright, purer and more pleasant by reason of the hours you have spent in it.

To you personally, as a clergyman and a public teacher, as a reformer and leader, as a neighbor and friend, they present this assurance of their respectful regard.

This address has been signed by more than 3,000 citizens of the city. It was prepared by a committee including the mayor of the city, two Protestant clergymen, one Roman Catholic priest and Mr. R. H. Dana, son-in-law of the poet Longfellow.

Republics are said to be ungrateful. Municipalities too often are open to the same indictment. What adequate expression of gratitude have either New York or New Haven given to Drs. Parkhurst and Newman Smyth for their services as prophets and censors? They have not received the aid even, much less the thanks, of some from whom they had every reason to expect most. To Cambridge as a city, then, is due the credit of feeling "municipal gratitude" and expressing it so fully, adequately. On a night when a driving north wind hurled the falling snowflakes about with chilling fury, a remarkable audience of city officials, working men, professional men, instructors at Harvard, clergymen—Catholics and Protestants—gathered to express their hearts' emotions. Prof. F. G. Peabody of Harvard presided. Mayor Bancroft described Mr. Beach as a sovereign citizen, who realized his opportunity to serve as a sovereign, unique in his sense of his obligation to perform civic duties as well as exact individual rights, one to whom the city "owes a debt which it cannot pay, it only can express." Father Mundy, the Roman Catholic priest, a beloved yokefellow with Father Scully and Mr. Beach in the work of excluding saloons from the city during the past ten years, described with a fine, sure touch and deep feeling the local conditions which existed when Mr. Beach came to Cambridge, divisive conditions too, calling for "a fineness of tact, mastery of detail, knowledge of men, constant watchfulness of every change in popular feeling, enthusiasm and kindliness of heart" in a leader if he would bind all factions together, keep them together, encourage the weak-hearted and set new recruits at work. And they had found just the man in the one to whom they were bidding "Godspeed" that night. Dean Wright of the New Theological School described the work done by Mr. Beach as the "apostle of the Cambridge idea," the peripatetic incarnation of high civic ideals. Rev. C. E. Jefferson of Chelsea, as one who had dissented at times from some of Mr. Beach's proposed methods for fighting the saloon, nobly voiced his profound respect for his spirit and his services to municipalities other than Cambridge. Robert E. Ely of the Prospect Union spoke for the young men of the city, and Rev. Dr. Alexander McKenzie came bearing the loyal regard and appreciation of Mr. Beach's fellow-clergymen, rejoicing in the demonstration given during more than a decade that a clergyman may be what he ever should be, ever must be in a republic, namely, a leading citizen. And then was presented the formal address, from which we already have quoted. Mr. Beach's response to these words and to the uprising of the people and the tumultuous expressions of their joy expressed in various ways was sui generis. The hour was late. The heart-strings were snapping. Whatever of good had been done was modestly attributed to the influence of environment, and then began a strain of autobiography revealing the secret of the man's power, and then followed some pungent truths, obeying which the yet more lovely city is to emerge.

"We walked out into the starlight. We talked of our mother's prayers. We resolved to make the world better, to sell ourselves dear." That is the keynote of the life. A passion to usher in and consummate the kingdom here and now, a willingness to spend and be spent, to bear burdens, sacrifice home joys and personal tastes and ambitions. And thus it happens that in a community formerly not given much to emotion, under the eaves of a university rebuked by Wendell Phillips for its selfish conservatism, this man has come, stayed, won all their hearts and wrought mightily for the cause of Christian unity and civic purity. He affirms that no man ever loved Cambridge more than he. Cambridge never loved a man more. If it will continue to "be one, see far and act," as he implores that it may, its service as an exemplar to the other cities of the nation will be inestimable in its value.

Ten years of "no license," non-partisanship in municipal politics, generous appropriations for parks, successful co-operation of "town and gown" in civic and philanthropic endeavors, and the retention of a neighborhood spirit and pride among the 80,000 citizens of a complex modern municipality have given Cambridge a peerless rank. No one man has done more to bring it to pass than the man who now goes to the great, busy, strategic center of the north Mississippi valley, where he will find scope for his peculiar combination of gifts as prophet, seer, organizer.

Those who are to sit at his feet there may expect a Johannean rather than a Pauline exposition of the gospel, they will detect the influence of Bushnell, Maurice, Robertson and the modern British and American liberal yet orthodox interpreters of Christianity. They will realize that an apostle of Christian unity has come among them, one who leaps lightly over sectarian fences if by so doing he can strike hands with fellow-disciples of Christ. They will be disappointed if they expect an ascetic or a priest or a pedant, but, if they are longing for a major prophet of the optimistic type, if they want a man vital, rejoicing in life and its opportunities and alert to every present day revelation of the Holy Spirit while loyal to the revelation of the past, then their longing will be satisfied.

Full o' the milk of human kindness,

G. P. M.

*Rev. D. N. Beach was born in South Orange, N. J., Nov. 30, 1848, and graduated from Yale in 1872. He served for a time on the staff of the New York Tribune and later on the Sunday School Times. His pastorates have been in the Congregational churches of Westerly, R. I., Wakefield, Mass., and the Prospect Street Church, Cambridge, Mass., from which he has just been dismissed to become the pastor of the Plymouth Church, Minneapolis. His articles in the Andover Review, The New World, the New England Magazine, his addresses at conferences of theologians and philanthropists, his sermons to the students of Harvard, Cornell, Williams and Wellesley, and his books, Plain Words on Our Lord's Work, The Newer Religious Thinking, and How We Rose, have made him well known beyond the bounds of the denomination and New England.

The Home

GETHSEMANE.

BY ELLA GILBERT IVES.

Ye could not watch with me one hour
Who love me best?
To comfort now is past your power,
Sleep; take your rest.

But when in your Gethsemane
Dark woe shall press,
My sleepless love shall cradle ye
With tenderness.

Years ago a group of men, restless, heart-heavy, stood together undecided for their future. One among them impulsively settles the difficulty: "I go a fishing," and they, relieved, reply, "We also go with thee." Disappointed in all that was highest in their lives, deprived of dear companionship, probably doubting the value of life itself, for them, at the time, nothing could have been found so wholesome as the old hard work. Grief sometimes leaves our bodies so strained that rest must come before everything, but to the soul that feels as if its all were gone "the dust and moil" of earth can bring the first relief. It is not merely that work occupies the mind and thus secures forgetfulness. Only when working earnestly do we begin to see life in its right relations. It may be, too, that in our work at such a time we shall find the joy we thought was lost. Those men of old labored all night in vain, but with the morning came the Christ whom they mourned as dead.

In dealing with children and persons of inferior education, it is often best to assume that they know more than they do rather than less. Such an assumption makes them ashamed of their ignorance and kindles their pride and ambition. They immediately try to gain the knowledge which they find themselves expected to possess. On the other hand, if they see their ignorance taken for granted, they sometimes feel a sullen mortification which deadens desire for improvement. "If we're so low down, what's the use in trying to be different?" is their cry. A little girl said of her Sunday school teacher: "She always takes it for granted that we don't know anything whatever about the lesson, just because we don't happen to know all that she does, and it's so discouraging! If she'd only let us tell what we know and not do all the talking herself, I believe we'd every one of us learn more." It is this same spirit which makes bright children despise books written down "to the level of their understanding," as the authors suppose, while they read with eagerness those designed for much older persons.

LAST WEEKS IN JESUS' LIFE.

BY MRS. C. L. GOODELL.

Did you ever notice, when a beloved friend is taken away by death, the great importance we are accustomed to attach to the closing scenes and incidents of his life? How we recall the last personal conversations, the last kind acts and deeds, his last expressed wishes, his last efforts in our behalf, the last touch of the now vanished hand! All these assume a sacredness which time can never efface.

We hardly need, any of us, to look far away from our own family circle for illustrations of this thought. Our hearts grow tender and our eyes tearful as we indulge in such reminiscences and fondly cherish them.

So in this Lenten season, which we observe as a sacred memorial of our blessed Lord as he was about to lay down his precious life on Calvary, we thoughtfully avail ourselves of his last words of counsel, of comfort and promise. We linger near by to the end, if possible, that we may lose nothing of the departing glory and radiance from that divine face; for it reflects upon us the only true light we have in this dark and sinful world.

In the Old Testament there are many prophecies of the coming Messiah and Saviour, but in the New Testament the story of his birth is briefly told, while during the thirty years following we hardly get any trace of him. The incidents connected with his three years' ministry even appear meager compared with the fuller record of the closing weeks of his life. Around this limited space of time cluster events of greatest significance, apart from which his earthly existence would lack its crowning explanation and glory.

Let us draw reverently near and place our ear a little closer to his lips, and even venture, like the beloved disciple, to lay our head upon his very bosom, while he breathes upon us from out the depths of his yearning heart some choice word he has kept waiting for us alone. It may be a rare commendation we have not until now been able to bear; perhaps a word of loving encouragement we have not needed before; or some special personal recognition we would not willingly miss. Is it just possible our ear may catch the utterance of our own name? It may be, in gentle tones, he is saying: What lackest thou that I can bestow? Is there a shadow between thy face and mine that I may remove? Or any darkness on thy path which I can illumine? Does any burden press too sorely for thy little strength? Is there some lesson thou dost still desire me to teach thee? Come, sit at my feet and learn of me; come, and rest thee in my love, and be refreshed in the benediction of my peace. Abide in me, and thou shalt bring forth much fruit—for without me ye can do nothing.

As we take up the Bible readings on the last weeks in Jesus' life, I think we shall discover that he has anticipated all our needs, and provided more abundantly for them than we could ask or think. The precepts Christ gave his disciples during his early ministry are important and not to be passed by, but those that followed later are richly intensified by the circumstances of his closing days.

Looking toward his approaching separation from them, he could not yet say, "Father, I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do." He must open to them more fully the deep revelations of his own divine character and the spiritual nature of his kingdom. He must teach them how to pray the prayer that prevails; how to exercise the faith that conquers; something more about true love to one's neighbor; and the beautiful graces of forgiveness and humility. He must convince them that love to God is the supreme thing; that it leads to acts of kindness and self-denial in behalf of their fellowmen, while the selfishness which seeks one's own and not others' good will bring its empty reward of dishonor and shame. He must make them see how it is more blessed to give than to receive, the joy and blessedness of Christian service and the claims of Christian stewardship.

Fully conscious as he was of the unsearchable darkness and anguish through which he was about to pass, our Lord calmly and freely unfolded to them the paths they should tread, and the experiences which would bring them into closer fellowship with him and make them partakers of his divine nature.

He did not conceal from them the unwelcome and appalling verities that awaited them in the days to come—tribulation, hatred of the world, suffering, persecution even. In view of the difficulties to which they would be exposed and the fiery trials through which they must pass, his whole heart seemed overflowing with desire to anchor their trust more firmly to himself as their unfailing Friend and Helper. He sought to lodge precious pearls of comfort in the secret recesses of their hearts, which would make them strong to suffer and patient to endure. He taught them that the source of all their spiritual life and fruitfulness was their oneness with him.

True, he was soon to leave them, but in the tenderest and most comforting terms he explained how, in a new way, his place was to be supplied by another Comforter, the Holy Ghost, so that his absence would be no real loss to them but rather gain. He was going away, but he was coming back again, and his Father with him, to take up an abode in their hearts.

The Last Supper and the final discourse so beautifully recorded in the fourteenth, fifteenth and sixteenth chapters of St. John, together with the intercessory prayer which follows, has aptly been called the Holy of Holies in the history of our Lord. Into this sacred and mysterious seclusion we enter with softened step and bowed head. Alone with him we linger, while with sympathetic tenderness he unfolds to his own his last thoughts before his approach to Gethsemane and the cross.

Starting this memorable discourse with the text, "Let not your heart be troubled," he proceeds to open to them, by promise and blessed assurance, the storehouse of his heavenly treasures, containing all the riches of his infinite love, even the very fullness of the Godhead, adapted to every possible phase in which their human needs could appear.

What precious words are these—peace, my peace, comfort, the coming of Christ, the indwelling of the Holy Spirit, the manifestation of the Father. How many of God's dear children have dwelt in rapt meditation upon them, and found cheer and solace and inspiration! Into what a multitude of hearts have they gained entrance as heavenly music amid the harsher sounds of the outer world!

And then this wonderful intercessory prayer! How we rejoice that, instead of being breathed in silence, it was audibly uttered in the hearing of his disciples, and preserved for the benefit of us who came after! It is our rich inheritance today, and if we would have our hearts warmed anew in the precious glow of Jesus' undying love, and become more closely united to him by living faith, let us feed our souls upon this portion of God's holy Word. Let us meditate upon it and rejoice over it "as one that findeth great spoil." Let us remember, too, that our Jesus is still living and interceding for us within the vail.

RIGHT LIVING ON A WRONG PLANE.

BY MRS. M. E. SANGSTER.

At the first glance it seems as if here is a manifest contradiction in terms, for how can one live rightly on any plane but the best. Yet, when we look about us, and some of us when we look at home, we are fain to confess that there is such a thing as living honestly, honorably and even beautifully and still failing to give and to get that which makes the fullness and the sweetness of life. There may be right living, yet the living may be on a low level. There may be no breaking of law, yet the law of the highest love may be ignored. There may be much doing of the Commandments and a missing of the spiritual atmosphere which is beyond the written word.

A young wife goes to her new home, her hand in that of her "good man," the husband she has chosen; she, out of the whole world his sought and found, is to be the lodestar of his future course. To surround her with luxury, to anticipate her every wish, to pay her homage is his desire and impulse. In a thousand happy homes this drama is going on, the young husband delighting to give the wife all that he can, so far as his means will allow. If he is rich he bestows on her position, jewels, a fair home, travel, everything that money can buy. If he is poor he still shares with her his wages and works for her with cheerful alacrity. In turn, she is eager and wishful to serve and honor him. There is nothing, in the beginning of a happy married life, which a wife will withhold from her husband, except, sometimes, the very thing which would be better for him than all the sweet and easy compliance in the world. Right living on the wrong plane has held many a man back from his proper place in the Church of God, from his niche in the community to which, as a good citizen, he is entitled.

"I always went to prayer meeting before our marriage," said one dear young wife, "but Rob was not brought up to go and prayer meetings bore him. It seems to be more my duty to stay at home with him when he is tired than to go and leave him alone in the evening. So that is why I miss our pastor's evening lecture in the middle of the week, and why I almost forget what a prayer meeting is like."

The same wife, whether weary or not, always accompanies her husband to a place of amusement which he fancies he would like to attend. How shall he suspect, since she never shows him by word or sign, that she has a yearning for the privileges of the church which is not satisfied? By degrees the yearning lessens. In a way, the way of devotion to her husband, the wife's theory of living is right, but she carries it on on a wrong plane. She has thrown away the chance of bringing her husband up to where she stands, and she has herself sunk.

On the other hand, the wife, religiously trained from the first, has the courage to assert and live up to her convictions, quietly and trustfully assuming that the home is to be one where God is to be openly served. The wife gives the tone to the new home, where she is the presiding genius. Her piety, her consecration, her love, wise beyond weakness, strong to bear, strong to wait, strong to suffer, exacts of her life's comrade the best and leads him onward and upward. Such homes there are, sweet with the breath of the kingdom of heaven, where the love of Jesus has so filled the heart of the one who knew its secret sweetness that it has simply brought the other into the fuller companionship possible to God's elect. Right living on the highest plane will have this reward.

Is there not, too, another peril to which we women are subject in this era of interest in beautiful accessories of the household? Can we not sometimes in our care for the machinery overlook the thing for which it exists? Is there never the lack of discovering the inner meaning of home, that for which home exists, to be the pattern of the heavenly, through our interest in the vases, the hangings, the chairs, the tables, the china and the silver, which are justly dear to us? Let us take care that we live on a plane which shall uplift us above the accidental and the transitory, which shall keep us serene whatever wind may blow. Right living on the right plane, that is what we should strive for, and they who strive worthily will surely reach their desired haven.

THE SCIENCE OF FOOD.

II. ITS PRODUCTION AND PRESERVATION.

BY M. V. SHALER.

Agriculture was the beginning of civilization, and the extent of its development along scientific lines is an important data in determining the plane of enlightenment and the progress of a nation. Germany has done more than any other country to bring before the people the importance of a better understanding of agricultural products, and her analysis of food and dietary experiments are proving not only a beneficent means for the betterment of all, especially working classes, but they have given a stimulus to other countries to follow her example. America has only begun to make dietary experiments, though for years much attention has been given to feeding stuffs. Man has not been so well treated as beast so far as his food is concerned, but there is now promise of steady progress, both so far as production and preparation of food are concerned.

We need to know (1) the chemical composition of various foods, (2) the nutritive proportions, (3) digestibility, (4) fuel values, (5) ratios between nutritive values, (6) kinds and proportions best adapted to different ages and occupations, (7) errors in food economy and (8) the sociological and agricultural bearings of the subject.

The first systematic investigations of the chemistry of foods were instituted by Baron Liebig, to whom and Count Rumford before him we owe a debt of gratitude for giving to the ball of science pertaining to domestic economy the first impetus which sent it on its beneficent course, slow to move though it has been in the last quarter of a century. Recent research in physiological and agricultural chemistry has refuted some of Liebig's statements, but in the main they have stood the test of forty years. Since 1888—when the Smithsonian Institute and the United States Fish Commission, influenced by Prof. S. F. Baird, conducted an examination performed by Prof. A. O. Atwater of the nutritive value for man of fish and invertebrates, meat and dairy products—vegetables, cereals and fruits have come under chemical dissolution and the microscope, and the result has been to give us an amount of accurate information which it is a pity is not more extensively utilized in our daily dietaries to give a correct balance to necessary nutrients.

The preservation of food is an important item for consideration, as by various processes different results accrue, some valuable, others detrimental to health. As in cooking so in the preservation of food primitive methods are being proved by scientific analysis to be very nearly correct. Drying or slow curing by heat were probably the means first employed, and foods so preserved are pronounced today to be in the most nutritive form. One pound of dried meat is equal to four pounds of fresh meat because its moisture only has been removed, always a large per cent. in flesh, and none of its nutrients has been lost. Analysis of other dried foods also, as fish, fruits, vegetables, demonstrate their concentrated value. The industry in dried meats has become an enormous one in nearly every country of the globe. The scientific objection to dried meat is that the amount of heat used to preserve it is not sufficient to destroy any germs of disease which it may contain, and it is therefore important that manufacturers should be required to select absolutely healthy flesh for their trade.

Preservation by salting, pickling and curing has special value, as saltpeter and borax used in the process have antiseptic qualities, though too frequent use of such foods may disarrange digestion. Food preserved by slow heating to a germicidal temperature is unquestionably the safest method from a bacteriological standpoint, a vital consideration so long as there exists tuberculous cattle in the land. All food brought to the boiling point and put up in sealed cans while still hot retains its nutrients and is freed from germs.

In canned goods there should be no chemical odor and that of the article itself should be a perfectly natural one. A sniff at the first puncture of the can-opener is a good test for detecting an imperfect condition of fish or meat. If the least odor other than that of the fresh article is present it should be rejected.

Complete protection from the air is the principle upon which the perfect keeping of food rests, even for small quantities temporarily. When market men and housekeepers protect their provisions from the dust-laden air a more cleanly régime will surely show a better condition of health. A vast improvement, so far as cleanliness and the non-use of deleterious chemicals are concerned, has been forced upon the manufacture of all kinds of foods by rigid government inspection of late years, but housekeepers need to be on the alert notwithstanding.

FRESH AIR STUDIES.

HERALDS OF SPRING.

BY HOWARD E. PARKHURST.

The announcement of spring's power of resurrection is not by wind, earthquake, nor by fire, but by a still small voice—the song sparrow—that invariably hails the new era with prophetic confidence as early, in this latitude, as the middle or latter part of February. From the moment of hearing this joyous herald on winter's ragged edge the ornithologist "feels the future in the instant." He forgets the things that are behind and reaches forth unto those that are before. All future fury and snowstorm are but the bluster and final charge of a vanquished enemy. The naturalist's mood now springs into the major key of expectation.

For those not familiar with the birdward side of life, who would hardly know a song sparrow from a night hawk, let me describe it. The song sparrow, though not to be named in the same mouth, looks more like the omnipresent English sparrow than any other bird one is likely to see at this season, yet it has a lighter shade of ash on the back, while the breast is darkly streaked and has a conspicuous black blotch in the center. The song sparrow is also more sprightly, and has a more trim figure—two points that one may not observe until he is in his second year of ornithology. The song is remarkably simple, and yet so characteristic that it can never be confounded with any other throughout the year—a succession of usually three detached notes, sweet and clear, followed by a conglomeration of ecstasy, inextricably tied up into a musical love-knot. What warmth and hope are in that rich, familiar strain, as freshly falling on the ear as if it had not for generations declared, in the selfsame breath, the death of winter and the birth of spring! Green fields and balmy airs, delicious fruits and flowers seem focussed in that joyous chant, and the heart bounds in prospect of the new era and gives, perhaps, the warmest welcome of the year to this blithe messenger.

The turn in the feathery tide is apparent, not so much by the coming of new species as by increased numbers of some that have been with us to a small extent all winter, such as song sparrows, snowbirds, robins, cedar birds and golden-winged woodpeckers, all of which are more abundant in March. Doubtless the earliest songs we hear from the sparrows are not from new arrivals, but from the few hardy specimens that have braved a northern winter. Now, too, goldfinches, European and American, as well as snowbirds utter fine twitterings—the song buds that are to bloom into sprays of full and gushing notes a few weeks hence.

Perhaps the first actual arrival from the south is the crow blackbird, a flock of which I saw the first week in March, lurking around watery places, furtive and self-convicted rascals, but brilliantly iridescent in clear sunlight. I would call their coming an irruption rather than an advent, as that term better befits their rampant manners and vulgar notes. And yet this coarse natured species shows itself, in form, manners, plumage and a certain quality of tone, allied to that prince of songsters, the European starling, a small flock of which I have several times found in a neighboring park this winter.

A bird of quite another color in every sense from the blackbird is the sweet-tempered bluebird that also arrives this month—among birds what the violet is among flowers. In the swamps, too, look and listen for the red-winged blackbird, also of the starling family, and for the first member of the fly-catcher family, the phœbe, lingering around the margin of ponds for the too ambitious insects that are resuscitated and swallowed in the same breath. One of the most attractive newcomers is the fox sparrow, the largest and most showy of the family and a delightful songster, more artistic than the song sparrow, in a strain that is rich, wild and plaintive. To have heard a flock of them in full song is one of the lasting memories of March.

In speaking of the peculiarities of certain birds at this season we must mention habits of nidification. June is the general honeymoon of birds, but a few prosy fellows do not wait for that most congenial month in which to woo and wed. The sterner weeks of February and March are not without their nuptials, though marriage bells do not ring very merrily when wise, cold-blooded and conservative owls succumb to the inevitable. The great horned owls are probably of all our birds the first in the domestic field, weaving no sentiment of May into their nesting, for in the latter part of February they select the hole of a tree for their building lot and edifice, and, in the fullness of time, have only twins. Other owls and hawks postpone their obligations until March and April.

TOBACCO AND THE WILL.

So much has been said about the evil effects of tobacco upon the body that its influence upon the will is often forgotten. Not long ago the newspapers contained an item in regard to the boys of a Pennsylvania town which, if true, does not promise well for their future. According to the statement of the principal of the schools five out of six boys in attendance smoked cigarettes. The danger is not merely that these boys will grow up with what is now known as "the tobacco heart"—a disease induced by early smoking which makes weak and unsound men—but that they will grow up morally weak, slow in decision and with little resisting power in times of temptation. Tobacco leads men to postpone decisions and to prefer the easy way, while it intensifies every morbid craving of the body.

It is interesting to notice what is said on this point by Jacob A. Riis in a recent article in the Century Magazine describing a farm school which is maintained for the training of large boys from the slums of New York:

> It is noticeable that there is no scratching of matches and no lighting of pipes in the hall. Tobacco is as firmly tabooed on the farm as bad language; why, those comprehend easily who have gone among the young men, half boys yet, many of them, who fill our jails and penitentiaries, and have listened to their incessant pleading for "some tobacco, boss?" The weed certainly bears a direct relation if not to the wickedness of the street at least to the weakness of it, which is its characteristic symptom.

And the same aspect of the matter strikes John Ruskin, who calls tobacco "the worst natural curse of modern civilization," adding, in a significant footnote, "It is not easy to estimate the demoralizing effect on the youth of Europe of the cigar, in enabling them to pass their time happily in idleness." We are sent into the world to make decisions. Every boy will have to choose a thousand times, and will become at last what his choices make him; and often there is no time given in which to consider slowly what the choice should be. No one can be prepared to reach swift and wise decisions if he has lamed his will by idle indulgence, or accustomed himself to study the world through a cloud of smoke.

We need to be continually reminded that any sign of haste is discourteous in a friendly letter, and for this reason abbreviations such as "aff." for affectionately are considered ill-mannered, while leaving out the subject of a sentence gives the same impression of rudeness.

Closet and Altar

If thou canst for a while cease from thine own speaking and willing thou shalt hear unspeakable words from God.

Among all the spiritual guests that cross our threshold Jesus is not only incomparably the best by the excellence of his divinity, but also the most intimate by the presence of the same divinity. . . . If any one receive him into his soul, Jesus comes to have a place of his own that has no parallel in life and which has no proof save in experience. While the public come and go through the house in the busy daytime this guest keeps his room, but in the quiet hours he sits with us. We make him the confidant of our secrets, but in the end he tells us things about ourselves we have not known. We turn to him for help, but find that he has promised what we were about to ask. We declare a good intention, only to remember that it was his suggestion. His presence is an irresistible condemnation of wrongdoing, a perpetual inspiration of welldoing.—John Watson.

Thy home is with the humble, Lord!
The simplest are the best;
Thy lodging is in childlike hearts;
Thou makest there thy rest.

Dear Comforter! eternal Love!
If thou wilt stay with me
Of lowly thoughts and simple ways,
I'll build a house for thee.

Who made this beating heart of mine
But thou, my heavenly Guest?
Let no one have it, then, but thoo,
And let it be thy rest.

—F. W. Faber.

These two thoughts together—the divine love perfected and manifested in submission and sacrifice, the human sympathy with all actual sorrows—seem to me to constitute the mystery of Passion Week.—F. D. Maurice.

See how our own souls, the soul of each of us is represented by Jerusalem and how his Palm Sunday offer of himself to his own city is repeated in the offer which Christ makes of himself to every heart. Such days do come to all of us—days when we feel as if the Saviour, who had been long tempting us, had gathered up all his power of appeal and expected to be then either accepted or rejected; days when the chance of the new spiritual life seems to stand with peculiar solemnity before our heart. Such days are to us what Palm Sunday was to Jerusalem.—Phillips Brooks.

PALM SUNDAY PRAYER.

O Lord Jesus Christ, who as on this day didst enter the rebellious city where thou wast to die, enter into our hearts we beseech thee and subdue them wholly to thyself. And as thy faithful disciples blessed thy coming and spread their garments in the way, may we be ready to lay at thy feet all that we have and are and to bless thee, O thou who comest in the name of the Lord. And grant that after having confessed and worshiped thee upon earth we may be among the number of those who shall hail thine eternal triumphs and bear in their hands the palms of victory, when every knee shall bow before thee and every tongue confess that thou art Lord and that thou shall reign forever and ever. Amen.

MRS. DELAND'S STORY AGAIN.

BY ANNA S. HUNTINGTON.

I desire to utter a protest against an expression lately used in your columns, "the gaudy sentimentalism of rescue work." The mischievous tendency of such stories as the one referred to is that they lead people to discuss serious subjects lightly, and the article in your issue of Feb. 27 is an illustration. Who that realizes what philanthropy really is could speak of it as "particularly zealous," because it attempts restoration after a second lapse?

The poet Clough, in a grim satire called the Modern Decalogue, paraphrases thus the Sixth Commandment:

> Thou shalt not kill, but needst not strive, officiously, to keep alive.

This treatment of the moral leper is hardly like that charity which "hopeth all things," and may well be characterized by the reviewer as brown-colored, since it is as devoid of faith as the withered leaf of life. We must leave it to Doctors of Divinity to decide whether when St. Paul said, "The wages of sin is death," he meant that we should let people die for fear we cannot reform them. The application of divine law is surely not for the individual, but for society, else we might as well have anarchy at once. Lombroso's work is in the nature of a medical treatise, which will do more harm than good in the hands of the unskilled.

It is a hasty assumption that such traits as those which Mrs. Deland cleverly describes are yet necessarily criminal. They are characteristic of many weak girls at a certain period of life and all belong together, the vanity, indolence and ingratitude. Possibly they are ineradicable and should consign the case to a reformatory through the dangerous period of life. When the community grows wiser such treatment will be approved. But girls just as shallow, as unloving, as giddy as Nellie have been changed by motherhood and matured by the hard discipline of life. One of our old New England grandmothers, brought up under the law, had yet enough of the spirit of the gospel to take back to her home three times a young girl falling into disgrace, who lived to render honorable and lifelong service under the roof which had sheltered her, to marry respectably and leave daughters and granddaughters to become useful women.

If all moral lepers are to be left to perish, as the doctor recommends, then surely it is not only the girls, but the youth who have begun dissipated lives and will betray the innocent who also forfeit the right to life. Where shall we stop, and how measure the accountability of a physician who saves any existence but the purest? When Dr. Morse says in the story, "There is a limited amount of power in the world," it is the voice of atheism, since the Christian believer looks for spiritual and moral strength to the infinite Giver of all good. This is the keynote of all the discussions which One Woman's Story has aroused. The principles involved cannot be characterized by such misleading phrases as "moral economics" on the one side and "selfish sentimentalism" on the other, but really stand for the world, with its doctrine of expediency, as opposed to the religion of Christ.

MANNERS AND SOCIAL USAGES.

Avoid talking about money, especially do not constantly complain of being "poor."

One decided objection to slang is that it often has a secondary meaning of which the innocent speaker is unaware.

The tortures of toothache or of dental operations is not a subject of general interest, and persons should guard against boring their acquaintances by discussing such matters at length.

It is a proof of fine breeding to appear happy and cheerful even if this does not correspond with one's physical or mental moods. We have no right to inflict gloominess upon our companions.

Letters, like conversations, should be made up of questions and answers. A recent writer says: "To write a letter without putting in a single question is a delicate way of dropping a correspondent. To write a letter without answering a single question convinces your correspondent that he ought to drop you!"

A prominent society woman points out the advantages of the English custom of not employing a middle name or the initial for everyday use and of refraining from always putting middle initials upon the visiting card. She declares that the time lost in trying to recall people's middle initials is worthy of higher achievement and that men and women should be known by not more than two names apiece to the public.

Too much cannot be said against the restlessness of manner which in women often reveals itself by smoothing the hair, stroking the cheeks, or by a constant movement of the hands or head, while with men the mustache is unconsciously caressed, the fingers run through the hair, or the legs are crossed and recrossed in a manner peculiarly annoying to the observer. These forms of nervousness are not well-bred and should be controlled.

Tangles.

[For the leisure hour recreation of old and young. Any reader who can contribute odd and curious enigmas, etc., of a novel and interesting kind is invited to do so, addressing the Puzzle Editor of The Congregationalist.]

27. A POSTMARK.

*
C C
* March *
W 1896 N
* *
M

Supply vowels in place of the stars and find the name of a summer resort in the West.

B.

28. RIDDLE.

What has no head or hands or feet,
But just a body small;
What ne'er had a beginning, and
Has not an end at all.

What often frightens timid folks,
When specters seem to blame;
What men of means sometimes bestow
In Charity's sweet name.

What any boy or girl can make,
But none hath power to see;
What may prevent your finding out
Just what this "What" may be!

MABEL P.

29. A TOWN'S TANGLE.

A liquor agent of a certain New England town held the office one year and gave the following statement of his accounts:

| | |
|---|---|
| Cash received at the beginning of the year, | $32.17 |
| Liquor received at the same time, | 57.54 |
| Cash received for liquor sold during the year, | 102.37 |
| Paid for liquor bought during the year, | 59.91 |
| Salary of agent, | 25.00 |
| Liquor on hand at close of the year, | 31.37 |

The question is, How much does the town owe the agent, if anything, or how much does the agent owe the town?

This problem is sent by a correspondent with the statement that many years ago the dispute over the accounts actually resulted in a lawsuit. Lawyers and other professional men of the time were bewildered, and a convention of seventy-five teachers gave a whole day to the subject, only two or three of the entire number finding the true answer.

30. CHARADE.

The FIRST, a letter's name,
Two other letters spell:
When quick to me you came
The LAST you heeded well.

The WHOLE, in days long past,
On hostile errands went;
But now, 'mid changes vast,
On deeds of peace is sent.

NILLOR.

31. CHARACTERISTIC INITIALS.

1. Fights Evil Whisky. 2. Humanity's Best Storywriter. 3. Comical Delineator. 4. Makes Travesties. 5. Marvelous Light. 6. Wonderful Historic Perseverance. 7. Recognized Wisdom Everywhere. 8. English Critical Scholar. 9. Brilliantly Nonsensical. 10. Curious Brain. 11. Declamatory Weightiness. 12. Cleanses Harmful Politics. 13. Perfectly Tremendous Boaster. 14. His Writings Last. 15. Weird Concocter. E. M. B.

32. REVERSAL.

BIOGRAPHICAL.

In Asia FIRST'S long race was run,
When records were but thin:
Not Abram's father, not his son,
Yet very near of kin.
Reversed, a famous Frenchman bring
Who named himself, long since,
As one who might not be a king,
And deigned to be a prince.

M. C. S.

ANSWERS.

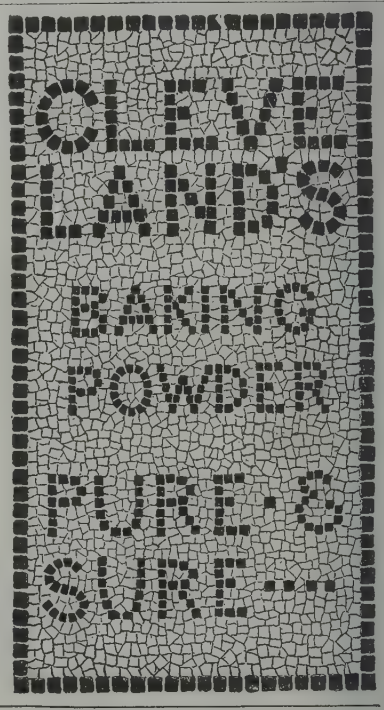
23. Charitable.

24. 1. Anemone. 2. Oleander. 3. Sweet pea. 4. Sunflower. 5. Lavender. 6. Bindweed. 7. Carnation. 8. Goldenrod. 9. Gentian. 10. Heliotrope. 11. Marigold. 12. Aster. 13. Petunia. 14. Violet. 15. Geranium. 16. Balm. 17. Mignonette. 18. Nasturtion. 19. White rose.

25. 1. Peregrination. 2. Donation. 3. Ordination. 4 Coronation. 5. Intonation. 6. Discrimination. 7. Cachination. 8. Divination.

26. 1. University. 2. Curiosity. 3. Obesity. 4. Veracity. 5. Velocity. 6. Adversity. 7. Scarcity. 8. Audacity. 9. Perversity. 10. Felicity. 11. Intensity. 12. Duplicity. 13. Pugnacity. 14. Voracity. 15. Mendacity. 16. Animosity. 17. Publicity. 18. Simplicity. 19. Electricity. 20. Generosity.

E. M. B., Boston, gave answers to Nos. 18, 21, 22; Sarah N. Kittredge, Haverhill, 22; L. Whiting, W. Dedham, 21, 22; H. Hubbard, Sherbrooke, Que., 18, 19, 20, 22; Nillor, Middletown Springs, Vt., 18, 19, 21, 22; M. D. H., Portsmouth, N. H., 22.



DECIDEDLY the bread made from Franklin Mills Fine Flour of the Entire Wheat is the sweetest and richest bread I have ever tasted.

MRS. HESTER M. POOLE.

Metuchen, N. J., Jan. 28, 1895.

Always ask for "Franklin Mills." All leading Grocers sell it.

The Conversation Corner.

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS: Two weeks ago you remember I spoke of our Eskimo boy, Pomiuk, and of the visit to New England of Dr. Grenfell, the medical missionary to the "Deep Sea Fishermen" of the far North, who was the means of saving Pomiuk's life and of taking him from a heathen hovel to a Christian hospital. I wished then to show you the surgeon's picture, but there were two reasons why I did not. First, it was the "anniversary number," and our Despotic Foreman had no room for more pictures, and, secondly, the photograph had not arrived, the great 'down east" freshet having stopped all mails from Halifax—where a friend had kindly arranged to get a "snap shot" of the busy and modest doctor, on his way to the nor'ard. But here he is now!

Yours faithfully, in His service
Wilfred Grenfell

As you will see, he is not an old, sedate, or ponderous missionary. He is young and rather small, and is cheery and hearty and happy as a trustful, useful Christian man ought to be! He told me about his early home on the banks of the Dee, where it empties into the Irish Sea on the west coast of England—the same Dee that our Trebizond boy, Maurice, took a bath in. (See Corner of Feb. 13.) He lived so near it that in heavy storms the waves would dash up over the sea wall against the house. When quite young his brother and he built a boat in the nursery, a long and curious looking craft, painted red, which they called the "Reptile," and in which they spent many happy hours—sometimes all night—on the neighboring sea. That was his first preparation for cruising in the North Sea of Europe and among the rocks and icebergs of Labrador.

At Oxford he was prominent in athletics, and I think the great thing he had to "give up" for the gospel's sake was the thought of being captain of the "Varsity team!" But that training well fitted him to become captain of the missionary steamer, Sir Donald, and to "endure hardness" on sea and land in his future work. In London he studied medicine under Sir Andrew Clarke, the great-hearted surgeon who, in Ian Maclaren's story, took Lily Grant to his home. Jamie Soutar might have said of the pupil as well as of the master: "A' wudna say but Sir Andra micht be a Christian o' the auld kind, a' mean, I was a stranger, and ye took me in!"

Was not this experience in London Hospital God's way of specially fitting him for service among sailors? And then a word fitly spoken in a public meeting in London by our Dwight Moody decided the young surgeon to become "a fisher of men." Such he has been, usefully and happily, ever since, and his last note as he sailed away to join the "ice-hunters" at St. John's, as they go to the dismal and perilous ice-fields in pursuit of young "swiles," has the same cheery tone:

Dear Mr. Martin: I am just about to disappear into Arctic ice, so I will write you a farewell. . . . Believe me, I shall never forget my first visit to the United States of America, my kind reception, my Christian friends. I do heartily thank them all, and earnestly pray our blessed Master to lead us all on day by day into the place he would have us be. I count it the deepest joy to be going back to the fishermen. Yours faithfully in his service, WILFRED GRENFELL.

The great number of letters I have received from all parts of the country, inclosing contributions for the "Corner Cot" and begging to hear more about Pomiuk, justifies me in giving this space to the "Deep Sea Mission." They come from quite elderly children (one signing himself "Silver Grey") and from little ones printing out their childish message, from Sunday school classes and Junior Endeavor bands, from Indian children and from "four little Africans"—missionary children in this country. As receipts (containing Pomiuk's picture and, since Dr. Grenfell's visit, his countersignature) have been sent to all, I will not give the names, but will add extracts from a few specimen letters. A lady in the far West (who says she was a native of Woburn) adds this note of missionary work:

Our Sunday school sent $25 to the A. B. C. F. M. last week and our Woman's Missionary Society has just raised $60 by a missionary reception. We had the hall decorated in the national colors and some of our missionaries' faces which have appeared on the covers of The Congregationalist were mounted on white cardboard and hung there. We call it "A Trip through Mission Lands." We have Japan, Mexico, India and Hawaiian rooms, which are beautified with the curios gathered by citizens who have traveled abroad.

A father in Illinois writes:

. . . My little ones have added to their evening prayer, "Bless the little Eskimo boy and make him well."

A minister in Ohio says:

. . . This is for the support of Pomiuk. I met the little fellow at the World's Fair. In place of the usual children's sermon a week ago I told them about this "North Pole boy" and asked them to give their pennies for him.

MASSACHUSETTS.

. . . Our Bessie was born the same day as the little king of Spain, May 17, 1886. A happier little girl is seldom seen than she was when your letter came, bringing the picture of Pomiuk. She was a little dismayed, however, at her papa's suggestion that we send for Pomiuk to come and live with us. She has been very happy in rearranging her financial plans so she could spare something for Pomiuk. BESSIE'S AUNTIE.

BRISTOL, CT.

Dear Mr. Martin: I would like to be a Cornerer. I have an Eskimo doll named Pomiuk. I had a baby doll named Marie. I am seven years old. DAISY C.

My old friend at St. John's (a Boston boy who for nearly fifty years has lived in the land of Pomiuk) sends me a lot of Newfoundland stamps—notably the red and black dogs (½ cent), the 1 cent green and 3 cent brown. I have also a lot of Canadian stamps—all, of course, for Pomiuk's friends!

Mrs. Martin

CORNER SCRAP-BOOK.

A Strange Pet. An English gentleman, who is a "F. Z. S."—not a hard abbreviation to guess—has two articles in The Boy's Own Paper (London) recommending to boys the keeping of the raven as a pet. He is easily lodged, any old shed serving for his dwelling, and an ordinary basket as a place for his nest, which he will prepare himself if allowed an armful of small twigs as material. His appetite is indeed tremendous, but he is not dainty, fish, flesh, fowl or even insects being acceptable, and cold boiled potato a favorite morsel. It learns readily to repeat all sorts of sounds, like the tinkling of a bell or the drawing of a cork, and imitates closely the cackle of a hen, the coo of a pigeon, and the "come back" of a guinea fowl. It will laugh, cry, cough and whistle, and even learn sentences of considerable length, which, like the parrot, it reproduces with amusing effect. The writer, vexed with the appearance of his pet, said to it, "You are an ugly old thing," which "Ralpho" was quick to repeat to the next lady caller! The bad points of the bird are that it is a terrible thief and very spiteful, executing his spite with a very sharp bill on the boy's hand or ankle. Whether our boys decide to cultivate this curious pet or not, they will be interested in looking up his historical reputation for being not only sagacious but prophetic, so that he has always been regarded by the superstitious as a bird of ill omen, a messenger of misfortune, a "thing of evil."

The Sea-bird of Ill Omen. If the raven is the sinister bird on shore, the stormy petrel, referred to two weeks ago, is the dread of sailors. The presence of "Mother Carey's chickens," as they always call them, they regard as ominous of an approaching storm. They are particularly superstitious about allowing them to be killed. I remember being, when I was a boy, on a schooner, tossing up and down in the furrows of a stormy sea, and a lot of "Mother Careys," with their peculiar peep, flying near the deck. A rough seaman was about to kill one of them when the captain, who did not fear God or regard man, took up a billet of wood and threatened to knock the sailor down if he hurt a feather of that bird!

Do Animals Have Trades? A "before school" talk by a teacher in St. John's, Newfoundland, published in a holiday magazine, proves it. The beaver is a woodcutter, an architect and a builder. The ray and the torpedo are electricians. The nautilus is a navigator—as his name implies. The squirrel is a ferryman. Ants are day laborers, some of them soldiers. Cormorants and herons are fishermen. Wasps are manufacturers of paper, bees of wax and honey. The spider is a geometrician and the snail builds his house with great ingenuity. Can our scrap-book observers add other examples of animal tradesmen?

How About Dogs? They are "common carriers," not only in the lands of Arctic sledges, but in Belgium, where there are 50,000 draught dogs. In Brussels alone 10,000 are employed in hauling barrows and small carts about the streets.

What the Children Say. This is what Vesta, a little Maine girl, said, when visiting her grandmother who lived on a farm. Watching her uncle churning, she was told that he was churning cream for butter. Afterwards grandmother brought out the old spinning wheel and began to spin. The little girl looked on with wonder and then exclaimed, "O, mamma, look! grandma is churning wool!" During the day she saw her uncle drawing up a pig that had been killed, using the old-fashioned "block and tackle." As she saw them hauling on the rope she cried, "O, grandma, uncle is spinning a pig!"

L. H. M.

The Sunday School

LESSON FOR APRIL 5. Luke 13: 22–30.

WARNING AGAINST SIN.

BY REV. A. E. DUNNING, D. D.

Our Lord in the words of this lesson gives solemn counsels on the most important of all questions, How can I be saved? That was not the question which was put to him, but it was the one he chose to answer. Since he expressed his thoughts mainly in the form of warnings let us try to interpret them in a series of counsels.

What not to do:

1. Don't waste time discussing the number of those who will be saved. That question was as often debated then as it is now. The subject of the future life was rarely referred to by the prophets, or in any books of the Bible written before the captivity, but in later Jewish history it gained increasing prominence. Some Jews in Christ's time did not believe in any future life. "The Sadducees say that there is no resurrection, neither angel nor spirit." But the Pharisees believed that both the just and the unjust would rise from the dead [Acts 24: 15]. In the second book of Esdras, written perhaps in the second or third century before Christ, the question is repeatedly answered. "The Most High hath made this world for many, but the world to come for few." Those who perish are said to be, compared to those who are saved, as the wave is greater than the drop. Christ himself said that many enter into the way that leads to destruction while few find the way that leads to life [Matt. 7: 13, 14].

But the question concerns first our own selves. The chief business of life, till it is accomplished, is to devote all our energies, to agonize, to enter in at the strait or difficult gate. Whither others are going concerns me, but whither I am going concerns me most, not only on my account but on theirs; for my influence, as well as my destiny, depends on the direction I am taking for the future life. Nazareth, the town where Jesus lived, stands on a steep hillside. At its foot a broad road leads off into hills where one might easily be lost in the darkness and where wild beasts prowl. But past narrow entrances winding streets lead up to safe and happy homes which can be found only by those who know the way. Christ is the way. Through him only can we find eternal life.

2. Don't forget that there is a time when it will be too late to be saved. The marginal reading of v. 24 in the Revised Version removes the period and bids us read that many "will seek to enter in, and shall not be able, when once the master of the house is risen up and hath shut to the door." The time will have passed then when entrance can be obtained. After that, seeking, however earnest, is in vain.

Only Orientals would urge the claims to favor which our Lord mentions. Those who asked admission could only say to the master of the house that they had eaten and drunk in his presence. Still less was their claim to his acquaintance and favor, "thou didst teach in our streets." But the fact that a man has passed through an Eastern village is reason enough for an inhabitant of that village to ask of the man a favor. Such reasons carry no weight with Christ. He seems to imply by quoting them that men who present such pleas have lost finally the power to apprehend true righteousness, without which no one can have intimacy with him. They are workers of iniquity and have chosen that business and become fixed in it. The only way open before them is to depart from him. This passage, I think, is the most decisive of all Christ's sayings as to the eternal destiny of the wicked.

3. Don't rely on anything else for salvation than repentance for sin and surrender to Christ. Once the Jews had worshiped at one sanctuary, the temple. The sacrifices of the priests had been for the whole nation, and it was the popular belief that all Jews were included in the official atonement made for sin. But the prophets had taught the people that every one was responsible for his own sin and must seek forgiveness for himself. John the Baptist had taught them that they could not count on the favor of God because they were children of Abraham. Christ extended to every one the invitation to come into personal relations with himself and gave to all the assurance, "Him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out." Yet he told these Jews who would not accept him, but who relied on their Jewish birth and nationality for salvation, that they should be thrust out of the kingdom of God, while those whom they revered and trusted would be seen within it. Can any lesson be plainer than that each one of us must by repentance for sin and full surrender of himself to Christ enter into personal and abiding union with him?

4. Don't limit the grace of God. We do not need to discuss the question as to how many shall be saved. Our chief business in life is to secure salvation for ourselves and for as many others as we can reach. But we are assured that common judgments of God's grace will be reversed, as they were to be when Christ taught. The people were confident that all the Jews would be saved. But many who held that doctrine would be thrust out of the kingdom. They were sure that the Jews only would be saved, but that all the nations which forget God would be turned into hell. But from all nations in every direction multitudes were to come into the kingdom of God.

"There are last which shall be first; and there are first which shall be last." Popular judgment is often unreliable when it decides on the destinies of men from what may now be seen of them. Some who are least likely to be saved will shine resplendent in the kingdom of God, while others who have every advantage will fail. The one thing certain is that each holds his destiny in his own hands. If he seeks salvation with all his heart as the supreme end of living, the omnipotent God works for and with him. If he puts any other thing first in his life he will miss the aim of life, and the time may come at any moment when the door of opportunity will be shut to him forever.

---

Chautauqua, the original and only, is determined fully to maintain in its coming session its reputation for providing choice literary feasts in well-arranged courses and in great variety. It will give a prominent place to pedagogical topics, and Pres. W. L. Hervey of the Teachers' College, New York, will head a famous list of instructors and lecturers who will aim to interest parents in the improvement of our educational system. Professors from Yale, Harvard, Chicago and other universities, under the leadership of President Harper, will carry on the School of Arts and Sciences. Presidents Eliot of Harvard and Andrews of Brown, Dr. Joseph Agar Beet of England and Dr. J. M. Buckley of New York are on the list of lecturers in this department. Drs. Gordon and Gunsaulus are among the preachers. Mayor Pingree of Detroit and Editor Albert Shaw, with others, will discuss Municipal Reform. The range of Chautauqua's subjects is illustrated by the fact that beside these intellectual and spiritual feasts is placed the cooking school, where Mrs. Ewing, Miss Anna Barrows, Mrs. Jenness Miller and others will teach people how to provide such food and clothing for bodies as will fit their tenants to appreciate the good things offered them in this remarkable program. Besides all these students and workers thousands will go to Chautauqua simply to see what others are doing there.

---

In danger Christ lashes us to himself as Alpine guides do when there is perilous ice to get over.—Alexander Maclaren.

BE EASY!
Use
Sunlight
Soap
Easiest Soap in the World.
It does all the work; you
Don't have to Rub or Scrub.
Saves your clothes wonderfully too,
It's So Pure.
Lever Bros., Ltd., Hudson and Harrison Sts., N. Y.

Palatable, Nourishing,
Strengthening
—three qualities that go to make Somatose
a perfect food for the pale, thin anæmic, dyspeptic and overworked, and those needing improved nourishment.
Somatose-Biscuit, 10% Somatose. A valuable addition to the diet.
Runkel Bros.' Somatose-Cocoa (10% Somatose), for nursing mothers, invalids and convalescents. A pleasant and strengthening beverage for table use.
Runkel Bros.' Somatose-Chocolate (10% Somatose), for eating and drinking.
All druggists. Descriptive pamphlets free of
Schieffelin & Co., New York, Sole Agts.

In making Soups
Always use
Cudahy's
Rex Brand
Extract of Beef
add a rich, delicious
FLAVOR

The Cudahy Pharmaceutical Co.
South Omaha, Neb.

Miss Maria Parloa is admitted to be a leading American authority on cooking; she Says "Use
a good stock for the foundation of soups, sauces and many other things, and the best stock is Liebig Company's
Extract of Beef"
100 of Miss Parloa's recipes sent gratis by Dauchy & Co., 27 Park Place, New York.

PROGRESS OF THE KINGDOM.

AWFUL EFFECTS OF RETRENCHMENT.

The Churches Arraigned. The multitude of etters which the American Board is con-tantly receiving from the field are varied in xpression, but one in the spirit of despair nd perplexity, protest and appeal. Here is portion of a representative letter from Rev. . E. Tracy of the Madura Mission: "In the rst bitterness of the news I was tempted to ay, 'Is it for this that I left my children at ome and came back to India?' But I have ot over that now. I can stand the reduction n our salaries, but to cut down on the work o the extent of one-half is more than I can elieve is the Lord's purpose, though it may e the fiat of the impoverished churches at ome.

"When I hear of large numbers of Congre-ational pastors voluntarily contributing one-enth of their salaries to the cause of home or oreign missions and hear of "business men" n business principles who follow their pas-or's example, I shall feel that there is hope. believe that the church as a whole needs omething drastic to wake it up. Somebody vrote me that the churches are hungering nd thirsting for information. It is not in-ormation they lack but Christianity. I wish could have a committee of those who made his reduction necessary (if it is necessary) ere to attend my next meeting with my na-ive helpers, to meet the dismissed men and vomen, go with them to their hovel homes nd come in contact with the people whom hey teach. In the presence of the poverty nd self-denial which they would see I would ike to have these representatives of home hurches explain all the sweet reasonableness f the reduction and the poverty and self-enial which press so heavily upon conse-rated stewards of Christ in Massachusetts nd Connecticut that they are constrained to rder reductions. I would like them to com-pare these homes with those in America, these hurches with those, these schools with those, nd, after they had made the comparison, per-haps they, too, like the worthy Bradford, vould go back and publish to the churches nd homes that really they found more conse-ration and self-denial than they had supposed xisted among the Christians in India. . . . My impression when I was at home recently vas that the interest felt by the mass of Chris-ian people in missions was very largely an nterest in being entertained and very little n intelligent interest—too much reading of he newspapers and too little reading of the Bible."

Worse than the Sword of the Turk. We can nly give brief extracts from the touching etters of our missionaries in Turkey. Rev. C. S. Sanders of the Central Turkey Mission leclares vehemently and not unjustly that he "American churches seem determined at least negatively) to finish up in good hape the same work of destruction which as been already done so well in other ways." In a similar strain are a few sentences from Rev. C. F. Gates of Harpoot: "I think it will e practicable to build union schools for Gre-gorians and Protestants under our superin-endence. My only anxiety is lest the Chris-ians of America should fail to meet the emer-gency. We have as yet received no assurance f support and funds from America. On the contrary our work is cut off fifty per cent. This is worse than the sword of the Turk. Let mine enemy smite me, and not mine own friend."

Dr. Barnum of Harpoot also dwells upon his unexpected blow to the work. He says: 'The Armenians are more friendly than ever, more open to the truth, less prejudiced against Protestantism, and, unless we take advantage of this crisis in putting preachers into availa-ble places, I see no hope of the restoration of Christianity. The Catholics are very active, and every lack of energy on our part will be aken advantage of by them. Nothing that has happened has really been so disheartening as this. The attacks of our enemies do not discourage us, because we are sure God is on our side and he is stronger than they, but how shall we interpret this desertion by our friends?"

Sad Days in India. Such words as these from Rev. E. S. Hume cannot fail to call forth our warmest sympathy and most earnest effort: "I cannot bear to write you in full what an awful blow to our usefulness these reductions have given. Our appropriations for the year are less than half of what I asked when making out estimates on a starvation allowance. The work cannot be carried on even in a crippled way for six months on the allowances granted. The feelings of humiliation, disappointment and grief which overwhelm us cannot be told." No less touching is this extract from a letter recently received from Dr. Edward Chester of Dindigul: "I have not known a sadder day in our mission during the thirty-seven years of my service than that when we received from Boston our appropriations for 1896 and had to decide how each of us could meet the tremendous reduction. I have closed my boys' boarding school and sent the boys to their villages, because the appropriations made to the Dindigul station for boarding schools will not suffice to support the pupils now in the girls' school. . . . The whole thing has made me almost sick, and I dread the future months more than I can tell you. This reduction is blocking our work, adding greatly to unavoidable discouragements and taking away our hope for the future. And saying all this I have failed adequately to describe the disaster which has fallen upon us as a mission."

HOW TO PREVENT THE DISASTER.

The problem to be faced is not simply one of reduction this year to be made with the hope of resuming efforts as soon as better times prevail. After a period of suspension the work can no more be taken up where it was dropped than a tree could be pulled up by the roots and transplanted after long delay without serious injury. But it is not yet too late to come to the rescue. It requires only a small sum in one place to sustain the work which is threatened. The aggregate appears large because there are so many places In some missions from ten to twenty-five dollars given now will keep a Christian school from closing. From twenty-five to one hundred dollars will continue a preacher or pastor and prevent a congregation from becoming scattered. A mechanic, who is a teacher of a Sunday school class of working people in a church in Massachusetts, supported last year a preacher upon the foreign field. His class, moved by his example, supported another. This class has been thus preaching for a year to two congregations in India in two different missions. They will never realize the extent of good done, but they already know of souls redeemed through their efforts. Is not such a course worthy the immediate effort of Young People's Societies, individuals, churches and Sunday schools? There are few that cannot prevent pupils already gathered in a Christian school from returning to their old dark life. Others have the privilege of supporting a preacher and thus holding a congregation for Christ.

Y. P. S. C. E.

PRAYER MEETING.

BY REV. ISAAC OGDEN RANKIN.

Topic, April 5–11. The Gift of Life and How to Use It. Matt. 10: 34–39. (An Easter topic.)

Life under the conditions of this world is warfare. Every seed must push downward through the close packed earth and upward toward the light. Every tree must fight for its place in the forest. We hold our physical life by effort and resistance. Strong lungs reject the poison of consumption, weak lungs receive it. Make the body vigorous and it will keep out the forces of disease and be well by overcoming. Let it cease to overcome and it is time to call in the doctor.

So when Christ gives us life it is a gift which can only prosper by resistance to the evil which threatens it. "I am not come to send peace, but a sword." It is victory which he promises and crowns, and it is through victory that we attain to peace. "For whatsoever is begotten of God overcometh the world: and this is the victory that hath overcome the world, even our faith." Life is contest, but victory is health, and health is victory.

There is trouble beyond this, however. Confession of Christ often breaks our earthly friendships. "A man's foes shall be they of his own household." The power of Christ in a soul rebukes the power of evil in other souls. If this is our only fault, however, if it is our faith and not our character of which our former friends complain, we need not take our troubles much to heart. How can two dwell together unless they be agreed? The life which Christ gives never comes into a human soul without claiming and securing the highest place. It cannot live in any other. It must possess the soul before it can help it, as the pilot must have full charge of the ship before he can bring it into port. In all other things we may be yielding, but we cannot yield our allegiance to Christ. If to love him supremely made us love father, mother, son or daughter less, we might complain of his demands, but we find in actual experience that it makes us love them more. The way to love our friends more fully is to love Christ most of all. No Christlike spirit is responsible for variance between friends. It is because one loves Christ and the other hates him that the separation comes.

Life should be used for overcoming. No life was ever thrown away that was spent in faith and love for God. There are evils to be overcome, as Christ overcame them. He bore the cross, but he knew that beyond it lay the triumph of the resurrection. We take up our cross of daily trial—the drudgery and petty disappointments of our lower life, but we know that if we follow Christ to death we shall follow him through death to victory. Finding our whole life in the happiness of earth—putting our hearts into gain and excitement—means certain and eternal loss. Our true life is risen with Christ. It is the life that overcomes, the life of the meek who shall inherit the earth and of the pure in heart who shall see God. That is good losing which gives up for the sake of love, and that is true finding which follows Christ at any cost of life or death.

Parallel verses: Rom. 8: 31–39; 1 John 5: 3–5; Col. 3: 1–4; Rev. 3: 10–11; James 1: 12; 1 Cor. 15: 57, 58; 2 Tim. 2: 11–13.

THE CHURCH PRAYER MEETING.

Topic, March 29–April 4. Christ Our Sacrifice for Sin. Isa. 53: 4–9; 1 Pet. 2: 21–25.

Why necessary; how accomplished; how accepted or rejected; with what results.

(See prayer meeting editorial.)

STATISTICS OF MASSACHUSETTS CHURCHES.

The following figures are furnished by Secretary Hazen, showing the progress of the Congregational churches of this State in 1895. One notable fact will at once impress the reader—the benevolences have largely increased and the home expenditures have been reduced in a much greater ratio.

| | |
|---|---|
| Churches | 589 |
| Ministers | 786 |
| Church members | 110,179 |
| " " gain | 705 |
| Additions on confession | 3,781 |
| Removals by death | 1,846 |
| Sunday school members | 117,914 |
| " " " decrease | 413 |
| Members of Young People's Societies | 40,093 |
| Benevolent contributions | $167,281 |
| " " " increase | $61,973 |
| Legacies | $102,619 |
| Home expenditures | $1,534,949 |
| " " " decrease | $131,509 |

Literature

RALEIGH AND GUIANA.

The neighborhood in Guiana and Venezuela which is now in dispute is bound to our own State of Virginia by one of those personal associations which mean so much to every appreciative reader of history. It was in Virginia that Sir Walter Raleigh founded the colony which resulted so disastrously at first both to his colonists and to his own private fortune, and it was at the mouths of the Orinoco and along its banks that he made friends with the Indian chiefs and gathered suggestions for his splendid dream of an empire richer than Peru, the conquest of which was to make Elizabeth a rival in wealth of the Spanish king. The mountains of Parima, which retain the name of the great lake in which the high priest of the golden city of the legend used to wash off the gold dust with which he was sprinkled, form a part of the disputed Schomburk line. Beyond them lay the fabulous empire of Guiana, with its glittering capitol, Manoa, or El Dorado as the Spaniards called it, which long exercised a fatal spell over the imagination of the explorers, and has passed into general speech as a synonym of fabulous but unattainable wealth.

Raleigh, however, never doubted the truth of the tale, and devoted wealth and talents in two expeditions for discovery and conquest. How real it all was to his mind may be gathered from the fact that he carefully concealed from his companions knowledge which he obtained of gold mines near the river's bank (perhaps the very mines which have made the territory in question worth quarreling over) lest they should stop to explore them instead of pressing on to the greater treasures of the golden city. If any one wishes to get into the spirit of the times, there is no better book than Raleigh's Discovery of Guiana, in which, among a multitude of geographical and personal names, most of which have long been forgotton, there is an unapproachable picture of the great statesman and explorer, drawn unconsciously by his own hand.

It was a time when anything might be looked for in the golden west, nor are the legends of El Dorado more incredible than the veritable facts of the adventures of Cortez and Pizarro which were yet fresh in the memory of the world. If Raleigh had found and conquered his golden land, he would have been but a third in their company. Indeed, one cannot but remember it as the crowning cowardice and blindness of King James the First that he should have put to death this hero of romance and leader of the new life of England upon the demand of the Spanish ambassador, merely because his men had sacked a village on the coast. Elizabeth might have beheaded Raleigh in a fit of pique, or because she could not forgive his marrying, but she would never have done it at the demand of the Spaniard.

BOOK REVIEWS.

BIBLICAL STUDY.

There are a number of valuable books giving accounts of the origin and history of the New Testament, but we know of none which furnishes so complete a compendium of known facts concerning the canon and text of these books as is to be found in The Critical Handbook of the Greek New Testament by Edward C. Mitchell, D. D. This volume is the result of many years' experience in the classroom. The first edition of it was issued fifteen years ago, and, if the book were freshly written from the point of view of the present, it is probable that some of the questions discussed might be handled somewhat differently. But the author has in the main confined his work to unquestioned facts in the early history of the church, to pagan, Christian and controversial literature and to the testimony of the monuments. He has brought together pretty much all that is known concerning the formation of the canon and has furnished a very interesting description of the early manuscripts, illustrated by facsimiles of all that are most important. He gives careful accounts of the versions of the New Testament and of citations from it by the Christian fathers. The book is generously furnished with tables giving lists of uncial and cursive MSS. and of ecclesiastical writers. It has a good index. All students interested in the history of the New Testament will find this a companion in their studies which cannot well be spared. [Harper & Brothers. $2.50 ]

Life of Jesus, by Ernest Renan. This is a translation newly revised from the twenty-third and final French edition, and demands a brief notice on that account. The life of the author is an interesting one. Born in Brittany and educated for the priesthood, at the age of twenty-two he devoted himself to a life of study and authorship. Making good use of repeated opportunities of Oriental travel, his books on the history of Israel have the background of a careful topographical knowledge of the scenes in which the action took place, and the narrative is lightened by the power of a great constructive imagination. In fact it is hardly too much to say that the Life of Jesus is itself avowedly a great historical romance. Renan begins by eliminating the supernatural. "The question of the supernatural is settled for us with absolute certainty by this simple reason, that there is no room for belief in a thing of which the world can offer no experimental test." He admits what suits his theories and excludes what contradicts them, all in the exercise of an imaginative handling of scanty materials. In regard to the growth of thought and teaching of our Lord, he says: "I think that in such cases it is allowable to make conjectures, provided they are presented as such. The texts, not being historic, give no certainty, but they give something. . . . We must strive to divine what they conceal, without ever being quite certain of having found it." He who cares to launch upon this sea of conjecture, in which the only assurance is the negative one that there can be no miracle, will find many suggestive and beautiful passages, but it is certainly absurd to take very seriously a biography written on such a plan. [Roberts Brothers. $2.50.]

LAW AND ETHICS.

The events of the last few months have made painfully evident the extent of popular ignorance about those established practices of nations which are grouped under the head of international law. It is not difficult to place the responsibility for this unfortunate condition of the public mind. We are so far away from Europe that we learn in our daily reading of the newspaper comparatively little about the current history of the world, and do not realize how slender are the threads which preserve the friendly relations of great peoples and how necessary it is, therefore, to avoid ill-considered action. But the more important reason is to be found in the inadequate and unskillful teaching of history in the schools. Could the recommendations of the committee of ten be carried out, much would be gained. Meanwhile every successful popularization of the subject, like that which Dr. T. J. Lawrence—now lecturer in Cambridge, Eng., and lately university extension professor in the University of Chicago—has prepared in his Principles of International Law, is to be heartily welcomed. After describing the history of these principles he elucidates the law of peace, the law of war and the law of neutrality. He treats his subject more as a branch of history than as a department of ethics, and it is this which gives its principles under his handling so eminently practical a bearing. Since Dr. Lawrence has had some experience in America one is naturally curious to read what he has to say about the Monroe Doctrine. Like most discerning persons he regards it as continually liable to dangerous extensions, but he does concede to the United States a position of influence on these continents "in some respects like . . . that which is accorded in Europe to the six great Powers." In a measure this paramount influence qualifies the independence of the other American States, even if there is no desire to meddle with their domestic affairs. The pages of Dr. Lawrence's book, which just at this moment deserve the most careful reading, concern the duties of neutrals and the grant of belligerent rights to insurgents. Judged by the principles he expounds and which he supports upon full historical evidence, the immediate recognition of the Cubans as belligerents would be an act of unfriendliness to Spain, especially since the insurrection has not permanently reached the coast and does not directly affect the commerce or the interests of the United States or any other foreign Power. [D. C. Heath & Co. $3.00.]

The endowed lectureships connected with our seminaries are yielding good fruit. We have recently reviewed Dr. Ramsey's Morgan lectures on St. Paul and Professor Tyler's Morse lectures on The Whence and Whither of Man, and now have Dr. Cornelius Walker's Lectures on Christian Ethics, delivered before the Episcopal Theological Seminary of Virginia on the Reinecker foundation. The author's aim has been "to present in as simple manner as possible the great truth of man as a being with a moral constitution, and the material, in natural as in inspired revelation, to which that constitution is related." The author has written clearly upon a subject which is often made exceedingly dry. We have been especially interested in what he says in Lecture V. on the ethics of Christian brotherhood, which would be wholesome reading for many narrow-minded people in in his own denomination and elsewhere. [Thomas Whittaker. $1.25.]

Roger Foster of the New York bar and a lecturer on federal jurisprudence at Yale has prepared the first volume of Commentaries on the Constitution of the United States, which contains a discussion of the preamble and the first two articles. Mr. Foster's wide familiarity with the judicial history of the Constitution and the abundant quotations from the record of cases, make the book a valuable addition to the literature of the subject. The thorough treatment of impeachment trials and of similar proceedings in the colonies and the States is especially satisfactory. It is interesting to compare what he says of the conclusion of President Johnson's trial with Senator Sherman's defense of his vote in the recently published recollections. Certainly few who have not records to vindicate will disagree with Mr. Foster's declaration that those senators who voted "no" "saved the country from a precedent big with danger." [The Boston Book Co. $4.50.]

STORIES.

The Day of Their Wedding, a novel, by W. D. Howells. In this brief story Mr. Howells returns to his inquiries and experiences among the Shakers. It is a humorous situation which he creates, and he has treated it with a light and graceful hand. The result is a picture which, in spite of its humor, touches us with a sense of the limitations and disappointments of life. After all, however, we think that the author, in the interest of his more recent prepossessions about life, has misread the situation. We do not believe that Lorenzo would have allowed the day to end as it did in the story, or that Althea would have agreed to it at the last even if he had wished. Human nature is not so easily eliminated even by a childhood spent under the shadow of "the angelic life." [Harper & Brothers. $1.25.]

The Trumpet Major, John Loveday and Robert His Brother, a tale, by Thomas Hardy, with an etching by H. Macbeth Raeburn and a map of Wessex. The Woodlanders, a novel, by Thomas Hardy. These stories come to us in substantial and tasteful reprinted editions. We like the tale better than the novel, and either better than Jude the Obscure. It must be said, however, that Mr. Hardy is not given to selecting among his impressions those which will give an agreeable view of human life. We wish he might for once add to his delightful sympathy with nature a view of human life in which the shadows would pass by, leaving sunshine as the prevailing memory of the scene. And yet we should be sorry to have missed the simple, faithful, heroic figure of John Loveday, and Annie Garland is delightful company—except for her unaccountable devotion to her weathercock sailor, whom no sane woman, we believe, could persist in loving. [Harper & Brothers. Each $1 50.]

The Autobiography of a Professional Beauty, by Elizabeth Phipps Train, illustrated. This is Anglo-American society from a single point of view. It is brightly and cleverly written, though the tone is a little hard, and, serious as the mistakes and mishaps of the heroine are, it all comes right at the end. [J. B. Lippincott Co. 75 cents.]

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Connection between Thought and Memory, by Herman T. Lukens, Docent in Clark University, with an introduction by President G. Stanley Hall, is a contribution to pedagogical psychology on the basis of F. W. Dörpfeld's Denken und Gedächtniss. Dr. Lukens is one of the group of younger American students who have given their time to the science of teaching, and though he follows the advanced work of the Germans in his department it is by no means slavishly. The book will be of great interest to teachers, and to all who are interested in the extension downward of the modern psychology. The book belongs in Heath's Pedagogical Library and is very well made, except that it lacks a topical index. [D. C. Heath & Co. 90 cents.]

To the same series belongs English in American Universities, by professors in the English departments of twenty representative institutions, edited with an introduction by William Morton Payne. These reports, with two exceptions, were printed in the Dial, where they aroused much interest. They give a representative and suggestive picture of the condition of this branch of learning in our colleges, and hint at changes which are in progress which promise much for the work of years to follow. The work of the English Conference and the Committee of Ten which appointed it has already borne rich fruit. Particularly sensible are the remarks of the editor in his full introduction, as, for instance, "To sum up, I am inclined to think that the problem of secondary education in English reduces itself to getting teachers who know good literature and care for it, and minimizing to the utmost the restrictions placed upon their work." It is interesting in following these reports to see how the West has emancipated itself first from the old restrictions of teaching in favor of a vital use of literature as literature, and how the grammarian's scalpel and the etymologist's blowpipe are everywhere being put into a department by themselves, to the great advantage of real culture and enjoyment of the great works of literary art. [D. C. Heath & Co. $1.00 ]

From L. Prang & Co. we have specimens of Easter cards, books and booklets, in facsimile color prints selected with their accustomed taste and appreciation of the demands of the season and appropriate for Easter gifts. It is always interesting to watch the new effects and achievements of color printing, and it is pleasant to have such good work to chronicle from this favorite American firm.

TEXT-BOOKS.

The First Greek Book, by Clarence W. Gleason and Caroline S. Atherton. This is an exceedingly businesslike introduction to the study of the Greek tongue, made as simple as possible, while not reduced to a point where any indispensable element is missed. The authors are right, we think, in making the reading of Greek the chief aim of their endeavor. Anything else, indeed, would seem absurd in a book which does not even mention the living pronunciation of the tongue it undertakes to teach. [American Book Company. $1.00.]

The Timon of Lucian, with notes and vocabulary by J. B. Sewell. This edition, the editor says, "originated in the desire to increase the variety of Greek which may be read in secondary schools." The introduction is brief, but sufficient, and the vocabulary and notes are full and satisfactory. With the object of the book we are in full sympathy, for we believe in the continuance of Greek as an essential element of a rounded education, and fear that its continued acceptance for that purpose depends upon its being read as a living tongue, and not employed as a grammatical treadmill, in the secondary schools. [Ginn & Co. 55 cents.]

French texts for schools are Places and People, edited and annotated by Professor Jules Luquiens of Yale. This is a selection from the works of modern French writers, without introduction or index. The annotations upon the seven chapters are, however, prefaced by very brief sketches of the writers, Dumas the elder, Madame Hugo, Marc Monnier, Pierre Loti, Edmond Scherer, Eugene Fromentin and Taine. The variety of style and of subject matter makes this a capital practice book in French and the annotations are helpful. [Ginn & Co. 85 cents.] Le Chant du Cygne, par Georges Ohnet, edited by Arthur H. Solial. This has a full vocabulary, notes and grammatical appendix, and will be especially helpful in getting the pupils interested in reading a strange tongue for the sense, while it can be utilized for as much grammatical drill as the teacher thinks proper. [Maynard, Merrill & Co. 35 cents.] Le Gendre de Monsieur Poirier, par Augier et Sandeau, edited with an introduction and notes by Prof. Benjamin W. Wells of the University of the South. This is a bright French comedy, and is well adapted for use as a textbook for reading by a careful introduction and helpful notes. [D. C. Heath & Co. 30 cents.]

NOTES.

—— Ian Maclaren acknowledges four men as his masters in literature, Scott, Carlyle, Matthew Arnold and Professor Seeley, the historian.

—— At the Burns Exhibition, which it is proposed to hold in Glasgow in July, the Cottar's Saturday Night will be published in a little volume with translations in twenty languages.

—— The late Professor Schaff's phenomenal literary and editorial industry has further evidence in the promise of historical work left complete by him, which his son, Rev. D. S. Schaff of Jacksonville, is preparing for the press.

—— Sixty-nine students from thirty-four colleges took part in the contest for the prizes offered by the American Institute of Sacred Literature for the best examination on the Bible. The first prize of $100 went to Miss McGraw of Rockford College, Illinois, and the second to Mr. Herbert E. Hawkes of the present Senior Class in Yale.

—— Berea College has ventured into the field of journalism with a magazine called the Berea Quarterly. It is devoted to literary and sociological studies connected with the South. Kentucky is the meeting place of North and South, of the old life and the new. The quarterly has a wide field and promises interesting and valuable contributions.

—— The mills of the law grind slowly, but they grind. Miss Harriet Monroe of Chicago has just recovered, in the United States Court of Appeals, $5,000 from the New York World, which journal unlawfully published her ode written for the opening of the Columbian Exposition. The decision is gratifying, conserving as it does the rights of authors to their property.

—— The revival of the Greek Olympic games at Athens in April receives full notice in the magazines of the month. In the Century Baron Pierre de Coubertin of France, to whose initiative the revival of the games is mainly due, describes the modern games at Athens, and there will be an illustrated article on the ancient games by Professor Marquand of Princeton. In Scribner's Professor Richardson of the American School at Athens describes the preparations for the contests and there is a short story of the ancient time by Duffield Osborne.

BOOKS OF THE WEEK.

D. C. Heath & Co. Boston.

LITERARY STUDY OF THE BIBLE. By Prof. Richard Moulton. $2.00.

Cong. S. S. & Pub. Society. Boston.

A RESCUED MADONNA. By Harriet A. Cheever. pp. 104. 60 cents.

Copeland & Day Boston.

HILLS OF SONG. By Clinton Scollard. pp. 93. $1.25.

Roberts Bros Boston.

ARMENIAN POEMS. Rendered into English by Alice S. Blackwell. pp. 142. $1.25.

Joseph Knight & Co. Boston.

LITTLE IDYLS OF THE BIG WORLD. By W. D. McCrackan. pp. 175. 75 cents.

THE STARLING. By Norman Macleod. pp. 261 75 cents.

SONGS AND RHYMES FOR THE LITTLE ONES. Compiled by Mary W. Morrison. pp 244. $1 50.

MEMORIES OF THE MANSE. By Anne Breadalbane. pp 121. 50 cents.

THE LITTLE COLONEL. By Annie Fellows-Johnston. pp. 102. 50 cents.

WEE DOROTHY'S TRUE VALENTINE. By Laura Updegraff. pp. 107 50 cents.

OPEN SESAME. By Harlan H. Ballard. $1 00.

WILD FLOWER SONNETS. By Emily S. Forman. pp. 35. $1.00.

Ginn & Co. Boston.

GRIMM'S FAIRY TALES: PART II. Edited by Sara E. Wiltse. pp. 234 45 cents.

VORTRAGE By Emil Du Bois Reymond. Edited by James H. Gore, Ph.D. pp. 112. 55 cents.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co. Boston.

THE SUPPLY AT SAINT AGATHA'S. By Elizabeth Stuart Phelps. pp. 38. $1.00.

A SATCHEL GUIDE TO EUROPE. With maps. pp. 307. $1.50.

KOKORO. By Lafcadio Hearn. pp. 388. $1.25.

Fleming H. Revell Co. New York.

LAST WORDS. By B. B. Comegys, LL. D. pp. 272. $1.00.

DAVID, SHEPHERD, PSALMIST, KING. By F. B. Meyer. pp. 213. $1.00.

WHEN THOU HAST SHUT THY DOOR. By Amos R. Wells. pp. 109. 60 cents.

THE GOSPEL IN ISAIAH. By C. S. Robinson, D.D. pp. 279. $1.25.

THE WONDERFUL. By William E. Sloane. pp. 223. $1.25.

THE LIFE OF PRIVILEGE. By Rev. H. W. Webb-Peploe. pp. 202. $1.00.

PURITANISM IN THE OLD WORLD AND IN THE NEW. By Rev. J. Gregory. pp. 406. $2.00.

SABBATH AND SUNDAY. By Rev. William De Loss Love, D. D. pp. 326. $1.25.

FOR HIS SAKE. Extracts from letters of Elsie Marshall. pp. 223. $1.00.

THE MASTER'S INDWELLING. By Rev. Andrew Murray. pp. 180. 75 cents.

THE SPIRIT-FILLED LIFE. By John MacNeil. pp. 126. 75 cents.

NOTES FROM MY BIBLE. By D. L. Moody. pp. 236. $1.00.

Charles Scribner's Sons. New York.

DR. CONGALTON'S LEGACY. By Henry Johnston. pp. 346. $1.25.

ARCHITECTURE FOR GENERAL READERS. By W. H. Stratham. pp. 332. $2.00.

American Tract Society. New York.

A HARMONY OF THE LIFE OF ST. PAUL. By Rev. F. J. Goodwin. pp. 240. $1.75.

T. Y. Crowell & Co. New York.

STATE RAILROAD CONTROL. By Frank H. Dixon, Ph. D. pp. 253 $1.75.

PROPHECY. By Rev. E. S. Stackpole, D. D. pp. 157. 75 cents.

G. P. Putnam's Sons. New York.

THE SPY. By James Fenimore Cooper. pp. 430. $1.25

A DICTIONARY OF THE TARGUMIM, THE TALMUD BABLI AND YERUSHAMI AND THE MIDRASHIC LITERATURE. Part VIII. Compiled by M. Jastrow, Ph. D. $2.00

Harper & Brothers. New York.

THE BICYCLERS AND THREE OTHER FARCES. By John Kendrick Bangs. pp. 176. $1.25.

THE SECOND OPPORTUNITY OF MR. STAPLEHURST. By W. P. Ridge. pp. 283. $1.25.

THE HAND OF ETHELBERTA. By Thomas Hardy. pp. 480. $1 50.

TOMMY TODDLES. By Albert Lee. pp. 200. $1.25.

Christian Literature Co. New York.

THE AGE OF HILDEBRAND. By Marvin R. Vincent, D. D. pp. 457. $1.50.

THE LUTHERAN COMMENTARY. Vol. IX. Edited by Henry E. Jacobs. pp. 361. $2.00.

Macmillan & Co. New York.

AN EXAMINATION OF THE NATURE OF THE STATE. By W. W. Willoughby, Ph. D. pp. 448. $3.00.

Benziger Bros. New York.

THE FOLLOWING OF CHRIST. By Thomas à Kempis. pp. 799. 50 cents.

American Baptist Pub. Soc. Philadelphia.

SONGS OF THE KINGDOM. By W. H. Doane. pp. 208. 30 cents.

PAPER COVERS.

G. P. Putnam's Sons. New York.

THE RULE OF THE TURK. By Frederick D. Greene. pp. 192. 50 cents.

THE THINGS THAT MATTER. By Francis Gribble. pp. 309. 50 cents.

Health Culture Co. New York.

YE THOROUGHBRED. By Novus Homo. pp 129. 50 cents.

Fleming H. Revell Co. New York.

THE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HOUR, WITH LIGHT FOR THE LEADER. By T. G. F. Hill and Grace L. Hill. pp. 63. 15 cents.

Thomas Whittaker. New York.

A DOUBTING DISCIPLE. By E. W. Gilman, D. D. 10 cents.

Examiner Co. New York.

ETHICAL MONISM: By A. H. Strong. 30 cents.

MAGAZINES.

February. NEW ENGLAND CONSERVATORY QUARTERLY.—BEREA QUARTERLY.

March SANITARIAN.—MUSIC.—QUIVER.—QUARTERLY BULLETIN OF THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.—GUNTON'S.—FISHERMAN.—PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL.

April. FRANK LESLIE'S POPULAR MONTHLY.

WASHINGTON HAPPENINGS.

BY L. C. W.

The early months of the year are the occasions for all kinds of conventions in Washington. Thus far the Historians, Friends of Indians, Foresters, Woman Suffragists, American Society for Religious Education, Daughters of the American Revolution and many others have come and gone. The lines on which these gatherings meet are very diverse, but they all focus towards Congress and a resolution or memorial is presented, or a hearing had before some committee before they adjourn. These are some of the bodies that attempt to shape legislation but not to force it, and are not at all the powerful and wily lobbyists who have brought that word into such ill repute.

The fifth Continental Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution was the occasion of much display of fine raiment and of ancient and honorable names. The first meeting was upon Ash Wednesday, but velvet robes and ermine capes did not exactly remind one of sackcloth and ashes, and the sense of humiliation was not oppressive. Mrs. Foster, the wife of the distinguished diplomatist, in her official capacity as president-general, presided. She is of rather commanding presence and has a clear and agreeable voice, but it soon became necessary to have a referee on parliamentary rules. A pleasant incident one morning was the presence of Mrs. U. S. Grant. As she was helped upon the platform—for she is rather stout and the feebleness of threescore years and ten is upon her—the audience rose and many of the Daughters waved their handkerchiefs. It was an ovation from the D. A. R.'s of the South quite as much as from those of the North, and I recalled what an ardent Daughter had once said to me, that the organizations founded on Revolutionary ancestry were doing much to break down sectional feeling.

For the moment the debate upon the Cuban resolutions is the absorbing topic. The President does not commit himself as yet upon Cuba or the third term. He takes an outing one week in New York, presiding at a meeting in the interests of home missions. The coldest, stormiest day of this week he spent down the river shooting ducks, and neither the ducks, the people who planned the meeting in the hope of a big collection, or the politicians are satisfied. The most stinging thing of which one Congressman can accuse another, these days, is to say that he is trying to help out the present Administration. But Mrs. Cleveland's popularity grows with each passing season. She is even more beautiful, more gracious and winning than when she first came to the White House. Recently, there and in other prominent homes, three only daughters of as many ex-Presidents have lunched or received together. Mrs. McKee, Mrs. J. Stanley Brown and Mrs. Sartoris are most agreeable young matrons, beloved for their own sakes, as well as honored for the thought of their distinguished fathers. Mrs. Sartoris and Mrs. Brown reside here, and Mrs. Grant and Mrs. Garfield are each passing the winter in Washington with their respective daughters. Mrs. McKee came some weeks since as the guest of Mrs. Foster, and is kept busy with a round of visits and social engagements.

The annual banquet of the National Geographic Society this year took the form of a reception to the Venezuelan Commission. The parlors and banqueting-room of the Arlington Hotel were beautifully decorated with flags, vines, clusters of palms and masses of flowers. It was a pleasure to pass down the line and greet Mr. Gardiner Hubbard, the president of the society. With him was Mrs. Olney, then came Mr. Justice Brewer, Judge Alvey and Dr. and Mrs. White. The learned gentlemen do not look worn out by their study of 300 different maps and the many treaties and written testimonies bearing on the Venezuelan question. One of the several gentlemen who made the introductions and are supposed to know every one stepped up to a fine looking, bald-headed gentleman and asked his name. "Mr. Stevenson," was the answer. His confusion at not knowing the vice president of the United States was matched by the regret of the lady who, on her way to the dressing-room, rode in the elevator with a be cloaked individual with a mass of fluffy red hair, and did not know till afterwards that it was Sara Bernhardt on her way back from the theater.

The Geographic Society numbers over 1,300 members and has been largely built up and fostered by the interest, financial and otherwise, of Mr. Hubbard. Among the several hundred guests at the reception were a number who have lectured before the society. The strong, stern face of Mr. George Kennan is a contrast to the captivating manner of his stately wife. He has told of his trip to Siberia and she of the time she waited at St. Petersburg. The rugged aspect of Major Powell does not indicate the wealth of poetry, philosophy and research that flows from his lips. Whenever he chooses he can take an audience with him to the cañon of the Colorado. Professor McGee has told of the curious people of Seriland. He, by the way, belongs to more scientific societies than any other man in Washington. The most thrilling story of adventure this winter was that told by Lieutenant Peary. It was a tale of dogged determination, of terrible struggle with cold and hunger and of defeat in a long-cherished purpose. The flag which he displayed has twice crossed the frozen ice cap of Greenland and been whipped by the gales of Independence Bay. In listening to him, one catches something of the enthusiasm that leads the explorer to court hardship and death itself in order that it may be said that the eye of man has looked upon every portion of the surface of this round world.

The Sons and Daughters of Maine flocked by themselves the other night and laid down the gauntlet to any other State to gather such an assemblage at the capital. The chief justice, president pro tem of the Senate, Speaker of the House, two ex-governors, the pastor of the First Congregational Church, these with their wives and five hundred lesser lights made up the gathering. Mrs. Frye and Mrs. Dingley were in the receiving line, the resemblance of the former to the late Mrs. Harrison is often remarked. Looking over the list of names one queries who is left in the Pine Tree State, and yet some visitor innocently asked Mrs. Frye the other day if her husband was new in Congress. Such is fame, even that of Maine's big statesman!

---

May we not say that even beyond death our life will be a traveling from home to home to the heart of the Father.—W. Robertson Nicoll.

ews from the Churches

Meetings to Come.

OSTON MINISTERS' MEETING, Pilgrim Hall, March 0 A.M. Address on Millstone or Stepping-stone, a for a Constructive Theology, by Rev. W. E. Bar- D. D.

OREIGN MISSIONARY PRAYER MEETING under the oices of the Woman's Board of Missions in Pilgrim , Congregational House, every Friday at 11 A.M.

NION BIBLE CLASS, conducted by Rev. Alfred A. ght, D. D., Bromfield Street Church, Boston, Satur- 3 P.M.

OSTON MT. HOLYOKE ALUMNÆ ASSOCIATION, Ho- Thorndike, March 28, social hour from 12 to 1 ock. Luncheon at 1. Mrs. Kathleen M. Phipps will an essay on Hawthorne's Marble Faun.

ONFERENCE FOR MINISTERS AND CHRISTIAN RKERS at Chicago during the month of April. Spe- lectures by Superintendent Torrey, Prof. W. W. ts and Dr. W. J. Erdman. All who desire to avail nselves of this special conference and stopping at Institute at the reduced price for board and room 5 per week should make application early of Supt. . Torrey, 80 Institute Place, Chicago, Ill.

SPRING STATE MEETINGS.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| bama, | | Saturday, March 28. |
| nessee, | Nashville, | Wednesday, April 1. |
| rgia, | Atlanta, | Wednesday, April 1. |
| ona. | Tempe, | Wednesday, April 8. |
| as, | Cleburne, | Thursday, April 9. |
| Mexico, | Albuquerque, | Wednesday, April 15. |
| Jersey, | Newark, | Tuesday, April 21. |
| homa, | Kingfisher, | Thursday, April 30. |
| souri, | Lamar, | Tuesday, May 5. |
| sas, | Lawrence, | Thursday, May 7. |
| , | Marietta, | Tuesday, May 12. |
| ana, | Michigan City, | Tuesday, May 12. |
| ois, | Aurora, | Monday, May 18. |
| a, | Davenport, | Tuesday, May 19. |
| achusetts, | Fall River, | Tuesday, May 19. |
| igan, | Greenville, | Tuesday, May 19. |
| York, | Canandaigua, | Tuesday, May 19. |
| th Dakota, | Pierre, | Tuesday, May 19. |
| nsylvania, | Ridgway, | Tuesday, May 26. |
| de Island, | Westerly, | Tuesday, May 26. |
| mont, | Bradford, | Tuesday, June 9. |
| necticut Asso., | Hartford, | Tuesday, June 16. |

Benevolent Societies.

HE CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY epresented in Massachusetts by the MASSACHU- TS HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY, No 9 Congrega- al House, Rev. Joshua Coit, Secretary; Rev. Edwin almer, Treasurer.

OMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION, Room 32, Congregational House. Office hours, 9 to 5. An- l membership, $1.00; life membership, $20.00. Con- utions solicited. Miss Annie C. Bridgman, Treasurer.

MERICAN BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR FOREIGN SSIONS, Congregational House, No 1 Somerset Street, ton. Frank H. Wiggin, Assistant Treasurer; Charles wett, Publishing and Purchasing Agent. Office in York, 121 Bible House; in Chicago, 153 La Salle St.

OMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, Rooms 1 and 2 Con- gational House. Miss Ellen Carruth, Treasurer; s Abbie B. Child, Home Secretary.

HE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION, Bible se, New York. Missions in the United States, evan- stic and educational, at the South and in the West ng the Indians and Chinese. Boston office, 21 Con- gational House; Chicago office, 153 La Salle Street.; veland office, Y. M. C. A. Building. Donations may ent to either of the above offices, or to H. W. Hub- d, Treasurer, 108 Bible House, New York City.

HE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY. hurch and Parsonage Building. Rev. L. H. Cobb, D., Secretary; H. O. Pinneo, Treasurer, 59 Bible se, New York; Rev. George A. Hood, Congrega- al House, Boston, Field Secretary.

ONGREGATIONAL EDUCATION SOCIETY.—(Includ- work of former New West Commission.) Aids four dred students for the ministry, eight home mis- ary colleges, twenty academies in the West and th, ten free Christian schools in Utah and New xico. S. F. Wilkins, Treasurer. Offices, 10 Congre- ional House, Boston, 151 Washington St., Chicago, Address, 10 Congregational House, Boston.

ONG. SUNDAY SCHOOL & PUBLISHING SOCIETY.— tributions used only for missionary work. Rev. rge M. Boynton, D. D, Secretary; W. A. Duncan, D., Field Secretary; E. Lawrence Barnard, Treas- r, Congregational House, Boston.

ASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF MINISTERIAL AID.— asurer, Mr. Arthur G. Stanwood, 701 Sears Building, ton. Address applications to Rev A. H. Quint, D. D., gregational Library, 1 Somerset Street, Boston.

INISTERIAL RELIEF.—In order to afford a little ely aid to aged and disabled home and foreign mis- aries and ministers and their families, the committ- of the National Council asks from each church one ndid offering for its permanent invested fund. It invites generous individual gifts. For fuller infor- tion see Minutes of National Council, 1892, and Year- k, 1893, page 62. Secretary, Rev. N. H. Whittlesey, w Haven, Ct.; Treasurer, Rev. S. B. Forbes. Hart- d, Ct. Form of a bequest: I bequeath to the "Trus- s of the National Council of the Congregational rches of the United States" (a body corporate char- ed under the laws of the State of Connecticut) (here ert the bequest), to be used for the purpose of Min- rial Relief, as provided in the resolution of the Na- nal Council of the Congregational Churches of the ited States at its session held in Chicago in October, 5.

HE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF PASTORAL SUP- Y, established by the Massachusetts General Associ- on, offers its services to churches desiring pastors or pit supplies. Careful attention is given to applica- ns from without the State. Room 22A, Congrega- nal House, Boston. Rev. Charles B. Rice, Sec.

HE BOSTON SEAMAN'S FRIEND SOCIETY, organized . Chapel and reading-room, 287 Hanover St., Boston. en day and evening. Sailors and landsmen welcome. ily prayer meeting, 11 A.M., Bible study, 3 P.M. Sun- y services, usual hours. Meetings every evening ex- t Saturday. Branch mission, Vineyard Haven. Is Congregational society and appeals to all Congrega- nal churches for support. Send donations of money B. S. Snow, Corresponding Secretary, Room 22, Con- gational House, Boston. Send clothing, comfort s, reading, etc., to Capt. S. S. Nickerson, chaplain, Hanover st. Bequests should read: "I give and be- ath to the Boston Seaman's Friend Society the sum $——, to be applied to the charitable uses and pur- es of said society." Rev. Alexander McKenzie, D., President; George Gould, Treasurer.

PASSING COMMENT.

In the offer of the students in several of r seminaries to address neighboring urches on missionary subjects we recog- nize one more force which will have an influence in bettering the outlook for our missionary causes. That these who will shortly man our churches are already inspired with that zeal which means so much in the pulpit may be interpreted as significant for the future.

At a recent birthday party of which we have heard, 9,000 pennies, one for each year, represented the aggregate of the ages of those present. Many delightful features may be introduced on these occasions and, as in this case, a snug little sum has often been easily realized by a C. E. or some other society.

There are at least two facts chronicled in a Maine item which all churches cannot report. That so many little folks attend the Sunday service is nearly related to the fact that the older attendants are not always dependent upon favorable conditions for their presence at Sunday worship.

A Rhode Island pastor, believing that if he wants the children at church he can have them, has adopted several modern attractive plans which seem to work well.

Of Special Note.

An effective spiritual movement in Georgia.

A Welsh festival in Pennsylvania.

Good reasons for large congregations in a Rhode Island church.

A thorough indorsement of free pews in Washington State.

Growing enthusiasm for Congregationalism around Boston.

NEW PASTORS IN CHICAGO.

Two of the suburban churches have now been supplied with pastors, Windsor Park and Pilgrim, Englewood. Rev. M. H. Lyon, late of Harvey, Ill., began his work with the Windsor Park Church March 15. He succeeds Rev. C. H. Grannis, who, in the four years of his service in this difficult field has accomplished a great deal and will be followed into any pastorate that may open to him with the love and confidence of those who knew him here. The church is the outgrowth of the wise oversight and self-denying service of Rev. G. H. Bird and his wife, of South Chicago, who, during his fifteen years in that manufacturing center, has shown how much more efficiently the bishop of a Congregational church can serve a widely scattered field, with a population of between fifty and seventy-five thousand, than a man with more ecclesiastical authority. For years the Windsor Park Church has been self-supporting and although for a long time the only evangelical church in the region it is now flanked by churches of nearly all denominations, some of them having crowded into a place which had no need of their presence.

Pilgrim Church has secured Dr. G. R. Wallace as the successor of Rev. Dr. Smalley, now of Jamestown, N. Y. The church has had a prosperous history and promises rapidly to increase its numbers under its new leader. For two years and more its services were held Sunday afternoons and were conducted by the writer of this letter, then pastor of the South Church, Chicago.

Dr. Wallace, who comes from Portland, Ore., is not a stranger in this region. Called to Oregon from Saginaw, Mich., where he had a very successful ministry, he had previously been an assistant of Dr. Gunsaulus in Plymouth Church, and still earlier had served as pastor of a Congregational church in Springfield, Ill., and in other churches in the southern portion of the State. The church occupies one of the most promising localities in Chicago. It is in the midst of a large, although somewhat changeable, population among whom church-going is not unfashionable.

Two young men, well known in Lutheran circles and successful, are soon to transfer their ecclesiastical relations to the Congregationalists. Rev. F. Grob, who was born at Holzgerlingen, southern Germany, of Pietistic parents, was educated abroad, served in the army and began his ministry in Switzerland, where, with an assistant, he managed to fill fourteen appointments every week. In Esslingen, Germany, with two assistants, he filled thirty-six appointments, preaching about ten times a week. Coming to Chicago at the request of friends he served a church belonging to the Evangelical Association three years, then went East, where in Baltimore, Newark, Trenton and Philadelphia his ministry has been uniformly blessed. The threatened divisions in his own church have induced him to take up work with us. He will begin his labors in Chicago under the auspices of the City Missionary Society. Rev. J. J. Klopp, now of Naperville, also a prominent minister connected with the Evangelical Association, has accepted a hearty call to the Bethany Congregational Church, and will begin his work there about the middle of April. He has had a thorough education and much experience in the ministry. FRANKLIN.

THEOLOGICAL SEMINARIES.

Bangor.

The Seniors have finished preaching before the class. They now each preach before Professor Sewall for private criticism.——Last Friday they presented estimates of preachers from Chrysostom down to Beecher, Brooks and other modern orators. ——Professor Ropes addressed the last missionary meeting on The Present Situation in Armenia.—— Professor Sewall spoke last Thursday before the Loyal Legion of the Commandery of Maine in Portland on Perry's Japan Expedition.

Hartford.

Last Wednesday afternoon in the chapel Miss Kingsley, daughter of the late Rev. Charles Kingsley, lectured on French Pictures and Painters of the Nineteenth Century. Many of the students were present.——The class in the study of India has successfully finished the assigned work.—— Next term there will be weekly mission study classes on The Four Principal Non-Christian Religions, using as a text-book Religions of the World, by Professor Grant of Queen's College, Canada, and on The Bible and Missions published in the Student Volunteer.——The Hosmer Hall Mission Band, composed of volunteers and those especially interested in foreign missions, has written to the pastors of the churches of Hartford and vicinity, offering to send students to deliver single addresses or series of talks on foreign missionary work at regular church services or before young people's societies or other organizations.——The winter term closes March 28. The vacation will extend to April 6.

Yale.

The missionary society was addressed last week by Field Secretary Washington Choate.——Rev. W. H. M. H. Aitken, missioner from England, addressed the university last week on Our Life Work, Within, Without.——At the Semitic Club the paper was on The Chronological Order of the Prophecies in Deutero-Isaiah.——The Leonard Bacon Club debate was on: Resolved, That a permanent board of arbitration be established between Great Britain and the United States.——Last Thursday evening at the residence of Professor Porter, Dr. G. A. Gordon gave a delightful talk on Robert Burns.—— The class in philosophy of ethics listened to a paper last week on The Nature of the Right.——Reviews before the class in systematic theology were given on Bushnell's Vicarious Sacrifice and Dr. Shedd's Essay on the Atonement.——The fortnightly address last week was by Rev. K. Tsunashima of Japan, a member of the Graduate Class, on Some Phases of Christianity in Japan. He presented his subject forcibly and eloquently. Mr. Tsunashima will return in June with Mr. T. Yokio for pastoral work in Japan.——Professor Harris's new book, God the Creator and Lord of All, will be in the hands of the publishers in a few weeks.

Oberlin.

Dr. Fairchild, after several weeks of illness, is again meeting his classes.——Mr. Z. S. Holbrook of Chicago delivered three lectures upon sociological topics March 10-12.——Professor Currier has begun a course of 12 lectures this week on Church Polity, which he offers every two years and which is to be followed by a moot council.——Last week Dr. A. H. Quint gave interesting lectures upon The Fundamental Features of Congregationalism and The Two Types of Early Congregationalism in Boston and Plymouth.——The students have recently refurnished Council Hall reading-room and last Friday evening held a "housewarming." About 50 guests were present and brief speeches were made.

Chicago.

A critical study of socialism, conducted by Professor Taylor, has brought some of the prominent socialists of the city before the class this term.—— Rev. David Beaton gave readings from the Bonnie Brier Bush and Auld Lang Syne at the Students' Conference last Thursday which were greatly appreciated.——At the inter-seminary banquet on Thursday the Baptist, Congregational, Methodist and Presbyterian seminaries with the Moody Bible Institute participated. Four addresses were given from student representatives of the seminaries.—— A large audience gathered to see a gymnastic exhibition under the direction of Mr. R. B Guild. The general exercises were of a high order.—— The Chicago Society of Biblical Research held its twelfth regular session last Saturday.

CONFERENCES AND ASSOCIATIONS.

N. J.—The Northern New Jersey Conference met March 17 with the Orange Valley church, with a large attendance. The reports from the churches were generally encouraging. The salient features of the meeting were: an earnest address from Rev. S. L. Loomis on Things Essential for Church Growth and Strength, a spiritual paper by Dr. J. M. Whiton on The Doctrine of the Lord's Supper, and a stirring missionary and humanitarian appeal from Dr. W. A. Farnsworth of Cæsarea, Turkey.

O.—The Lake Shore Association met in Cleveland, March 16. A brilliant young Jewish rabbi spoke on The Mission of Judaism. His address was in good spirit and received a respectful hearing. President Thwing of Western Reserve University followed with an address on The Mission of Christianity, and other addresses were given. The Ohio Home Missionary Society and the Congregational Club held meetings at the beautiful new Trinity edifice, where 225 sat down together at supper. Scientific thought filled the evening. Addresses by Prof. C. S. Howe on Recent Discoveries in Astronomy, and by Prof. F. P. Whitman on The Roentgen Rays, or the New Photography, were original and fresh, and were illustrated by stereopticon views. Dr. Thwing was elected president of the club.

KAN.—The Arkansas Valley Association met at Sterling, March 4–6. Rev. W. Davis preached on The Holy Spirit and among the topics were: The Relation of Our Churches to Sociology, The Sermon on the Mount and Economics, and Systematic Giving. The sessions on Sunday School Work and Home Missions were among the most important. Woman's Work in Missions, The Y. P. S. C. E., Washburn College, and The C. C. B. S. were subjects of much interest. The reports from the churches showed good spiritual progress amid struggles, in some cases, through failure of crops.

Wichita Association met at Douglass, March 2–4. Rev. J. S. Gould preached and the topic, How Can We Promote Greater Spirituality in Our Churches, elicited deep interest. Bible Study, Family Prayer, Personal Humility, and Constant Fellowship with Christ were dwelt upon as means to this end. The woman's missionary hour was finely arranged and sustained, and What Would Christ Do about Sabbath Observances if Here and The Boyhood of Jesus were among the topics. Fairmount College, Sunday schools and home missions were ably represented.

CLUBS.

MASS.—At its last meeting for the season, March 16, the Newton Club discussed Is the Kingdom of God Being Established Rapidly in the Earth? The leader on the affirmative was S. C. Darling, Esq., and on the negative E. G. Loomis, Esq. The speakers were formerly officers of the Boston Club.

PA.—The club of Pittsburg and vicinity at the March meeting was royally entertained by the church in Rochester. The topic, The Social Side of Christianity, was discussed by Rev. Messrs. H. M. Bowden, A. H. Claflin, J. H. Bausman and Mr. Thomas Addenbrook.

ORE.—The Oregon Club held a most enjoyable meeting at the Mississippi Avenue Church, Portland, Feb. 25. The singing by a chorus, under leadership of the pastor, Rev. H. W. Young, was excellent. A masterly and impressive address was made by Rev. W. C. Kantner, D. D., of the First Church, Salem, on The Pilgrim of Today.

CAL.—The San Francisco Club held the first meeting of the year in Oakland. The topic was Civic Duties, or What a Man Owes to the Town He Lives In. Prof. W. C. Jones of the University of California, Rev. Dr. Dille of Central Methodist Church, San Francisco, and President Jordan of Stanford were the speakers, considering the duties of the citizen, of the minister and of the teacher. About 150 persons were present, among them Mr. Sankey, who sang two of his best gospel hymns. A practical outcome was the donation of the proceeds, about $150, to the debt on the Reno church, the only Congregational church in Nevada.

The Worcester Club, March 16, observed ladies' night and, in spite of the storm, the attendance was large. The address was by Rev. E. L. Clark, D. D., of Boston on The Service of Things Beautiful.

NEW ENGLAND.

Boston.

ROXBURY.—Immanuel, with commendable denominational enthusiasm, is doing some church extension work that promises excellent results. The chapel on the corner of Blue Hill and Lawrence Avenues, built two years ago by the Reformed Episcopalians, has been leased and Sunday afternoon services have been inaugurated, Dr. C. H. Beale being the usual preacher. A Sunday school is to be another feature of the enterprise.

At the Ministers' Meeting last Monday Rev. C. E. Harrington, D. D., gave an address on The Millstone of Christianity, reviewing the article by Prof. Goldwin Smith published in the North American Review for December, 1895. He was followed by Pres. W. G. Frost of Berea College, who gave a résumé of the work of Berea in the past and spoke of its present needs and future possibilities. At the close of the regular program of the morning the time was extended to allow Miss Leitch to make an earnest plea against the reduction in the work of the American Board.

Massachusetts.

BROOKLINE.—A dozen gentlemen, most of them residents of the Reservoir district, met at the house of Mr. Albert Gay on Kilsyth Road last week Tuesday evening to consider the project of a new church. The meeting revealed a cordial agreement that such a movement is desirable, and the fact that there were present representatives of various churches—Shawmut, Union, Old South, Park Street and Berkeley Temple, Boston, and Harvard, Brookline—shows that the undertaking is to be on a broad and inclusive basis. It was felt that the Sunday afternoon services at the Casino, which have been going on for five months, should be continued, and a committee of seven was appointed to develop the enterprise in such ways as shall be approved by all interested. The field is one of the best in the vicinity of Boston, as it is filling up rapidly with a desirable class of residents. Situated about midway between Harvard Church and Brighton, it is in no sense a rival to either. The local ministers, almost without exception, indorse the movement, and men like Drs. Gordon, Barton, Webb, Little, Plumb and McKenzie are preaching from Sunday to Sunday.

BEVERLY.—Dane Street. After an earnest sermon by the pastor and full and prayerful discussion at the annual meeting, March 17, the church voted to give up the rented pew system and adopted free seats and voluntary offerings.

WORCESTER.—Union Rev. F. F. Emerson concludes his engagement as acting pastor, having served two years and a half.——Salem Street has accepted the resignation of Rev. S. A. Harlow and passed resolutions regretting that so happy a pastoral relation must be severed and commended his whole-hearted service. His retirement and that of the pastor of Union Church were necessary steps to clear the way for the churches to unite and leave them unencumbered in choosing a pastor. Both pastors have done excellent service and proved themselves men of superior scholarship and able preachers and pastors. They retire holding the confidence of their people and of the community.

PALMER.—The outcome of three years of work begun in the churches and taken up by a no license league and by a union effort of the young people's societies was the carrying of the town for no license. The pastor, Rev. F. E. Jenkins, is preaching a series of Lenten sermons Sunday mornings and Thursday evenings. This church has begun services in the old town center also and has organized a branch Sunday school with good success.

SPRINGFIELD —Eastern Avenue, Rev. R. H. Bosworth, pastor, rejoices in a quickening in spiritual fervor and activity. Evangelistic services have been in progress for nearly two weeks with the assistance of Rev. J. D. Potter. Over 50 persons requested the prayers of the church and a considerable number decided for Christ.

LENOX.—A beautiful memorial pulpit was presented to the church recently and was used for the first time March 15. It is in memory of Mrs. Jane W. Hill, long a member of the parish.

Maine.

FORT FAIRFIELD.—The regular congregations are large whatever the weather, and about 50 children attend the preaching service. The Sunday school occupies all the available room, and includes an adult Bible class in charge of the pastor, Rev. G. B. Hescock.

The trustees of the Maine Missionary Society met in Augusta March 17. The outlook is hopeful for the summer's work. Sec. D. P. Hatch has been successful in his labors and more work than ever is to be undertaken. Last year 118 churches and 12 stations were aided and 126 men and three women have been in service. Maine, with its large area and feeble churches in small places, is essentially a missionary field.

The late Mrs. E. C. Gates left a bequest of $1,000 to the church in Calais to furnish music.

New Hampshire.

MEREDITH.—During the last month three of the most hopeful districts have been regularly visited twice a week without regard to weather. As a result schoolhouses were packed, and 20 persons or more have made some manifestation of a desire to lead a better life. The spiritual influence of the movement has been very beneficial in the quickening of the church, and will result, it is hoped, in improved methods and greater permanency in the work.

WILMOT.—The church has recently contributed $15 to aid the suffering Armenians. It has met with great loss in the death of Deacon J. G. Stearns. Within a year the senior deacon, John Richards, died also. The C. E. library has been increased by the addition of 25 volumes.

RYE.—Rev. J. K. Aldrich, the pastor, closes his labors March 31. He was pastor during a former period, and now completes four years since his return.

Rhode Island.

WOONSOCKET.—Extensive repairs, costing about $3,000, upon the interior of the building are soon to begin. A large increase in the membership has occurred during the two and one-half years of Rev. J. C. Alvord's ministry. The largest Sunday evening congregation of the city is found at this meeting house, where free pews, plenty of wholesome entertainments and warm handshaking are the rule. The pastor's greeting at the door on Sunday evenings touches many of the Catholic population. His course of addresses on Christianity in Business Life has attracted many men. The majority of the members of the church are younger than thirty years. Mr. K. Der Kaspian has recently taken up the work among the several hundred Armenians in the city. By recent agreement of the eight denominational churches Wednesday night is the weekly church night.

CHEPACHET.—This church of 60 members has given $326 besides taking one share in the General Howard honor roll since last March. It has just passed its half-century birthday, but postpones its celebration until May. The closing of the mill plants caused the removal of some strong helpers among the families who had to leave the village, yet the congregations have kept their numbers. A unique feature is a union C. E. Society between this church and the Free Baptist church in the village, holding meetings alternately in each vestry. The usual attendance is 100 and often there are one third more, with keen interest at every meeting. Rev. F. J. Nash is pastor.

PROVIDENCE.—Free. Rev. J. H. Larry has been giving a series of sermons illustrated by the stereopticon on Heroes and Homes of Holy Lands. Large, growing audiences have been greatly instructed. A Good Citizenship Club holds bi-monthly meetings with good results. The "pastor's choir" of about 70 children, under the guidance of several young persons led by Miss Larry, an accomplished violinist, with an orchestra of eight pieces, is a large factor in the work.—— Pilgrim. The Men's Club is conducting a course of Monday evening lectures by distributing complimentary tickets, which admit the holders and allow the privilege of a voluntary silver offering at each lecture.

BRISTOL.—Rev. H. A. Stevens has withdrawn his resignation by request of the church. Fifteen years of faithful service have made the bond strong in his pastoral relation to the church.

CENTRAL FALLS.—Union evangelistic services with the Baptist church began March 15, under Evangelist C. L. Jackson.

Connecticut.

HARTFORD.—Glenwood. Active preparations are being made towards the erection of a church edifice. The church was organized in 1894 and since that time has grown rapidly. The house will probably be located near the hall which is now used for all the services.——Windsor Avenue. Rev. H. R. Miles, formerly assistant to Dr. T. T. Munger of New Haven, was installed pastor March 18. Mr. Miles tudied in Harvard, Yale and the Universities rlin and Halle, and promises to be a vigorous r in this prosperous church. The society has tly received a gift of a parsonage from two of embers.

NTON.—Annual reports show a successful 12 additions by confession, two by letter, ng the present membership 268—a gain of . A new feature is a Junior C. E. Society, bering 36. All the bills of the church are paid a surplus remains in the treasury. Benevos were $600 and current expenses and repairs 0. Pews are not rented, but for eleven years ly offerings have paid all bills. Rev. T. A. Em- is pastor.

W HAVEN.—United. Last Sunday evening the s Club service was addressed by Judge S. E. win on The Essentials of Christianity.——ard Avenue. Written examinations are re- d for promotion in the different grades of the day school, with highly encouraging results.

THERSFIELD.—This historic church is again pped for service, Rev. W. M. Baker of Billston, being installed March 4. Mr. Baker has been the church several months and it is already nding loyally to his leadership.

W PRESTON.—Rev. Evan Evans announced y a gift of $1,000 by Major Walter Burnham for nishing the Sunday school library. In the case s ceasing to exist this amount is to go to the day School Society.

UMBULL.—The church rejoices in the gift of H. L. Fairchild of a large and handsome din- and tea set, with silver knives, forks, spoons, and all the appurtenances necessary to com- e the equipment.

EST WINSTED.—Second. Rev. J. S. Voorhees, pastor, has been absent for 10 days on a south- trip for rest. The church has been recently kened by special meetings conducted by Rev. . Pope.

EENWICH.—Second. The Sunday school room ing enlarged and otherwise improved. A new ng is being put in and the walls redecorated. improvements will cost about $1,500.

OCKANUM.—The church now rejoices in its first alled pastor, Rev. F. B. Bacheler, the services rring March 10. A large congregation was ent.

ST HARTFORD.—First. The rededication of rgan took place at a special service March 15, r an enlargement by the expenditure of $1,200.

MIDDLE STATES.

New York.

FFALO.—The union gospel meetings now in ress among the Congregational churches have quiet and restful and pervaded by a spirit of estness. The exercises of the first week have especially addressed to those who are already stians and have proved a fitting preparation the weeks to follow. The services will be more gelistic in character from now on.

TICA.—Plymouth, Rev. M. E. Dunham, D. D., or, received last year 30 members, making the ent membership 285. The money raised was $4,000. The church is well organized, having, des a Y. P. S. C. E., King's Daughters and La- Missionary Society, Young Men's and Young nen's Associations, Zealous Workers, and Men's day Evening Service Club.

TCHER.—Rev. D. W. Bull has three fields in rge in addition to this home field. At one he aided in building a new edifice and he has been uraged by frequent conversions. Deep reli- us interest has encouraged preaching services ry night in Lincklaen.

AMDEN.—The family of Rev. Edward Evans, the pastor, has recently arrived from England, Mr. ns having preceded them by a few months. The rch has large congregations and is taking on life.

Pennsylvania.

LLEGHENY.—First received, March 1, the larg- accession in its history, save in one instance. rty-four members were welcomed and more are ected. This is the result of special meetings.

ITTSBURG.—First. The Ladies' Aid and Mission- Society is helping the church by an Eisteddfod, which four choirs compete for the chief prize. debt on the organ has been paid. Eighteen members have recently been received.

RANTON.—Plymouth. The young women re- tly gave a social for the benefit of the church, vious to which each earned a dollar for it, to the ount of $89. The church has recently sent aid to nenia.

ANDLING.—A reading-room, recently fitted up he basement of the meeting house, has awakened general interest. The church has recently paid $500 of its indebtedness.

PLYMOUTH.—Pilgrim. The church raised, last year, nearly $3,000, of which $1,800 have been applied on the debt for the church building.

PHILADELPHIA.—Park has made improvements in its chapel to accommodate the increasing congregations. The new pastor is Rev. C. B. Adams.

THE SOUTH.

Georgia.

ATLANTA.—First. A special interest has centered in this church, of which Rev. H. H. Proctor is pastor. The beginning is traced back to the Week of Prayer. Extra services were undertaken and more than 50 persons were converted. A second series was started and Evangelist James Wharton assisted. About 100 additional conversions were reported. The work extended outside and 40 persons at Storrs's School of the A. M. A., an auxiliary to this church, and 50 at Atlanta University professed conversion. Evangelist Wharton gave up his business in early life and directed his efforts to evangelistic labors, chiefly among the colored men. The spiritual uplift he has given the work here is of incalculable value.

Alabama.

MILNER.—Union Hill has recently completed, with the aid of the C. C. B. S., one of the most beautiful houses of worship in eastern Alabama. The people have struggled hard to accomplish what they have done. Services of dedication were held for two days, March 8 and 9, and a rich spiritual feast was enjoyed. Superintendent Bassett preached the dedicatory sermon. The prayer was offered by Rev. T M. Lindley, the pastor. A collection for home missions was taken at the dedicatory services.

Louisiana.

NEW IBERIA.—St. Paul's. This church, one of the strongest in the State, has been a mother church to this region. Rev. C. H. Claiborne has just closed a prosperous pastorate of over five years. He found the church partially scattered, houseless and discouraged. Its former pastor, Rev. Byron Gunner, had been driven away by a mob at the peril of his life, and the house of worship shortly afterward was reduced to ashes. Under the lead of Mr. Claiborne, a new and commodious edifice has been erected with the aid of the A. M. A., 146 members have been added, and a Senior and Junior Christian Endeavor Society organized with a total membership of 80. Mr. Claiborne goes to Corpus Christi, Tex.

THE INTERIOR.

Ohio.

CLEVELAND.—Trinity, at the communion service on the closing Sunday of its dedication week, received 22 new members, six on confession. Its institutional work begins at once, classes in vocal music, china painting, elocution and gymnastics having been already organized.——Pilgrim. The society combined its annual election of officers with a pledge social to which every contributor was invited and which was attended by about 500 people. A musical and literary program occupied part of an hour, detailed reports of current expense and building funds were submitted in printed form, officers were elected by printed Australian ballots and pledges were gathered for the coming year. Light refreshments were served after the business meeting. The plan was a signal success and the occasion was a fine expression of the loyalty and enthusiasm of the congregation. The church has free seats and all money is secured by voluntary offerings. Last year $29,358 were paid for the new building and over $9,700 for current expenses, making with other expenses a total of $42,223 for home expenses. About $4,700 were given for benevolences, making a total of money raised and paid by the church during the year of over $47,000.——Hough Avenue celebrated its fifth anniversary as an independent church March 18. Beginning as a mission Sunday school, within a little more than a year it became a branch church with 46 members. Within five years its roll has grown to a present membership of 392. The Sunday school celebrated with addresses and letters from former superintendents, and Sunday evening was devoted to a platform meeting on the topic The Spiritual Life of the Church. Wednesday evening a banquet was held, with addresses by Dr. H. M. Ladd, Rev. I. W. Metcalf and Rev. C. W. Carroll, the present pastor. The Ladies' Society presented the church with a fine piano as an anniversary gift. The church debt has been paid in full and plans are completed for a new stone building.

CROTON.—Hartford. During recent evangelistic meetings for three weeks, four persons were received to membership on confession. The church was discouraged formerly, but new life is now felt and the congregations are increasing. Rev. J. W. Dickson is pastor here and at Lock.

Michigan.

The people of Conklin, a town of 200 without any religious services whatever, have decided to organize a church and build a house of worship.

THE WEST.

Iowa.

CEDAR RAPIDS.—Bethany. A successful series of revival meetings has recently been held in which about 30 persons professed conversion, most of whom will become members. More room both for the congregations and the Sunday school is needed. The building is crowded regularly at these services. There is need also of an attractive place for the young men to spend their evenings. Rev. J. B. Gonzales is pastor.

Tabernacles are being erected at Cherokee and Waterloo to be used by Evangelist Williams in special meetings. That at the latter point will hold 3,000 persons.——The Montour Church has decided to come to self-support and will not ask home missionary aid the coming year.

Minnesota.

LYLE.—Five years ago the organization was practically extinct, being reduced to one member, a non-resident. The town abounded in saloons and had a rough population. Chiefly through the instrumentality of two or three men, not Christians, and the coming of an evangelist, the church has recuperated, pays a good salary, contributes to missions, is securing a parsonage and has transformed the community. It furnishes an excellent illustration of the power of Home Missions and of the need of perseverance under difficulties.

DULUTH.—Morley. Some time ago an effort was made to buy an unused edifice from the Baptists move it to a convenient location and fit it up for services. The plan fell through, then, but the prospect now is that the house will be purchased, moved and renovated with the aid of the C. C. B. S. The church has reached the limit of growth in its present quarters and the purchase of a larger building is a long step forward.

MINNEAPOLIS.—Mizpah. Revival meetings, Evangelist C. B. Fellows assisting, have been held, with several conversions and a quickening of Christians. The church is dependent for its attendance upon the workmen in the harvester shops, who remain for only a short time and then give place to others. Rev. M. A. Stevens has labored here with acceptance for several months.

SHERBURNE.—During a series of meetings held by Evangelist Tibbetts the meeting house was injured by fire and services were removed to one of the other edifices, both of which were gladly offered to this people. A large number of conversions are reported and the church is strengthened. Rev. C. E. Walker preaches at two or three out-stations, covering a large field.

EXCELSIOR.—A largely attended farewell reception was extended to Rev. T. A. Turner, the retiring pastor, who has accepted a call to St. Paul. Much enthusiasm is aroused over the coming of Mr. C. L. Mears of Chicago Seminary, who will commence work in May. This church was the second Congregational organization in the State and has been served by able men.

MANTORVILLE.—Rev. Howard Mudie has recovered from a brief illness and finds 40 persons ready to unite with the church upon confession, as a result of the evangelistic services held two months ago, with prospect of many others. He closes his work soon to remove to California. The church has been greatly strengthened by his two years' pastorate.

AITKIN.—By the coming of Rev. F. J. Brown this point is again supplied. A larger subscription has been raised for salary than for years and steps have been taken to secure an excellent building which will be deeded to the Congregational church and renovated by them. Mr. Brown will also care for the church at Mud Lake and for new work at Deerwood.

PILLSBURY.—Evangelist W. B. Frost is to supply here, and vigorous work will be commenced at Swanville, where the church has become almost extinct. Work is developing among the Swedes at Cauldrom, in the vicinity of this field, and a subscription is being raised for a house of worship.

PARK RAPIDS.—The loss of the pastor caused much discouragement, but an effort is being made to secure Mrs. Esther Smith, an ordained minister, the wife of Rev. J. H. B. Smith of Wadena. The immigrants pouring into northern Minnesota broaden the opportunity for work.

DAWSON.—Revival meetings have been held and a number of conversions have resulted, the church being greatly strengthened. This organization, depleted and discouraged a few years ago, has made marked progress and is the only English-speaking church in the community.

WALKER.—This new town in northern Minnesota, lying upon the banks of Leech Lake, is the terminus of the Brainerd & Northern Railway. Rev. H. W. Parsons has begun work and will visit other places in northern Minnesota.

Kansas.

WICHITA.—Plymouth. Fourteen new members were received March 1, making 44 accessions within a year. The present membership is 154. A debt of $400 on the church building has recently been paid. The Men's Sunday Evening Club has strengthened the evening service.——Fairmount has added 21 members during the past year, making a total of 50. Good audiences and prayer meetings and efficient pastoral visitation are giving the church a hopeful outlook. A member of Fairmount Church held revival services lately at Kechi, resulting in 47 conversions.

WELLINGTON.—The work prospers, notwithstanding reduction of population within a few years. The present membership is 90. The audiences are good at both services; average attendance at Sunday school is 70; prayer meetings are excellent and interest in missions is growing. The church is out of debt, except a few installments to the C. C. B. S.

VALEDA.—State Evangelist Veazie has just spent a profitable week here, speaking to large audiences and particularly helping the young converts of the recent extensive revival. He began meetings in Wallace March 12, and on returning eastward will assist the Brookville and Athol churches.

ARKANSAS CITY.—This church has 150 members, an average Sunday school attendance of 88, large and growing audiences, two flourishing Endeavor Societies and no debt except to the C. C. B. S. Nine new members have been received during the past year.

FAIRVIEW.—A rural church called Fairview Western was organized in Trego County March 1, with 34 members. It is the result of revival meetings conducted by Rev. I. M. Waldrop, who will serve this church in connection with Buffalo Park and Collyer.

LEONA AND HIGHLAND.—A contribution of relief goods was recently sent to a needy point in western Kansas. Union meetings in Highland during January resulted in over 100 conversions, and since then 38 members have been received.

HAVEN.—The people have a plan whereby a debt of $500 on the church building will be paid within a few months. The church is growing in numbers and in influence and expects to attain self-support at an early day.

VALLEY FALLS.—During the year just closed this church has received 11 members, expended $200 on its building and paid its only outstanding debt of $40. The audiences are large and spiritual interest is growing.

FREDONIA.—Twelve members were received Feb. 26. Revival meetings have been in progress in the town for eight weeks and have brought unprecedented unity to the churches and the community.

SOUTH BEND.—A recent revival has added largely to the membership. This church was established through the efforts of Rev. L. C. Schnacke, pastor at Great Bend, who ministers to both churches.

ALMENA.—The church has been strengthened spiritually by a recent revival, and another in the country district, where the pastor, Rev. R. F. Markham, also preaches, has awakened wide interest.

The prayer meetings at Udall are large, many coming from the country. The "roll of honor" plan works well in the Sunday school.——Sedgwick has a large Sunday school and Y. P. S. C. E. and is strengthening all departments. Good music is promoted by a chorus class.——The church in Kiowa has 110 members and is pushing its work. A home department of the Sunday school has been organized.—— Union revival services of the Congregational and Methodist churches in Brookville have resulted in conversions and a great increase of Christian fellowship.——Garnett is prospering, with large audiences and a steady growth in the usefulness and extent of its work.——A Junior C. E , with 50 members, was recently organized at Ellis.——Rev. D. H. Platt has returned to his field at Goodland, and received five persons to membership there March 8.——The church in Comet, Brown County, is enjoying a deep and wide-spread revival.——Rev. Nicholas Emmerson, who ministers to the Dial and Mt. Ayr churches, preaches also at Bloomington to good congregations.——Neosha Falls recently received six persons to membership and finds its audience-room too small for its prosperous and growing Sunday school.

The directors of the Kansas H. M. S. met at Topeka, Feb. 25, 26, to make estimates for the missionary churches for 1896–97. With great effort the appropriations were brought within the State apportionment. All the churches were provided for, either singly or in groups. Reports of progress from mission fields were cheering.

Nebraska.

FRANKLIN.—One of the best records for proportionate giving toward raising the debt of the American Board was by this church in an offering of $65. The people are taxing themselves severely to keep up the work of the academy, but are generously responsive to calls for work beyond their bounds. The pastor, Rev. G. W. Mitchell, is moderator of the General Association and led the movement at its recent meeting to raise $100 for the General Howard Roll of Honor.

LINCOLN.—First. March 15 was home missionary day. The pastor presented the subject in the morning and the appeal was to be followed at once by a private canvass of the whole congregation. The Sunday school and the Endeavor Societies will add their offerings to those of the congregation.

NELIGH.—As a result of the Hartsough meetings 41 persons became members of the church March 8. All departments of the work have been greatly quickened and strengthened by the revival movement. The pastor, Rev. J. F. Bacon, as well as the people, entered heartily into the work.

NORFOLK.—At the home missionary rally, March 15, all departments of the work were well represented and made offerings amounting to over $100, which were presented by persons selected by the different societies. Rev. J. J. Parker is pastor.

FREMONT.—March 15 was a day of rejoicing and ingathering. Fourteen persons were received to membership, 12 on confession, making 18 accessions since Jan. 1. Rev. W. H. Buss is pastor.

CLARKS.—This pastorless church has been supplied for the last three months by J. M. Kokyer, a graduate of the last class of Doane College, who is preparing for the ministry.

Oklahoma.

CHOCTAW CITY.—After several unsuccessful attempts to sustain a church the present organization seems likely to be permanent. There are 14 working members, all but one heads of families. At the midweek prayer meeting every one present takes part. The Sunday school attendance averages 35 and there is prospect of a house of worship in the near future. Four new members were received March 8. Rev. Hugh Atkinson is pastor.

North Dakota.

FORMAN.—Special services are being held here under the care of Evangelist Gimblett. The pastor, Rev. J. H. Kevan, has recently been called to Custer City in the Black Hills, but the church felt unwilling to release him because so deep a religious interest has sprung up in connection with the labors of Mr. Gimblett and, instead, voted to increase his salary $100 and to build a parsonage. Mr. Kevan is held in high esteem by the four churches under his care.

HAVANA.—A church of eight members was organized March 8 in this promising field by Supt. E. H. Stickney, assisted by Rev. J. H. Kevan, under whose labors it has been gathered. It will be yoked with the church at Forman under the care of one pastor. It is hoped that an edifice will be erected when another crop has been secured.

Colorado.

GREELEY.—Park has had a year of general prosperity. Despite the unusual scarcity of money the benevolences have considerably increased. A plan is also on foot to reduce the parsonage debt. Congregations have been excellent and the Endeavor and midweek meetings show signs of spiritual growth. Eleven new members were received in January and 20 at the March communion, more than half of them on confession. The church rejoices in the return of Rev. A. K. Packard, a former pastor and the builder of the present church edifice, to take up his abode here as a permanent resident. Rev. W. W. Dumm is pastor.

PACIFIC COAST.

California.

SAN FRANCISCO.—First. The council called by the church and its pastor, Dr. C. O. Brown, to examine into charges preferred against him has announced its result. The council does not find that the charge of immorality is sustained by the evidence presented. It finds that he used harsh and intimidating language to members of his church, for which the council censures him, while recognizing his frank and manly words of apology. The council declares itself not altogether satisfied with the reasons given by Dr. Brown for paying money to the woman who is now bound over for trial in the courts on the charge of blackmail and that it has been embarrassed in its efforts to ascertain the truth by the confessed falsehoods of one of the most important witnesses and the apparently significant absence of another. The council concludes its result as follows:

While we have felt compelled to condemn the acts now specified in our brother's conduct, it is our hope and prayer that the sharp lesson of recent months may be taken to heart by him and that in consequence his future years may be more fruitful than any in the past. It is especially our earnest hope that in the painful and divided condition in which this experience has left this loved and honored church, both he and its members may be led to such a fair understanding of their duty to each other and to the divine Master that the unity of the Spirit and of the bond of peace may be preserved here in the whole sisterhood of the churches.

At the corner of Ninth Avenue and H Street Superintendent Wirt organized, several weeks ago, the Cooper Sunday school. Since then a C. E. Society has been added and now preaching services are held, Mr. S. R. Yarrow, a student, officiating. It is hoped that ere long the thirteenth church in the city will be organized.

SANTA CRUZ —Rev. J. G. Taylor is holding Lenten services on Friday afternoons and Sunday evenings. On Easter morning there will be a special service for the Sunday school.

The year began with 204 Congregational churches in the State, 13 having been added to the rolls of the two general associations and five having been dropped. The accessions to membership were 2,479, 1,227 by confession. The net gain was 973, about 370 more than last year. The Sunday school membership was 20,087, a gain of 869. The C. E. Societies number 146, with 7,477 members. The benevolences of 191 churches were $68,332 and the home expenditures of 161 churches $204,190. There were 236 Congregational ministers, 137 in pastoral work. Fewer of the churches were pastorless than usual.

Oregon.

SHERWOOD.—This church was organized, Feb. 9, by Revs. J. M. and Dora R. Barber, with 24 members, and recognized by council Feb. 27. There is no other church within a radius of several miles save the Friends, who encouraged this organization to the utmost, showing in many ways a commendable fraternal spirit.

CLACKAMAS.—A beautiful lot for a meeting house site has been given, and the material is being gathered for a commodious building to cost $1,000, with prospect that it will be finished without debt. Rev. D. B. Gray of the Portland City Missionary Society is the leading spirit in the movement.

PENDLETON.— This pastorless church began a series of cottage prayer meetings with the Week of Prayer and has continued them most of the time since.

Washington.

SEATTLE.—Plymouth. The Sunday school, since the beginning of the year, has been divided into four distinct grades, each with its own officers, each held in a separate room and all under the management of the superintendent, Judge W. D. Wood. The school is growing rapidly under the new régime.

One who has been active in church work in Washington for the past 20 years vouches for the fact that no church of any denomination in the State is supported by pew rental, or otherwise than by voluntary pledges and contributions and such missionary aid as is needful.——Pilgrim Church, Spokane, has received the gift of an excellent library from the Harvard Church, Brookline, Mass.——A C. E. Society was recently organized at St. John.

WEEKLY REGISTER.

Calls.

BROWN, Frank J., Rose Creek, Minn., to Aitken and Mud Lake. Accepts.
CLAIBORNE, Cyrus H., New Iberia, La., to Corpus Christi, Tex.
CONLEY, Henry W., Ellsworth Falls, Me., to Robbinston and Red Beach. Accepts, to begin April 1.
CONRAD, Geo. A., Lake Preston, S. D., to Kingsley, Io.
CRAM, D. W., to remain another year at Staples, Minn.
CROSS, Allen E., Cliftondale, Mass., to Park Ch., Springfield.
EMBREE, John H., Linwood, Kan., to Butte and Spencer, Neb.
GIBSON, Jno., to remain another year at So. Kaukauna, Wis.
GILCHRIST, Howard H., Wilburn, Kan., to Kinsley. Accepts, to begin April 1.
HALBERT, Chas. T., Chicago Seminary, to Mecklinburg, S. D., for three months, with a view to permanence. Accepts.
HJETLAND, Jno. H., Yale Seminary, to Granite Falls, Minn. Accepts, and has begun work.
HOLLARS, Jno. A., Chicago, Ill., to White Oaks, N. M. Accepts.
JONES, G. James, Pres. Ch., Maywood, Ill., to Plymouth Ch., Springfield. Accepts.
LE BAR, W. H., Omaha, Neb., to Freewater, Hildreth and Wilcox.
MEARS, Chas. L., Chicago Seminary, to Excelsior, Minn. Accepts.
NEWTON, Geo. J., Beechwood, Mass., withdraws acceptance of call to Hopkinton, N. H.

LMER, Harry, Middletown, Ct., to Swedish Ch., Bristol.
ESTON, Wm. F., to remain at Onondaga, Mich., for the fifth year. Accepts.
NDALL, D. A., to Parker, Minn., for six months. Accepts.
EVE, J. C., to the permanent pastorate of Pilgrim Ch., Springfield, Mo., where he has been supplying. Accepts.
OD, Herbert H., Chicago Seminary, to Downer's Grove, Ill. Accepts.
HOLFIELD, Jno., Evansville, Wis., to Brantford, Ont. Accepts.
EINER, Dennis R., Alma, Kan., to Olathe. Accepts.
VENSON, Otto, Swedish Ch., Bristol, Ct., to Norwalk.
NGER, S. L., Wilcox, Neb., to Malta, Ill. Accepts.
ROOMAN, Frank B., Cambridge, Mass., formerly pastor of Salem St. Ch., Worcester, to Kenwood (Pres.) Ch., Chicago, Ill.
ALKER, Jno. T., Alpine and Walker, Mich., to Douglas. Accepts.
ALKER, Wm. S., to remain another year at Lunenburg, Mass. Declines.

Ordinations and Installations.

KER, W. Moulton, Wethersfield, Ct., March 4. Sermon, Rev. C. M. Lamson, D. D.; other parts, Rev. Messrs. J. H. Twichell, D. D., A. C. Adams, S. B. Forbes and H. H. Kelsey.
NG, Nelson F., and PEDERSON, J., o. Britt, Io., March 16. Sermon, Rev. N. F. Douglas; other parts, Rev. Messrs. T. O. Douglass, W. R. Stewart. The brethren ordained are from the Scandinavian department of Chicago Seminary.
ODRICH, Lincoln B., o. p. Union Ch., Marlborough, Mass., March 19 Sermon, Rev. C. L. Goodrich; other parts, Rev. Messrs T. J. Holmes, W. W. Jordan, F. E. Sturgis, A. J. Rackliffe.
LES, Harry R., Windsor Avenue Ch., Hartford, Ct., March 18. Sermon by Rev. Dr. T. T. Munger; other parts, Rev. Messrs. R. F. Wheeler, S. B. Forbes, J. H. Twichell, Joseph Irons, H. H. Kelsey.
TCHELL, W. T., o. Eaton, Col., March 3. Sermon, Rev. E. T. Bayley; other parts, Rev. Messrs. Packard, Bumstead, Blanchard, Thayer and Dumm.
RESTON, Marcus N., i. Hinsdale, Ill., March 12. Sermon, Prof. W. B. Chamberlain; other parts, Drs. H. M. Scott, J. G. Johnson, H. A. Bushnell, W. A. Waterman and D. S. Johnson.
RDIVAL, Wm., o. p. Jermyn, Pa., Feb. 19. Sermon, Rev. R. S. Jones; other parts, Rev. Messrs. D. M. George, I. T. Taylor and J. G. Evans.

Resignations.

LESEDELL, Jas., Pleasant River, N. S.
HAMBERS, Alex., not resigned at Prentice, Wis.
LT, Henry F., Eugene, Ore., to take effect May 1.
AND, LaRoy S., Postville, Io.
HNSTON, Jno. B., Malta, Ill.
YSLIN, Wm. R., Centerville, Mass., to take effect April 1.
AKSH, Geo. H., Osseo, Wis.
UDIE, Howard, Mantorville, Minn., to remove to California.
ENCE, Wm. H., Vermontville, Mich., to go to Oberlin Seminary.
ARFIELD, Franke A., Porter Ch., Brockton, Mass.

Dismissions.

EORGE, Edward A., Newport, Vt.

Churches Organized.

ELLEVUE, Wn., rec. March 17, 26 members.
AIRVIEW, Kan., Western Ch., March 1, 34 members.
NDIANAPOLIS, Ind., South Side, rec. March 16, 148 members.

Miscellaneous.

OSTWICK, E. D, after more than a years' service at Petaluma, Cal., is forced to retire from the active pastorate and go East for a four months' rest. He will be greatly missed.
ILDS, Edward P., of Ashland, Ore., was recently bereaved by the death of his wife, who left a motherless boy a few weeks old. After a month's vacation in southern California he returned and is now holding a series of revival meetings.
CDOUGAL, Wm. H., formerly of San Mateo, Cal., will serve the Pomona College Ch. at Claremont for the rest of the school year.
ASH, Chas. S., is gradually recovering from his protracted illness and hopes to resume duties at Pacific Seminary next term.
ULAND, Geo. W., of Staddard, N. H., has received from a parishioner a set of Clarke's Commentaries and several other valuable volumes.
YATT, Charles, of Burdette and Popejoy, Io., has sustained serious injuries in the wrists and head as the result of a fall from a building. Services are being held at present by his son, Mr. Frank Wyatt.

ADDITIONS TO THE CHURCHES.

| | Conf. | Tot. |
|---|---|---|
| CALIFORNIA. | | |
| erkeley, North, | 5 | 9 |
| scondido, | 5 | 9 |
| uerneville, | 18 | 19 |
| os Angeles, Third, | 3 | 4 |
| oquel, | 3 | 5 |
| acaville, | 3 | 7 |
| COLORADO. | | |
| enver, Villa Park, | — | 20 |
| reeley, Park, | 16 | 31 |
| rand Junction, | 6 | 6 |
| ard, | 17 | 17 |
| ILLINOIS. | | |
| lton, | 3 | 4 |
| lto Pass, | 20 | 20 |
| owen, | 23 | 28 |
| hicago, First, | 7 | 9 |
| allas City, | 4 | 5 |
| ray's Lake, | 14 | 14 |
| ora, | 5 | 5 |
| Berean, | 22 | 22 |
| INDIANA. | | |
| ndianapolis, Broad Ripple, | 3 | 18 |
| South Side, | — | 148 |
| ichigan City, First, | 4 | 12 |
| KANSAS. | | |
| unlap, | 10 | 10 |
| airview Western, | — | 34 |
| redonia, | 12 | 12 |
| oodland, | — | 5 |
| ighland, | 38 | 38 |
| eosho Falls, | — | 6 |
| arsons, | 16 | 16 |
| Vichita, Plymouth, | 14 | 14 |
| MAINE. | | |
| shland, | 1 | 3 |
| o. Gardiner, | 9 | 10 |
| MICHIGAN. | | |
| lpine and Walker, | 7 | 7 |
| dmore, | — | 20 |
| olverine, | — | 54 |
| NEBRASKA. | | |
| Creighton, | 9 | 11 |
| Curtis, | — | 4 |
| Neligh, | 42 | 42 |
| OHIO. | | |
| Cleveland, Trinity, | 6 | 22 |
| Penfield, | 3 | 3 |
| OREGON. | | |
| Astoria, | 3 | 3 |
| Oregon City, | 2 | 3 |
| Portland, First, | 3 | 4 |
| Hassalo St., | 5 | 9 |
| Sherwood, | 2 | 2 |
| Freewater, Ingle's, | 3 | 3 |
| PENNSYLVANIA. | | |
| Allegheny, First, | 44 | 44 |
| Coaldale, Tabernacle, | — | 13 |
| Forest City, First, | 10 | 15 |
| Pittsburg, First, | 18 | 18 |
| Scranton, Plymouth, | 7 | 7 |
| Tabernacle, | 6 | 9 |
| UTAH. | | |
| Ogden, | — | 3 |
| Salt Lake, Plymouth, | — | 3 |
| VERMONT. | | |
| Castleton, | 3 | 3 |
| Coventry, | — | 4 |
| WISCONSIN. | | |
| Madison, | — | 7 |
| Sheboygan, | 8 | 9 |
| OTHER CHURCHES. | | |
| Bellevue, Wn., | — | 26 |
| Cuoctaw City, Okl., | 1 | 4 |
| Eldon, Io., | 3 | 3 |
| Eldon, Mo., | 10 | 13 |
| Holabird, S. D., | — | 4 |
| Monroe, Ct., | — | 11 |
| Nashville, Tenn., Union, | 3 | 3 |
| Churches with one or two, | 15 | 27 |

Conf., 523: Tot.. 973

Total since Jan. 1. Conf.. 6,190: Tot.. 10,257

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR NOTES.

Gospel temperance meetings in a public hall are conducted by a society at Montreuil-sur-Bois, France.

The telegraph messenger boys, a new class reached by Christian Endeavor, constitute a society in Sheffield, Eng.

"Taking hold of the Lord Jesus Christ with a firm grip," is the expressive opening phrase of the pledge rendered in Telugu.

More than $1,000 for benevolence were raised last year by a young woman, the president of a society at Santiago, Chile.

A C. E. missionary meeting in a Missouri town led four persons to offer themselves for the foreign field, two being the pastor and his wife.

An improvement on the pledge plan of giving for missions was introduced in a Wisconsin society. All were urged to give one cent a week for home missions and one cent a week to foreign missions, and each one that took this pledge also promised to try to get at least two outsiders to make the same promise. As a consequence the society raised in one year nearly three dollars a member, on an average.

GENERAL HOWARD ROLL OF HONOR.

TO PAY THE HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY DEBT IN SHARES OF $100.

The First Cong. Church, West Hartford, Ct.
"M. E. C.," Bloomfield, N. J.
Rev. H. L. Chase, Minneapolis, Minn.
Ladies Union Meeting, First Church of Christ, New London, Ct.
First Church, Albany, N. Y.
Mrs. Hammond Brown, West Brookfield, Mass. (erroneously reported before).
Florida East Conference.
Woman's H. M. Society, First Church, Keene, N. H.
Rev. Barton W. Lockhart, by Ladies H. M. Society, Franklin Street Church, Manchester, N. H.
Mrs Peter McCartee, by W. H. M. Society of Church of the Pilgrims, Brooklyn, N. Y.
L. B. S. of South Church, New Britain, Ct.
Ellen Tyler Chapman, New London, Ct.
Sunday School of South Church, Middletown, Ct.
Mrs. Arthur E. Childs, Boston, Mass.
Old South Church, South Weymouth, Mass.
First Cong. Church, Great Barrington, Mass., two shares.
In memory of Mrs. Maria H. Clark, by High Street Church, Lowell, Mass.
Plymouth Church Sunday School, Worcester, Mass.
Mrs. Cynthia S. Campbell, Hartford, Ct.
First Cong. Church, Keene, N. H.
William S. Carter, Lebanon, N. H.
Westfield Cong. Church, Danielson, Ct.

Previously reported, 735; added above, 22; total pledges, 757.

Merit

Is what gives Hood's Sarsaparilla its great popularity, its constantly increasing sales, and enables it to accomplish its wonderful and unequalled cures. The combination, proportion and process used in preparing Hood's Sarsaparilla are unknown to other medicines, and make Hood's Sarsaparilla

Peculiar to Itself

It cures a wide range of diseases because of its power as a blood purifier. It acts directly and positively upon the blood, and the blood reaches every nook and corner of the human system. Thus all the nerves, muscles, bones and tissues come under the beneficent influence of

Hood's Sarsaparilla

The One True Blood Purifier. $1 per bottle.

Hood's Pills cure Liver Ills; easy to take, easy to operate. 25c.

Have a POTATO? 18 kinds choicest pedigree stock. Raised by expert on Canada Line. Lowest price in New England. Elegant Catalogue.
E. J. RANSLOW, Swanton, Vt.

SANFORD WATERS BILLINGS, A. M.,
SHARON, MASS.
PRIVATE TUTOR.
PUPILS RECEIVED INTO FAMILY.

AGENTS WANTED—To present to Christian people the grandest, best-selling book of the age. THE PEOPLE'S BIBLE HISTORY. Exclusive territory and attractive commissions given. THE HENRY O. SHEPARD CO., Chicago, Ill.

AN 1896 SUIT.

Josh Billings once said that he didn't care how much a man talked, as long as he said it in few words. In few words, then, let us tell you why some persons would rather have this Chamber Set than any other.

Do you see the size of the mirror? It is like a great panel framed into the side of a room. To those persons who value the effect of increased size which a large mirror always gives to a room, this Set needs no indorsement.

It makes a superb toilet glass, commanding a complete view of the costume. If you will get the market quotations on large mirrors you will see, by a little comparison and subtraction, that the rest of the set costs you scarcely anything.

The bedstead is a pattern of exceptional beauty. The carving and paneling of the headboard are very attractive. The set is quite inexpensive.

PAINE FURNITURE CO.,

48 CANAL STREET, BOSTON.

The Congregationalist's EASTER SERVICE.

100 Copies, postpaid, 60 Cents.

THE CONGREGATIONALIST, 1 Somerset St., Boston.

Not a Patent Medicine.

Constipation

is an actual disease with thousands. Cathartics give only temporary relief. The cause of the disease, some obscure nerve trouble, must be reached by a nerve tonic, one containing phosphorus, in order to obtain action upon the brain and spinal cord.

Freligh's Tonic

A Phosphorized Cerebro-Spinant

is the only tonic containing phosphorus, chemically pure, perfectly harmless, Prompt, concentrated, powerful. IT WILL CURE CONSTIPATION permanently.

Regular bottle, $1.00, 100 doses. All druggists, or by mail. Sample by mail, 25 cents. Descriptive pamphlet, formula, testimonials, etc., mailed to any address.

I. O. Woodruff & Co.,
Manufacturing Chemists,
106-108 FULTON STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

Formula on Every Bottle.

Financial.

Iowa Loan & Trust Co.,

of Des Moines, Iowa.

Capital, $500,000. Surplus, $335,000.

This old and reliable company has been in successful business operation for over 23 years, and has always met every obligation promptly at maturity.

Its Surplus is now larger than ever before, and the company continues under the same careful management. Its Debenture Bonds are amply secured by

FIRST MORTGAGES ON REAL ESTATE,

$105,000 of such mortgages being deposited for the security of each series of $100,000 Bonds.

Bonds in sums of $200, $300, $500 and $1,000 for sale by

FREEMAN A. SMITH,
Ex-Treasurer American Baptist Missionary Union,
Office, 31 Milk St., Room 22,
Correspondence solicited. Boston

7 PER CENT. NET.

First Mortgage Loans on Improved Farms in the Wonderfully Fertile Red River Valley

and in North Dakota and Minnesota. 20 years of experience in the business, and an actual residence of over 8 years in the Red River Valley and of over 22 in Minnesota and North Dakota. A personal knowledge of lands and values Loans only made to industrious, thrifty farmers, on well improved farms. I give my personal supervision to the business. Loans made in your name and interest coupon-notes and mortgages and applications sent to you and held by you. Interest collected by me and forwarded to you by New York Check. Funds now earning you only 2, 3, or 4 per cent. in Savings Banks will here earn you 7 per cent.—about doubling your income. Remit funds for investment by New York or Boston Draft, or by personal check payable to my order. Address

E. P. GATES,
2628 Portland Avenue, Minneapolis, Minn.

References: Nat'l Bank of Commerce, Minneapolis, Minn.; Importers and Traders Nat'l Bank, New York City.

WESTERN MORTGAGES

DEFAULTED AND OTHERWISE, Bought for Cash.

CHAS. E. GIBSON, 45 Milk St. Boston, Mass.

YOU SELL WE BUY

DO YOU WANT TO SELL A Western Mortgage

or Western Land—avoid foreclosure costs—stop sending good money after bad—get a good 5% investment instead? State exact location, condition of title, and your lowest price. Over $2,000,000 in Western securities successfully handled by the present management of this corporation

THE BOSTON REALTY, INDEMNITY AND TRUST CO

Send for our Bond List. 33 Equitable Building, Boston

YOUR MONEY

Is safe when invested in my Iowa Farm Mortgages. No loss for 22 years. Address

ARTHUR S. LAKE, Shenandoah, Iowa.

THE BUSINESS OUTLOOK.

General trade does not improve as it should. Many profess to see little encouragement for the immediate future. Seasonable weather has been backward. Collections are slow. There is money enough, but financial institutions are cautious and fear something unseen.

The frequency of commercial failures does not tend to allay this fear, and hence it is that only the best mercantile paper is easy to place.

The demand for iron, steel, cotton, woolens and leather shows little or no signs of improvement. Some grades of iron ore are lower, and ginghams and print cloths are selling at prices where there are losses instead of profits to many of the mills. The wholesale clothing trade is depressed by heavy stocks carried over, which have not been worked off despite the announcement of "bargains" and cuts in prices.

Exports of wheat last week were exceptionally small, but those of corn heavy. The bank clearings for the past week reflect the moderate movement of trade, being $976,000,000, only two and a half per cent. more than the third week of March last year. Railroad earnings, while showing some increase, do not show as large gains as were expected at this season.

In the stock market dullness has ruled supreme.

BIOGRAPHICAL.

REV. JOHN E. PIERCE.

Mr. Pierce, formerly for nearly a quarter of a century a missionary of the American Board among the Armenians, suddenly died at his home in Monmouth, Me., March 13. He was born in that town in 1838, graduated from Bowdoin College in 1862 and from Bangor Theological Seminary in 1868 and sailed the same year as a missionary to Eastern Turkey, taking up his residence in Erzroom. Later he was transferred to Nicomedia and again to Bardezag, where he labored until he returned to his native town in 1890.

REV. JOHN W. COLWELL

Died at Barrington, R.I., March 20, at the age of 49. He was a native of Providence, a graduate of Brown University, 1872, and of Andover Seminary, 1875. His previous pastorates had been at West Concord and Pittsfield, N. H., and over the Rockville Church in Peabody. He had been the useful and beloved pastor at Barrington since 1887. Mr. Colwell was a modest, unassuming man but genuine and true and always firm and faithful on the side of whatsoever was honest and just and pure. He left a widow and three sons.

FOR coughs, asthma, and throat disorders, "Brown's Bronchial Troches" are an effectual remedy. Sold only in boxes.

WE would call attention to the spring opening of fine millinery at the store of William S. Butler & Co., on Tremont Street, this week. The display is one of the most elaborate ever made in Boston.

BE FOREHANDED.—All people realize before the summer is half over that if they had only started with their gardens a little sooner and been a little more prompt in their planting they would obtain much better results. The good resolutions made each year that they will begin promptly the next are always forgotten. Something continually comes up, the season seems to be backward and almost every one will procrastinate, and the result is that spring and then summer is well upon us before we realize that our seed should have been in the ground several weeks before. Why not this year turn over a new leaf? Begin at once. Make your plans how you will have your garden laid out and what seeds you intend to plant. There is no way to do this and be sure it will be done right so effectually as to write to Messrs. Joseph Breck & Sons and ask them to send their 1896 Seed and Agricultural Implement Catalogue. This book, which is of universal value to every one, will be mailed free upon request. They have published it for 1896 and, with its 170 beautifully illustrated pages, its carefully arranged index and its useful information concerning the care of plants of every description, it is indeed an authority which will be turned to every week of the year. The book also contains both common and proper names of all plant life, a point which will be appreciated by many.

Drs. Maybe and..... Mustbe.

You choose the old doctor before the young one. Why? Because you don't want to entrust your life in inexperienced hands. True, the young doctor may be experienced. But the old doctor must be. You take no chances with Dr. Maybe, when Dr. Mustbe is in reach. Same with medicines as with medicine makers — the long-tried remedy has your confidence. You prefer experience to experiment—when you are concerned. The new remedy may be good — but let somebody else prove it. The old remedy must be good — judged on its record of cures. Just one more reason for choosing AYER'S Sarsaparilla in preference to any other. It has been the standard household Sarsaparilla for half a century. Its record inspires confidence — fifty years of cures. If others may be good, Ayer's Sarsaparilla must be. You take no chances when you take AYER'S Sarsaparilla.

Your Easter Hat

Will Be Becoming

As well as stylish if made by our Millinery experts. That is a very important consideration to you as a woman of taste. It will also be exclusive in design, and trimmed in accordance with the latest dictates of Fashion.

Our prices are the lowest possible for high grade work.

Our display of Spring Millinery—Trimmed and Untrimmed Hats, Flowers and Ornaments—is the most elaborate ever made in Boston. A rare treat awaits you.

Wm. S. Butler & Co.,
The Leading Millinery House,
TREMONT & BOSWORTH STREETS,
BOSTON.

The Pleasures
of the Dining Table are determined by the character of the silverware.

STERLING SILVER INLAID
Spoons and Forks are always clean and bright, no worn spots on the back of the bowls and handles. Guaranteed 25 years. Fancy pieces in our special quality are stamped
Holmes & Edwards XIV

THE
Holmes & Edwards Silver Co
Bridgeport, Conn.
New York Salesroom,
2 Maiden Lane,
Second Door from Broadway

THE GLORY EVEN OF ITS ANCIENT NAME AND LONG YEARS OF POPULARITY IS EXCELLED BY MODERN MECHANICAL SCIENCE ◦◦ THE UP-TO-DATE POINTS OF PERFECTION OF

THE WARWICK

MAKE IT THE BICYCLE OF ALL MOST SATISFACTORY AND TO BE DESIRED.
It's motto always has been and is, "BUILT ON HONOR."
IF THE RIMS ARE VERMILION, IT'S A WARWICK ~ CATALOGUE FREE
WARWICK CYCLE M'F'G. CO. SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Columbus Ave., Boston, and 34 Union Sq., N. Y.

KNICKERBOCKER.

No more round shoulders. Shoulder Brace and Suspender combined. Easily adjusted. Worn with comfort. Sizes for men, women, boys and girls. Sold by druggists, appliance stores, general stores, &c. By mail $1 per pair ($1.50 silk). Send chest measure around body under arms. Circulars free. Address

KNICKERBOCKER BRACE CO., EASTON, PENN., U. S. A.

Well dressed men wear shirts made of Pride of the West muslin.

WOMAN'S BOARD PRAYER MEETING.

CONGREGATIONAL HOUSE, BOSTON, MARCH 20.

The meeting was led by Mrs. A. L. Loder, who brought what she believed was a God-given message which appealed to many hearts: "If two of you shall agree on earth as touching anything that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in heaven." There are empty treasuries in the benevolent societies of different denominations because of lack of consecration in the churches and of spiritual poverty. We need to pray for more than the missionaries. Let us look through others' eyes, our outlook to be as broad as our inlook is deep. The present curtailment in appropriations is not due to the poverty of our people, as is seen by a glance at the elegant meeting houses, beautiful homes, costly array and expensive entertainments, which are so common.

We have heard how easily Professor Garner secured the means to go to Africa to try to find out whether monkeys have a language. Yet there is dearth of money for those who carry the life message to immortal souls. Mrs. Holbrook of the Zulu mission, in speaking of missionary life in Africa, once said: "There is no compensation for the indifference of the people at home concerning the people of Africa." The churches are composed of ministers and people, pastors and congregations, and the responsibility rests with neither side alone. It sometimes requires more courage to receive the Word of God than to speak it.

A UNIQUE SET.—Not often is the opportunity offered to secure such a chamber set as that shown in another column by the Paine Furniture Company. The immense mirror in this set is like a great panel in the side of the room. The fortunate possessor of such a suit as this does not need to purchase a cheval glass, or even a toilet table, for both are practically included in this one glass.

DR. ROBERT HUNTER of New York has just completed a half-century as a practicing physician. Graduating from the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York in 1846, Dr. Hunter has for forty years been the sole exponent of the germ theory of consumption. He became one of the first consumptive specialists in this country, and has been engaged in active research in this field for over fifty years. In 1855 he was editor of Hunter's Medical Specialist and Journal of Diseases of the Chest, which had for its motto, "The cultivation of a spirit of free inquiry," an able contribution to this branch of medical literature. He is also the author of Principles and Practice of Inhalation and of numerous small books concerning consumption and its treatment. He is unquestionably a leader in scientific investigation of this disease. He adopted the germ theory of Martin, Baron Carmichael and Lanza in 1851 after a thorough investigation, and has since then successfully maintained it as the only doctrine that embodied the true cause of consumption. This germ theory is now accepted quite widely throughout the world.

take the law in your own hands, ladies, when you ask for

S·H·&M·
REGISTERED TRADE MARK.

Bias Velveteen Skirt Binding

and don't get it. Sentence such a store to the loss of your trade and give it to merchants who are willing to sell what you demand.

Look for "S. H. & M.," on the Label, and take no other.

If your dealer will not supply you we will.

Send for samples, showing labels and materials, to the S. H. & M. Co., P. O. Box 699, New York City.

Comfort in Bicycling

In every part a bicycle must be adjustable so as to fit the varying conditions of human anatomy. No bicycle so fully meets this requirement as the

Columbia Bicycle

STANDARD OF THE WORLD

Columbia saddles are the standard of comfort, and the Columbia adjustable handlebar is the standard of rigid, quick-adjusting completeness.

Columbias in construction and quality are in a class by themselves.

$100 to all alike

POPE MANUFACTURING CO., Hartford, Conn.

Many of the Columbia merits are described in the superb Columbia Catalogue. The book also tells of Hartford bicycles, $80, $60, $50, next best to Columbias. Ask the Columbia agent for it, or send two 2-cent stamps to us for postage.

Embroidery Collars

New, Chic, Stylish.

Can be worn with any style dress. Made of the most exquisite embroideries, at three prices—

$1.00,

$1.25 and $1.50—the same qualities are selling generally for $2.00, $2.25 and $2.50. Postage prepaid. Money refunded, if desired.

Strawbridge & Clothier.
Dry Goods. Philadelphia.

Quick as a Flash!

WHITMAN'S INSTANTANEOUS CHOCOLATE.

HOW TO USE IT. Take three dessert spoonfuls to a cup of boiling water or milk. Stir briskly a moment, and your Chocolate is ready to serve. Put up in 1 lb. and ½ lb. tins.

Stephen F. Whitman & Son, Sole Mfrs., Philadelphia.

HOOPING COUGH CROUP

Can be cured by using

ROCHE'S HERBAL EMBROCATION

The celebrated and effectual English cure, without internal medicine. W. EDWARD & SON, Props., London, Eng. Wholesale, E. FOUGERA & CO., New York

YALE HONORS ANOTHER BACON.

Rev. Benjamin W. Bacon, D. D., of the Congregational church of Oswego, N. Y., has accepted the invitation of the Divinity School of Yale University to give instruction in the department of New Testament criticism and interpretation for the seminary year 1896–97. This chair was made vacant by the transfer of Prof. George B. Stevens to that of systematic theology. President Dwight has been lecturing on this subject during the present year.

Dr. Bacon is the son of Dr. Leonard Woolsey Bacon of Norwich and the grandson of old Dr. Leonard Bacon of Yale. He was born in 1860 and spent his boyhood until 1877 in Germany and Switzerland. He graduated at

REV. BENJAMIN W. BACON, D. D.

Yale College in 1881 and at the Divinity School in 1884. While at Yale he took many honors and prizes, and will be remembered, too, as full-back on the college eleven.

From 1884 to 1889 he was pastor of the First Church at Old Lyme, Ct., and from 1889 to the present time at Oswego. He was married in 1884 to Eliza Buckingham Aiken of Norwich, granddaughter of the famous war governor.

Dr. Bacon is chiefly known through the results of his studies in Old Testament criticism. His chief work is The Genesis of Genesis, which appeared in 1891, and which Dr. Budde of Strasburg pronounced superior to anything on the subject in German and Dr. Harper the best in English. This was followed in 1893 by The Triple Traditions of the Exodus.

Besides these Dr. Bacon has translated many works from the German, among them some of the critical works edited by Dr. Paul Haupt of Johns Hopkins. He has lectured at Smith College, Syracuse University and at the recent Cleveland Summer School of Theology. He has also been a frequent contributor to current theological magazines.

While Dr. Bacon is thus far best known for his Old Testament work, this has not been his chief study. He regarded this as the best approach to the synoptic problem. His most recent work has been in the New Testament field. He received the degree of M. A. from Yale in 1892, D. D. from Western Reserve in 1893 and Lit. D. from Syracuse in 1895.

The name of Bacon stands for much at New Haven and Yale, and the fortunate heritage of the new instructor will add to the welcome with which he would be received because of his scholarly work and great promise.

C. S. M.

Too Tired to Sleep.
Take Horsford's Acid Phosphate.
The weariness from brain work and nervous excitement is the most enervating fatigue there is. Horsford's Acid Phosphate quiets the nerves and induces sleep.

ARMSTRONG & McKELVY Pittsburgh.
BEYMER-BAUMAN Pittsburgh.
DAVIS-CHAMBERS Pittsburgh.
FAHNESTOCK Pittsburgh.
ANCHOR, ECKSTEIN } Cincinnati.
ATLANTIC, BRADLEY, BROOKLYN, JEWETT, ULSTER, UNION } New York.
SOUTHERN, SHIPMAN } Chicago.
COLLIER, MISSOURI, RED SEAL, SOUTHERN } St. Louis.
JOHN T. LEWIS & BROS. CO Philadelphia.
MORLEY Cleveland.
SALEM Salem, Mass.
CORNELL Buffalo.
KENTUCKY Louisville.

MONEY IS MADE by saving it, and there is no better way to save it than in preserving your buildings by having them well painted with Pure White Lead and Pure Linseed Oil. They cannot be well painted with anything else. To be sure of getting examine the brand (see list genuine brands). For colors use NATIONAL LEAD CO.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors; they are the best and most permanent; prepared expressly for tinting Pure White Lead.

Pure White Lead

Pamphlet giving valuable information and card showing samples of colors free; also cards showing pictures of twelve houses of different designs painted in various styles or combinations of shades forwarded upon application to those intending to paint.

NATIONAL LEAD CO.,
1 Broadway, New York.

REMEMBER that no Stocking will wear well or look well that does not fit well.

THE Shawknit IS THE Best-Fitting
IT IS THE ONLY STOCKING THAT IS KNITTED TO THE SHAPE OF THE HUMAN FOOT
THE TRADE-MARK Shawknit IS STAMPED ON THE TOE.

Descriptive Price-List, free, to any applicant.
Beautiful Castle Calendar, free, to any applicant mentioning this publication.

Shaw Stocking Co.
LOWELL, MASS.

GLENWOOD RANGES
MAKE COOKING EASY.
THREE GOLD MEDALS.
WEIR STOVE COMPANY, TAUNTON, MASS.
Agents in All Prominent Cities and Towns in New England.

STEARNS BICYCLES
(The Yellow Fellow)
Handsome Catalogue Mailed Free
The Stearns is a modern wheel of advanced construction. Lightest, strongest and lasts the longest. The '96 Stearns surpasses all former models.
E. C. Stearns & Co., Syracuse, N. Y.

BURPEE'S SEEDS, Philadelphia
A postal card addressed as above will bring you BURPEE'S FARM ANNUAL for 1896, if you intend to purchase Seeds, otherwise the price is ten cents (less than cost). It is a bright BOOK of 184 pages, with hundreds of illustrations and colored plates painted from nature. It tells all about the BEST SEEDS that Grow!

THE OLDEST RELIGIOUS PAPER.

We don't suppose it is of much consequence the general public which is the oldest religious newspaper in the world. No one positively knows except The New York Observer nd ourselves. The Observer knows that it is e oldest and we know that The Congregationalist is the oldest. The dispute over the atter waged hotly more than forty years ago nd has broken out afresh from time to time er since. We have before us a large volne of clippings from many newspapers which ave taken a hand in the discussion. The bserver admits that The Boston Recorder is the dest religious newspaper in the world, but ys that at the time of the consolidation of he Congregationalist and Recorder "the latter aper ceased to be." If that is so, neither the ecorder nor its readers knew when it died, r weekly issues, as its files show, continued appear right along with that name in as rge type as the other, and we have no doubt at for years the consolidated paper was lled The Recorder as often as The Congregationalist. The name at last disappeared from e title-page for the sake of brevity, but thing connected with the paper died, so far we know. We still hold the proprietary ght to the name. If it pleases our honored ntemporary to think that the senior friend its youth died May 4, 1867, we would not sturb its contemplations. We feel just as uch alive as though The Observer had not sisted on The Recorder's obituary. We all go on as usual labeling ourselves Vol. XXXI., and look with mild protest on our nior contemporary for its audacity in insting that one part of us died while we were ot conscious of it. May we never have a ore serious difference than this with a paper as noble a history and as valuable a life as he New York Observer.

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Eight primary unions have adopted the State rmal course since the new year opened, and veral report marked interest.

At Middleboro a primary union was organized eb. 14 to meet Friday afternoons in the Congregonal church parlors. It is conducted by members rotation.

As a result of the recent district convention in ynn a union Bible class has been established hich meets Monday evenings in the Y. M. C. A. ilding. It is conducted by Rev. Robert Cameron.

Stoneham has a primary union organized Feb 24, hich meets Monday evenings in the Methodist piscopal meeting house. They have invited priary teachers in adjoining towns to unite with em.

Thirty-three States outside of New England will entitled to an average of thirty-three delegates ch in the International Convention next June. ven of the smaller or new States and Territories ill have one to seven each and the nine provinces ill be entitled to 139.

The First Methodist Episcopal church of Lynn s increased its efficiency by the use of a series of ur seals placed upon a screen opposite the numrs of the classes which have: all the class present the opening, an offering of two cents or more om each member, one new scholar and a half ur study of the lesson during the week by each pil.

The Union school of Providence has placed e entire Easter service in the hands of the nday school and music committees of the C. E. ciety. A model half-hour C. E. prayer meeting as recently conducted at the opening of the hool and a social for the whole school held the me week under the direction of the C. E. committes, with the co-operation of the superintendent.

Chelsea district, comprising also the schools of evere and Winthrop, held its first meeting Feb. , in the First Congregational Church, Chelsea. ev. G. H. Clarke conducted a normal lesson, Rev. R. Swett gave an address on Denominationalism nd Inter-denominationalism, Rev. A. E. Dunning, D., on Our Relations, State and District, and Rev. T. Perrin on Wanted, Christian Workers Who e Visions. A children's hour brought several ndred primary scholars together, and teachers' nferences were conducted by the State secreries.

HOME MISSIONARY FUND.

We need further contributions to this fund both for the old names on our list and for new applications.

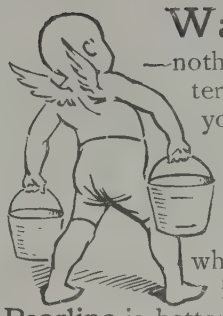
ONE OF MANY LETTERS.

SOUTH DAKOTA, Jan.—, 1896.

Again a year has closed during which you have sent me The Congregationalist from your mission fund. I heartily thank both you and the friend who subscribed for me. I have enjoyed and profited by the reading, and recognize with pleasure the great improvement that your paper has made. I would subscribe for it myself if I could, but I cannot spare the money. Of course I cannot expect to receive it free any longer and I don't wish to run in debt, so please discontinue it, and oblige.

| | |
|---|---|
| Mrs. C. M. Nay, Cambridgeport | $4.00 |
| Miss E. G. King, Danville, N. Y. | 2.00 |
| Cash, Peabody | 2.00 |
| E. M. Smith, North Hampton, N. H. | 2.00 |
| Miss C. F. Merian, Worcester | 2 00 |
| E. W. Southworth, Springfield | 7.00 |
| Mrs. William Brason, Worcester | 2.00 |
| Julia B. Hale, Norwood | 2.00 |
| Mrs. J. W. Whitaker, Arlington | 4 00 |
| Miss J. W. Crosby, Chaplin, Ct. | 2.00 |
| A Friend, Lawrence | 2.00 |
| W. H. Cummings, Meriden, N. H. | 2.00 |
| A Friend, Wellesley | 4.00 |
| Deacon Eben Peabody, Danvers | 2.00 |
| A Friend, Walton, N. Y. | 2 00 |
| Julia S. Morrill, La Grange, Ill. | 2.00 |
| Rev. N. W. Williams, Providence, R. I. | 2.00 |
| Mrs. George Roberts, Sr., Hartford, Ct | 2.00 |
| Miss S. M. Duncklee, Newton | 2 00 |

If there is any further desire for the leaflet A Month with Jesus—the reprint of an article published in The Congregationalist recently—it can be obtained by writing to Miss Bridgman, 9 Shailer Street, Brookline, Mass., instead of, as heretofore, to Mrs. Slauson, Piqua, O. Nineteen States have thus far been represented in the calls for the leaflet. Twenty-five copies will be sent for a two cent stamp.



Water —nothing but water. That's all you need with Pearline. Don't use any soap with it. If what we claim is true, that Pearline is better than soap, the soap doesn't have a chance to do any work. It's only in the way. Some soaps cause trouble—and you lay it to Pearline. You'll never get Pearline's very best work till you use it just as directed on the package. Then you'll have the easiest, quickest, most economical way of washing and cleaning. 477

Millions NOW USE Pearline

NEW MAMMOTH POULTRY GUIDE showing colored plate of chickens in natural colors. Finest book ever published. Almost 100 pages. Tells all about Poultry for Profit or Pleasure. Price only 15c. JOHN BAUSCHER, JR., Box 262, Freeport, Ills.

Take a Combination Case of the

LARKIN SOAPS

and a "Chautauqua" Reclining Easy Chair or Desk

ON THIRTY DAYS' TRIAL.

CASE CONTAINS . . .

100 Bars Sweet Home Soap. 10 Bars White Woolen Soap.
9 Packages Boraxine. 18 Cakes Finest Toilet Soaps.
Perfumes, Cold Cream, Tooth-Powder, Shaving Soap.
If changes in contents desired, write.

The Soaps at retail would cost $10.00
Either Premium is worth . $10.00
Both if at retail . . . . $20.00

From factory to family, Both $10.

AND ON THIRTY DAYS' TRIAL. IF SATISFIED, YOU REMIT $10.00; IF DISAPPOINTED, HOLD GOODS SUBJECT TO OUR ORDER.

The Larkin Soap Mfg. Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Our offer explained more fully in The Congregationalist, Nov. 14, 21, and 28.

NOTE.—The combination offer of the Larkin Soap Manufacturing Co., although unusually generous, is genuine. From personal inspection of factory and experience with their goods and premiums we know that they are all that is claimed for them and can heartily recommend them.—The Christian Work, New York.

NOTE.—The publisher of the Assembly Herald has inspected the goods and premiums as above described and know they give satisfaction, he has personally visited the works of the Larkin Co., and know that they are reliable in every way and fulfill all promises as advertised.—Assembly Herald, Auburn, N. Y.

600 Ministers

ENDORSE

Dr. Warren's Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla Troches.

Rev. R. H. Howard, Millbury, Mass.: "I cannot keep house without them."
Rev. Jos. Greenleaf, New Canaan, Ct.: "Have never failed of removing an annoying cough."
Rev. H. S. Parmalee, E. Canaan, N. H.: "Superior to anything I ever used."
Rev. W. H. Dowden, W. Hanover, Mass.: "One of the best remedies for the prevailing influenza."
Rev. C. P. Nash, Camden, Me.: "Nothing I ever used did me so much good."
Rev. E. A. Reed, Needham, Mass.: "I have never found anything to compare with them."
Rev. E. Curtis, Pleasant Valley, Ct.: "The very best ever made."
Rev. John Spinney, Stark, Me.: "In less than two minutes after taking one of Dr. Warren's Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla Troches I was relieved of my hoarseness and tickling in my throat."

DR. WARREN'S WILD CHERRY AND SARSAPARILLA TROCHES
for sale by druggists generally.

Box sent by mail on receipt of 25 cents by the AMERICAN MEDICINE CO., Manchester, N. H.

"DON'T HIDE YOUR LIGHT UNDER A BUSHEL." THAT'S JUST WHY WE TALK ABOUT SAPOLIO

THE OLD SOUTH LENTEN LECTURES.

Israel and the Exile was the subject of the fifth lecture given last Sunday evening by Rev. A. E. Dunning, D.D. He showed that this period was the richest in all pre-Christian history, because the nation which brought forth Christ was born in the exile. Nearly all the books of the Old Testament bear the stamp of that time, later revisers having written into the earlier history, oracle and song their visions of God seen through the experiences and lessons of the captivity.

The history of the Jews during the sixth century B. C. was briefly sketched, and then the character of the people described from a study of Jeremiah, Ezekiel and other books relating to the time. The nation was divided into hostile political parties. Few, comparatively, of those left after the first deportation to Babylon worshiped Jehovah only. Many worshiped him and other gods also, and others worshiped idols only. The temple contained images of other gods and sheltered their priests and priestesses. The prophets bitterly contended with one another. Even those whose sayings we now cherish most did not command any more confidence from the people than ministers now receive who claim to present messages from God. Some of the prophets admit that God spoke through those whom they opposed, and declare that in some of their own impressions which they believed were from God, they had been deceived. They were influenced in their convictions, as we are, by fear and hope, by passions of ambition and patriotism, by anger against those who opposed them and by admiration of those who agreed with them, as well as by indignation against sin and approval of righteousness.

The question for us to decide is, What are the words of eternal wisdom for us in these ancient records, and how are we to interpret them faithfully? The utterances of the prophets are evidently not precepts fitted to every time. Jeremiah's message to the Jews to settle themselves to be good citizens of Babylon would have been entirely out of place fifty years later, when the later Isaiah was urging them to leave Babylon and return to Jerusalem. Abiding principles in these books are applied to nations in particular circumstances. Many of these ancient prophecies were not committed to writing till long after they were uttered, and then were sometimes reshaped to suit the time when they were written. We must learn all that we can of the occasions which help to interpret them, and welcome even imperfect knowledge when that is the best we can discover. Most prominent among the principles of revealed religion which emerge into clearer light from the century of the captivity are these:

1. Loyalty to one God and to him alone. The patriarchs worshiped Jehovah, but they recognized the existence of other gods and some worshiped them. Jehovah alone the ruler of nations and Saviour of mankind—that sublime, basal truth Israel learned in exile and made it our heritage.

2. The sense of personal responsibility to God. The older worship was national. God made a covenant with Israel, but the exile taught the people that each one had his own relations with God. Wherever any heart turned to him, there was his kingdom.

3. The fellowship of true believers. In the captivity was first realized a religious community whose one bond was the personal loyalty of each to God. The Sabbath took the place of the temple and prayer of sacrifice. The sanctity of the family, kindness between neighbors, believers united to one another because united to God—these principles created the brilliant vision of the kingdom of God with which Ezekiel's prophecies close, which, expanded to the New Jerusalem, the church of Christ is striving to realize.

4. The expectation of the coming Messiah. The faithful remnant of Israel, the servant of Jehovah, came to regard itself as suffering for the nation and bearing its sins. Thus choice souls, burdened with a conviction that their mission was to purify a captive people, brought forth in their experience the idea of the Redeemer of the nation and the Saviour of the world, who appeared in the person of Jesus Christ.

5. The exile gave distinct shape to the sublime idea of God's grace for the world, the most exalting purpose of modern times, to proclaim to all mankind liberty for captives, the opening of prisons to them that are bound, to make the old earth new in a kingdom of God in which Christ is to rule as both Saviour and Lord.

THE HUGUENOTS OF OLD BOSTON.

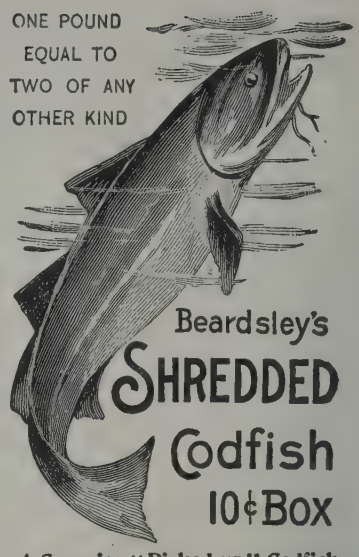
Horticultural Hall was filled last Monday night by the Congregational Club, and there was a considerable number of ladies in the galleries. Dr. W. E. Barton read a very entertaining report for the outlook committee. After other business was finished, Rev. M. C. Julien of New Bedford gave a remarkably interesting address on the Huguenots and those with Huguenot blood who came over from England as Pilgrims in the Mayflower or followed them during the seventeenth century Priscilla Mullens was of Huguenot fame, and Mr. Julien believes he has discovered in old English records that John Alden, also, was descended from French refugees. Peter Faneuil and other worthies famed in colonial history were duly described and honored, and the stereopticon, throwing on the screen representations of historic paintings, portraits and places, added vividness to the story, which was frequently emphasized by the applause of the audience.

CURES, absolute, permanent cures have given Hood's Sarsaparilla the largest sales in the world, and the first place among medicines.

ONE POUND EQUAL TO TWO OF ANY OTHER KIND



Beardsley's SHREDDED Codfish 10¢ Box

A Superior "Picked up" Codfish,
Is unequalled in quality, economy, and convenience.

Fish Balls and Fish Cream are prepared by its use in 10 to 15 minutes.

It requires no boiling or soaking, therefore creates NO ODOR.

Order a box from your grocer and try it. You see it don't cost much.

PREPARED ONLY BY
J. W. Beardsley's Sons,
179 & 180 West St., New York.
Makers of the Celebrated Acme Sliced Smoked Beef.

THE CHRISTIAN INDUSTRIAL LEAGUE.
An organization for men inside the church, with religious, social, business, sickness and death benefits. Send for printed matter to the Christian Industrial League, Springfield, Mass.

FRY IT in Cottolene

Fry your food in Cottolene instead of lard and it will be free from that greasiness and "richness" so distressing to dyspeptics; the flavor will be delicious instead of rancid, and your food will do you good. Put it in a cold pan, heating it with the pan. Cottolene reaches the cooking point much quicker than lard—care should therefore be taken not to overheat it. Follow these instructions—you will never use lard again.

Genuine Cottolene has trade-marks—"Cottolene" and steer's head in cotton-plant wreath—on every tin.

THE N. K. FAIRBANK COMPANY, CHICAGO, 224 State St., Boston, Portland, Me.

If you want a sure relief for pains in the back, side, chest, or limbs, use an

Allcock's Porous Plaster

BEAR IN MIND—Not one of the host of counterfeits and imitations is as good as the genuine.

DURKEE'S SPICES

THE WELL KNOWN "GAUNTLET BRAND" EXCEL IN PURITY, STRENGTH & FLAVOR.

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure

Restores Health

In nearly every case. It is guaranteed by druggists; if first bottle fails to benefit, money is refunded.

Ask your druggist, or send to the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., for Dr. Miles' free book, entitled,

"New and Startling Facts."

COUGHS AND COLDS

ELY'S PINEOLA BALSAM is a sure Remedy for coughs, colds, sore throat and for asthma. It soothes, quickly abates the cough, and renders expectoration easy.

Consumptives will invariably derive benefit from its use. Many who suppose their cases to be consumption are only suffering from a chronic cold or deep seated cough, often aggravated by catarrh. For catarrh use Ely's Cream Balm.

Both remedies are pleasant to use. Cream Balm, 50 cts. per bottle; Pineola Balsam, 25 cts. Sold by Druggists.

ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren St., New York.

Nursery Cloth.

An absolute necessity for every modern nursery. Made of bleached muslin on both sides, with white wadding between, firmly quilted, and 34 inches wide. Highly recommended by physicians for bed pads. Thoroughly absorbent and easily washed.

MATTRESS PROTECTORS

made of it are indispensable, absolutely preventing damage from stains, etc. Made for any size bed, bound and ready for use.

Both articles kept by leading dry goods houses. If your dealer don't keep them, write for sample.

Excelsior Quilting Co., Laight St., New York

DENT'S CORN GUM Cures Corns, Warts, Bunions, etc. So easy to apply—it sticks fast. Ask for Dent's; take no other. Sold everywhere, or by mail 10 cents. C. S. DENT & CO. DETROIT, MICH.

Try Dent's Toothache Gum.

THE GENUINE DR BLAUD'S IRON PILLS

have been prescribed with great success for more than 50 years by the leading physicians of Europe, in the treatment of female patients. Specially recommended for

Poorness of the Blood and Constitutional Weakness.

Imported by E. Fougera & Co., N. Y.

To avoid imitations BLAUD is stamped on each pill.

The "Harris" Method of Giving

This little tract has been of immense service to the churches in suggesting systematic methods of giving. It was first published as an article in the Congregationalist, and attracted wide notice. Many large editions of the "True Method of Giving" in its present form have been sold. Price, 100 copies, $2.50; 35 copies, $1.00.

For sale at the office of The Congregationalist, Boston.

IT WILL SERVE THE INTERESTS of all concerned if, in correspondence suggested by announcements in our ADVERTISING COLUMNS, mention is made of the fact that the advertisement was seen in The Congregationalist.

Deaths.

The charge for notices of deaths is twenty-five cents. Each additional line ten cents, counting eight words to a line. The money should be sent with the notice.

BARTLETT—In Grinnell, Io., March 18, of pneumonia, Mariette Towle, wife of A. W. Bartlett, and daughter of Rev. C. A. Towle, aged 23 yrs., 11 mos.

GAY—In Biddeford, Me., March 22, Rev. Joshua S. Gay, a retired clergyman, aged 77 yrs.

KIMBALL—In Littleton, Mrs. Lucy M., widow of the late William Kimball, aged 62 yrs.

LEMON—The funeral of Mrs. Elizabeth G. Lemon, widow of William Lemon and daughter of the late Ezra Holt of Andover, was held at her late residence, 69 Tremont St., Malden, on Saturday, March 21. Services were conducted by Rev. J. W. Wellman and Rev. H. H. French.

PRATT—In Boston, March 21, at the home of Rev. C. A. Dickinson, George W. Pratt.

SEAVERNS—In Jamaica Plain, March 16, Mary Isabelle, wife of Edward Seaverns

STEARNS—In Wakefield, March 16, Henrietta C., wife of Charles H. Stearns, aged 74 yrs., 8 mos., 16 dys.

WHITE—In Bangor, Me., March 1, Ambrose White, for many years an honored official member of the Elm Street Church in Bucksport, Me.

MRS. LEVI G. HILL.

In the death of Mrs. Abigail Burnham Hill of Dover, N. H., a long life of love and rare usefulness terminated. Though born Oct. 28, 1814, while "war and battle's sound" filled the land with gloom, her life to the end, Oct. 25, 1895, a peculiarly "peaceful tenor" kept.

She had been accustomed from childhood to patriotic traditions, as her great-grandfather and grandfather fought in the Revolutionary War. Accordingly she took the greatest interest in public affairs, and no one was more familiar with every phase of the struggle to secure the freedom of the slaves. Personally acquainted with many of the leaders in the reform, and hating the very name of war, she yet thought that perpetual slavery threw a darker shadow over the land than could the "horrid visage" of war, and was accustomed to say, "It was a dreadful price, but it purchased liberty."

Early imbued with the spirit of Congregationalism, she noted the changes in theological statement and ecclesiastical usage, forming a definite estimate of their value, and was always interested in their discussion. She was a devout member of the First Parish Church in Dover; and took great pleasure in recalling the spiritual and intellectual characteristics of the long line of learned and eloquent ministers who as pastors and occasional preachers ministered to that congregation.

For seventy years she read with unflagging attention The Congregationalist and its predecessor the Puritan Recorder, comparing its views with those of several other religious periodicals always on her table. A lover of the past, her interest in the present was perennial, and in conversation she brought forth "things new and old."

July 30, 1837, she was married to Levi Gerrish Hill, M. D. Providence allotted to them five children. The son died in infancy. Three of the four daughters were with her during her last illness. The one grief, incurable but supported through faith, was the death of her daughter, Mrs. Seth M. Milliken of New York, in France in 1881.

Her hospitality was boundless. Abounding in cheerfulness and vivacity she was peculiarly happy when surrounded by friends. In the poor her interest was perpetual. Not destitute of sympathy with the institutions which modern philanthropy has established, her feelings were wonderfully enlisted for those whose personal needs became known to her. Following the progress of missionary enterprise at home and abroad, and a regular contributor to both branches of the work, such was her estimate of the importance of religion to a free government that she derived great satisfaction from the reports of the American Missionary Association, and information concerning the establishment of churches in the new States of the West and institutions of learning in the South. Her husband, her children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren, to whom she was a fountain of loving words and deeds, mingled with their tears of sorrow those of gratitude to God that in health and strength her life had been granted to the home until full eight years had been added to the cycle of conjugal happiness whose outward boundary is the golden wedding.

The funeral services were conducted at the family residence in Dover, N. H., by Rev. Dr. A. H. Quint, a relative of the family.

EDWIN PRATT

Died at Weymouth, Mass., March, 20, aged 78 yrs., 10 mos., and 16 days. He was for many years the active partner of the firm of Loud & Pratt in the lumber business. In his business relations he was a man of perfect honesty and uprightness, incapable of taking an unjust advantage of any one. In him conscientiousness was supreme, and no living man was more reliable than he.

After the great revival of 1842, he with 59 others joined the Old North Church. Later he served the church for many years as deacon. On his removal from the north part of the town to the Landing he was chosen deacon of the Union Church of Weymouth and Braintree. He was generous and faithful in his support of the worship and work of the church and no breath of criticism was ever heard as to his irreproachable life. He leaves a widow and three children, Julius Pratt of Boston, Harriet Beecher, wife of Rev. L. B. Voorhees of Groton, Mass., and Arthur E. Pratt of Weymouth.

SICKNESS among children is prevalent at all seasons of the year, but can be avoided largely when they are properly cared for. Infant Health is the title of a valuable pamphlet accessible to all who will send address to the N. Y. Condensed Milk Co., N. Y. City.

HAVE YOU TRIED IT?—Of course you have heard of Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam—most people have—but have you tried it? There is no other remedy so effectual and so certain to cure coughs, asthma and all throat and lung diseases. Sold by all druggists.

"CONGRESS IN SESSION."—Now is the best season of the year to visit Washington, D. C. Royal Blue Line personally conducted tours leave Boston April 3 and 15 and May 6. Accommodations are first-class; stop-over privileges at Philadelphia and New York. Send for illustrated itinerary and "Guide to Washington" to A. J. Simmons, N. E. A., 211 Washington Street, Boston.

shake it off

The general belief among medical men to-day is that consumption itself is very rarely inherited. But the belief is becoming stronger and stronger that the tendency to consumption is very generally transmitted from parent to child. If there is consumption in the family, each member should take special care to prepare the system against that disease. Live out of doors as much as possible; keep the body well nourished; and treat the first indication of failing health.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil, with hypophosphites, is a fat-producing food and nerve-tonic. Its use is followed by improved nutrition, richer and redder blood, stronger nerves and a more healthy action of all the organs. It greatly strengthens the power of the body to resist disease. If you have inherited a tendency to weak lungs, shake it off. Fresh air, cod-liver oil, and hypophosphites will help you.

just as good is never as good as

Scott's Emulsion.

MADAME PORTER'S BALSAM

THIS LADY

She has done more than any other one woman in America to relieve people of their bothersome coughs and colds, and has often saved life. She has gone into millions of homes the past 60 years; that is, her portrait has, for its on every bottle of Balsam sold. "Madame Porter's?" It's a household word!

Do you recognize her?

A safe and pleasant preparation, it is sold by all druggists with their approval as pharmacists, and costs but 25 and 50 cents per bottle (two sizes).

Proprietors: HALL & RUCKEL, Wholesale Druggists, New York.

MR. ZADOC PORTER'S BITTERS

THE NO. SIX 6 SIX

Remington
Standard Typewriter

was made to enhance

Remington Reputation

for thorough workmanship and reliable service. Already a host of well-satisfied users attest its unquestionable success, and stamp with popular approval its MANY USEFUL IMPROVEMENTS.

WYCKOFF, SEAMANS & BENEDICT,
327 Broadway, New York.

---

COPYRIGHTED—1895.

IVORY SOAP

The kitchen may be made a pride,
And appetize those friends who view it;
Good rules of order, well applied,
And use of Ivory Soap will do it.

The Procter & Gamble Co., Cin'ti.

---

TRILBY

Never wore shoes in the Latin Quarter. If she had, she would have used

Brown's French Dressing

BUT—

Miss Amelia Summerville,

who plays Trilby in the Burlesque, writes:

"I can heartily recommend

Brown's French Dressing

because it not only makes the shoes look well, but the dressing preserves the leather instead of cracking it."—AMELIA SUMMERVILLE.

---

NORWICH FOLDED PAPER CARPET LINING

Appeals to Every Saving Housekeeper.

Some Carpet Dealers

persist in recommending and selling smooth-faced carpet linings (same kind they have been selling for years) that protect the floor from wear more than they protect the carpet.

The Norwich costs the purchaser no more than other linings (10c.) and saves its cost on the yearly wear of the carpet.

LARGE SAMPLE FREE.

For sale by Best Carpet Dealers. If your Dealer will not supply you, it can be ordered direct from the Factory in any quantity over 20 yards, express paid, at 10 Cents a yard.

NORWICH CARPET LINING CO., NORWICH, CONN.

The Congregationalist
Easter · 1896

IT CURES FROM HEAD TO FOOT.

PRIZE FORMULA OF Prof. Dixi Crosby, M.D., LL.D. DARTMOUTH COLLEGE.

Puritana

Puritana corrects, strengthens, and naturalizes the stomach by an original, common-sense process.

It causes the food to be promptly and properly digested in accordance with nature's laws, and creates new blood, new tissues, new nerve force, new vigor, and new life. These fresh forces expel impurities, humors, and degenerated elements from the body, whether they exist in the Stomach, Blood, Liver, Kidneys, Lungs, Nerves, Brain, or Skin.

Nature's Cure

It makes weak and weary men and women strong and healthy.

OFFICIAL.

SIGILLUM REIPUBLICÆ NEO HANTONIENSIS

Seal of New Hampshire.

The cures effected in this State by Dr. Dixi Crosby's prize formula Puritana are so astonishing and the results with which we personally have used this remarkable medical discovery are so entirely satisfactory that we deem it our duty to accord it our public indorsement and private recommendation.

Charles A. Busiel — Governor of New Hampshire.

E. E. Thissell — State Senator.

F. P. Andrews — Cashier Merrimac Co. Bank.

N. P. Hunt — Ex-Governor of New Hampshire.

A. W. Baker — Bank Commissioner

Robert Hall, M. D. — Practising Physician.

Ezra S. Stearns — Secretary of State.

N. J. Bachelder — Sec'y Board of Agriculture.

John F. Jones — Treas. Loan and Trust Savings Bank.

Thomas Cogswell — R. R. Commissioner.

John Kivel — County Solicitor.

John C. Linehan — Insurance Commissioner.

P. B. Cogswell — Mayor of Concord.

92% Puritana cures case after case that has been given up as hopeless.

92% Ninety-two per cent. of all sickness is caused by a "Wrong Stomach."

Puritana makes the { Heart Right, Lungs Right, Blood Right, Kidneys Right, Nerves Right, Liver Right, Health Right,

Because it makes the Stomach Right.

If you are a sufferer get of your druggist this great disease-conquering discovery (the price is $1 for the complete treatment, consisting of one bottle of Puritana, one bottle of Puritana Pills, and one bottle of Puritana Tablets, all inclosed in one package), or write to the undersigned, and you will bless the day when you heard of Puritana. The Puritana Compound Co., Concord, N. H.

Just as day follows night, so Perfect Digestion follows the use of Puritana.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS' NEW BOOKS.

MRS. BURNETT'S NEW NOVEL. JUST PUBLISHED.

A LADY OF QUALITY. Being a Most Curious, hitherto Unknown History, related by Mr. Isaac Bickerstaff, but not presented to the World of Fashion through the pages of The Tatler, and now for the first time written down by FRANCES HODGSON BURNETT. 12mo, $1.50.

"It is a book that will be talked about all the year. It will be read by everybody who reads fiction of the higher class, and probably by many others. In short, it will be a 'book of the year.' Clorinda Wildairs is one of the most piquant, irresistible, and audacious characters in modern fiction. Neither Hardy nor Meredith has imagined a more remarkable woman. She is always splendidly human."—New York Times.

COMEDIES OF COURTSHIP. By ANTHONY HOPE. 12mo, uniform with Robert Grant's "The Bachelor's Christmas." $1.50.

"They have the same elements of lightness and delicacy which are so characteristic of Mr. Hope's work, while, as regards dialogue, there are certain qualities that would indicate the author of the 'Dolly Dialogues' even were the name of Anthony Hope not imprinted on the title-page. They are all bright, all clever, and all clean."—Boston Advertiser.

CINDERELLA, AND OTHER STORIES. By RICHARD HARDING DAVIS. 12mo, $1.00.

Mr. Davis's new volume contains five stories, one of which, readers will be pleased to find, is a new Van Bibber story. The volume also includes "Miss Delamar's Understudy," which has aroused such interest, while the other stories are characteristic of the author and in his best vein.

LITTLE RIVERS. By HENRY VAN DYKE. Fourth Edition. Fully Illustrated. 12mo, $2.00.

"What makes his book so dear to its reader? What makes it awaken the best we contain? Its naturalness; its truthfulness; its union of soul and body with nature and her freely offered gifts."—New York Times.

IN PREPARATION: The Walton Edition of "Little Rivers," limited to 150 copies, printed by De Vinne, on hand-made paper, with a photogravure portrait and extra illustrations on Japan paper, and a new preface; each copy signed by the author. $10.00, net.

SUNRISE STORIES. A Glance at the Literature of Japan. By ROGER RIORDAN and TOZO TAKAYANAGI. 12mo, $1.50.

"A volume of rare interest, written by scholars who have long made this literature a study. A charming book from beginning to end. The stories, embodying in some cases translations, in others new versions, are delightful."—Boston Advertiser.

LECTURES ON THE COUNCIL OF TRENT. By JAMES ANTHONY FROUDE. 8vo, $2.00.

These lectures formed the first of three courses delivered by Mr. Froude during his Regius Professorship of Modern History at Oxford, the other two courses, on Erasmus and on the English Seamen of the Sixteenth Century, having been published.

"These lectures are marked by the same fluency of style and delightful English which always appear in this scholar's writings. Nothing, of course, need be said of the historical value of the work. It is from the pen of Froude; that connotes its merit."—Boston Journal.

POEMS AND BALLADS. By ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON. 12mo, $1.50.

The Poems of Mr. Stevenson are here for the first time presented in one volume. It comprises all the poems contained in "A Child's Garden of Verses," "Ballads," "Underwoods," and in addition over forty pieces of verse written since the publication of those volumes.

A CHILD'S GARDEN OF VERSES. By ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON. New Edition. Profusely and beautifully illustrated by CHARLES ROBINSON. 12mo, $1.50.

"An edition to be recommended in every way. An artist possessing a graceful fancy and a sure decorative sense has supplied a profusion of illustrations. The letterpress is beautiful."—N. Y. Evening Post.

MADAME ROLAND. By IDA M. TARBELL. With 12 Illustrations. 12mo, $1.50.

Much new material hitherto inaccessible to biographers of Madame Roland has been obtained by Miss Tarbell, whose work in consequence is an historical study of unusual importance. Madame Roland is portrayed for the first time with accuracy and completeness, the book also presenting a vigorous and vivid picture of the Revolutionary era in France. Reproductions of portraits and places illustrate the text amply and appropriately.

THE JEWISH SCRIPTURES. The Books of the Old Testament in the Light of their Origin and History. By AMOS K. FISKE. 12mo, $1.50.

A distinctly popular account of the books of the Old Testament considered as history and literature. The standpoint of the writer is radical and in accord with what has been called the higher criticism. The book summarizes in terse and luminous style the results of the study of Hebrew scholars, and the general reader has in it a thoughtful, complete and interesting handbook on the subject.

TWO NEW BOOKS BY EUGENE FIELD.

The House. An Episode in the lives of Reuben Baker, Astronomer, and of his wife Alice. 12mo, $1.25.

The Love Affairs of a Bibliomaniac. With an introduction by ROSWELL MARTIN FIELD. 12mo, $1.25.

THE IVORY SERIES.

Fiction by Popular Authors issued in dainty, uniform style. Each 16mo, 75 cents.

A Master Spirit. By HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD. A strongly poetic musical story.

Irralie's Bushranger. A Story of Australian Adventure. By E. W. HORNUNG.

Ia. A Love Story. By "Q" (ARTHUR T. QUILLER-COUCH).

Amos Judd. A Novel. By J. A. MITCHELL, Editor of Life. Fourth Edition.

The Suicide Club. By ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.

Madame Delphine. By GEORGE W. CABLE.

NEW NOVELS AND SHORT STORIES.

Doctor Congalton's Legacy. A Chronicle of North Country By-Ways. By HENRY JOHNSTON. 12mo, $1.25.

The Amazing Marriage. By GEORGE MEREDITH. 2 vols. 12mo, $2.50.

Wandering Heath. Stories, Studies, and Sketches. By "Q." 12mo, $1.25.

A Fool of Nature. By JULIAN HAWTHORNE. The Herald $10,000 Prize Story. 12mo, $1.25.

Your Money or Your Life. By EDITH CARPENTER. A Herald Prize Story. 12mo, $1.25.

The Bachelor's Christmas, and Other Stories. By ROBERT GRANT. Illustrated by C. D. GIBSON, IRVING R. WILES, A. B. WENZELL, and C. CARLETON. 12mo, $1.50.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS, 153-157 Fifth Avenue, New York.

CHRIST BLESSING LITTLE CHILDREN DESIGNED BY FREDERICK WILSON.

COPYRIGHT 1894, BY
TIFFANY GLASS AND DECORATING COMPANY.

TIFFANY GLASS & DECORATING COMPANY
FURNISHERS & GLASS WORKERS DOMESTIC & ECCLESIASTICAL DECORATIONS MEMORIALS
333 TO 341 FOURTH AVENUE NEW YORK

✠

OUR WINDOWS ARE MADE OF TIFFANY FAVRILE GLASS, WHICH IS PRODUCED EXCLUSIVELY AT OUR FURNACE, AND CANNOT BE OBTAINED FROM OTHER MAKERS, OR USED BY ANY OTHER ARTISTS.

IN RANGE, DEPTH AND BRILLIANCY OF COLOR IT HAS NEVER BEEN EQUALED.

IN TEXTURE IT IS REALISTIC AND ARTISTIC.

✠

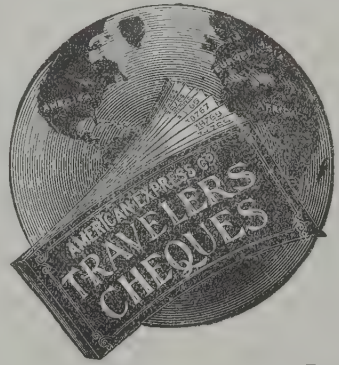
WE MOST RESPECTFULLY REFER TO THE FOLLOWING MINISTERS IN WHOSE CHURCHES EXAMPLES OF OUR WORK MAY BE SEEN:

REV. EDWARD L. CLARK, D. D., CENTRAL CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH, BOSTON, MASS.

REV. ALBERT H. PLUMB, D. D., WALNUT AVENUE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH, ROXBURY, MASS.

REV. ALEXANDER McKENZIE, D. D., FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH, CAMBRIDGE, MASS.

...AN...
American Express Co.
TRAVELERS CHEQUE



is practically a certified cheque made payable to one's order for a fixed amount named on its face, in the currency of the country, at 20,000 places throughout the world by an extensive list of Bankers and Hotels.

More Available, Economical and Secure than letters of Credit, Circular Notes or other forms of Travelers' Credit.

Cheques, rates and further information may be obtained at any agency of

THE AMERICAN EXPRESS CO.,
OR AT THE PRINCIPAL OFFICES OF THE COMPANY,
65 BROADWAY, NEW YORK,
78 MONROE STREET, CHICAGO,
45 FRANKLIN STREET, BOSTON.

"Ball-Bearing"
Bicycle Shoes

"A thousand wheels, but only one shoe."

"Ball-Bearing" Shoes.

An Innovation in Footwear.—Price: Black, $3.00; Tan, $3.50.

Insist on getting "Ball-Bearing" Shoes. If your dealer hasn't them, we will send you a pair, prepaid, on receipt of price. Handsome Booklet of 117 Styles, FREE.

C. H. FARGO & CO., Makers, CHICAGO.

THE CONGREGATIONALIST

Volume LXXXI Boston Thursday 2 April 1896 Number 14

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
Paragraphs 537
The Latest Heresy Trial 538
The Teaching of the Spirit 539
Lux in Tenebris 539
The Resurrection of the Body 539
Criticism and Foretelling 561
Current History 540
In Brief 541
STAFF CORRESPONDENCE:
The Interior 542
Australia 543
CURRENT THOUGHT 543
CONTRIBUTIONS:
Wanted, An Issue. Pres. G. A. Gates 544
A Baritone's Parish. II. Rev. James M. Ludlow, D. D. 544
The Christian Life. VI. Christian Fellowship. Rev. Floyd W. Tomkins, Jr. 545
The Whereabouts of Nansen. Prof. G. Frederick Wright 546
Is Harvard Divinity School Denominational? Rev. Theodore Berle 548
The Face of Jesus in Art. Estelle M. Hurll 556
What Good Will It Do Me? Rev. A. H. Quint, D. D. 558
THE HOME:
At Easter-Time—a poem. May Riley Smith 551
Paragraphs 551
Trials of Faith. Ian Maclaren 551
The Sealed Stone—a poem. Anna Frances Burnham 552
The Science of Food. III. Nutritive Elements and Dietetic Values. M. V. Shaler 552
Five Boys. Mr. Martin 553
Closet and Altar 554
Mothers in Council 554
The Conversation Corner. Mr. Martin 555
Corner Scrap-Book 555
THE SUNDAY SCHOOL—Lesson for April 12 559
Y. P. S. C. E.—Topic for April 12-18 575
Notes 572
PROGRESS OF THE KINGDOM 560
LITERATURE 561
NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES 567
Weekly Register 572
Theological Seminaries 573
MISCELLANEOUS:
The Federation of British Nonconformists 547
The Case of Rev. William T. Brown 548
Professor Genung at the Old South 549
A Plea for a Constructive Theology 550
Gleanings 550
Notices 567
Business Outlook 570
Woman's Board Prayer Meeting 571
Deaths 573
Biographical 574
The Atonement—a selection 574
The Inter-Seminary Alliance 576
The Mission of the Prophet: What Is It? 577
Education 577

✠ 80th ANNIVERSARY OFFER ✠

The eightieth anniversary offer (The Congregationalist and The Bonnie Brier Bush for 30 cents), as announced on one of our advertising pages, must very soon be withdrawn. To avoid disappointment we suggest that pastors and others who are planning to send in lists do so at once. We can receive about 1,000 more names. The limit will then be reached. We have never made so popular an offer as this, and we greatly appreciate the interest manifested in it by our friends and their generous response.

✠ TRIAL SUBSCRIPTIONS. ✠

6 Months for . . . . . $1.00
3 Months for 25 cts. 4 Weeks Free.

✠ THE CONGREGATIONALIST SERVICES. ✠

Easter and thirty-two other services.

Price, 100 copies of one number, 60 cts., postpaid.

OUR pilgrimage to old world shrines by way of commemorating the completion of the eightieth year of The Congregationalist is already an assured success. The party, as so far registered, includes both sexes in about equal numbers. The ministry, law and medicine are well represented, while there are also several business men. The committee appointed by the National Council will probably have four members in the party and perhaps more. The number will be strictly limited to insure the greatest convenience and comfort. A few staterooms on the Columbia, not yet taken, are still reserved, but prompt application is necessary in order to secure them. From every place in England which the party intends to visit—and places of choicest interest have been selected—invitations have been received, offering special courtesies. The continental tour is not less attractive. A cablegram to the Transcript last week, said:

The tolerant dignitaries of the Church of England and many others besides in England's picturesque cathedral cities are showing a keen interest in the American Congregational pilgrimage to England. The party will have a rich program of enjoyment among the treasured relics of the church. It has already been invited to the deanery at Norwich and to Farnham Castle, where the Bishop of Winchester has invited the Pilgrims to lunch. Farnham Castle is one of the most splendid relics of the Middle Ages in the kingdom.

---

The effects of reduced income for Christian work at home and abroad are bringing to our office many sore complaints. They are so numerous that it is impossible to publish them. They represent the entire field, which is the world. A pastor of an old New England church writes that the Congregational ministry was never in such straits as now. Many ministers find it impossible to get fields which will give them an adequate support, while others who are settled face the future with anxious hearts. Home missionaries write of pledges unfulfilled, frequent changes made necessary by financial stringency and unsettled conditions, which make their work discouraging. Letters from the South tell us of many thousands of dollars sent thither from the North to buy votes for presidential candidates, while educational institutions planted by Northern money are languishing for want of funds. From India and Turkey and other mission fields come protests from discouraged workers because the appropriations from the Board have been reduced one-half and their work is threatened with ruin. There might also be added the testimony of many faithful Christians who have tried, on reduced incomes, to keep up to the former level their contributions to Christian work. Present conditions call for self-sacrifice and courage on the part of all those who are working together to build up the kingdom of God. Nor should we lose confidence in one another or in God. These are not only times of trial but of opportunity. Heroic Christians may show triumphantly how victories for Christ's cause can be won in the most unfavorable conditions.

---

The course of six Lenten lectures at the Old South Church, Boston, which closed last Sunday night, has been a notable one. The most important periods of Old Testament history have been treated by lecturers who have given many years of study to these subjects and who have acquainted themselves with the results of recent scholarship. The audiences, which were large, included representatives of many of the churches of the city and vicinity. At this time, when questions concerning the nature of inspiration and the authority of the Bible are of special interest, such a historical survey of the religion of Israel as has been given is of great value. We are assured that it has been highly appreciated, especially by Sunday school teachers. The Old South has done a service to other churches of Boston and to the cause of Biblical study, which might wisely be imitated by churches in other cities able to follow its example. Christian learning has been advanced and Christian faith enlightened and thus the kingdom of God has been strengthened.

---

The School for Christian Workers at Springfield is taking a wise step in bringing to the attention of the colleges the opportunities for service which its thorough and varied training is making available. Representatives of the institution are being cordially received at Amherst, Brown and other New England colleges, and the students are being made to see the attractions of another calling besides those usually appealing to college men. The fact that positions as Sunday school superintendents and State secretaries, pastors' assistants and lay helpers are beginning to command good salaries need not be overlooked. With our colleges sending out an increasing army of graduates every year, and with the professions already so crowded, we cannot see why earnest and able students should not be drawn to this line of activity as well as to the pastorate and home and foreign missionary work. We are glad to note in this connection the recent hearty indorsement by Springfield pastors of this School for Christian Workers.

---

It is hard to drive business and charity in a single team, as St. Bartholomew's Loan Association of New York found recently. The association was organized by Dr. Greer to afford opportunity for the poor people of the parish to secure loans at a reasonable rate on the security of personal property, but the manager considered that he was the special servant of the charities of the church and let his accounts run behind, so that it became necessary to put the matter into the hands of a business man among the directors who would insist upon making the clients of the association live up to the obligations they had assumed. Some of the newspapers which trade upon the prejudices of the poor have tried to turn this action to account, but we wonder whether they think it really helps the poor to teach them to take unfair advantage of the business help which is offered them. One large element in the hopeless poverty of our cities is an inability to realize that two and two always and inevitably make four.

---

The Christian Intelligencer recently cited a description of Baptist ecclesiastical councils, by Professor Rauchenbush, in the Examiner, to show the looseness of Congregationalism. He says that when a council is called,

> Many churches simply disregard the request. In others delegates are chosen, but often very much at random, according to their leisure, and not according to their fitness. Of the delegates so appointed only a fraction appears at the council. If the matter is involved and difficult to decide and the afternoon wears on, the delegates drift away. Mainly those personally interested hold on. If a decision is reached, it is often voted on by a ragged fragment of a council, weary and anxious to get through with it. If the council adjourns to meet again, which rarely happens, often a new set of delegates appears, drummed together by the interested parties. There is no real continuity between the two sessions.

If this description is intended to refer to Congregational councils it is purely a burlesque and entirely untruthful. Our simple rule requiring a quorum of churches, and the fact that no delegate ever takes the place in a second session of one who has acted in a former session, would be sufficient of itself to show the absurdity of this statement. But the whole tenor of the description, which we cannot say does not apply to Baptist councils, inasmuch as a Baptist minister thus describes them, is entirely contrary to the character of our councils. Indeed, legal decisions have so settled the essential character of Congregational councils as to prevent the possibility among us of such a travesty as the quoted writer describes.

---

The eightieth anniversary number of this paper has called forth a shower of letters which, if space permitted, we would gladly share with our readers. These letters include reminiscences which embrace the entire period of the paper's life, and show how deep and far the roots of a great religious journal extend and how profound is its influence. It has made ineffaceable impressions on the earlier years of a vast company. It has been a household word in a multitude of homes. It is associated with marriages and funerals. It has directed many young men and women to the schools in which they have spent important years, and where their work for life has been decided. It has been present in many a church gathering, and its words have often been repeated there. It has solved perplexities, dispelled doubts, strengthened faith. All these things we are kindly assured of in these letters, and we trust, as it is sometimes intimated, that it has helped to guide many who once welcomed its pages into the glorious life which they are now enjoying with Christ beyond death. We especially appreciate the many expressions of esteem for our predecessors in office, and the assurances of confidence in the paper under its present management spur us to still greater efforts to make it worthy of its past and in sympathy with the spirit of progress in the kingdom of God.

---

The success of parasites is a secondary proof of the strength of original life. If the church were not a success the religious tramp would find some other name to live by. We are reminded of this by a letter in one of our contemporaries, describing the methods of a "slum preacher," whose habit it is "to pose as an evangelist until he gets money enough for a spree and then to run the whole gamut of the vices with the lowest characters until his money is gone. Then he gets himself 'rescued' by some city mission, plays the penitent with consummate art, blossoms out as a mission helper, gets a written certificate of his recent 'conversion,' and goes to some part of the country where his record is not known and imposes himself on the churches as a 'slum evangelist.'" This is as clever as the "tandem trick" with which a noted university won a great football game, but like that is soon found out. It is no reproach to God that such men flourish, but it is a discredit to the churches who accept an evangelist on weaker credentials than they would require for a footman or cook. Every such experience is a loud call to common sense in handling the business which is intrusted to us for Christ.

---

THE LATEST HERESY TRIAL.

The action last week of the council called by the church at Madison, Ct., was an important event in the history of Congregationalism. The pastor, Rev. W. T. Brown, is a recent graduate of Yale Theological Seminary. He claims that his teaching has been in harmony with the doctrines taught in the seminary, and this claim the council apparently sustained. His sermons, however, seriously disturbed the faith of some of his parishioners, trained in the older ways of thinking, and finally led them to charge him with teaching heresy concerning the incarnation of Christ, the atonement, the Trinity and the inspiration of the Scriptures, and to call a council to decide whether or not the charges were sustained by the facts. The report of the constitution and findings of the council is printed on another page.

That there have been important changes in the thinking of many in Congregational churches affecting the forms of statement of these and kindred subjects has been for several years acknowledged. These forms of statement affect, indeed, the substance of the doctrines themselves, but those who hold the newer views believe that they do not diminish, but rather strengthen, the vitality of Christian faith. Incidentally, the right of these brethren to a place in our ministry has been affirmatively decided by councils called to ordain or install ministers, who, more or less distinctly, declared their belief in these views. But this is the first time, we believe, that a council has directly pronounced judgment concerning the orthodoxy of what has come to be called the newer religious thinking. It should be distinctly understood that the question at issue was not whether the new should supplant the old, but whether the old should exclude the new. The council found it necessary to express its opinion as to whether progress and freedom of thought are to be encouraged in the Congregational denomination within the lines of loyalty to Jesus Christ as the supreme manifestation of God and the Redeemer of mankind.

We rejoice, first, in the emphatic recognition by the council of the right of the minority in the church to ask advice concerning the orthodoxy of the doctrines preached in their pulpit. Much odium has been unjustly cast on Christians who have sought to defend the integrity of beliefs which they have been taught from childhood by those most dear to them, and which have entered as most potent influences into their lives. Those who lightly surrender even familiar forms of religious belief and ridicule others for holding those forms tenaciously cannot possess the depth of conviction which inspires confidence. The right to appeal to the churches in cases like this one at Madison is, as the council declared, a right to be dearly cherished, for it is essential to the integrity of the Congregational faith and polity.

We rejoice also that the council has stated so clearly the points at issue, points which concern the entire denomination. We confidently expect, as did our fathers, that more light is yet to break forth from the Word of God. We expect that further light will appear both through faithful obedience to his will and through diligent study of the Scriptures with all the aids which learning can bring to them. It has been the glory of Congregationalism that it has made great sacrifices to provide for an educated ministry and that it has trusted its leaders. At the same time, it has never yielded to them a blind obedience, nor exacted of them such an obedience to their predecessors. It asks only that they shall loyally seek the truth and use all the light God has given them. The council wisely recalls to all our churches the noble words of the Saybrook Platform, almost two centuries old, that "the requiring of an implicit faith, and an absolute and blind obedience, is to destroy liberty of conscience and reason also."

With faith in the enlightenment of the Holy Spirit and by diligent study of the Bible with the aid of recent discoveries in science and archæology many of our scholars are modifying to some extent their views of some theological doctrines. These views, as thus modified, have not yet crystallized into dogmatic statements. It is natural that those who have not given close attention to these recent investigations should be disturbed in hearing the new views they suggest affirmed or even discussed. But no wise disciple of Christ will reject a statement of doctrine which is claimed by a fellow-disciple to represent the spirit of Christ until he has examined the grounds on which that statement rests, and no wise teacher will needlessly or rashly challenge any beliefs which are dear to any of his people.

This council has decided that, within limits which may be clearly outlined, there is room in the Congregational denomination for both the older thinking and the newer. It has reaffirmed that truth most pertinent to this time, that "the new doubts of a new age may best be met by new methods of Christian teaching and fuller knowledge of God's word."

The council at Madison was in every respect a representative one. It included the churches of the vicinage, several of the larger ones in New Haven and two members of the faculty of Yale Divinity School. Its entire unanimity, its comprehension of present conditions, the judicial temper and kindness of its results, will secure for it wide approval and for its decision general assent. We confidently expect that it will not only restore peace to the Madison church, but that it will promote harmony in the denomination and lead to larger knowledge, deeper faith and nobler works among Congregational churches throughout the land.

THE TEACHING OF THE SPIRIT.

Our recent editorials concerning the Bible have prompted a number of letters which we are daily receiving, some of grateful appreciation, others of remonstrance and others still of inquiry. We are asked what assurance the Christian has that he can know the divine will and is under divine guidance if the writers of the Old Testament had imperfect knowledge and if the books they wrote only in part reveal God to us. Some of our readers, in short, seem to be perplexed over the idea that the Bible is the record of a progressive revelation and are in doubt as to whether more light on divine truth is possible than our fathers have seen in the Holy Scriptures. In the midst of controversies and divided views of men who hold the same faith and who stand as leaders and teachers in the Christian Church they ask what they may rely upon as certainly true. To our correspondents who share with us perplexities for which we, with them, earnestly seek light and guidance from above, we now especially address ourselves.

The emphasis of our Lord's teaching concerning the future of his church rests upon the presence of the Holy Spirit and the development through that Spirit's teaching of all needed acquaintance with the truth. In this the new age which began with Christ's coming was to be sharply distinguished from the old. The old was progressive, indeed, and led by the same Spirit, but its progress was that of preparation for a larger and freer life. It was the training of a people, not the conquest of a world. Without Abraham, Israel, the priests and the prophets, it is difficult to imagine the coming of the King and the beginnings of the kingdom, but on the line of Israel's calling and the exclusion of the Gentiles there could have been no expansion of a world-wide Christianity in which all may be taught the fullness of the truth. In regard to numbers, indeed, the old covenant seems like an ebbing tide. The flood begins only with the new covenant, when the Spirit is given to the church at Pentecost. Then the twice repeated prophecy begins to be fulfilled and we perceive how it is that the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea.

If there is imperfection in the life and knowledge of the older church what does it matter so long as there is progress also, leading on, as from our point of vantage we clearly see, to an assured and purposed end in Christ! An unchanging perfection at a lower point would be a poor possession as compared with a position in the changing and ascending progress of God's work. If there is imperfection in our own stage of life and knowledge, at least we can see that we have made great progress as compared with our brothers at the beginning! The attainment of their goal in God's appointed time is to be their justification, as it was their hope, and it may help to bring us assurance in our efforts. We, too, have guidance from above and in a larger measure. We, too, look forward to the coming of the King in fulfillment of his unresting purposes. If any of us are ready to fall down and worship the attainments and standards of the past, their answer, out of the record of their attainment and their failure, will surely be, "See thou do it not: for I am thy fellow-servant, and of thy brethren the prophets, and of them which keep the sayings of this book: worship God."

We live in an age of fulfillment, but in an age of prophecy as well. The tide of knowledge is flowing, but it is not yet at the flood; and always, now as then, for the children as well as for the fathers, the power behind our thoughts and studies is the power of God. The problems are ours. Nothing is hidden or mysterious to the Spirit of him by whom all things subsist, but before all else he guards our minds from the perils of stagnation and educates by leading into truth. His processes of teaching are not mechanical or magical. Growth of capacity is met by growth of knowledge. The history of the beginnings is in our hands, human life is all about us, its results touch us in every day's experience, the earth is open like a text-book for our study. We shall not get all the meaning, nor grasp the full relations of the facts which we accumulate; but we shall by his assistance get what is needed for our faith and growth, and we shall leave the meaning clearer for those who follow, if only we have confidence in the leading of the ever-present, ever-loving Spirit of God. Shall we believe that he brooded over chaos and brought out of it the order and beauty of the world and fear to trust him in the chaos of divided opinions and overshadowing doubts? He is the spirit of progress as well as truth and gives us knowledge as we are able to apply it. Without him what are we that we should think to find out knowledge by our search? But with his aid we know that the end toward which we are working now, as in the older age, is the fuller showing of himself by God to men.

We need, therefore, in our study of the Scriptures and of the world first humility and then the confidence of faith. God is in the world—Christ has not left us comfortless. The Spirit shapes the progress of our thought today. The beauty and the meaning of the earth have been revealed to us by the same Spirit who moved holy men of old. There were turning points of thought in ancient years and there are questions of the gravest peril and the highest promise now, but the Spirit of God is one and has one purpose from the beginning to the end. We, too, may be used as his instruments if we will trust him, in our place and our proportion, to help the broadening revelation which shall prepare the earth for Christ.

LUX IN TENEBRIS.

The storm of passion which swelled and broke about the judgment hall of Pilate and the cross of Calvary had fallen to a calm. For the leaders of the people it was the uneasy stillness of an accomplished sin whose condemnation lingered; for the disciples the quiet of sorrow and disappointment, which only a lingering faith in God kept from settling into despair. Pilate went on with his business and his pleasure. The rulers set a guard to make sure of the riddance for which they had paid so heavy a price. The disciples gathered in the upper room to look one another in the face and recall the experiences of the days of service and to ask, What next? Man had done his worst. The followers of the crucified were convinced of their utter helplessness without him. The bond of evil men seemed firm, and the cord of the disciples' brotherhood strained to the breaking point —and then came the resurrection, followed by the promised gift of the Holy Ghost.

Out of darkness, light, is the fit motto for our Easter thinking. For the Church in all its history, for each one of us in personal experience, light is God's gift. Out of darkness the sun is risen, out of ignorance, knowledge, out of the despair of hopeless sinning, the victory of faith. The apparent failure of the church when it has done its best for God in faith may always be reckoned on as the forerunner of some new provision. The vital thought of Easter is the thought of perpetuity of life. "Christ being raised from the dead dieth no more, death hath no more dominion over him." He ever liveth to make intercession for us—our light arising in the darkness, our life from the dead, our present revelation in a thousand ways of the Father all whose fullness dwells in him.

Man's despair is God's opportunity. After Calvary the opened tomb. After submission to the power of death the endless dominion over death and hell. Christ is arisen for us, but also in us he is risen and reigns as conqueror over all the powers of evil. Christ for us is the pledge of victory. Christ in us is working out his revelation and his triumph. We in Christ are risen to new life, through which he manifests himself to other men. Alas for that man who feels only the pain and darkness of crucifixion to the world, and has not come to the great Easter joy of being risen with Christ in newness of life. For him this light of joy and confidence is yet to shine out of the darkness. When it dawns he will wonder that he should have missed in any new day the joy of Easter and the inspiration of the presence of his Lord.

THE RESURRECTION OF THE BODY.

The Scriptures teach this doctrine more positively than clearly. Doubtless this is because full knowledge is neither necessary nor desirable for us now. Yet some things seem to be made plain.

The body after the resurrection is to be an actual body, not of flesh and blood necessarily yet answering the purposes of a body in the future life as truly and as perfectly as the human body meets the requirements of this present life. Personal identity will remain and the resurrection body will be somehow an outgrowth of the body of this world. Probably the Christian's body hereafter will be physically perfect, in the sense of no longer experiencing weariness, pain or sickness. We may reasonably suppose that it will be, as compared with our present bodies, what that of Jesus was after his resurrection and before his ascension as compared with what his body had been before his death. Moreover, we are told that the future body is to be immortal, undying.

So much as this—vague, yet not without its helpful value—we may understand God's word to reveal. Probably when death and resurrection shall have been experienced they will be discovered to have been, notwithstanding their solemn import, very simple and natural events, and the body, which will survive them, will seem much like that which preceded, but possessing additional powers and possibilities. What we do not yet know about them may safely be left to be made known in God's good time. But the scantiness of our information about what follows it must not obscure our assurance of the sublime fact of the resurrection itself. There is a future life into which those who love God are to rise. Christ taught this and rose himself in testimony to the fact. There is no need of modern spiritualism in proof of it. The Christian Church has been proclaiming it for nineteen centuries.

CURRENT HISTORY.

The Campaign for Honest Money.

President Gates in his forceful statement printed elsewhere, Wanted, an Issue, voices a feeling that is by no means peculiar to himself. And yet there are signs, more evident now than when he wrote, that an issue is to be faced and settled at the coming presidential election which appeals to the moral enthusiasm of every patriot. It may not be as great an issue as was settled by the Civil War, nor as great even as that settled by the Emancipation Proclamation and the war amendments, but it is greater than any other question that has been faced since the Rebellion. Whether viewed from the standpoint of one who believes that nations rise and fall according as they adhere to, or depart from, eternal principles of righteousness, or from the standpoint of one who hopes for prosperity for the masses or for himself, it must be admitted that the questions of sustaining national credit and creating and preserving a sound monetary system are such as can arouse the moral enthusiasm of those who believe in honesty and legitimate self-interest. And it is apparent that during the campaign now upon us these questions are to be prominent. They are to be discussed on the hustings as never before. They are to be debated with an intensity of feeling and sectional animosity that if not curbed will leave scars, whatever the verdict may be. This need not be so if the question is approached in the right way and credit for sincerity is given to opponents. The debtor class of the South and West believe honestly that a gold standard has caused, and will cause, an appreciation in their burden of debt. The creditor class of the North and East deny this and assert that a return to the free coinage of silver or further attempts to maintain a double standard will produce universal disaster and add infinitely to the burdens of those who are now in debt and swell the ranks of the debtor class. A spirit of compromise has prevailed for a quarter of a century, concessions have been made, joint action of the European Powers has been relied upon to relieve the situation but this seems as far distant as ever, and now the issue is joined.

The first struggles are now going on in the State conventions. Later the fight will be taken up at the national conventions of the two great parties, and later still at the polls. If the platforms of both parties are clean cut and are in substantial agreement, the electors will be compelled to give more weight to the individuality of the candidates and the past record of the parties. If one platform is clean cut and the other is not, and the candidates abide by their platform, the electors will have an easy task in deciding what is their duty. If neither platform is satisfactory to the men who insist upon a settlement of this question in this campaign, then a party with a candidate and platform that are satisfactory should, and probably will, emerge, and in that case a new era in our political history will dawn.

The Issue Stated.

Evidence in support of the assertion made above that the issue is being more clearly defined is found in the planks of the Republican conventions of New York and Massachusetts passed last week, and in the statement made by Senator Jones of Nevada, the Nestor of the Western senators who stand for free coinage of silver. The New York Republican platform says:

> The agitation for the free coinage of silver at the ratio of sixteen to one seriously disturbs all industrial interests, and calls for a clear statement of the Republican party's attitude upon this question, to the end that the trade of this country at home and abroad may again be placed upon a sound and stable foundation. We recognize in the movement for the free coinage of silver an attempt to degrade the long-established standard of our monetary system, and hence a blow to public and private credit at once costly to the National Government and harmful to our domestic and foreign commerce. Until there is a prospect of international agreement as to silver coinage, and while gold remains the standard of the United States and of the civilized world, the Republican party of New York declares itself in favor of the firm and honorable maintenance of that standard.

The Massachusetts platform says:

> We regard the silver agitation as hurtful to business and destructive of confidence and, as has recently been shown, hostile to all tariff legislation designed to give protection to our industries and revenue to our treasury.
>
> We are entirely opposed to the free and unlimited coinage of silver and to any change in the existing gold standard, except by international agreement. Each dollar must be kept as good as every other dollar. The credit of the United States must be maintained at the highest point so that it cannot be questioned anywhere either at home or abroad. Every promise must be rigidly kept and every obligation redeemable in coin must be paid in gold.

Statements more explicit than these have never been formulated.

Senator Jones is equally desirous of an immediate contest and decisive decision. He declares that "the silver people would rather see a man like Governor Morton nominated and the issue made at once. It is idle to dillydally with this great question any longer. It is another irresistible conflict that must be fought to the finish sooner or later. The sooner the better."

The Massachusetts indorsement of Mr. Reed brings his candidacy before the people formally for the first time, as does the New York convention's indorsement of Mr. Morton render him the same service. It gives Republicans who are opposed to such a compromise as was tolerated in the Ohio platform men around whom they can rally to stem the tide in favor of Mr. McKinley, which certainly is discernible among the Republicans of the Western and Interior States. Minnesota, Wisconsin, Ohio and Indiana are now committed in favor of Mr. McKinley and he will have some votes from New York and possibly a few from New England. Various reasons are given for this development of strength, which is so marked, but probably not so great as some of his adherents claim. It is to be noted that one who is the incarnation of the ultra-protective tariff theory has been indorsed by States chiefly agricultural in their interests. He has profited by the opposition of the party bosses, which opposition is not an element of weakness in these times of independent thought and action, and he is not committed to any definite position with respect to our future monetary standards.

The National Legislature.

Senator Mills of Texas has raised his voice in favor of the most radical action on our part in favor of the Cuban revolutionists, but the tide has set the other way. No resolutions have been passed as yet, and when they are they will not commit us to any definite action. The appropriation bills continue to pass through the House with remarkable celerity. The new naval appropriation bill, authorizing the construction of four battle ships and fifteen torpedo boats, involving an ultimate expenditure of more than twelve million dollars, was passed last week with scarcely any opposition save from those who desired a larger expenditure and a greater increase of naval strength. Unfortunately there seems some likelihood of Congress granting statehood to New Mexico and Arizona, not because they are worthy of it, but because political schemers desire to increase their party's strength by four additional senators. Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire has introduced a proposed amendment to the Constitution, providing that neither Congress nor any State shall pass any law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, or use the credit of the United States or any State, or any money raised by taxation, for the purpose of founding, maintaining, or aiding any church, religious denomination, or religious society, or any institution, society, or undertaking which is wholly or in part under sectarian or ecclesiastical control, and it seems probable that before long this question will be squarely faced by Congress, as forces are now at work in Washington which will compel consideration of the question. It would be well if a concurrent resolution introduced in the House by Representative Heatwole of Minnesota were to pass there and be accepted by the Senate. His resolution calls for the appointment by President Cleveland of nine citizens eminent in trade, political economy and banking to act with the Comptroller of the Currency as a commission to investigate the merits and demerits of our present banking and currency systems and report its findings to Congress.

Excise Legislation and Its Enforcement.

The Raines Excise Bill, which so radically changes the state of affairs in New York and calls forth such a peculiar combination of praise and blame from all who are interested in temperance reform or in the sale of liquor, has been declared constitutional by one of the higher, though not the highest, New York courts; and the attorney general of the State has rendered an important opinion, conforming to the latest judicial decisions interpreting the Civil Service clause of the new constitution, that those who serve as inspectors and as minor officials under the new law must be selected from those who have complied with the Civil Service regulations and passed the examinations which the State requires of all its minor officials. If Governor Morton selects as the head of this very important and all-powerful new department of the State's activity a man of high character and influence, as it now seems probable that he will, and if his assistants are selected from those who have passed the Civil Service examinations, then the new experiment will be much more likely to conserve the public welfare than many of its opponents and friends thought it would. It already has dealt a staggering blow to the brewers. It will curb and in some cases annihilate the demoralizing club life. It scrupulously guards the rights of property owners, churches and schools and makes it possible for individual complainants to cause the courts to revoke licenses. It imposes heavier penalties upon all who violate the excise law than have ever been demanded or enforced before. It abolishes free lunches and it adopts the Massachusetts system of compelling saloon blinds to be drawn and the interior fully exposed to view during the hours when the saloons are not closed. These are some of the features which commend the bill even to those who distrust the motive that impelled its enactment and the methods by which it was put on the statute-books. Last Sunday in Brooklyn and most of the interior cities and towns was the dryest on record.

The scheme of granting local option to city wards was rejected by the lower house of the Massachusetts legislature last week.

Turkey and the United States.

Mr. Mavroyeni Bey is still in Washington representing the sultan of Turkey, and no confirmation of the report sent from Constantinople to the London Times that he has been recalled can be secured either from the officials in Washington or those in Constantinople. It has been assumed that if he is recalled it will indicate that Turkey is incensed at the resolutions which Congress passed and the tenor of opinion in this country revealed in editorials, interviews and speeches. The New York Tribune semi facetiously suggests that there might be another explanation, namely, that Turkey is dissatisfied with Mr. Mavroyeni Bey, because he was unable to suppress unfavorable comment upon Turkey, the Porte failing to recognize that conditions which prevail at Constantinople and St. Petersburg do not obtain here. If the Turkish minister is recalled for reasons that are not personal, it will be generally interpreted as significant of coming trouble for the institutions and people in Turkey in which and in whom the readers of this paper have a most intense interest, and would seem to indicate that Turkey, supported by Russia, was about to disregard the pledges made in treaties with the United States and in irades given to American citizens. Of course, no such action would be tolerated by the United States without a protest, and that of the most unmistakable character.

The cable messages from Constantinople to those in this country who are collecting and distributing the Armenian relief funds are of the most doleful character, setting forth the dreadful disparity between the work to be done and the funds to be distributed. Turkey continues to put obstacles in the way of granting relief either through the missionaries of the American Board or through Miss Barton and her assistants, and even where relief is given the money or food doled out is soon the property of the grasping Turk. Few documents of all time have been more pathetic or terrible in their import than the one issued by the Gregorian clergy of Oorfa just before they suffered martyrdom. Some day vengeance in the form of justice will be meted out to all who in any way have been responsible, directly or indirectly, for the infernal deeds which have been witnessed in Armenia in the last two years. And, meantime, seeds of sedition are being sown and are sprouting in the "Young Turkey" party, and Murad Bey, from his safe retreat in Cairo, through his paper, the Mizân, is creating enemies for the sultan more dangerous than any external foes.

The Conquest of Africa.

Lord Rosebery, who during the week has once more been selected leader of the Liberal party by the National Liberal Federation, in a speech criticising Lord Salisbury's foreign policy, complained that no reasons for undertaking the Soudan expedition had been given the British people, and, even were they seemingly adequate, he doubted whether it were well for Great Britain to "concentrate her energies and lock up her resources in an African desert." Since Lord Rosebery expressed his dissent from the ministry's policy, events in South Africa have made his criticism all the more searching and just, for an outbreak among the Matabele, proof of a perfect understanding between the Transvaal and the Orange Free State, and preparations on every hand in the Transvaal for war, all indicate that ere long Great Britain will be forced to choose between acquiescence in President Kruger's demand that the complete independence of the Transvaal be recognized by Great Britain, or a prolonged and bitterly contested war in which the British troops will have to face thoroughly armed Dutch and German foemen as well as native Africans, who long to avenge the slaughter which British arms have inflicted in the past. Obviously a contest of such proportions in South Africa, in addition to one already entered upon in the Soudan, will not leave Great Britain best prepared for any hostile step which Russia may deem it opportune to take, either in Eastern Europe or Eastern Asia, where history in China, Korea and Japan is being made with a rapidity and anti-British bent that must daze Britons. It is difficult to determine just what Lord Salisbury's policy is, what he has gained from France to compensate for the Siamese territory conceded to her, whether Germany's assent to the expedition up the Nile and the temporary loan from the Egyptian fund prevents her from lending aid to the Transvaal, and the latest reports from London indicate that some of Lord Salisbury's stanchest adherents in the past are beginning to ask whither he is leading them and the empire. From such critics as The Chronicle of London the most scathing criticisms of the present foreign policy are being printed daily.

NOTES.

The Countess of Aberdeen, wife of the governor-general of Canada, is earnestly fighting the sale of pernicious literature in the Dominion.

Speaker Reed has been thanked by the officers of the national W. C. T. U. for enforcing the law forbidding smoking on the floor of the House of Representatives.

Bishop Potter of New York will serve as umpire on an arbitration board which will settle the dispute between the lithographers of New York and their employers, who have been at odds for five weeks.

A London jury has just given a verdict of $60,000 against a distinguished physician there because he used information gained while acting as a surgeon to damage the reputation of a patient. Professional ethics had little weight with judge or jury and the public indorses the verdict.

Auguste Bohn, district superintendent of the New York Street-Cleaning Department, formerly a student at Harvard, died last week of pneumonia contracted while serving the city. Extreme devotion and ceaseless toil in the task of cleaning the Five Points district brought on the disease. What! New York, formerly the prey of Tammany!

Mr. Chamberlain's speech before the Canada Club, in London, revealed the statesman dealing with imperial affairs in a truly imperial way, but it must have made Cobden and Bright shiver. It was nothing less than a plea for free trade within the British Empire and protection against the world, and of course the colonies will not accept the free trade quid unless England establishes the protection quod. But the speech and its reception are most significant.

New Jersey is to be congratulated on a legislature which has met, adjourned, passed only about 350 laws as compared with 877 passed the year before, adopted constitutional amendments providing for biennial sessions of the legislature, abolishing lay judges who too often in the past have been the tools of "bosses," reconstructing the judiciary system, and forbidding all forms of gambling. Much credit for this is due to Governor Griggs, who, in his inaugural, urged a diminution of lawmaking and asserted his intention of signing no bills which were not imperatively demanded.

A newly erected statue of John Bright in the House of Parliament offends British legislators because so unfaithful as a likeness; a statue of Father Marquette to be placed in the Capitol offends some of our national legislators because he was a Jesuit; and a statue of Benjamin F. Butler, especially if paid for out of the public funds, will offend those in Massachusetts who cannot forget his career as a demagogue. Gen. Francis A. Walker, John C. Ropes—the historian of military campaigns—and others of like caliber appeared before the legislative committee last week and opposed such an exaltation of Butler and such a humiliation for the commonwealth.

IN BRIEF.

Prof. Marcus Dods recently said that a certain amount of German theology was good when mixed with a home-grown, bone-producing Calvinism.

Gen. O. O. Howard lectured in Faneuil Hall last week and was inspired by his environment to give an unusually telling description of Sherman's march to the sea. He received many proofs of the estimation in which he is held by his former comrades in arms and by public men and private citizens.

A Maine pastor induced every resident member of his church to contribute to remove the American Board debt by preaching a special sermon, supplemented by calls on the forty or more members absent from church when the sermon was preached, and by emphasizing the fact that mites were welcome.

There never was a time when there was more general interest in Bible study. We were shown last week the schedule of appointments regularly kept by the rector of a Reformed Episcopal church in Philadelphia, who teaches the Bible each week to not less than 4,000 people connected with sixteen distinct religious organizations in the States of New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

And now the woman's edition craze has invaded religious journalism. The Presbyterian Journal of Philadelphia is the first to succumb. The profits go to missions. The Congregational Record and New Hampshire Journal has become the property of Rev. Edwin B. Burrows, who will edit it. Some of the Australian religious newspapers are suspending or reducing their size owing to the hard times.

Some at least of those who are old enough to rely upon their memories for the information, or who have studied New England's ecclesiastical history of the period which includes the alienation of the Harvard Divinity School from the faith of its founders and the founding of Andover Theological Seminary, will read with some degree of astonishment Mr. Berle's article on the present condition of affairs in the Harvard Divinity School.

---

At a recent meeting of Adventists in Boston all those present were asked to rise who were followers of William Miller in 1832 when he set the date of the end of the world. Fifty venerable persons rose. That date has been often changed during these sixty-four years and explanations given each time to account for errors in calculation. But the faith of these aged and experienced saints in their interpretations of prophecy seems never to have faltered.

---

The Egyptian lily within a circle is the symbol of Unitarianism, so says the local Unitarian pastor who occupies Emerson's old pulpit "These symbols," he says, "satisfy both history and new socialistic humanitarianism and are symbolic of humanity's needs and aspirations. Christ said: 'Consider the lily.'" We await patiently the advent of the great army of sinners won to God by the sign of the Egyptian lily within a circle, and, meanwhile, trust in the cross.

---

The governor of Massachusetts, by proxy, and the mayor of Boston, last week, attended a reception given in Boston to Mme. Bernhardt, the actress. This, we suppose, was in recognition of her place as an artist. By way of contrast, we recall the recent statement of a devout Roman Catholic author, well known in Boston, who said, in private conversation, that, much as she admired art, she had never seen Bernhardt, and, "please God, she never would." But then, as we have elsewhere remarked, Roman Catholics look upon marriage as a sacrament, not a convenience.

---

The constable who had the courage to enforce the prohibition law of Maine in the town of Bar Harbor last summer has been driven out of office by the vote of his neighbors, in company with all the other officers who directed and assisted him. This is a direct confession that there is one place in the State where its laws are deliberately nullified for the sake of gain. We hope that this may not prove to be the deliberate purpose of the people of Bar Harbor, but if it is we can only say that a spring tonic of repentance ought to precede their summer carnival of gayety.

---

The Evangelical Messenger, reporting the first annual conference of the Evangelical Association, in New England, just held in this city, says the success or growth which has warranted this intrusion, as it were, is "the direct outcome of opposition to the doctrine of holiness manifested in the Methodist Episcopal and other churches in New England . . . Wesley's doctrine of salvation from all sin as a definite, positive experience and state of grace has been repudiated by Wesley's church." It also reports the growth of the movement, not only among the American born, but among the Swedes. How about this, Zion's Herald?

---

The modern newspaper conscience seems to be powerless at times before the temptation of a sensational "display heading." Even the Boston Journal, having the other day to invent a heading for the description of certain alleged crimes and misdemeanors, put it thus: "Mad Rush. Professor —— of Amherst Bound to be Rich. Gigantic Plot to Cheat Insurance Cos.," etc. Upon turning to the text it proved that the individual in question had at some previous time been a teacher in the State Agricultural College at Amherst. What satisfaction can it be to a paper like the Journal to untruthfully drag the name of an honored institution in the mire for the sake of a single "catchy" headline?

The Speaker of London, in a recent comparison of the Evangelical Free Church Congress with the Anglican Congress, said that the deliberations of the former were relatively more significant because its constitution was distinctly representative, that is, the congress was really a parliament. And as one reads the report of the last meeting of the Free Church Congress, which we publish on page 547, or scans the longer reports in the English religious press and the editorials based thereon, one cannot fail to realize that a foe has arisen in Great Britain able to fight and overcome the "portentous revival of extreme mediæval clericalism" within the Anglican fold and the vices of men and devices of the devil that are corrupting and assailing the life of the British people. In 1890 only four Nonconformist local councils existed and they were not on the lines of the present movement. There are now 209 local councils, representing 7,500 churches and not far from a million adherents of nine ecclesiastical bodies. Would that there were like unity of feeling and organization among the Protestant sects in the United States!

---

An ecclesiastical court of inquiry is now sitting in Boston to determine whether the Protestant Episcopal canon law has been violated by a rector in Malden, who, after having been divorced from his first wife on the ground of desertion, married again, the first wife being still alive. Bishop Thompson, who performed the second ceremony, accepted the rector's statement that there were no canonical reasons why he should not officiate. The binding effect, legally speaking, of the second marriage is not disputed. The point at issue is the duty of the church to discipline or acquit a priest who either did or did not violate a canon. Censure, suspension, removal from the ministry are disciplinary acts that may follow. It is gratifying to see a force in the community like the Roman Catholic and Episcopal clergy who have convictions on the subject of divorce, and a sense of obligation to conserve the purity of the married life. By way of contrast, what shall be said of the bishop in Chicago, whose record last week may perhaps best be set forth thus: March 26, 12 M. Divorce from theatrical manager granted to actress. March 27, 12 M. Actress married to actor by bishop.

---

STAFF CORRESPONDENCE.

FROM THE INTERIOR.

Ministers' Meeting.

The paper read before the ministers last Monday morning discussed the relations of the clergy and the press and especially the question as to whether the press is a help or hindrance in Christian work. Rev. Theodore Clifton, the author of the paper, and, in fact, all who spoke on the subject seemed to feel that the press is decidedly an agent of good, although in its character and management leaving much to be desired. The Sunday paper was not approved, but the general moral advance of the daily paper in the last decade was gratefully recognized.

Next Monday the ministers are to meet in the parlors of the seminary and spend the day together in prayer and conference. By some this is called a "retreat." The custom of spending a day each year in this way has now been followed for six or eight years and always with spiritual advantage. Sometimes the day chosen has come in the autumn in preparation for the year's work, sometimes just before the Week of Prayer, and sometimes, as this year, during Lent. There seems to be a growing purpose among the ministers West to make more and more of Lent. Some are inclined to pay little attention to the Week of Prayer and to concentrate their efforts to secure spiritual quickening among their people on special services during Lent. Holy Week is then emphasized. Several of our churches will have services during the week. Among them are the Church of the Redeemer, where considerable religious interest, under the leadership of its enthusiastic and hard-working pastor, Mr. Manss, has manifested itself, and at Glencoe, where the re entrance upon his work of the pastor, Rev. Dr. Moses Smith, will be signaled by special services. As many know, Dr. Smith has been laid aside for several months on account of trouble with his eyes, but although not fully recovered is able to take up his work again, to the great joy of his people who have stood loyally and helpfully by him during his sufferings.

A New Publishing House.

Our theological seminary proposes to publish immediately two books through a press of its own. They are The Students' Life of Jesus, by Professor Gilbert, which will be a volume of about 400 pages, and will be critical and compact in style as is fitting in a work of its kind, and The Origin and Development of the Nicene Theology, by Professor Scott. This volume will contain the lectures recently given at Princeton, on the L. P. Stone foundation, and repeated at the request of the directors and faculty of our own seminary before the students and their friends here. The lectures show a vast amount of patient reseach and will certainly repay careful reading and study. Professor Scott antagonizes the Ritschlian School and is very severe on Harnack and his explanation of the rise of doctrines. In this new attempt of the seminary to secure a wider audience for its professors through a press of its own, very many are taking a deep interest. It has long been felt that the professors had a message for the public, and it is with no little satisfaction that we chronicle the fact that some of them are ready to give it.

The Cutters' Strike.

This strike seems little nearer settlement than two weeks ago. The manufacturers declare that they have men enough at work and that they intend to exercise their right to employ non-union men and pay them what they earn. They say that they cannot suffer employés to determine how little shall be paid or what the length of the day shall be or who shall or shall not work for them. They claim to have paid their men all that they had previously asked, to have required only eight hours a day labor and to have paid wages which enabled them to earn from $20 to $30 a week. They say that they do not object to laboring unions, but that the particular union of cutters is objectionable to them because of the character of its leaders. They disclaim any responsibility for the suffering which the strike of the cutters has caused among tailors employed by contractors in the sweat shops. They decline to arbitrate because they say there can be nothing to arbitrate when the question is whether they or their employés are to be allowed to manage their business. On the other hand, the Hull House, Professor Small and some other well known citizens have insisted that the differences should be submitted to arbitration and, in their published statements, have expressed sympathy with the strikers. The strikers, in their manifesto, while admitting substantially all that the manufacturers assert as to wages, yet deny that they want all men paid alike but affirm their determination to have an eight-hour day for all who work on garments, to secure recognition for their union and the right to decide upon the amount of their wages. Reports differ as to suffering among the toilers in the sweat shops. Undoubtedly there is suffering. There always is and must be so long as the sweat shop exists. If the strike had for its object the abolition of the sweat shop and all that it stands for it would have the sympathy of everybody. But the Jews, who have had the condition of these workers carefully examined, say there is no unusual suffering among them and that ample provision has been made for any possible need. The truthfulness of this report is denied by Miss Jane Addams of the Hull House. One thing, at least, seems clear. It would do no harm to yield to the strikers' request and select a committee of fair-minded, unprejudiced men and allow them to give their opinion as to the justice or injustice of the claims the men are making. If the manufacturers are right in their statements no fair-minded person will hesitate to say so. Times are too hard to justify either labor or capital in disturbing trade or production, even temporarily.

The Salvation Army

Last Sunday Commissioner Eva Booth was in Chicago. She received a hearty welcome and did all she could to explain the disagreement between her father and brother and to prevent any secession from the ranks. Next Sunday Mr. Ballington Booth is to be in the city. His reception will certainly be enthusiastic for he is well known here and greatly beloved. It is not thought that he will seek to persuade members of the present army to secede or that either he or his wife desire in any way to interfere with the work of the army as it has been previously carried on. He will surely find a large field here for just the kind of work he has said he desires to do in New York. Chicago has been in sympathy with the work of the Salvation Army in the city, and our ministers and leading men in our churches have given it aid and open approval. They are not prepared to withdraw their sympathy as yet, but can hardly fail to approve the larger work proposed by the late Commander Ballington Booth. All dislike the name proposed. Something simpler and more striking is desired.

Chicago, March 28. FRANKLIN.

---

FROM AUSTRALIA.

It has been an astonishment to us in this part of the world to have "the blast of war blown in our ears" from such a quarter. We look upon war between England and Germany as possible, but not probable; but as to war between America and England we are hardly able to conceive of it as a possibility. It is true that we have America pictured to us sometimes, not so much as a nationality as a congeries of nationalities and of nationalities not all friendly to England, but the idea that the "jingo" party might possibly plunge the old land and the new into a bloody conflict comes as a shock to us. We are far from the seat of the trouble and there may be more to be said for President Cleveland than Australians wot of, but the newspapers of these colonies have caught up a phrase used by one of your pulpit orators, viz., "the crime of a century."

Australian Federation.

"Wars and rumors of wars," the prospect of colossal contests between mighty nations has, maybe, slightly diverted our attention from home affairs, but there seems little doubt that movements are in progress more momentous, so far as the future of Australia is concerned, than any that have been chronicled for many years. At last the different colonies seem really to be moving in earnest towards federation. Four colonies (Tasmania, New South Wales, Victoria and South Australia) have either passed or all but passed a Federation Enabling Bill, under which a convention to frame a constitution will be called. Queensland and Western Australia tarry, but it is hoped that within a few months they will have made arrangements to fall into line with the rest of Australia. When we speak of federation we hardly think now of including New Zealand. In distance and interests alike it seems too remote from the rest of Australasia to join the federal compact.

Free Trade in New South Wales.

With the first day of 1896 the Reid government's policy of free trade and direct taxation came into force. Duties to the extent of £700,000 were swept away on New Year's Day. Six months later another £100,000 of duties will disappear. Another £200,000 will be taken off in installments. When the last installment has been lopped off the revenue of New South Wales will be derived from indirect taxation on spirits, tobacco and opium and from direct taxation of land and income. The land tax is at the rate of 1d. in the pound on unimproved value, with an exemption of holdings up to £240; the income tax at the rate of 6d. per pound on all sources of income, with an exemption of £200. It is needless to say that very different prophecies are made as to the result of these tariff changes.

Civil Service Reform.

Perhaps, if things were to be rightly judged, the best work done by the government, now in recess, has been the passing of the Civil Service Act. What politicians in the past talked about—often with little enough of sincerity—has been done: the Civil Service has been delivered from the curse of patronage. Three commissioners, called the Public Service Board, have charge of the departments. It is expected that, as a result of their labors, there will be a decrease of cost with an increase of efficiency. "Stuffing" the service is to be put an end to. Those who without merit have been exalted are to be depressed; those who have been unrighteously depressed are to be exalted, and the loafers and incapables are to receive notice to quit.

Distinguished Visitors.

It will not, I hope, be taken as a token of disrespect to General Booth and Mark Twain that they come in at the end of this letter. Both notable men, though in very different lines, it will perhaps be fair to say that they have caused a ripple on the tide of public life and have passed. Mark Twain, though not possessed of the gifts of oratory, has left very kindly memories of himself behind. His visit from a business point of view has, it is understood, been satisfactory to himself and his manager; and, be it recorded to his credit, that in his closing addresses he spoke earnest, and one might say Christian, words.

Sydney, N. S. W., Jan. 20. W. A.

CURRENT THOUGHT.

AT HOME.

The Ethics of Modern Journalism is the title of a striking article in the April Scribner's, written by Aline Gorrine, and from the standpoint of the French. The writer says: "If there be in publicity for the mass of mankind that enormous power for compelling righteousness that is assumed, then we are prevented from demurring when its modes of procedure tread, in any direction, too roughly upon our susceptibilities. If the price of the benefaction be an unliterary journalism, a journalism that exploits privacies, we must pay it. If the sacrifice demanded be a loss of intellectual delicacy, of the ability to feel fine distinctions on the part of the large masses who read the newspapers, we must make it. It is always open to us to believe that the loss is not final; that what we regret is in temporary eclipse during transitional conditions."

Mr. W. D. Howells is fast becoming one of the most strenuous preachers of Christian socialism that we have. In the April Century he says that "fraternity is supernatural. . . . If the destruction of its enemies would have availed, we should not still be waiting for the millennium, now nearly nine hundred years overdue. The millennium, the reign of Christliness on earth, will be nothing mystical or strange." He then adds what is more questionable: "The millennium cannot come until the means of livelihood are assured to each citizen; that without this there can be only chance good in life—the good of accident, of impulse, of risk; there can properly be no self-sacrifice without it, for a man can sacrifice himself only when others do not suffer by his act."

Hon. Charles Beardsley, in the April Arena, says: "Those who imagine that Prof. George Herron is a mere political or social reformer wholly mistake him. Primarily he is neither. He belongs to the intensely religious type of men. His socialism and radicalism—using these words in their best sense—are the outgrowth of an intense religious feeling, a profound religious conviction, seeking to express itself in the actual terms of life. Next to the pre-eminent characters of the Old and New Testaments, the men who have most influenced his thought, as he himself would doubtless say, were John Calvin, who particularly influenced his earlier years, Cardinal Newman, the Middle Age mystics, Frederick Maurice of England, Mazzini and Elisha Mulford."

ABROAD.

La Union, the autonomist paper of Havana, estimates that the war has cost Spain and the residents of Cuba $134,000,000 during the past year.

The British Weekly, describing the recent Free Church Congress, which we report on page 547 says: "No report can give an adequate idea of the extraordinary buoyancy, confidence and even jubilation which characterized the proceedings. . . . All the signs were of a rising, hopeful, victorious cause, and, what was better still, of a deeper religious spirit, and a firm trust in supernatural aid. In this is our true hope, 'With the risen Saviour all things rise.'"

Bishop J. M. Thoburn, in The Christian Advocate, describing the effect of the policy of retrenchment just ordered by the Methodist Episcopal Church in India, the field over which Bishop Thoburn presides, says: "A crisis is upon us, and a crisis of the most portentous character. . . . The blow has fallen on India first, but the other foreign fields will share the same fate if the impending crisis is not successfully met. Backward movements of this kind are not easily arrested. They are very apt to gather momentum rapidly. For several years past the influences which are now culminating in impending disaster have been at work, and if not met and mastered quickly they will soon be felt in every nook of the foreign field."

WANTED, AN ISSUE.

BY PRES. G. A. GATES, IOWA COLLEGE.

What are the morally earnest people of America going to do in the general line of political activity? People of that sort seem to be caught at present in this predicament: at a time when there is universal demand that people of character should actively bring that character to bear in politics, and an earnest people desire to respond to that demand, they are met by the fact that there is nothing in our State or national politics that is worthy of a man's moral enthusiasm. What great cause is there now that a man would be ready and glad and count himself honored to die for? "There have been times," said Henry Watterson in an address to the students of Iowa College, "when there were political issues worth a man's giving his life to. But all there is between the two great parties now is mighty small politics; and that, young people, is exactly what I think." Such a state might be accounted for by a condition of profound and peaceful prosperity. But there is too much uneasiness in our social and industrial life to admit such an explanation. There is enough wrong to be righted, but it seems to have difficulty in getting itself defined as a clear political issue.

In the questions between the two great parties, Democratic and Republican, there certainly has not appeared anything in ten years that could appeal to the highest there is in man. There have been some business questions up like the tariff, the silver question, etc., the intricacies of which the wisest of men do not understand and upon which the most ignorant have the most dogmatic opinions. This world is not so poor that any matter of mere gain and loss of a material sort can permanently hold the sacrificial devotion of men. The general political and social apathy sometimes complained of is accounted for under this fact. Give the people an issue about which it is worth while to be unapathetic.

But in the two main parties we all perfectly understand, and none better than the politicians, that it is mainly a scramble for office. Sometimes it is a mere desire for office; in other cases, particularly in municipal politics, it is a desire for an opportunity for plunder directly or indirectly. What is there in all that to bring out the best there is in the public life of citizens, or what is there to lift politics up to the high plane where the res publicæ, the real public interests, should be?

Not unlikely such an issue may arise within the next few years. The prohibition party, if it would narrow its issue to being simply an anti-saloon party and nothing else, I believe could command such enthusiasm. The performances of saloon politics seem to be blindly forcing that issue. If it can be clear cut and forced between these two things, saloon and anti-saloon, I believe the moral enthusiasm of the country could be aroused to a sufficient extent to give an anti-saloon party the balance of power which might very soon grow into controlling power to every desirable extent. If that issue could once be fought out then another one could be taken up.

The people's party has in it some elements that appeal very strongly to the highest qualities in human character. At the heart of it it seems to be an honest movement toward better conditions for the common people. But, alas! That seems to have a tendency to fall into the hands of the Philistines or stay in the hands of the incompetent. It seems to have started with the purpose of championing the cause of the producing and labor classes. This was certainly most praiseworthy, but it is to be feared that it is now undertaking too many things to accomplish any one of them. It is probable that the country must suffer yet more in many ways before it will be possible to unite the moral forces of the nation on any one great moral issue.

There are, however, signs all around the sky of approaching crises, which give hope for the clearing of the ground for some great national issues of sufficient size to attract the attention of people whose chief enthusiasms are for right, and hold attention long enough for a fight to a finish. Some of these signs are (1) the perfecting of the organizations of the money power in all great public affairs, (2) the increase in number, power and universality of combinations which arbitrarily control prices, principally prices of commodities in which the poorest of the people are most interested. It is easier to exploit the poorest people than any others. In the end it will be found to be the most fatal to national life. (3) A third indication of a possible moral issue is the rapidly developing political power of the liquor interest.

If these forces during the next ten or fifteen years, or perhaps a quarter of a century, be allowed to go on increasing as they have done during the last quarter of a century some issue is quite certain to come to the fore in such a way as to prove nationally redemptive by reason of the fact that a union of moral forces of the nation on some one line may be forced and that union held steady unto some definite accomplishment.

But, one may object, all these three are negative causes, the call now is to beat some evil. One answer is that that is not always anything weak or unworthy or unneedful. But a more constructive reply is that all these are but species under the genus of social reform. The essence of all social reform in all time is the championing of the under classes and helping them along up. The condemnation, nota bene, of our present order is not so much that some are very well to do and cultured, but that they are selfishly rather than Christianly so. That is, they are pharisaically glad that they are so far removed from all anxiety and suffering rather than devoting themselves to making as universal as possible those achievements of theirs. There are plenty of individual exceptions for examples of the better order.

Socialism at its best, apart from its vagaries and haste, is seeking what we are all, so far as we are right minded and right hearted, seeking — a truer helpfulness, a wider brotherhood, a profounder missionary spirit. Such an ideal seems indeed far enough removed from present day politics. It fairly startles one to reflect how far! It ought to be sufficiently shocking that a man who has been a public official of one of the best of our great commonwealths for a quarter century, can deliberately assert that in that whole period, in committee or caucus or council of any sort, never was the question uppermost, What would be the most helpful to the people? but always only one question, What will be the most advantageous to the party?

Give the people of these United States of America a worthy issue of commanding moral eminence that has in it some divine call to sacrifice, that calls upon a man's purest heroism, and we shall see that the spirit of our fathers who heard father Abraham's calls of thirty years ago, or of our remoter ancestors of 1776, is not dead but only sleeping.

A BARITONE'S PARISH.

II.

BY REV. JAMES M. LUDLOW, D. D.

There was a motley crowd in the front room of a Bowery twenty-cent lodging house. The room was the parlor, but the occupants called it The Deck, in distinction from the rest of the house which was filled with bunks. There were hard old soakers in periodical state of repentance, or, to speak more scientifically, in that state of gland-moistening that comes after a certain amount of poor beer has permeated the system. There were young prodigals, in there for the night because they had no money for a night's carousal elsewhere. There was a sprinkling of honest men, thankful for even this refuge from the sleety streets. There were some two hundred pieces of the great human wreck made by the hard times, which were beached in Brady's Harbor, as the place was called.

The usual hubbub had calmed while a story-teller, who sat on the edge of a table and whose slouched hat and high ulster collar did not altogether conceal the genial face of Dr. Knox, entertained the crowd with old army yarns, which, as usual with such literature, were taken largely from the apocryphal portion of our national annals.

"Bully for you! Give us another!" was the encore, emphasized with the rattle of backgammon boards and boot heels.

"Haven't any more, but I have a friend here who will bring up the reserves in the way of a song."

"Song! Song! Rosin your larynx, old boy!" greeted the suggestion, while the crowd gathered closer about Vox, and several who had "turned in" for the night turned out of their bunks again, minus coats and boots. A friendly slap on the back by something less than a ten-pound hand helped the singer to clear his throat.

Vox gave them O'Grady's Goat and one or two other classics of the Tenderloin District, with the rapt appreciation of his audience. Tom Moore's Minstrel Boy to the genuine old Irish melody struck the heroic chord in the breasts of men, most of whom were deserters from the real battlefields of life. Then Vox dropped into a lullaby. The tender mother words given in his masculine tones seemed a burlesque as he began, but the deep bass took on the softness and sweetness of a contralto, and made one think, if not of a mother cooing to her baby, at least of some rough, great-hearted man who had found a lost child, and was rocking it to sleep in his strong arms. More than one greasy sleeve got into its owner's eyes before Vox ended.

"An' 'avint ye a Scotch sang, me laddie?" asked an old fellow, knocking the ashes from his pipe against the windowsill.

My Ain Countrie followed. As the music floated the thick smoke of the room seemed to drift away. The land of birds and beauty lay before eyes that for months and years had looked only upon the crowded misery of slumdom. When the voice ceased the illusion continued for a while, in spite of the picking sleet at the window-panes.

At length the silence was broken by a voice that came from a distant corner of the room. It repeated the last verse in tones as pure as those of Vox himself, though a high tenor in quality. Some of the notes were broken by hiccoughs.

Vox looked in amazement at the singer—a half-drunken, youngish man curled nearly double in the chair, which was tipped back against the wall. His battered derby and unscraped chin did not effectually disguise the handsome fellow beneath them. He was like the Apollo Belvedere when first exhumed from the mud of Antium.

"Who are you, my friend?" asked Vox, in as kindly a tone as his surprise allowed.

"Friend (hic)? Haven't got any friend," replied the man, and he struck up the verse that had just been rendered. His voice was husky at first, but after a few notes it clarified itself, as brooks do in running. His tones became marvelously sweet, touching the highest note without the slightest suggestion of falsetto. It was a transcendent voice, one that might have once belonged to some spirit and gone astray among men. The singer went through the verse this time without hiccough or slur, but the instant he stopped the drunk resumed its sway. Down came the chair with a bump on to its front legs, which sent the man headlong into the arms of Vox, with whom he wanted to fight.

"I won't fight you," said Vox, helping him back to his seat, "but I'll dare you to sing with me."

"Sin' wi' you! 'Cept your challenge. I can whip you with my—my tongue (hic) as bad as my wife; she (hic) whipped me with her (hic) tongue."

"What shall we sing, old boy?" inquired Vox with that easy familiarity which showed that he had seen such customers before.

"Sin' a song o' sispence, Pocket full o' rye," sang the man.

"Say, what's the use o' havin' your pocket full of rye (hic)? D'rather have a belly full o' rye; wouldn't you (hic)?"

"You've enough rye in you for tonight," said Vox. "Come, pull the cork out of your throat, and let's have a song!"

Vox got a chair and tipped it back by the side of the maudlin fellow, then struck up Mazzini's two-part song, The Muleteers. The stranger joined in. Such singing was never heard before or since in Brady's Harbor, nor, for that matter, in Carnegie Hall. After a bar or two the men rose to their feet and stood with arms interlocked and heads touching as their voices soared in the grand finale.

The noise brought in Brady, who said it was "galoreous," but for all that they'd have to "bolt up their chins," as it was past twelve o'clock, and the "perlice wasn't so easy on lodgin' houses as they was on the swill shops."

"See here, Vox," said the Doctor, "I am going home alone tonight. Find out your pal. Chum him a bit. A man with that voice has had culture. Scrape the rust off him, and you will find something polished beneath, or I am no judge of human nature. Take him for your parish, Phil."

"A heathenish sort of a mission that," replied Vox, looking at the fellow, who was trying, as he said, to find his night key to get his boots off with.

After a moment's hesitation, Vox added: "All right, Doctor. You've had as hard a field with me if it wasn't so dirty a one. I'll take him for a sobering walk in the drizzle, and then get him into better quarters than he has here."

Vox had his hands full with this job, and at times his arms full too. His companion insisted that the Bowery sidewalk, covered with sleet, was a toboggan slide, and that he was tumbling off the sled. What could he do with his protégé? He couldn't walk him or slide him all night. A policeman proposed to relieve him of his anxiety by taking them both to the station house, but was persuaded not to perform this heroic exploit by the man's assurance that his pal's legs hadn't any snakes in them, and by Vox's demonstration that he could stand alone. Then Vox thought of the story of the Good Samaritan, with rising respect for the priest that passed by on the other side. Next, having got into the charity business, he envied the Samaritan at least his ass, instead, as Vox soliloquized, "of making an ass of myself." He thought of taking the fellow to some hotel, paying for his lodging, hiring the clerk to see that he was properly sobered off in the morning; but concluded that, whatever might have been the case on the road to Jericho, there was no innkeeper on the Bowery whom he could trust with such a commission, or who would trust him to call in in the morning and pay the bill. He could take him back to Brady's Harbor, so he thought, but when they turned about the man declared that he wouldn't walk up the toboggan, and sat down on the sidewalk for another ride. The flash of the lamp of a passing cab let a little light in upon his problem. Hailing the driver, with whose help he got his load into the vehicle, he told him to drive to No. — Madison Avenue, where he had his own day quarter—elegant rooms fitted up for his instruction of the fashionable daughters of music at six dollars an hour. Sweezy, the janitor, was roused up, and with his assistance Vox was able to congratulate himself that he had gone "one better" on the Good Samaritan in that he had lodged his man in finer chambers. He could not help laughing at the incongruousness of the snoring mass that lay on his elegant divan. He thought of Bottom, the weaver, with the ass's head in the lap of Titania, and, as he piled the cushions so that the fellow would not tumble off, addressed him in the words of the fairy:

"Come, sit thee down upon this flowery bed,
While I thy amiable cheeks do coy,
And stick musk roses in thy sleek, smooth head,
And kiss thy fair, large ears, my gentle joy."

But tears are near to laughter, and, as Vox contemplated his completed work, he had to sit down a moment and cry.

"It's a hard sight, sir," said Sweezy, "but bless you, Mr. Vox, the best of us has just sich among our closest friends. I wish, sir, as how it was my own boy, Tommy, you had found the night." And Sweezy cried too.

Sweezy promised to take an early look at the man in the morning when he turned on the steam heat. Vox went away to his boarding house around the corner, vexed at the Doctor for getting him into such a scrape, yet feeling down in the depths of his heart a satisfaction that more than half compensated him for his rough experience. He fell asleep thinking of the Good Samaritan, Bottom with the ass's head, Salvation Army lasses and the Prohibition party, and in the midst of a horrid dream woke up imagining himself drunk and about to fall off a precipice.

Before breakfast next morning he came around to the rooms to look after his charge. The fellow had vamosed. Sweezy was taking account of the furniture, and, though nothing was missing and only a lamp shade broken, declared that Vox had been victimized by a sharper.

"A regular sharper, sir. I thought so when you brought him in. You ought to have knowed, sir, at a glance of him what he was. You've nussed, sir, a wiper in your bosom, and its a mercy, sir, a mercy if he hasn't stung you worse. Is your pocketbook with you? You ought at least to have took off his boots. That spot on the cover will never come out without piecing it."

Vox contemplated the scene of his first charity exploit much as Bonaparte did the battlefield of Waterloo. He had but one remark to make, which was, "Sweezy, don't you open your head about this business."

Vox was not in an amiable mood when he met the Doctor the next Sunday night. He debated with him the advisability of decent people attempting to do slumming in the name of either religion or charity. He took the ground that the men who had themselves been recruited from the dens of the city were the only ones to do this work, as they train cheetahs to hunt their kind and reformed thieves to become detectives. The Doctor was half inclined to agree with him, not so much from conviction as seeing the disgust the business had wrought in the mind of his friend. Yet he excused himself for having led Vox into this experience on the ground that it is Christian duty to try to rescue the fallen, even though one does not accomplish anything.

"I don't believe your theory," said Vox, warmly. "Let buzzards clean up the offal, but decent birds had better follow their sweeter instincts and keep away. One thing is certain, I am not going to light on such moral carrion again."

[To be continued.]

THE CHRISTIAN LIFE.*

VI. CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP.

BY REV. FLOYD W. TOMKINS, JR.

God being our Father it must follow that we are all brethren. This should never be forgotten by the true Christian. While we stand as individuals before God responsible each for himself there is also a responsibility as regards others which cannot be evaded. The "heresy of Cain," "Am I my brother's keeper?" is apt to be perpetuated by Christians who think that they are in the world simply to care for their own souls and to keep themselves pure. "Where is thy brother," is the ringing question which contradicts the heresy and makes it impossible for a man to save his own life unless he has first lost it, used it and worn it out in the service of men.

Christian fellowship is a necessity. If we love God truly we must love God's children. We serve God in serving them. The cry to Christ as he hung upon the cross was, and must ever be, a divine truth applicable to the servants as to the Master: "He saved others; himself he cannot save." "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."

*Copyright, F. W. Tomkins, Jr., 1896.

For us nineteenth century Christians this fellowship finds its sphere in three particulars: (1) in church work, (2) in general philanthropic work and (3) in missionary work. Let us see how the Christian is to meet these three calls.

1. When we enter the Christian family, the church, through Christ who is the door, that family is represented to us by the parish, the branch of the church which, for the time, asks our allegiance. There the first call for our service is to be heard. For God is a God of order. If every man worked as he pleased, in independent effort, chaos would result, and harm rather than good would follow. The church is like an army; it has its sections, its divisions, and each soldier must fight where he is placed.

Churches today are doing more work than ever before in Christian history. Parish houses, parish societies, rescue missions and all kinds of ministering agencies are felt to be as necessary a part of church life as praise and prayer. Worship and work are the balanced parts of parish life as they are of the personal religious life, and rightly so. For Christ has placed the church in the world as a regenerating power. With her faith, her worship, her ministry, she must help men everywhere to believe, to pray and to serve the Lord.

What, then, are we as Christians doing in our church? How much, how little? Are we Sunday school teachers, missionary workers, pastor's helpers, daughters of the King, members of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, or of the Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip? If not, why not? Perhaps we answer that we are not fitted for such work, or we have not the time, or there are more workers than there is work. But we would not give such answers to Jesus if he asked us face to face. Blessed ourselves, we must try to bring a blessing to others. "Our sufficiency is of God." We need not rely upon our own fitness. If we are busy at home, so much the more reason why we should be busy also at church, for at least a part of our time is God's. And if there seems to be no place for us we must make a place. Every minister is only too glad to provide work for his people if they will follow his leadership and do their best where he places them.

And now how real our Christianity becomes! We are workers with God, partners with the dear Christ in redeeming the world, using what he has given us to bless others. Worship means to us strength for work. Prayer inspires, praise exalts, truth directs. So that we go out of the church full of the spirit of ministry. That is real Christianity. Not getting, but giving; getting in order to give. Building up the kingdom of Christ in the world, not dreaming of a kingdom somewhere else. The kingdom is here. It is being established now. Read our Lord's parables and see how he makes the kingdom a part of the earth life. Leaven hidden in meal, a grain of mustard seed growing, talents used, a care for the thirsty, the hungry, the sick, the imprisoned—those are the pictures Jesus gives of the kingdom, everywhere working righteousness, destroying evil, strengthening the weak, healing the diseased. The Christian life is a battle, but a battle not for our own safety, for who ever heard of a soldier trying to take care of himself regardless of the enemy or of the field he is to win? A battle to keep others, to save men—that is the Christian life. Hence, every Christian must be a worker, not only praying: "Thy kingdom come," but bringing that kingdom with all his might. An idle church member is an impossibility. If you and I are Christians we must work in our church, and work hard.

2. But because of our unhappy divisions and because, too, the church and the life about us (sometimes called secular) are somewhat distinct we have opportunities calling us outside of the churches. We must always count these as secondary calls, but they are most important and cannot be neglected. Our city or town has great demands upon us. Schools and hospitals and orphanages and nurseries—how many helpers they need! Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations, temperance societies, reform leagues, industrial societies, these all must rely upon Christians for their strength. Men, as a part of their religious life, must take an active interest in civic reform and pure politics and women must look into the question of social purity and rescue their fallen sisters and bring the light of their own culture to cheer the poor through healthy entertainments, loan exhibitions, summer rest work and similar methods. Girls can touch girls through girls' clubs, boys can help boys through boys' clubs. There is work for all in every town and hamlet.

And there is this also to be remembered, that though the church ought to undertake this work, yet cannot because of divisions, nothing so surely hastens true union as united work. Christians working side by side grow to understand each other better, separations are seen to be faulty, and, loving and serving the same dear Lord, they grow nearer to each other in the bond of peace. I am convinced that church unity, under the Holy Spirit's guidance, will come in no other way. No laws or agreements or conferences will make us one, but working and weeping side by side, through tears and drops of toil, the radiant truth will be seen by us all. The poet pictures a great fact when he brings together over a child's grave an estranged wife and husband:

> O, there above the little grave
> We kissed again, with tears.

When the estranged and sadly separated parts of Christ's dear family meet over the wounded, suffering, dying children of God, then they are led to "kiss again, with tears."

3. And then there is missionary work. The field enlarges from parish and town to the world. "The world for Christ"—nothing short of that satisfies the Christian. "But what can I do? It is such a big world!" Yes; but Christ has been patiently working all through the years, and so must we be patient workers. And we can do much if we will. First, we can believe heart and soul in missions. Few of us do. We have a general interest, but it is vague. "Charity begins at home," some say. Yes; it begins there, but it does not end there. "Their sound is gone out into all lands; and their words unto the ends of the world." "Go ye into all the world." Christ tells his ministers to preach and to baptize everywhere. We have no business to question and ask why. Here are our marching orders and we must obey. No man can be a true Christian and not believe in missions. Second, we can refuse to draw any line as to places. I wish the words "domestic" and "foreign" could be dropped as regards missions, for we have no right to discriminate. "God has made of one blood all nations of men." Third, we can pray. Ah, a little petition every night and morning would not take long, and fervently offered it would mean so much. "God, please bless and help all missionaries and their work." Suppose every Christian prayed simply that every day, how long before the multitudes would come in? Fourth, we can give. And as we give our interest will grow. That admirable tract, Mrs. Pickett's Missionary Box, tells how closely our daily life may be brought to that of those who know not God. "A penny a blessing"—do we give that?

These are the parts of fellowship. God grant us grace to work together in our church, in our home, in missionary effort, for the coming of the kingdom.

THE WHEREABOUTS OF NANSEN.

BY PROF. G. FREDERICK WRIGHT.

The minimum period set by Nansen for appearing upon the east coast of Greenland was three years, which would make him due some time next summer, though he urged his friends to have no serious anxiety about him should his imprisonment in the northern ice continue five years. The recent reports concerning him seem the less probable from the fact that they emanate from the point near the mouth of the Lena River from which he set out. So that if he has actually returned to that place all his theories have proved to be fallacious. But this both the world and he could well endure, provided he has seen the North Pole and returned in safety. There is, also, an indefiniteness about the reports which is discouraging. It seems incredible that so much should have been heard from him without hearing more. It is probable, therefore, that this rumor will turn out to be false, like the others which had been circulated during the past year.

The evidence of the ice movement past the North Pole, upon which Nansen was depending for the success of his expedition, is at once impressive and interesting, and is, I believe, much stronger than many persons in high positions have been ready to grant. In the first place, a stream of floe ice does constantly pass from the north of Spitzbergen down the east coast of Greenland and, after rounding Cape Farewell, is carried by the currents 300 miles up the west coast. In the winter and spring of 1870 the crew of the ill-fated ship Hansa actually spent 200 days upon this ice, having floated meanwhile more than 500 miles in a direct line, coming out near Cape Farewell. In the second place, Siberian wood is the sole dependence of the natives in southwestern Greenland. Indeed, this supply is so regular that it can be calculated upon about as certainly as the return of the seasons. One of the most exciting experiences of a trip to the west coast of Greenland is the encountering of this driftwood as it is slowly moving along with the Spitzbergen ice floe, which obstructs access to southwestern Greenland. The course of its journey must have been very nearly that which Nansen laid out for himself.

But, in the third place, Nansen relied upon what he believed to be direct and positive evidence that certain relics from the Jeannette, which was crushed in the ice north of the Lena River in 1881, were actually found upon an ice floe off the coast of southwestern Greenland three years later. Among these relics, according to Mr. Lytzen, was (1) a list of provisions, in the handwriting and with the signature of Captain De Long; (2) a written list of the boats of the Jeannette; (3) "a pair of trousers made of oiled linen, marked 'Louis Noros,'" who was one of the survivors of the Jeannette. These relics were forwarded to a friend in Copenhagen, who, after keeping them some time, sent them to the international exhibition at Amsterdam. When this closed they were returned to Copenhagen in a wooden case and were stored in the loft of their owner's house. The owner dying soon after they were neglected, and his wife, ignorant of their value, since they appeared to be nothing but trash, destroyed them in clearing out the garret; so that when Nansen went to examine them he was three months too late. Nevertheless, the evidence, which had been published, was so detailed and convincing that he accepted the truth of the story, notwithstanding the attempts of certain prominent American authorities to discredit it. Dr. Dall of the Smithsonian Institution considers them to have been some rubbish thrown off from the Yantic, which went up to Smith Sound in search of the Proteus in 1883. But Nansen claims that the Eskimos certainly did not know enough to perpetrate such a hoax. It was more likely, he said, that these relics floated with the Spitzbergen ice from the Siberian Sea than that such a mistake should have been made by an intelligent Danish officer. Furthermore, the course of the currents from the mouth of Smith Sound would not carry the ice floes to southwestern Greenland, but rather to Labrador.

There is, therefore, good reason yet to look for the arrival of Nansen's party on the southeast coast of Greenland some time during the coming summer or the summer after. The eyes of all the world will now turn with intensest interest to the borders of the ice floes that year after year move in solemn procession between Iceland and Greenland. As astronomers sweep the heavens with their telescopes to catch the first glimpse of a returning comet, so will the adventurous seamen in these mysterious waters scan the horizon to catch the first sight of any indications of human life among these masses of floating ice. If any shall be discovered they will be the occasion of as much greater and more thrilling interest to the world as a man is greater than the clods of earth upon which he treads.

THE FEDERATION OF BRITISH NONCONFORMISTS.

BY OUR ENGLISH REPRESENTATIVE.

Readers of The Congregationalist have already been made acquainted with the origin, development and aims of the movement for the federation of the evangelical free churches of England and Wales. Of the four congresses held, this at Nottingham, March 9–12, is by far the most important, representative, inspiring and successful. The 300 local councils which now exist in various parts of the country sent representatives to the number of 500. They comprise Wesleyan, Primitive, United Free and New Connexion Methodists, Congregationalists, Baptists, Presbyterians, Friends, etc., but the basis of representation is territorial, not denominational. As Mr. Hugh Price Hughes put it in his presidential address:

We are not here as denominationalists, but simply as evangelical free churchmen. The surprising thing is that the various dissenting communions, whose points of difference are insignificant compared with their points of agreement, have not ere this drawn together. The federation that is now taking place will enormously increase their power in aggressive Christian work, in the fight, which is not yet ended, for religious liberty, and in counteracting the wave of sacerdotalism that is now sweeping over the country.

Civic recognition of the congress was given by the mayor, who issued a thousand invitations to a reception at the castle, and the sheriff, who on the following days entertained the delegates at tea. Thus Nonconformity, which has long been officially snubbed, is slowly assuming its right place in the state and receiving due recognition. Even the London Times, which until recently completely ignored dissent, has given considerable space to appreciative articles on the congress.

Rev. J. H. Jowett, Dr. Dale's successor at Birmingham, preached the sermon with which the congress opened. The discourse was an eloquent plea for intenser devotion to the personal Christ. The president's address, which followed, was a masterly analysis of the federation movement, its cause and significance, and an unanswerable statement of the Nonconformist position. Mr. Hughes traced the remarkable progress of the movement to two causes—the entire disappearance of internal differences among Nonconformists, who are at one in essentials and agree to differ on minor points, and the modern revival of extreme mediæval clericalism, such as "would have shocked Archbishop Laud himself."

The discussion on Church and Press will long live in the memory of those who heard it. Much interest had been excited by the announcement of Dr. Robertson Nicoll's name as opener. [Dr. Nicoll edits The British Weekly and The Expositor.—ED.] The doctor rarely emerges from what he is pleased to call his "editorial obscurity," and, in the words of Mr. Hughes, "It was an immense satisfaction to many, who have for years owed him much, to have the great privilege of looking upon the face and hearing the voice of our greatest editor." It had been feared that Dr. Nicoll would not be equal to the physical strain of reading his paper and making his voice heard, but so sympathetic were his hearers that when he rose to speak there fell upon the assembly a great hush, which was only broken when some specially fine passage stirred them to the depths. Dr. Nicoll's suggestion that the national council should appoint a publication committee to aid in the production of a penny Spectator, and another committee, with Principal Fairbairn as chairman, to prepare for the young a catechism of views Nonconformists hold in common, will receive the careful consideration of the executive. Following Dr. Nicoll, Mr. A. E. Fletcher [Mr. Fletcher formerly edited the Daily Chronicle and now edits The New Age.—ED.], than whom no man has higher ideals in journalism, or, indeed, in any department of life, complained that newspapers publish much that they should not and little that they should. If there had been a daily paper in Jerusalem at the time, the editor would not have thought it worth while to report the Sermon on the Mount. Mr. Percy Bunting doubted whether a journal on the lines of the Spectator could be produced for a penny, whilst Dr. Lunn was not prepared to admit that in order to be a power a paper must pay its way, for when the Pall Mall Gazette was most influential—not now, "when it sings Yankee Doodle to the tune of Rule, Britannia," but under Mr. Stead—it was run at a loss.

The congress sermon was delivered by Dr. Joseph Parker, who has scarcely ever been known to preach at such length. For over an hour he spoke with wonderful vigor for a man of nearly sixty-six on Mark 16: 15—"Preach the gospel," with the emphasis on "gospel." He restated in broad terms the evangelical position as he conceives it and denounced those who, receiving evangelical money, preach Unitarian doctrine. In one sense he claimed to be a Unitarian himself. "Unity is harmonized and co-operative complexity. Unity is not loneliness. They who deny the deity of the Son are not Unitarians, they are solitarians." Next morning the doctor was again to the fore at a conference. His text was the same, the emphasis this time being on the first word, "preach." Urging that the preacher must, before everything else, have authority, he said the first authority is revelational—the Bible—and reiterated his belief in the virgin motherhood as one of the doctrines without which there could be no preaching. "Preachers, don't write a little postcard of your own; like Nehemiah, produce the King's letters." Dr. Monro Gibson, in a modest address, defined the great want of the age as the union of evangelical fervor with largeness and breadth of view. The needed combination, too often lacking, is learning and spiritual intensity. Dr. Mackennal took up two words in Dr. Parker's address, "authority" and "corroboration," feeling there is a danger of the older men pressing a little hardly upon the consciences and sensibilities of younger men, who are longing to have the sense of authority, but know they cannot have it in the same way that the Roman and Anglican preacher has it. They were passing through one of the most tremendous processes to which the soul of man could be subjected—the verification of their religious beliefs.

The conference on social questions was one of the most practically useful of the numerous discussions. Dealing with Temperance Mr. Joshua Rowntree, J. P., mentioned that 29 per cent. of the total convictions of drunkenness in Britain are convictions of women, upwards of 10,000 women being annually convicted for this offense in London, where one-fourth of the whole people die either in workhouse, hospital or lunatic asylum. Mr. John Hawke, secretary of the Anti Gambling League, characterized by Mr. Hughes as a true prophet of God, who, with great moral courage, enthusiasm and devotion is attacking one of the vilest social curses of England and the empire, showed how insidiously and rapidly the evil is spreading and indicated the legislation needed to counteract it. One gratifying announcement was that the number of newspapers which will not oppose a total prohibition by legal enactment of the betting odds is growing. He insisted on the necessity of the separation from the demoralizing system of betting of the heir to the throne, who, as a member of the Jockey Club, is, according to the highest legal advice, a joint-keeper of a common gaming house, liable to fine and imprisonment. Mr. C. F. Aked's paper on The Fight for Social Purity was a most earnest, eloquent plea. His experience has shown him that the liquor party and the impurity party are practically one. On one occasion he counted forty-four fallen women come out of one liquor saloon in ten minutes and sixty-six more at closing time. He mentioned that a list had been published of nine murders of temperance workers committed at the bidding of the liquor men.

All the large buildings in Nottingham were used by the congress and every meeting was crowded. But the great hall in which the closing meeting was held could have been filled over and over again. It was for young people and the speakers were Ian Maclaren, Dr. Berry and Silas K. Hocking. Dr. Berry claimed for Nonconformists the right to call themselves churchmen, and even high churchmen, they being so high that they will not allow pope or monarch to take the place of Christ. "We are Protestants because we protest against the headship of the Pope, Nonconformists because we do not conform to an act of Parliament which a degraded House of Commons had no business to pass, and Dissenters because we dissent from the Erastian doctrine of union or identity between church and state." But all these terms were negative and relative, catholic and apostolic churchmen being their truest appellation. It is interesting to note that as Dissenter gave place to Nonconformist, the latter term is now yielding to that of Free Churchman. Mr. Hocking, in a passionate speech on Nonconformists as Citizens, impressed on his hearers their civic responsibilities and pleaded for the beautification of our towns and better homes for the people. Naturally, interest centered in the speech of Ian Maclaren, whose theme was the Historical Inheritance of Nonconformists. He gave a vivid sketch of the traditions, spirit and achievements of the Puritans, not the least remarkable feature being his judicial fairness to both sides. Puritanism made a great mistake in supposing that any kingdom of God could be established by the sword, and it reaped the reward of its mistake. But if they failed, they shed their blood for those who followed, and it was high failure and the gain was real. When the Puritan army dispersed they sheathed their swords, but the iron of the men went into the blood of the English people. "It was their spirit," said Dr. Watson, in a passage that was more applauded than any other, "that created that great England across the water, with which, as we believe in God and in the bonds of blood and faith, we must ever live in friendship." In the course of the congress it was decided to send to the American churches a memorial, pledging the assembly and those represented to work for the establishment of a permanent tribunal of arbitration in matters of difficulty between the two countries.

Dr. Monro Gibson succeeds Mr. Hughes in the presidency of the National Council. Dr. Mackennal, to whom is due in no small measure the success of the congress, and indeed of the whole federation movement, was re-elected secretary, and Mr. Law, a minister of the United Methodist Free Church Connexion, who has shown special aptitude and zeal, has been set apart to organize local councils throughout the country. By the generosity of Messrs. Cadbury and others the council has at disposal, for the next five years, £600 a year, with which to assist ministers or laymen who become local secretaries. A circulating theological library is to be established for the benefit of country pastors. Next year the congress meets in London.

Nottingham, March 13.

IS HARVARD DIVINITY SCHOOL DENOMINATIONAL?

BY REV. THEODORE BERLE.

The time seems fitting once more to discuss the question whether or no Harvard Divinity School is a denominational institution. It is true beyond a doubt that outside a radius of ten miles from Boston the great majority of people believe the school is Unitarian. In Boston itself, also, it is safe to say that a large number hold this view. The conclusion is reached, however, by looking only at the past and ignoring the present.

For many years and until recently the school was practically Unitarian. This was partially due to the fact that its founders were Unitarians, but more largely due to the fact that for two generations, at least, Unitarians supported it. But in the constitution drawn up by the founders a clause distinctly prescribed that "no assent to the peculiarities of any denomination of Christians shall be required either of the instructors or students." Hence no real responsibility for its denominationalism rested upon the founders. Unitarian dollars and cents gave the school its Unitarian cast.

A little more than a decade and a half ago the need of a further endowment was felt and it was proposed to ask for the sum of $130,000. With the school practically Unitarian, an unqualified appeal to the Unitarians of the country for so large an amount of money meant a definite commitment to Unitarian denominational limits. The purpose of President Eliot, however, was to bring the school into line with the unsectarian policy of the university. Hence he felt himself constrained to use the following language at a meeting held to make the arrangements for raising the amount of money needed:

The Harvard Divinity School is not distinctively Unitarian, either by its constitution or by the intention of its founders. The doctrines of the unsectarian sect, called in this century Unitarians, are indeed entitled to respectful exposition in the school so long as it exists, simply because the school was founded and for two generations at least has been supported by Unitarians. But the government of the university cannot undertake to appoint none but Unitarian teachers, or to grant any peculiar favors to Unitarian students. They cannot, because the founders of the school, themselves Unitarians, imposed upon the university the following fundamental rule for its administration: "That every encouragement shall be given to serious, impartial and unbiased investigation of Christian truth, and that no assent to the peculiarities of any denomination of Christians shall be required, either of the instructors or students."

With such a plain statement by the president of the university there could be no possible misconception as to the future basis upon which the school was to rest. And there was none. Every subscription was pledged and accepted upon the distinct understanding that the practically Unitarian Harvard Divinity School was to be superseded by the avowedly undenominational Harvard Divinity School. And the rule laid down by the founders for the administration of the school has since controlled the appointment of professors and the patronage of students. Within the past six years members of seven different denominations have been enrolled in its corps of instructors, distributed as follows:

Unitarians 9, Orthodox Congregationalists 5, Baptist 1, Episcopalians 2, Methodist 1, Presbyterian 1, Friend 1.

In the past two years representatives of nine different denominations have been among its students.

1894–5. Unitarians 21, Orthodox Congregationalists 10, Methodists 5, Baptists 4, Disciples 4, Episcopalians 3, Christians 2, Presbyterian 1, Friend 1.
1895–6. Orthodox Congregationalists 14, Unitarians 11, Presbyterians 5, Episcopalians 3, Methodists 4, Baptists 2, Disciple 1, Christian 1.

The enrollment of 1892–5 contributed to the denominations as ministers, settled over churches, the following:

Unitarians 21, Orthodox Congregationalists 16, Episcopalians 3, Methodists 3, Presbyterians 3, Baptists 2, Disciples 2. The rest are engaged in various kinds of work—teachers, college settlement workers, students abroad, preachers or teachers in Japan, and unknown.

Incidentally, I may remark that I was compelled to ascertain these statistics by a personal canvass, as the school has kept no official record as to denominational distinctions. The figures are presented merely to show the actual state of affairs when viewed from the standpoint of denomination.

But this very tabulation of the denominational personnel of the school is liable to cause a grave misconception. This heterogeneous gathering of adherents to various shades of religious opinion may appear as a little from everywhere and not much from anywhere. Yet, while there is a diversity of interests, there is a supreme unity of spirit. Denominational difference finds no place for mention, much less for discussion, in the lecture-room. The aim is an earnest search for the truth of God and a manly respect for individual preference of interpretation. The instructors seek to prepare and the students design to become efficient workers in the kingdom of God with the Christ-life as the ideal. The principle is recognized that there are many members but one body. The president's words that "there is no more harmonious faculty in the university, and none more completely devoted to the unbiased search for truth," and that "the quality of the students of this school has been so much improved that they now constitute the most highly educated body of professional students connected with the university, and are distinguished for capacity, enthusiasm and devotion to duty," are pre-eminently true.

In Harvard Divinity School there is no danger of the students for the ministry to divorce the mind, to quote Principal Fairbairn, "from contact with reality, from their legitimate share in the intellectual life and interests of today." The past year more than 200 college men attended courses given by the Divinity faculty, and this year the number is probably as large again, while a large percentage of the students in the Divinity School are enrolled in one or more courses in the other departments of the university.

Hence the student has abundant opportunity "to know himself" by learning to know men in other callings than his own, "while he and they are being educated together." If "theology loses half its significance when studied out of relation to the other sciences or departments of knowledge" he is in no peril on that score. In a university of over three thousand students, with a large number of whom he is constantly coming in contact in the lecture-room, in the Memorial Hall Dining Association and elsewhere, he appreciates that "there is nothing that so prevents a possible turning into an actual enemy as living face to face with him as a neighbor." He indorses the sentiment that "isolation means alienation; sectional studies produce estranged students." Harvard Divinity School is, though small in numbers, an undenominational, "free trans-Atlantic republic of divinity."

THE CASE OF REV. WILLIAM T. BROWN.

At the request of the Congregational church in Madison, Ct., a council was held there on Tuesday, March 24, to consider certain charges against the teachings of the pastor, Rev. William T. Brown, a graduate of Yale Divinity School in 1895.

The council consisted of the New Haven East Consociation, together with the Center, United and Howard Avenue Churches of New Haven, the church in Meriden, the First Church in Middletown and Professors Brastow and Porter of Yale Divinity School. The request for the council was signed by sixty-six members of the church, while papers expressing confidence in the pastor had been signed by 150 members of the church and more than 200 of the congregation. Of the sixty-six remonstrants, many had withdrawn from attendance upon the services of the church and from its support. The case of the minority was conducted by Rev. Dr. Blake of New London, who, at their request and with the advice of others, consented to act as their counselor, sifting their evidence, formulating their charges and conducting the examination of witnesses. The wisdom of this method of procedure was fully vindicated by the result. Dr. Blake's efforts contributed greatly to a speedy and happy ending of the investigation.

THE CHARGES.

The charges, to which in each case specific proofs were added, were that in reference to the atonement, the incarnation, the Trinity and the authority of the Bible Mr. Brown's teachings were contrary to Scripture and to the views commonly held in evangelical Congregational churches.

THE TRIAL.

After testimony had been received on all points, Mr. Brown presented an elaborate and able defense in which he reaffirmed the statements of belief made by him at his installation two years ago, and showed by citations from his sermons that some of the sayings attributed to him were serious misunderstandings of his actual words, while others were put in a new light by their connection.

The council in private session voted that the charges were not sustained. Its most difficult task, however, remained to be done. Heresy they did not find in the views of Mr. Brown, but a serious breach, threatening to divide the church, was only too evident, and in regard to this they were called to act and advise. The result of much deliberation was embodied through a committee in the report given below.

The report was adopted on Wednesday noon, and in the early afternoon a large audience of both parties gathered to hear the verdict, which was read by Rev. Dr. Newman Smyth, chairman of the committee. It was accepted with fitting words by the pastor, for himself and the church, and by the minority, through their chairman. Earnest words were added by two members of the council, by Rev. Mr. Gallup, the pastor emeritus, and by the moderator, Rev. D. M. James, and amid deep feeling and the evident movings of the spirit of forgiveness a memorable scene was brought to a close.

To most of those present the occasion was significant not chiefly because the "new theology" received a new vindication, but because a healing touch seemed to have been laid upon a deep and sore wound in a church of Christ. Many who had not been hopeful of rendering help in this case went away with new confidence in the power of the fellowship of our churches to do what authority cannot do, not only to keep the faith and to right wrongs, but to make effectual the spirit of the gospel of reconciliation.

THE DECISION OF THE COUNCIL.

From the first settlement of New England, her Congregational churches have always insisted on the importance of an educated ministry. Being a denomination of Christians without a prescribed form of doctrinal belief, the liberty of each church has made it a matter of necessity that it should have a pastor and teacher able to expound the Word of God as it is found in the only acknowledged authority for our churches, the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments. For this purpose it was required that they be learned men, acquainted with the original languages in which these Scriptures were composed, and able to tell their people of the historical setting and circumstances in the light of which each of the sacred books is to be read and understood.

To guard against the danger of false teaching in these and all respects, the rights of every member of the church were protected by his privilege of appeal to consociation or council of neighboring churches, should he believe the views taught by his pastor erroneous. It is a right to be dearly cherished, for without it no orderly and definite system of Congregational faith and worship could exist.

A large number of the members of the church in Madison have taken this mode of satisfying themselves whether the teachings of their pastor are or are not warranted by the Scriptures, as interpreted by the churches of our order. Under the usages of our denomination, a decision by a proper consociation or council is the final authority, so far as there is any authority superior to that of the individual church and the individual members of it.

The Congregational ministry of the present day would not be true to the principles of their fathers if they did not follow them in endeavoring to read the Bible in the best light that the closest study and highest learning can give. The result of their labors and of Biblical study on the part of Christian scholars in all denominations has been, during the last quarter of a century, to give a clearer meaning to much which had before been obscure, to remove the foundation of many of the stock arguments of infidelity, and elevate our conceptions of the nature of God and the duty of man. The education for the ministry which the pastor of the church at Madison has received has made him acquainted with these views of truth, and he has naturally desired to share them with his people.

They differ in some points from those that were formerly entertained in many New England pulpits, but the founders of the Congregational churches were always ready to avow their hope that more light would yet break forth from his holy word. Liberty of conscience was never more fully claimed as the right of every man than in one of the articles of the Saybrook Platform, under which this church was originally consociated:

God alone is Lord of the conscience and hath left it free from the doctrines and commandments of men which are in anything contrary to his word, or not contained in it; so that to believe such doctrines, or to obey such commands out of conscience, is to betray true liberty of conscience; and the requiring of an implicit faith, and an absolute and blind obedience, is to destroy liberty of conscience and reason also. [Confession of Faith, chapter 21, section 2.]

In accordance with these principles of the churches of our faith and order, and in view of all the evidence presented to us by both parties, this council of the consociation and invited churches render the following result:

1. We find the first, second, third and fourth charges preferred by the minority of the church in Madison against their pastor, Rev. William T. Brown, not proven. The fifth charge was withdrawn by the complainants. None of the charges, therefore, have been sustained.

In reaching this result and in communicating the advice which we have been asked by this church to give the council record with gratification the fact that the matters which have been brought before us do not relate to any personal grievances and that without bitterness of feeling both parties have sought conscientiously and fairly to lay before us the theological difficulties, which are the main cause of the existing differences in the church.

2. The council would recognize the fact that these theological difficulties have arisen naturally from a difference between the point of view held by some members of the church in accordance with their previous training and habits of Christian thought and the point of view to which their new pastor has been led in the course of his Biblical studies and by his intense desire to preach a living Christ for the life of our own time.

3. The council further recognize the fact that in consequence of this difference of mental attitude with regard to important truths the aggrieved members of the church, in their hearing and recollection of some over-strenuous expressions of their pastor, have been led to the conclusion that his teachings have departed from the essential beliefs which are commonly held in our churches.

4. The council, after careful examination of these alleged points of doctrinal divergence, having come to the conclusion that the charges as made by the minority are not sustained, express their belief and expectation that this judgment on their part will have decisive weight with all whose minds have been thus perplexed and troubled. We desire explicitly to bear record that these persons have followed the proper mode of making their protest against what has appeared to them to be the erroneous teachings of their pastor and that they have conscientiously sought to protect what they conceived to be the faith and best interests of this church. We now advise and urge them, with the same conscientiousness and devotion, to return to their full privileges and duties in this church and, seeking to divest their minds of previous misgivings and possible misunderstandings, to listen anew to the teachings of this pulpit in the earnest desire to receive such positive and vital truths as may be found in the sermons of their pastor, and, should any expressions of their pastor hereafter seem to them to be unfamiliar and perplexing, to seek in friendly and repeated conferences with him for further light and happier mutual understanding. We earnestly urge the minority to make this effort to meet their pastor in this attitude and desire, bearing in mind the necessity which, from time to time, he may feel to be imposed upon him of ministering to other minds in other needs than their own and remembering that the new doubts of a new age may best be met by new methods of Christian teaching and fuller knowledge of God's Word.

5. The council, having sustained the majority in its support of the ministry of the pastor of this church, do therefore with the more urgency advise them to pay kindly respect to the tender scruples of any who may have differed from them in words of doctrine and in all possible ways to endeavor to render this church of their common covenant and devotion, on account of this trial of their faith, more than ever before a home of mutual trust, forbearance and helpfulness for all its members.

6. The council kindly bear testimony to the admirable spirit and candor, as well as to the clearness and ability, with which Rev. Mr. Brown has presented his views in their hearing, and we also witness to his overmastering sense of the truth of his message of the divine Christ for the life of the world. The council recognize the difficulty which confronts any intelligent and scholarly ministry of speaking the truths which may be helpful in lifting some minds immersed in modern doubt up into clearer light, without at the same time disturbing other minds happily settled in familiar ways of faith; and we would therefore place on record our conviction that the needs of both these conditions of mind should be borne unceasingly as the burden of the ministry of the word; and we consequently counsel and confidently expect that the pastor of this church will seek, in all possible ways consistent with his own inner fidelity to truth, to make his teaching here a ministry of reconciliation for all in this church and congregation, that those who have been disturbed and estranged by their natural interpretation of some unguarded expressions of his may be led to understand him better, and to appreciate the constructive aim and Christian loyalty of his ministry as a whole.

7. The council, having come to this result, render to all parties this admonition and advice in the firm belief that there is nothing in the differences which have been laid before them which cannot be removed, and which should not be forgotten, in the exercise of mutual Christian confidence and forbearance; and we would express our earnest hope that the future of this ancient church, and the future ministry of this young brother, already beloved of many, may prove to be filled with the fruits of grace, love and peace. x.

PROFESSOR GENUNG AT THE OLD SOUTH.

The last of the notable course of Lenten lectures at the Old South Church was given last Sunday evening by Prof. J. F. Genung of Amherst College, his subject being Israel from the Exile to the Advent. Some scholars look upon this period of 538 years, which has been characterized as the Israelitish Dark Ages, as an era of backward movement, but the lecturer sought to prove that the irksome night of legalism had its starlight and that with no real retrogression the time was advancing to its fullness in the coming of the Messiah.

The release from captivity was the new birth of the nation. Only a remnant, however, returned to Palestine—about 50,000 fervent enthusiasts, kindled by prophetic hope, men like the heroic souls of the Mayflower. They became the center of Israel's hope while the majority who chose to remain in Babylon were not without their mission in the dissemination of the truth throughout other lands and nations. The speaker traced the history of the remnant, showing how the prophetic, or as we should say, missionary, spirit inspired Israel to rebuild their temple, to re-establish their worship, making Jerusalem not a political center but a spiritual capital. He described the gradual growth of a lax and worldly spirit, against which the last prophet, Malachi, directs his message, and finally dwelt upon the birth of Judaism with its inflexible laws, making Israel henceforth a nation of legalism.

The last four centuries were years of quiet education, with the law for a schoolmaster, and of spiritual readjustment in preparation for the Messiah. The national consciousness gradually died, and in its place we find rising and deepening that individual consciousness which leads a soul to recognize its own responsibility to God. Moreover, the Jewish nation became as never before, as no other nation ever had become, the people of a book. Professor Genung emphasized our indebtedness to Jewish Scribism, which, in forming the Old Testament canon, collected, sifted and edited the scattered Hebrew literature covering ten centuries. Thus was the nation prepared by manifold influences to find the prophecy which brought Israel back from the exile fulfilled in the Christ.

A PLEA FOR A CONSTRUCTIVE THEOLOGY.

The Boston Ministers' Meeting last Monday listened to a paper by Rev. William E. Barton, D. D., answering an article in the December North American Review, in which Prof. Goldwin Smith characterized the Old Testament as Christianity's Millstone. "This assumption," said Dr. Barton, "proceeds upon the assumption that the Old Testament is to be regarded as co-ordinate with the New as final authority in doctrine and practice. But this is not the view of the church If the Old Testament thus be regarded, its confessed inferiority in point of doctrine and morality would make it a millstone, but the true view makes it a stepping-stone in the progress of revelation. He who will read the article for its admissions will find much common ground between Professor Smith and conservative Christianity. It is better to make the most of this than to take issue before we come to the parting of the ways. Professor Smith admits that the Hebrew Scriptures are 'a manifestation of the divine,' and as such are entitled to 'a place in our love and admiration forever.' It is better not to force a man who can say this to declare himself an enemy of the Bible, for such he is not. It is time for a constructive theory of revelation, of creation, of the fall and of redemption. A theory of revelation that is both Biblical and rational, in accord with conservative opinion and advanced scholarship, holds that all truth is from God, wherever found. Every God-breathed writing and, also, every God-breathed suggestion —for the suggestion must precede the writing —is profitable. This makes room for inspiration wherever men have sought God, and exhibits it pre-eminently in the Bible. There is naught infallible save one—that is God.

"The true theory of revelation is that God, who spoke in divers fragments and sundry manners, has spoken also in his Son, whose spirit still leads into new truth.

"A constructive doctrine of creation holds that God has given, in the Bible, a view of the progress of creation and of man as related to the world in which he lives. A constructive doctrine of the fall of man must make room for a belief in the progress of life from lower to higher types. Such a view, Biblical and scientific, is clearly possible. A constructive theory of the atonement must regard it as more than remedial, so that when sin abounds grace may much more abound. We have dealt too long with negations. The time is ripe for a positive theology, the importance of whose results may exceed those of any recent period in the history of the church. We must preserve the old faith in the new forms."

GLEANINGS FROM OUR MAIL BAG.

THE BIBLE AS AUTHORITY.

Numerous letters have been received commenting on a recent editorial in our columns with the above title. Some write of it with hearty appreciation, others write doubtfully. One minister says, "Your editorial commends itself to my judgment, but upsets all my theology." Others still, repudiating the idea that the Scriptures appeal to our reason, hold that whatever is found in them is to be accepted as the Word of God, apparently not regarding the office of reason as important, even in interpreting the words of the Bible. Two extracts from these letters follow, one, we believe, by a layman, the other by a minister:

Granting your premises, which I do not—the right or competency of private judgment, and the truthfulness of Christ's revelation of the will of God—I fail to discover your case. Under your first premise, the competency of human reason, no one has all the facts to establish a judgment upon.

I am not at this distance prepared to say what the conditions of life were which required such a slaughter as you mention. I should rationalize much like this however; those people had outlived their usefulness, possibly they had become like the people of Sodom, therefore being past redemption God might consistently destroy them.

Under your second premise, the truthfulness of Christ's revelation of the will of God, we find that he commands [Luke 19: 27]: "Those mine enemies, which would not that I should reign over them, bring hither, and slay them before me." It is perfectly evident that these are slain because they are enemies.

Now as these are slain because they are enemies under Christ's revelation of the character of God, why is it a mistake of Moses that the former were slain because they were enemies under Moses' revelation of the character of God? G. F. W.

You say, "Christians once believed that God was so angry with nations to whom he had not revealed his will that he directed his chosen people to massacre men, women and children as Turks are now massacring Armenians." But the Canaanites and those Midianites were not Armenians, but the worst kind of Turks, and in the sight of God were infinitely worse.

Did not the exigencies of those times—the critical state of God's kingdom—demand the destruction of the lives of those impure Midianites exactly as the life of an infant cucumber vine demands the death of the bugs?

How could Moses make a "mistake" when the Lord commanded Moses, and the Lord is responsible for the record since he superintended the composition of those writings? Why not believe also that Christ made a mistake in uttering the truths of eternal punishment? If God inspired the writers then Moses could not make any "mistake" any more than Christ himself so far as actual commands were concerned.

The relief gained by believing that Moses made a "mistake" is obtained at too great a cost. The remedy is worse than the disease. For if we impute fallibility to those who record God's direct commands in the writing of them where is our confidence in the Word of God? And what business have those passages to be in the Bible if not from God? T. S. R.

Concerning these extracts from letters we only allow ourselves space to make two remarks:

1. It is hardly appropriate to say that the words which Jesus put into the mouth of one of the characters in a parable are our Lord's command to put his enemies to death. Certainly none of his disciples regarded these words as a command or undertook to obey them. Our Lord's will toward his enemies seems to have been expressed in such passages as Luke 9: 54–56 and 23: 34.

2. Our reference to mistakes of Moses and other eminent saints was not directly to their writings but to acts which they themselves or those who wrote about them attribute to faulty character or imperfect knowledge. For example, we suppose no one will question that Moses made a mistake in his attempt to show to the people at Meribah the will of the Lord toward them [Num. 20: 7-13]. Moses himself said [Deut. 1: 37] that God was angry with him because of what he did at that place. The point we intended to make was that God revealed himself more fully through the ages of which we have record in the Bible, according as men, through the experience of his people and their own experience became able more clearly to apprehend his will. But of course, to those who hold the theory of the verbal inspiration of the Bible, there was no need of reason on the part of those who wrote it, and there appears to be no need for the exercise of reason on the part of those who read it, so far as the authority of all its words is concerned.

"CARLETON" AS A CORRESPONDENT.

Charles Carleton Coffin's army letters showed him at his best. He had the essential qualities that make an ideal journalist. In point of enterprise he was all that could be desired, but he never let his enterprise get the better of his judgment or his honesty. Whatever we read over the familiar signature "Carleton" in those days of conflicting reports we felt that we could rest in it as the substantial truth. He had in this respect an enviable reputation among the fraternity as well as among his readers.

It was not uncommon when a knot of correspondents were discussing some doubtful question for one of them to look up and, seeing Mr. Coffin approaching, say: "Well, here comes Old Reliable; he will settle it for us."

His enterprise and sound judgment are well illustrated by his report of the Battle of Gettysburg. He witnessed the repulse of Picket's magnificent charge standing near Howard's batteries on Cemetery Hill and timing the discharge of one of the pieces watch in hand. As soon as that desperate charge was repelled he mounted his horse and started at top speed for the nearest railroad station to take train for Baltimore. His practiced eye told him that Picket's repulse ended the battle, and he waited for nothing more. He bore the first assured news of the great victory to anxious and expectant congressmen at Baltimore, and next morning before light he was in the Journal office, Boston, with a wood engraver taking down his diagrams to accompany one of the clearest and best reports of the decisive battle of the war printed in any journal.

Fayetteville, N. Y. C. P. Osborne.

Protestant theology is as yet far behind Roman Catholic theology in its handling of the great doctrines of solidarity, reversibility and expiation.—British Weekly.

The Home

AT EASTER-TIME.

BY MAY RILEY SMITH.

At Easter-time the air is full
Of spring's symbolic miracle;
And wondrous sweet things just begun
Await the gold wand of the sun.
Spring is a marvel but half-wrought,
An exquisite, unfinished thought
At Easter-time.

At Easter-time the earth holds up
A strange elixir in its cup,
Which thrills these dormant souls of ours
The while it resurrects the flowers;
And dead faith rises up again
Within the dark, sad hearts of men
At Easter-time.

At Easter-time the opening leaf
Is witness against unbelief,
And every grassy lance I see
Defends my immortality.
Is not God's promise written plain
Across each field of springing grain
At Easter-time?

At Easter-time it seems not far
To where our blessed angels are.
We almost see the leaning throng,
We hear them in our Easter song.
O, doubting heart! Arise and share
The message which the grasses bear
At Easter-time!

At Easter-time, O who can doubt
That he who calls the violets out
Of their brown graves beneath the rime
Will wake us too in his good time?
Are we not more than many flowers?
O, sweet the lesson of the hours
At Easter-time!

A busy home missionary superintendent, o longer young and burdened, like Paul, ith "the care of all the churches," does ot forget the power of encouraging words younger workers. At the close of a re- ent business letter he writes: "If you ere lying in your coffin I should wish to ut a rose in your hand. But I would far ather place in your living hand now this ose of appreciation." We all have theo- es about the beauty of breaking alabaster oxes in behalf of the living, but how any of us actually take time to speak the ppreciative word or send the cheering let- er? Yet how dependent we are upon such rifles! As a poor, hard-working woman nce said of her pastor, "'Twan't that he ook away the burdens, but he took the che out of 'em." Blessed be the gift of emoving the ache from human hearts!

A helpful Easter thought was wafted to ur desk this morning by means of a sen- ence in a friend's letter. Speaking of a ate double bereavement the writer says: I am not going to dishonor my dear ones n the other life by a single doubt about ny of the details of the Lord's appoint- ent for me." The sin of dishonoring od by distrust or complaint in time of orrow is often held up to the mourner, and sually with little power of comfort. But he thought of how our feelings may affect hose who have passed beyond our sight is arely mentioned. How Christ would have s act and feel under circumstances of trial s, of course, the highest motive, but most f us have to climb up to him by way of he old, sweet, human ties. And through efforts to please those whom he has taken o himself the bruised and stricken soul often gets its first blessed consciousness that

The heart of the Eternal
Is most wonderfully kind.

"They have taken away my Lord." The words came instinctively to mind at a social gathering not long ago, when a small group of ladies chanced to be discussing the new X rays. The speakers were strangers to each other, and one ventured to suggest that further developments in science might possibly throw light upon the post-resurrection appearances of our Lord. The idea was received with marked tokens of surprise and disapproval. "Is it possible," asked one of the number, "that any intelligent person now believes there were any such appearances? Those men"—presumably the disciples—"were simply hypnotized into a belief that they saw something. It was purely a subjective experience." The speaker was clad in deepest mourning and her face clearly showed that for her no stars shone through the cypress trees. Thus from others besides Mary in the first century is the Lord taken away, and the sadness of the removal in these latter days is that the modern Mary is indifferent to her loss.

TRIALS OF FAITH.*

BY IAN MACLAREN.

Persons familiar with the Vatican will remember the little chapel of Nicholas V., which opens out of the Constantine saloon and is a welcome refuge from the crowd of curious sight-seers. Beyond quietness and the chastened light, its attraction is some of the finest work of Fra Angelico, which he must have done on his last visit to Rome, and not long before his death. He once described himself as a monk who painted for the love of God, and he was so lifted above this world that he refused the see of Florence. It strikes one that Angelico was indeed very meet for the heavenly kingdom when he made the walls of Pope Nicholas's Chapel beautiful with the life of St. Stephen; and there was a fitness that his body should have been laid to rest in that church, S. Maria Sopra Minerva, whose name is a parable of the triumph of faith over learning. You cannot look on the face of the first Christian martyr without realizing a soul separate from the strife of this present world and full of the peace of God. There is not a shadow of doubt or of questioning on the countenances of Angelico's saints. They are a picture of the age of faith.

Very different is the vast picture on the altar wall of the Sistine Chapel, which was one of Michael Angelo's most elaborate efforts and has an awful fascination for one's mind. The subject is the Last Judgment, and plunges you at once into another world from that in which Angelico lived and prayed and wrought. The scene is crowded with figures contending together in mortal conflict, or striving to make a vain ascent from hell. Devils seize the saints and attempt to pull them down, while angels come to their help. Above sits Christ in his majesty, beneath are the open horrors of hell. The dark and gloomy colors of the background are made more ghastly by the white of unclothed bodies. Very slowly can you trace the details of the confused drama, very hardly can you discover the painter's idea. It is a work of agony and mystery, the reflection of a mind wrestling with the problem of life and history, of man and God. The simplicity of faith has departed and with it the serenity of the soul. Michael Angelo's strenuous and forceful work belongs to the age of doubt.

The parallel between the experience of the race and the individual is very complete, for he also has his age of faith, when it does not occur to him to question and it is natural for him to believe. Across the troubled seas of manhood one looks back with wistful regret to the inland waters of childhood, in whose calm, clear surface were reflected the great mountains of God. We stand again by our mother's knee, and in a picture-book with linen pages see St. Peter drawing his net full of fishes, and look up on a starry night to the place where heaven is, and try to keep awake till Santa Claus comes with his gifts. It is the age of wonder, when the world is peopled with fairies and our life with miracles; when every spoken word is true, and every prayer is to be answered at once. God is good—if possible, better than our mother. Jesus is by our side and the holy angels. Our sins are giants to be fought. We plan achievement in the days to come. Like plants that are protected from the storm, we are learning to believe before the storm of doubt bursts on us in the open, and our heads are beaten for a little to the ground.

Certain favored people are planted out by God's hand in such sheltered corners of his garden that the wind sweeping over the waste of moorland never touches them and the sun from all the airts is ever blessing them. With every year they know God better and are more firmly persuaded of his love. Jesus' presence is more distinctly felt and the prints of his feet grow clearer on the ways of life. For them the miraculous has no difficulties, since they have seen greater works than those in their own experience, and the mysteries of faith are the subject of their joyful meditation. Cross providences do not disturb their hearts, being only the signs of a Father's love, and great sacrifices do not daunt them, being only the opportunity for a new surrender to the divine will. They are the pure in heart who see God, they are the meek who inherit the earth—who carry with them an atmosphere of calm, in whose eyes heaven can be seen. They come down swiftly from the sunlit hill of youth like Angelico from Fiesole and the ordinary affairs of life are illuminated for them, as the bare cells of San Marco glowed with his frescoes. They keep the child heart to the end unspoiled by the world, unvexed by doubts, in whose beautiful lives Christ is wonderfully commended.

Who but a Christian through all life
That blessing may prolong?
Who, through the world's sad day of strife,
Still chant his morning song?

It is the will of our Father to deal after another fashion with many of his children, who may turn out to be the strongest of the family in the day of their full manhood. Like their Elder Brother, they are carried away into the wilderness and are tempted, some for long seasons, some for short, some once only, some at intervals all their life. One has no measure of comparison for the trials of life, but for souls of delicate temper none is more fiery than the trying of faith. For it is faith which re-enforces us in the sore straits of life and ministers to us our chief consolations. It assures us of the love of God, of the life beyond the grave, of the victory over this present world, of the crown that shall be given to the soul.

*Copyright, 1896, by John Watson.

With the spell of faith so many afflictions are made light, so many are made acceptable; heaven opens above our head, this life is shot through with light. It matters little how rough be the road so long as it stretches before us with some home at its end, or how keen be the wind if the sun be shining. When the track is lost on the hill and the night falls, then one may be excused if his heart fails also and he is for a space tempted to despair.

Various circumstances put faith on her trial and one of the most common is the shattering of a hereditary creed. Very few people, indeed, begin their religious life with an open mind, going out each one to find the new world for himself, and possessing it in his own right. We rather succeed to an estate which some ancestor has won and bequeathed to following generations. Our opinions both in religion and politics are largely an entail, so that we believe as our fathers believed with considerable comfort and assurance. If no one attacks this creed we may be left in possession all our days and be spared many perplexing questions.

But it is well to remember that the title to a hereditary creed is very precarious and that our security may be roughly shaken. A single sentence in a strange book has roused the critical faculty and left the soul without a spiritual roof above its head. When suspicion is once aroused there is no honest or safe escape from the trial. One must go to the bottom of the matter, one cannot rest till he has verified his creed. It is the most anxious work to which a man can put his hand, but it has only to be done once and what remains is his own forever.

Another trial of faith is rather physical than spiritual, but is not to be despised on that account. Quite suddenly bright and courageous persons fall into gloom and sadness of heart from which they can hardly be raised. They are haunted by presentiments of calamity, they are assailed by evil thoughts, they consider themselves forsaken of God, they despair of goodness. Very likely the cause is physical and the first medicine ought to be that given to the prophet Elijah by the angel. But the pain is of the soul and must be assuaged by spiritual remedies. The best of them all is to forget one's self and to think of God. Looking within only depresses, looking out is sure to cheer. The strenuous effort to escape from self and rest in God reacts with tonic effect on the soul, bracing and restoring its lost energies, filling it with peace and joy.

A third trial of faith comes from the willful treachery of a friend in whom we have trusted, and this one cuts to the quick. No argument against Christianity, no failure of the body, is so apt to blast our faith in God and men as the kiss of Judas Iscariot. It is a bitter experience, and seems to sweep away all our sweet illusions, leaving us without a friend to rely upon or a hope to cherish. Life is poisoned through all its veins and breeds suspicion, revenge, uncharitableness. Nothing can save us in such circumstances from cynicism and skepticism except a supreme rally of charity which shall recall the immense goodness that we have all seen and tasted, which shall cast out the remembrance of Judas with the love of John.

The trials of faith are innumerable, but their effect ought to be one—to clarify, strengthen and settle. Surely it is good to learn that the object of faith is not the Bible, nor creeds, nor ourselves, nor our neighbors, but God himself and Jesus his Son. It is not the Bible which proves Jesus, but Jesus that proves the Bible. If dogmas have often been unreasonable, Jesus himself has commended himself to every man's mind. Our feelings may run up or down; God's love remaineth. Men may fall beneath themselves; God is true. When faith is gathered in and concentrated on the Eternal it cannot be shaken. With every day's fellowship, every day's obedience, every day's knowledge, it strikes its roots deeper in God. It is excellent to say "God of our fathers," and to have one's piety linked to the past, but it is best to say "my God," and to possess a faith that is unassailable, because it has been won by our own hand and is part of our own soul.

THE SEALED STONE.

BY ANNA FRANCES BURNHAM.

The sweetest, gladdest days we know
Are when the Easter lilies blow.
Not that the birds are all a-wing,
Not for the wide world's blossoming,
A deeper joy fills all the dumb,
Dull earth, when happy spring is come—
The joy that Jesus gives his own
In memory of a sealéd stone.

O weary day! we look across
The centuries at thy pain and loss,
And feel the heartache, we who know
The joy none knew so long ago!
The wonder of that hope new born,
The glory of that Easter morn!
The end of tears and stifled moan!
They only knew the sealéd stone.

With aloe-wood and precious myrrh
They haste unto the sepulcher
Upon their errand, mournful sweet,
To bind the blessed bruised feet
And broken body; fair and fine
The perfumed linen; sweet as wine
The spices; yet they weep and moan,
"Alas!" they cry, "the sealéd stone!"

Let fall, sweet tears, your blessed rain!
That tomb wherein no man had lain
Was empty! In its rocky cell
The watching angels sat to tell
The wondrous tidings how the Lord
Yet lived, according to his word;
And earth, in all her lands, grave-strown,
Hath nevermore a sealéd stone.

THE SCIENCE OF FOOD.

III. NUTRITIVE ELEMENTS AND DIETETIC VALUES.

BY M. V. SHALER.

The average cooking lesson informs us how to mix ingredients and make savory dishes, but it does not give us the chemistry or nutritive qualities of food, or tell us what are the best selections to make in order to get the most for nourishment and economy. Until these three points are covered in the curriculum of the cooking school, it is not filling its proper purpose. The old proverb, What is one man's meat is another's poison, is constantly being verified because different people are constituted differently, and what one finds easily digestible another cannot or should not use. It is therefore impossible to lay down hard and fast rules, but there are general principles which may be observed by every one in the selection of their diet.

There is in all food edible and refuse portions. The latter includes shells of fish, skins of potatoes, bones of meat and fish and the like, while the former is that which we call meat, flour, fish, etc., and which consists of water and nutrients.

Nutrients are classified and divided into protein, fat, carbohydrates and mineral matters. Water is indispensable for digestion but is not classified as a nutrient.

Protein includes proteids, which are the albuminoids, as albumen of egg, gluten of wheat, myosin, the basis of lean meat; gelatinoids, as the tissues which yield gelatin and allied substances, like the ossein of bone and collagen of tendon; and the nitrogenous extractives and amido. The former are the chief ingredients of beef-tea, etc., and the latter are the nitrogenous, non-albuminoid compounds of vegetable foods.

Fats include fat of meat and milk, oil of grain, nuts and seeds, etc. Carbohydrates are sugar, starches, celluloses, grains and woody fiber, as found in vegetables, etc. Mineral matters are potassium, sodium, calcium and magnesium chlorides, sulphates and phosphates. At the present stage of investigation and analysis of food materials this classification stands as the best we know. Greater chemical research may change some less important points, but in the main the individuality of the tissue-forming and heat-producing elements is clearly recognized.

Different nutrients act differently in fulfilling the purpose of forming material and supplying energy. Some build, others repair, some yield fuel for heat and energy. The albuminoids are the tissue formers, as the bones, muscles, tendons and blood of the body, while fats, sugars and starches, or carbohydrates, are used as fuel, just as the coal, wood and water put into the engine yield heat and power. Protein compounds are used also as fuel. We know that a diet of lean meat supplies some heat and energy and makes tissue, but it is not one which will build up a perfect framework. It is unbalanced. All the above constituents are needed in varying proportions.

The value of a food depends not so much upon what kingdom it is derived from as upon its chemical elements and its digestibility. Two foods may have the same constituents, but one is more easily digestible, hence more valuable because its proteids will serve their purpose without unduly taxing the digestive organ. Hence milk is the most perfect food, containing the elements for nutrition not only in proper proportion but in solution, and we take it uncooked. Generally the proteids of animal food are more easily digestible than those of vegetables, the latter having what is called extraneous matter, such as the woody covering to grains and fiber of vegetables, which is difficult to digest. To obtain sufficient protein a larger bulk must be consumed. Vegetarians, therefore, must use milk and eggs freely to balance the account.

Vegetables and fruit contain but a minimum of protein, but they serve a valuable purpose and are necessary to a perfect balance. Oatmeal, wheat, flour, potatoes, corn contain a small proportion of protein and a large bulk of starch; the latter is particularly valuable and necessary to a normal diet and easily digested when properly prepared, but starch globules are not easily dissolved and therefore tax the digestion if taken in over-proportion. Beef, mutton, veal and fowl are rich in protein and we therefore do not need to use them in such bulk as other foods.

The nutritive value of wheat has made bread the very staff of life, because it contains a large per cent. of protein and starch and little waste. Beans are rich in protein, but they lack fat, while potatoes furnish starch for fuel but lack protein; hence a meal of codfish rich in protein, fat of butter and starch of potatoes would be a chemically balanced diet, but to take only beans, beef and bread would be as one-sided in proteids as that of potatoes, corn and oatmeal would be in starch. The traditional diet of the Scotch, oatmeal and herring, is rich in protein and starch, and, though cheap, has evidenced its nutritive qualities and proper balance by the vigor of the people. Different kinds of fish contain varying degrees of proteids, salmon having the greater amount per pound. Being more easily digested than meat, fish has been classed as a good food for brain workers, but it does not contain the unlimited amount of phosphorous nor brain making elements with which tradition has accredited it.

The limit of this column precludes a comprehensive statement of the entire field of food composition, but these few points may act as an incentive to delve for more knowledge, and lead housekeepers to make a selection upon a more rational basis, which will, unquestionably, raise the standard of health.

FIVE BOYS.

AN EASTER TALK WITH OTHER BOYS.

BY MR. MARTIN.

Jesus said that a man was better than a sheep. Then it must be true that a boy is better than a dog. So I have thought that it would be well to follow the Sunday afternoon talk of Feb. 20 about Five Dogs with another about Five Boys. I did not know them personally nor can I even give their names. They lived in Asia in the time of Jesus. They are all mentioned in the gospels, and I think they are the only boys who are specially mentioned in them—except two whom we think of as men rather than as boys. (It may be that your quick eyes may find others—if so, please tell me.) It will be your part of the "service" to find the place in the Bible where the accounts are given and the place on the map where the boys lived, as well as anything else about them which I haven't time to speak of.

1. The sick boy whom Jesus healed without seeing him. His father was a rich man and a royal officer in the great city of Capernaum. The boy had a fever. He was so very sick that his friends thought that he could live only a little while. His father heard that Jesus was at Cana, about twenty five miles off, and went there. He found him, told him about his dying boy and begged him to go at once and heal him. Jesus did not go with him, but told him to go right back home, saying, Thy son liveth. He said it in such a way that the nobleman—for that is what John calls him—felt sure that he would in some way heal his son, even without seeing him. So he started homeward, although not able to go the whole distance before night. The next morning, while on the last part of his journey, he saw his servants coming to meet him. What news had they brought him? He did not dare ask. They told him—Thy son liveth—the very words which Jesus had spoken, and which had been in his mind all along the journey! He asked when his child began to get better. "The fever left him at one o'clock yesterday," they replied—the very time Jesus had told him that his son was well. Do you not suppose he told his son all about the great Teacher who had healed him, and when, soon after, Jesus made his home at Capernaum, do you not think the boy would go and hear him preach in the marble synagogue? Would he not find a chance to speak to him? Did he not become a disciple of Jesus?

2. The boy that helped Jesus. This boy was not sick. He was very well, for when Jesus went across the Sea of Galilee in a boat to the desert place he was one of those who ran afoot several miles around the shore. When night was come they were all very hungry and Jesus spoke of giving them something to eat. But all the food the disciples could find was what this little boy had in his basket. I suppose he had carried it out as a luncheon for himself or his parents, or, perhaps, as thrifty boys sometimes do now, to sell to others. All he had left of his stock were five loaves of barley bread and two small fishes, but these Jesus took and fed the vast multitude. As the boy watched Jesus breaking off pieces of the bread and the fish, and the disciples distributing them to the people as they sat in groups of fifty or a hundred on the green grass, until every one of the 5,000 men and of the women and children had enough and there were twelve baskets full left, he must have been very happy to think that it was his bread that Jesus used. When he heard him preach the next day about the bread of life and always afterwards, as he saw his mighty works in Capernaum, he never forgot the little part Jesus let him have in the wonderful miracle of feeding 5,000 men.

3. The demoniac boy. You remember how Jesus found him as he came down from the mount of transfiguration, perhaps Mount Hermon, in the hill country of the north. It was a sad case. All through his childhood he had suffered fearfully with diseased body and mind, often falling into the fire or the water. Just then, as they brought him to Jesus, the terrible trouble came upon him and he fell on the ground in agony. But the father believed that Christ could heal his boy, and in a moment Jesus rebuked the evil spirit and gave him his child, perfectly cured. I wish we knew whether that boy afterward believed in the One who had healed him.

4. The boy whom Jesus took in his arms This was in Capernaum too, and in the house where Jesus dwelt when there. To give his disciples a lesson he called this little boy and seated him in the middle of the group. As though his affectionate heart was not satisfied, he took the little boy from his seat and held him close in his arms, and kept him as he went on telling those twelve men that they ought to be like that child. I have sometimes wished I knew who that boy was—he had a name, for Jesus called him to him. Perhaps it was Peter's boy, as being right there in his house, where Jesus is supposed to have dwelt. If so, how much he would have heard about Jesus all through his boyhood! There is a tradition that it was Ignatius, a famous preacher of Christ and martyr for Christ in the first century—and his age would have agreed with that. But whoever he was, he would have always remembered it with great pleasure and told it to his children, that he was the little boy whom Jesus Christ took in his arms, as Washington Irving always related how General Washington spoke to him when a little boy and patted him on the shoulder. That boy ought to have been a good boy, to be used by Christ as a model for his apostles and for all who should read his sayings!

5. The boy who had kept the commandments. He had grown up to be a young man when Jesus saw him and talked with him on his last journey to Jerusalem. But he told Jesus about his boyhood—that he kept all the commandments. What a good boy indeed—perfectly truthful, pure, obedient, honest. He believed in God's commandments, and tried to keep them. For this, and because he was so frank, sincere and earnest in wishing to know what he ought to do Jesus loved him.

Well, children, do you wish that you had lived in the time of Jesus, so that you could have seen him, told him what you wanted and had his love and help? That is what this sermon is for, to assure you that you are living in the time of Jesus. He is not dead, he is risen. You do not need to see him with your eyes in order to have his blessing any more than the nobleman's son did. He knows all about you. When you sit on your father's knee at home and feel sure that he will do anything to make you happy, remember that that is the way Jesus loved the boy in Peter's house, the way he loves you. If you are away from home, like the boy with the basket at the seaside, he notices you and will care for you—if you ask him. This may be read to some child who has suffered long. But Jesus pities and loves you, as he did the suffering boy at the foot of the mountain, as he did the suffering Pomiuk at the foot of the rugged mountains of Nackvak Bay. I see no reason why every child that reads this cannot have the same privilege which the Five Boys of the gospels had—the acquaintance, the love and the help of the wise, powerful and kind Saviour of men.

One thing more. What a great pity it was that that young man who had been such a perfect boy and kept all the Ten Commandments was not willing to obey the "Good Master." Jesus said, "Come, follow me," but he would not, if that meant to give his money to the poor. Peter and the other fishermen had heard the same command and kept it. Dr. Grenfell told me that on every ship of the "Deep Sea Mission" this verse was placed in letters of gilt on the helm: Jesus saith, Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men, so that at every turn of the wheel the helmsman made he would see Jesus' word. Christ's promise is as true to every boy and every man now as it was to Peter that they who follow him will "receive manifold more in this present time, and in the world to come life everlasting."

Sowing still antedates reaping, and the amount sowed determines pretty closely the size of the harvest. Whether it be young men or wheatfields the interest can be depended upon to keep up with the capital, and empty barns in October are the logical sequence of empty furrows in spring. The young man may as well understand that there are no gratuities in this life, and that success is never reached "across lots."—Dr. Parkhurst.

A man's life is an appendix to his heart.—South.

Closet and Altar

Blessed be God, who has made earth and heaven one in the heart's unquenchable thirst for him!

As the first power of the resurrection is the power of regeneration, as a man begins to be under the influence of the eternal life that is held out before him only as he begins to have eternal life abiding in him, so it is not only in the beginning, but all through the new life. The life of a true Christian seems to me to be continually full of Easters; to be one perpetual renewal of things from their lower to their higher, from their temporal into their spiritual shape and power.—Phillips Brooks.

And still our hearts' beloved, full of pity,
Are waiting close at hand,
Clothed with the radiance of the blessed city,
A glad, immortal band.
Silent? O deem it not! The air is throbbing
With voices heavenly sweet;
They sing with us the hymn of resurrection
The Easter morn to greet;
Only our ears are dull to catch the anthems
Their raptured lips repeat.

—Emily Huntington Miller.

Sometimes in hours of weariness and dejection one feels as if he had seen the best of everything and must now simply endure life without the prospect of anything fresh, or attractive, or reviving. But this is not because he has exhausted life, but simply that he has not begun the real life to which God calls us. To the "children of the resurrection" there is a springing life that revives hope and renews energy. In the living Saviour all fullness dwells, and by sharing his Spirit and following in his steps we may be partakers of his holiness. Let our Easter lesson then be to strive more persistently to realize the risen Saviour as an ever-present power to ennoble and beautify our life. Let our endeavor be from this day forward to make our communion with him constant as well as deep, to be in heart and will one with him in whom is all life and all hope.—John R. Bruce.

This is the beauty of our Easter morning:
In him humanity may now arise
Out of the grave of self, all baseness scorning;
The holy radiance of his glorious eyes
Illumines everywhere uplifted faces,
Touches the earthly with a heavenly glow,
And in that blessed light all human graces
Into divine beatitudes must grow.

— Lucy Larcom.

Almighty God, the Father of all the living, we thank thee for the revelation of thy glory in the life of Jesus Christ our Lord. For his incarnation, which makes the brotherhood of man divine; for his submission to the power of death, wherein he bore our sins in his own body on the tree; for his glorious resurrection in which we are made partakers; and for the enduring life in which he continues with his church, we bring thee thanks. Help us to put away the death of sin, and to live henceforth with him in the new life of his resurrection. Pity us in sorrow, that the remembrance of his love may bring us joy. Enlighten us in darkness by the ministration of thy Spirit, and when we fall asleep on earth awaken us in thy presence with the resurrection joy of those who are raised with Christ in glory. For thine is the power and majesty and the eternal kingdom of our hope and faith forevermore. Amen.

Mothers in Council.

A KINDERGARTEN FOR MOTHERS.

III.

The lecturer began her third talk by saying that all education should be co-operative, the teacher, the mother and the child all learning from each other. The child must be taught to sacrifice to the mother as well as the mother to the child. Enlarging on this idea she spoke of the three covenants, into which the child enters at birth—with nature, with man, and with God. His nature being threefold, he should be taught his duty toward the three sources from which he receives all he possesses.

He must be taught as to his covenant with nature, that he has something in common with lower animals. If left to his own devices the child will naturally bring out this truth. He plays dog from the instinct that is in him, and should have his attention drawn to the kindness of dogs, to their fidelity, to their obedience. He should be encouraged to try to build a bird's nest. It will increase his respect for the bird and unconsciously teach him to protect it. A child ought to have a daily companionship with the lower animals.

An Enthusiastic Mother: "O, Mrs. L., do you mean that we ought to fill our houses with dogs and cats and birds and fishes? I read in one of Froebel's books, the other day, what you have just been saying and it has troubled me ever since." The speaker is the soul of neatness and order and avowedly dislikes pets of all kinds, therefore a little laugh went round the room.

The Mother Helper: "I sympathize with you, I think. I love flowers and the care of them, but the tending and training of animals was, at first, a real trial to me. I think, if you feel as strongly opposed as you seem to do and have tried to like them and have not succeeded, that you had better wait a little while, hoping that the good in it will grow upon you before you give your children pets."

A New Mother: "What animal would you suggest as the best play-fellow for a baby?"

The Mother Helper: "I found rabbits a great pleasure to my children, and I think they taught many lessons."

A New Mother (in a tone of dismay): "Rabbits!"

The Mother Helper: "Yes, they are so little trouble. We kept two very happy in a barrel in our cellar all one winter, and they were so gentle and pretty in their ways with each other that they were a constant education even to the baby."

A Busy, Tired Looking Mother: "But, O dear, these things are all so disorderly."

The Mother Helper: "They seem so, but I found they saved work in the end. An obedient child may be allowed the privilege of what seem disorderly plays—mud plays, water plays—with proper clothing and a little guidance. And you know Froebel says again and again that what all children love must have in it some educating force."

In the fulfilling of the second covenant the child requires much more training. He is so easily led to think lightly of his covenant with his fellows. He should learn to feel grateful toward policemen, street sweepers, and even the garbage men. He should be shown that each is doing his work well in his own place in life; that all humanity is serving him and he must serve all humanity. The study of geography, of history, of numbers should be such as to increase this feeling. The covenant with God is hardly a step from the second. Evidence of its naturalness is seen in the child's ready response to a reverent attitude, to hymns and to prayers. This brought a question which interested us all, as it had probably come to each mother present.

An Experienced Mother: "Should children be permitted to play church or to mimic any of its ceremonies? My children every once in a while want to play funeral or have a baptism, and once I discovered that they were having a play communion service."

The Mother Helper: "What did you do?"

The Mother: "I forbade only the communion. Perhaps even that should not have been absolutely forbidden. What do you think?"

The Mother Helper: "I have had a good many experiences of this kind. The question is a serious one. A child must live out what it takes in, and if the attention cannot be diverted to another play it is best to let the impression be played out, rather than to forbid it. For instance, our little bird died and the children's hearts seemed set upon having a funeral over its body. It was too late to divert their minds to a brighter play, so I let them go on, laying as much stress as possible on the bright side of it—the flowers and the sunshine—and as soon as it was over I suggested an entirely diverting game of an active, joyful nature, and I think no harm came out of it. I should never forbid any play that is the result of some strong impression, unless there seemed to be in it a spirit of mockery."

MRS. H. W. BOYNTON.

TWO HELPFUL BOOKS.

A little volume entitled Methods of Mind Training, by Catharine Aiken, though designed primarily for teachers, contains facts and suggestions which mothers might find useful, particularly with backward children. Her theory is that the ability to concentrate the attention to such a degree as to insure a retentive memory is the chief factor in obtaining knowledge, and she illustrates her theory by a variety of exercises. Her methods are cordially indorsed by prominent educators, among whom is Kate Douglass Wiggin, and it would pay parents to examine the book.

The mothers of a generation ago had no opportunity to study the psychology of childhood, comparatively little having been written on the subject until within a short time. Among several new books which treat of this side of a child's nature is one by Prof. James Sully of London, published by Appleton and called Studies of Childhood, in which the budding intelligence and awakening of moral perception in the infant mind are illustrated in a fascinating manner. The author is particularly lenient towards what are called "children's lies." He also shows how apparent selfishness or cruelty, indifference to pain and death, and other forms of callousness to the rights or feelings of others, are not due to insensitiveness, but simply to a lack of understanding. The book is brimful of suggestive facts, and older readers will be likely to marvel at the extraordinary things they did in childhood that attracted no notice, then but are now considered worthy of scientific investigation.

CANDY AND CIGARS.

Why should not parents be willing to do themselves what they wish their children to do? Yet we fear there are many fathers, wise and kind, who have not yet illustrated their precept by example, as did the one who frankly gives this incident in a private letter: "Speaking of candy, I promised the boys last year, if they would save their pennies and put them in their banks, to double what they had in a month's time. One day as I was buying a cigar, ——, who was with me, after looking longingly at the candy and then at me, said: 'Papa, if we ought to save our pennies and not buy candy, you ought to save your money and not buy cigars.' I thought he had the best of me, and now we are on even footing, for his papa does not smoke now."

It is one of the characteristics of our Lord's teaching that though it is within the reach of every man it is beyond the reach of every man.—R. W. Dale.

The Conversation Corner.

HURRAH for the old flag, children! I do not think we have had it up before since last Fourth of July, and these April days are patriotic anniversaries, as you will see by watching the flagstaffs on your schoolhouses. Besides, my letters today make me feel like hoisting the colors!

MERIDEN, CT.

Dear Mr. Martin: In reading the Conversation Corner I see answers to many difficult questions. I should be glad to know the truth regarding the capture of Jefferson Davis at the close of the Civil War. Who captured him? Was he disguised in woman's clothes, or was the report of his being so merely newspaper talk? In what histories can I find the account, if it is a matter of fact? I once had a man pointed out as the man who captured Jeff. Davis, but there seems to be a question about it. JENNIE Y.

Later histories, especially the smaller ones, pass lightly over the capture of the rebel leader who had for four years fought against the flag. But the official reports of the time and other accounts agree as to the main facts, although newspaper writers and platform speakers may have occasionally exaggerated them somewhat.

After the surrender of Lee's army to Grant (April 9) and of Johnston's to Sherman (April 26), Davis realized that the end of the "Confederacy" had come and hastened his southward flight, hoping to reach the sea and so escape. General Wilson had command of the cavalry expedition which pursued him. A party led by Colonel Pritchard of the 4th Michigan Cavalry found the fugitives at Irwinsville, Ga., May 10, 1865. It seems that, surprised by the sudden appearance of a body of cavalry in the woods where they were encamped, Mr. Davis, with his wife and a lady friend, attempted to escape. He put on a lady's waterproof cloak and his wife threw a shawl over his shoulders. Corporal Munger meeting them commanded them to halt, and, detecting the man's gray locks under the shawl and his boots under the waterproof, at once arrested him. Captain Lawton (of the Michigan regiment) says in his narrative (Atlantic Monthly, Sept., 1865) that Mr. Davis carried a tin pail in his hand, and that his wife begged the soldier to let her "old mother go to the run for some water." But this part is not mentioned in General Wilson's official report (see Harper's History of Rebellion, 2.780).

Yet all this, under the circumstances, was perfectly natural and excusable, and, as General Grant says in his Personal Memoirs (2.524), "Had he succeeded in making his escape in any disguise, it would have been adjudged a good thing by his admirers." But of course at that time it was also perfectly natural and excusable that humorous comment should be made on this last undignified scene in the career of the aristocratic president of the Confederacy, who had for four years looked haughtily down upon the defenders of the Union and had taken occasion to abuse our beloved Mr. Lincoln and General Grant. See also History for Ready Reference, 5.3558, Century Magazine, 27.130, and Coffin's Freedom Triumphant, 490.

This last reference brings vividly to mind the good man who has just died and whose lifelike picture is before me (Congregationalist, March 19). Thousands of our Cornerers have read his books, while their parents remember "Carleton's" war correspondence. I met him often during the memorable scenes of the last months of the war in the "armies operating against Richmond" —sometimes writing his famous "Journal letters" in our stockade at City Point, or speaking at a soldiers' prayer meeting and singing "I'll die for Liberty," or hurrying off to the front on "Grant's military railroad."

April 2, 1865—thirty-one years ago today —was a day of severe and decisive fighting all along the line and the day when Jefferson Davis started on his flight from Richmond. I met "Carleton" again and again that day and in the evening, at the "rustic chapel" (Joseph B. Clark in charge) at Meade's Station, very near Petersburg, turned that night into a hospital for our wounded boys in blue. During the night we were awakened in our tent by a great explosion and went out and stood on a hill, wondering if the end had come. In the early morning we walked over the fortifications into Petersburg, Mr. Coffin enthusiastically accosting the slaves of the day before, freedmen then!

Yes, Charles Carleton Coffin was a good man—he loved God and good things; he loved his country, he loved children. I was just on the point of writing him about the Davis question when shocked by the news of his sudden death. He had a kindly plan of inviting a few of us Cornerers near Boston, when the season favored, to visit him at his home in Brookline. Our members can have no better model of a Christian patriot than this man who delighted in "Following the Flag" and the "Drumbeat of the Nation," and who had a constant part in "Marching to Victory" and "Redeeming the Republic," until he saw "Freedom Triumphant." In no other books can our young readers get as correct or vivid idea of the War of the Rebellion. The same is true of his "Boys of '76," and other earlier books.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

Dear Mr. Martin: . . . I send by this mail a piece of the war-ship, Kearsarge, for the Corner Cabinet. It was a ship that was wrecked on one of the Bahama Islands, and I want to ask you if you could tell me just what island it was. It sunk the Alabama, a rebel warship in the time of the War of the Rebellion. A friend of papa's went down there and tried to get it off, but they couldn't but he brought away some pieces of the ship's beams. . . . Mamma read us the sermon you put in The Congregationalist, and it was very ——. [Not to hurt Mr. Martin's feelings, I omit the adjective.—D. F.] If you do not know about the island you can ask the captain!

MARY S.

I have not seen Captain Myles for some time, but I asked a young civil engineer whom I sat with on the cars one evening, and he said it was "Roncador Reef," and that he had seen it on the voyage from Jamaica to Nicaragua. You will find it on the map of the West Indies, half way between Kingston and Greytown. It is a low reef of rocks, a great danger to sailors. The wreck occurred Feb. 8, 1894. The Kearsarge destroyed the pirate ship, Alabama, off Cherbourg, in the English Channel, June 19, 1864.

Mr. Martin

CORNER SCRAP-BOOK.

The Anglo-Saxon Race. If any of our readers are writing or debating on the subject of the history and prospects of the English-speaking people of the world, let them read Mr. Stead's article in Review of Reviews for March. It says that the Norsemen first discovered the American continent, the Italians gave it its name and showed the Old World the way to the New, the Dutch colonized New York, the French occupied the mouths of the Mississippi and the St. Lawrence, and the Spaniards held the Pacific Coast, while the Russians annexed Alaska. Today from Nova Scotia to San Francisco, from Bering's Sea to the Gulf of Mexico, the English-speaking man is supreme. Mexico and South America are honeycombed with Anglo-American agencies. Australasia has fallen as the golden fruit of Hesperides into the lap of the Briton. In India 300,000,000 Asiatics, whose civilization and culture were hoary when our ancestors stained themselves with woad and offered human sacrifices in the recesses of their forests, acknowledge the supreme authority of the Englishman. And in South Africa Black and Boer alike admit that the continent will ultimately be ruled by those who speak the tongue of Shakespeare and Milton.

Jefferson Davis's Home in Richmond. This modest mansion, which used to be called the "White House of the Confederacy," and has been for a long time the property of the city and used (appropriately) as a schoolhouse for the colored children, has been made a museum of Confederate relics. A room has been assigned to each secession State for the preservation of its war relics.

The Reasoning Rat. A lady sends this story to the Scrap-book, and knows that it is true, for she had it from her grandmother, who owned the rat and the hen—in the town of Petersham, Mass. The hen "stole her nest" under the woodhouse floor, but when grandma knew of it she took away the eggs as soon as laid. One day the egg disappeared, although the nest had been visited soon after Biddy's public announcement that she had left it there. The same thing occurred on succeeding days. Grandpa said that if a weasel had been the thief he would have left the shell. Then Grandma lifted a board in the woodhouse floor and watched. Immediately after Biddy left the nest two large rats appeared on the scene. Now an egg is not a very convenient thing for a rat to handle, but this is the way they did it. One of them lay down close to the egg, while the other one poked the egg over on No. 1's body. No. 1 put first his forepaws around it, afterwards his hind paws against the other end, and rolled over on his back. Then No. 2 took No. 1's tail in his teeth and drew him off—rat, egg and all. Grandma said she was so much interested in the rational procedure of the rats that she gave them the egg for their rations that day, although perhaps she did not express it in just that way.

The Rat that Scared the Elephant. It was at the winter quarters of Barnum and Bailey's circus in Bridgeport, Ct. Several professors of natural history were present to witness the experiment. A rat tied by the tail to a stout string was thrown down in the midst of the forty elephants. It put them all in a panic, and they plunged about in a frightful way. A learned Yale professor and several editors present are said to have beaten any circus performers in the agile and rapid way in which they found safe places for themselves on the top of a huge pile of hay-bales. It is as strange that a great elephant should be afraid of a little rat as it is that a man—or a woman—should be afraid of a mouse!

L. H. M.

The Face of Jesus in Art

By Estelle M. Hurll

WE all know by experience the alternating attractiveness and unsatisfactoriness of portraits. We receive a photograph from an absent loved one and we give a cry of pleasure at the first glance at the familiar features. The days pass and the set smile, the immovable poise, begin to pall upon us. "Yes," we say, "it is a good picture of one mood, but there are many other sides to my friend's character that are not brought out." The better we know our friends the more we appreciate the many-sidedness of their character and the more we demand of their pictures, until it is impossible to please us with any single portrait and we are eager to have as many as possible. Apply this thought for a moment to the portraits of a father. Through childhood to mature life you have been in constant companionship with this dear friend. Your mind is a veritable picture gallery of his varying expressions. There is the merry mood in which he shared your childish romps, the tender, anxious regard he bent upon you when you were ill, the shining face with which he welcomed you after absence, the loving smile of his approval when you showed yourself worthy of his praise, the severity with which he met your disobedience, the sorrow with which he mourned your waywardness. What one picture could convey all this? What number of pictures too great to bring it before you adequately?

FROM RAPHAEL'S TRANSFIGURATION

I have taken this illustration because it must be through our own human fathers that we gain our early ideals of "Our Father which art in heaven" to whom we are first taught to pray, and hence of the Saviour who came to reveal the Father. As we know him better we become more and more difficult to please with any face which art may present to us as an embodiment of his character. On the other hand, we have, I think, a constantly increasing interest in seeing what art has accomplished in this direction. We enter as it were upon an endless quest for the ideal, eager to see what distinct element each artist has contributed to the entire conception. When I hear that some new artist has painted the Christ I cannot rest until I have seen his work. "What element does he see and exhibit in the character of Christ?" is my eager inquiry. Is it something that I know and love in the Master, or is it something I have yet to learn? In this way it seems to me that the study of the face of Jesus as portrayed in the history of art may be distinctly a devotional study. As such it is a fitting theme for the Easter season when our thoughts, in centering upon the risen Christ, would fain grasp in some entirety the differing phases of his character.

I have twice chanced to see men who were commonly reported "to resemble our Saviour," a fact of which they were said to be very proud. That such a reputation could be held proves conclusively that there has arisen in people's minds a distinctly definite type of the Saviour's portrait, to which they refer when they declare such a resemblance. This type, as is well known, is the outgrowth of certain early traditions, now known to be entirely without foundation, and of certain pretended "authentic portraits" miraculously produced in our Lord's lifetime. The type is one known to art students as the Byzantine, and in general terms may be described as consisting of an oval face, Greek features, long curling reddish hair parted in the middle, and a curling beard, likewise parted. It is to this model that the face of the Oberammergau Christ is made to conform as closely as possible.

The prevalence of this type gives rise to a danger against which we need, I think, to guard. This is the danger of accepting it, half unconsciously, as a historically accurate portrait, and allowing it to shape too definitely our thoughts of Christ. The chief value of sacred art is not to fix a material image of our Lord, but, as I have tried to explain, to reveal his many-sided character. Hence our study, to be profitable, will turn to those artists who conformed least rigidly to the traditional Byzantine conception and worked out most independently their own thought of Christ, reached through a faithful study of his life. Men of this class we shall not find in the early centuries of Christian art. Under the dominion of ecclesiasticism and monasticism art could not work out her true mission. The mediæval ideal of holiness was not one which permitted breadth or variety in treatment. The passive virtues were exalted above the active, self-abnegation preferred to good works, and self-humiliation strangely confused with true humility. Thus till the close of the fifteenth century we find little but the repetition of the Byzantine Christ, reaching perhaps its highest expression in the work of Perugino. Passing by then the lesser names of the earlier centuries, let us inquire at once what the great originative minds of the Italian Renaissance have given us. Raphael, Michael Angelo, Titian, Leonardo da Vinci, Correggio—what answer do these five masters bring to the question, "What think ye of Christ?" In this glorious roll-call two names answer with uncertain sound. They are Michael Angelo and Correggio, whose peculiar talents did not tend to a true conception of Christ. The two men represent extreme points of view, one looking persistently at the sinfulness of the world and the other at the buoyant joyousness of life. Thus it is that when they come to embody their ideals of Christ, Michael Angelo shows us a fierce and vindictive judge,* entirely devoid of mercy, while Correggio, on the other hand, portrays a joyous youth with as little dignity and earnestness as a Greek faun.†

But Raphael, Titian and Leonardo were men of saner and more evenly balanced minds, as well as of wider range of talents. They have all somewhat to tell us of the Christ. Raphael, it will be remembered, devoted the earlier part of his short life to the portrayal of Madonnas and Holy Families. As his character and skill developed he essayed more serious themes, until at last, in the full zenith of his powers and just before his career was suddenly cut off, he began the great work which was to be handed down to future generations as Raphael's ideal of Christ. The Transfiguration, as all the world knows, was still unfinished when the master laid down his brush, but he had painted on the canvas his glorious Christ and his highest message to humanity was spoken. Lifted above the earth and earthly concerns the Saviour raises his face heavenward, the human features transfigured by an expression of holy rapture. So calm, so solemn, so far-reaching is his gaze that we are hushed into an awed silence in his presence, but it is a silence full of heavenly joy. We feel that as we stand without he is looking within the veil, seeing and rejoicing in the beauty of the beatific vision. This figure of the transfigured Christ we may take also as a figure of the risen Christ. It may not be generally known that Raphael first selected the subject of the Resurrection, later changing his plans and substituting the Transfiguration. I think we may reasonably infer that the two scenes were closely identified in the great painter's mind, as they are indeed in our Lord's own words. The transfiguration may be considered a sort of prophecy of the resurrection, and we may believe that the transfigured Lord showed to his disciples on Mt. Tabor the same wonderful radiance of body that the risen Lord manifested to Mary Magdalene in the garden.

Turning now to the work of Titian we have before us a goodly number of scenes from the life of Christ in which we may study the great Venetian's ideal. Through them all we can trace a distinct type, thoroughly characteristic of the artist and full of suggestiveness to the thoughtful mind. This ideal contains a more decidedly intellectual element than has been presented perhaps by any other painter. Some of the subjects are exceedingly well calculated to bring this out. There is the Tribute Money, for example, in the Dresden Gallery, where Jesus turns a keen, searching glance upon the dark, cunning face of the Pharisee. There is also the Woman Taken in Adultery of the Belvedere Gallery, where the same penetrating gaze is directed to the guilty woman. In the Baptism and Supper at Emmaus we find the same type modified somewhat by gentleness and tenderness as befits the occasions. Finally, we have in the Redeemer of the Pitti Gallery the sum of all these elements in a sort of generalized portrait. Of all these examples the Christ of the Tribute Money is undoubtedly the finest. The face contains a certain lofty refinement which commands immediate respect and attention. The glance is so discerning that we feel at once that here is One whom we cannot deceive with paltry excuses; but withal it is so loving that we dare to hope he will forgive, so strong that we know he will be faithful.

FROM LEONARDO DA VINCI'S THE LAST SUPPER

With Leonardo da Vinci, as with Raphael, the Christ ideal is the work of a single stroke of genius rather than the result of a life study. Out of a host of magnificent dreams this one reality was accomplished to make the painter's name famous. We all know the story of that great Last Supper, now falling into ruin on the walls of the Milan Convent; how far it transcended the conception of any previous painter, not only in the unity of its artistic composition, but in its presentation of the face of Jesus. Here is no straining after effect; the work seems a perfectly simple and natural expression of the character of our Lord. A noble majesty speaks in the mien, an infinite sadness in the expression. The human element quickens our loving sympathy, the suggestion of the divine awakens our admiring awe.

This figure has stood for all succeeding generations as the highest attainment of sacred art. The success of every great religious artist since Leonardo has been measured by the standard that he set. How far short of his ideal most of his imitators have fallen it is not necessary for us to consider here. It is a pleasanter task to mention some of the few successes of latter days, for our own century is certainly not without some creditable achievements. Our minds quickly revert to the names of Hofmann and Holman Hunt, who have given us noble conceptions of our Lord's face. Hofmann shows us a Saviour full of gentle dignity. Holman Hunt's ideal contains a certain mystic element remarkably significant. But in speaking of these living artists we should not forget those earlier workers of the century, whose efforts prepared the way for their followers. We must do special honor to the names of Overbeck and Ary Scheffer. Overbeck, a professed pre-Raphaelite, had no higher ambition than to imitate Fra Angelico. His work, nevertheless, is in many ways higher than he knew. I recall no face of Christ more tenderly compassionate than that of his Christ ministering to the sick. Ary Scheffer, on the other hand, was not the professed follower of any school. In his Christ, however, he comes nearer the spirit of Leonardo than any other painter has come. The history of his work shows a steady progress towards his ideal, which registered the highest mark

FROM ARY SCHEFFER'S CHRIST AND ST. JOHN

*See the Last Judgment, in Sistine Chapel, Rome.

†See the Coronation of the Virgin in the Parma Library, and the Noli me Tangere in the Madrid Gallery. Correggio's Ecce Homo and Christ in the Garden are both noble works. But the writer is not here considering those presentations of Christ in which the portrayal of physical suffering obscures the nobler spiritual elements of character.

:n his Christ Weeping over Jerusalem. On a par with this great picture are his Ecce Homo and Temptation. In default of these larger compositions I select for an illustration the Christ and St. John which belongs to the same period of his life, when he had fixed upon a definite conception of the Saviour. The face will be readily identified with the Leonardo type, not as a servile imitation, but as partaking of the essential spirit of his prototype worked out with distinct individuality. The French critic, M. L. Vitet, has pointed out that the Carracci made the Leonardo type heavy, Guido Reni made it insipid, and Carlo Dolci made it effeminate. Ary Scheffer has fallen into none of these errors. His Christ shows a tranquil beauty entirely virile and alert. It is a face of noble and exquisite refinement, a face alike strong and tender, a face to inspire confidence, obedience and love.

WHAT GOOD WILL IT DO ME?

BY REV. A. H. QUINT, D. D.

This was the question which a man once asked me regarding "joining the church," which had been suggested to him. My reply was, "I do not think you ought to join the church. Evidently you are not in a fit condition. You ask what good it will do you. As long as you make that the first question, you would better stay out." He was offended, but in due time he came to a better mind.

I should never undertake to show to any person the benefits of church membership in any way which would make these benefits the main consideration. Of course, I am not degrading the discussion by considering anything but spiritual benefits, yet the assurance of these may minister to selfishness, of a kind, indeed, higher, but none the less real. It is sometimes difficult to measure the self-interest which is proper, but self-interest is not always selfish interest. But my mind always approaches the subject of publicly confessing Christ, which we have somehow come to identify with entering into local church membership, from an entirely different direction. Just here, let us keep distinct in thought these two—the public confession of Christ, and uniting with a local church as a member thereof. The "form of reception" issued by the Creed Commission in 1883 confuses these two. That issued by a committee of the council later preserves the proper distinction, and the manual reported to the council last October, and soon to be issued as revised, also sets the two in their proper order. Public confession of Christ and baptism are logically preliminary to local church membership. My present thought, however, does not require me to press this distinction. The two naturally go together.

It is not a question of benefits. Publicly to confess Christ as one's Lord is the natural impulse of Christian feeling. It is the Christian's expression of loyalty. If he has found the forgiveness of sins, if his hope of salvation is in the atoning sacrifice of his Lord, in whose blood alone is redemption, if he has consecrated his life to the service of that Lord, his natural impulse is to avow his faith before the world, and as naturally he allies himself with those who have had the same experience and follow the same divine Master. It is a poor soldier that is ashamed of his flag. A Christian does not begin by considering what advantage he is to get by honoring Christ. To honor is his privilege.

None the less would he desire to be in union with other Christians. The church is his natural home. Its members are his natural associates in the highest interests of society. Their tastes are his tastes. "They that gladly received his word were baptized" and "were added unto them," that is added to the believers already gath ered together. This turning to the church as a home is so natural that a continued neglect to do so throws serious doubt upon the spiritual condition of those who remain away.

FROM TITIAN'S TRIBUTE MONEY

Nor is it to be forgotten that the work of the church, which includes all its members in its claims, is not confined to its own edification. That work, laid upon it by the Lord himself, is to spread the knowledge of his saving power to the world which needs salvation. The church is to declare the love of Christ to the needy, the troubled, the distressed. Every member, although his individuality may seem to be merged in its unity, yet contributes something of his life to this cause. Every Christian naturally feels the impulse to share in the Lord's service. He wants at least to be enrolled as a citizen of the heavenly kingdom. If one feels an aversion to this, or if he is unwilling to take a share of responsibility for Christian work, it is not worth while to pursue the matter. There are no conscripts in the Lord's army.

In addition to the natural impulse of one converted to Christ there is also the impulse of duty. Our Lord declared that duty, or, rather, assumed the fact of it, when he said: "Every one therefore who shall confess me before men, him will I also confess before my Father which is in heaven." Every minister has been approached by the question: "Cannot I be as good a Christian without joining the church?" The answer is simple: "Can you be as good a Christian as you ought to be by disobeying Christ at the very threshold of your life and remaining in permanent disobedience?" Even as to one of the specialties of the church, the Lord's Supper, there is not only a privilege in it, whereby divine grace is communicated, but there is a command. "This do in remembrance of me," said our Lord. A worthy woman once told me that she had been brought up to disbelieve in water baptism and the Lord's Supper and gave that as her reason for not uniting with a church with which she had come to be in sympathy. I pointed her simply to the absolute command of the Master which no spiritualizing process could nullify. She read the sentences and a new light came to her at once.

I would not be understood to imply that there are not good Christians outside of churches. I have known "outside saints." Some are restrained from public confession even by reverence for the honor of Christ. Some have doubt of their own stability. Some misapprehend the nature of this confession and imagine that it means personal perfection. All such persons need gentle explanation and encouragement. They should be led to see that this step is really identical with the simple acknowledgment of discipleship, and its avowal of loyalty in heart to the divine Master. It involves no abstruse theological science. It demands no possession of scientific knowledge. "Who shall confess me before men." "Me." Saviour and Lord. That is all.

Peace! The deep gloom brightens! See through yon dim distance
Gleams a glow of glory, wakes a sudden ray!
Lo, the gracious guerdon of faith's sweet persistence!
Lo, the gentle dawning of love's Easter Day!
—Barton Grey.

The Sunday School

LESSON FOR APRIL 12. Luke 14: 15-24.

PARABLE OF THE GREAT SUPPER.

BY REV. A. E. DUNNING, D.D.

This parable appears to have been spoken about four months before our Lord's crucifixion, while he was on his last journey to Jerusalem. Many of his most important sayings were uttered as he was enjoying social gatherings or were connected with festival occasions. Into these chapters, 13-19, Luke has gathered much of the teaching of Jesus concerning the kingdom which he founded. It was at a Sabbath evening dinner, so elaborate that there were several places of honor for the guests, that he suggested lessons of courtesy in social entertainments based on the great motive of love to men which ought to actuate all relations between man and man. Moved by these words one of those who sat with him exclaimed, "Blessed is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God." Christ's answer was this parable picturing with brief outlines the process of gathering men into that kingdom.

1. The invitation issued [vs. 16, 17]. Jesus Christ came to save the world; the Jews first [Rom. 2: 10]. They were the chosen nation —"Israel, mine elect," "As touching the election, beloved for the fathers' sakes." As guests for a festival were first bidden and then summoned when the hour had arrived, so the people of God had been chosen and had for ages waited for the summons to enter the kingdom. At last Christ came, saying, "The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand." That was the invitation to which the words of the servant corresponded: "Come, for all things are now ready."

That is the message of the gospel today, heard first by those in Christian lands, to whom the story of Christ's life and sacrifice is familiar in the pulpit, the Sunday school, the home and in the lives of his disciples. Like the Jews we who study this lesson are elected. This great privilege is ours—to understand the nature of the kingdom of God, to hear the call and to realize by entering in the end for which we were created. Whoever does this makes his life successful; whoever does not fails, whatever else he gains. "For what doth it profit a man, to gain the whole world and forfeit his life?"

2. The invitation declined [vs. 18-20]. The chosen nation had received the summons by the word of Jesus. Individuals had responded to it, but as a nation the people were neglecting the invitation. Some pleaded pressure of business, others absorption in pleasure. All turned their backs on the messenger and went their own ways.

The same conditions still hold. Indifference to the kingdom of God, as compared with present engagements of business or pleasure, is the main reason why the multitudes refuse the invitation extended to them. One among guests at a table in Boston said to a gentleman and his wife, "Where do you attend church?" The husband answered, "We rarely go anywhere. I am very busy during the week and feel inclined to sleep Sunday mornings, and since we came to the city we have fallen out of the habit of going to church." He added, regretfully, "It ought not to be so. We have often said we should do differently. But we have been going on in this way for twenty years." Multitudes like this couple admire the principles and in some degree sympathize with hopes for the consummation of the kingdom of God. The excuses they plead are engagements, reasonable in themselves, wrong only when they are allowed to block the way into the kingdom instead of being used in its honor.

3. The new guests invited [vs. 21-23]. The invitation to the kingdom of God was first extended to the Jews. It was theirs till they rejected it. "It was necessary," said Paul, "that the Word of God should first be spoken to you. Seeing ye thrust it from you and judge yourselves unworthy of eternal life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles. For so hath the Lord commanded us." Our first business is to extend the gospel invitation to our own neighbors, to make it plain and urgent and the meaning of the kingdom of God clear to them. If they accept it, they share our duty and privilege. But there is no more unreasonable fault-finding with missions than that which objects to sending the gospel abroad till all those at home are converted. If that had been Christ's teaching in Palestine, we might all have been heathen today. If our neighbors reject the gospel invitation, we are commanded by God to go beyond them, to seek not merely the poor, but those less accessible because less often thought of as suitable for the kingdom of God. Some of them will come warped by inherited evil passions, bruised by sin, outcasts from society, but every one who enters in will be a welcome guest.

We are not to stop with our own neighborhood nor our own nation. We are sent by our Lord "out into the highways and hedges," to the most distant peoples, holding forth the word of life. The invitation to them must be even more patiently repeated and more urgent, for they have no traditions or training to help them to appropriate its meaning as theirs. We must "constrain them to come in." We have a great gift to offer—a gift so great that centuries of teaching by prophets and centuries of experience were necessary to prepare the Jews to comprehend its meaning. From them through many generations we have inherited light on the gracious invitation. But to China and India and Africa that light borne by us and our messengers breaks in on the thick darkness of ages. Faithfully, prayerfully, persistently, we are to say to them: "The free gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." They, too, are heirs of the kingdom.

4. First invitations withdrawn v. 24. Terribly pathetic are these last words of Christ's parable describing the limits under which the invitation to the kingdom has been extended. "None of those men who were bidden shall taste of my supper." Who were those bidden? The elect nation. What is the significance to us of these solemn words? Those to whom the gospel invitation is most familiar, who now reject it, are passing by their final opportunity to accept it. The kingdom of God is the most glorious thing in the universe. It is the consummation of every worthy ambition, the satisfaction of every honorable desire. Jesus Christ came to make our ambitions worthy, our desires honorable by uniting us with himself in sacrifice for the world. Rejecting him now we renounce his kingdom. If we shut ourselves out of Christ's kingdom, judging ourselves unworthy of eternal life, only the kingdom of Satan remains to us from which there is no longer promise of release.

THE CHURCH PRAYER MEETING.

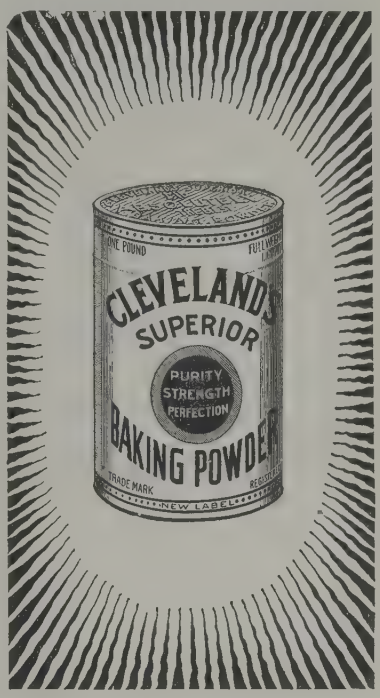
Topic, April 5-11. The Resurrection of the Body. 1 Cor. 15: 35-38, 53-58; 2 Cor. 5: 1-9.

The resurrection body. Personal identity. Recognition. Likeness to Christ. Immortality.

(See prayer meeting editorial.)



EASTER GLOVES.

Our line of Spring Styles is now open, and the

Duchesse Perfect Fitting Glove

is more popular than ever. We unhesitatingly warrant it to be the best glove made.

Four Button, Colors, Plain Back, $1.50
" " Black, " " 1.75
" " Colors and Black, Embroidered Back, . . . 1.75
Seven Hook, Colors and Black, Embroidered Back, . . . 1.75

Gloves sent anywhere by mail, and satisfaction guaranteed.

CHANDLER & CO.,
Winter Street, Boston.

·Absolutely Pure·Delicious·Nutritious·

The Breakfast Cocoa
MADE BY
WALTER BAKER & Co. LIMITED
DORCHESTER, MASS.

COSTS LESS THAN ONE CENT A CUP.
NO CHEMICALS.

ALWAYS ASK YOUR GROCER FOR WALTER BAKER & CO'S. BREAKFAST COCOA MADE AT DORCHESTER, MASS. IT BEARS THEIR TRADE MARK LA BELLE CHOCOLATIÈRE ON EVERY CAN.

·AVOID IMITATIONS·

PROGRESS OF THE KINGDOM.

TYPES OF FOREIGN MISSION WORK.

(Parallel with The Congregationalist's May Topic for Missionary Meetings.)

The student of missions will find it both interesting and profitable to study, in a broad way, the characteristic conditions and problems of typical mission fields, which present striking contrasts as to the character and intelligence of inhabitants, degree of civilization and amenability to foreign influence. As an example of evangelistic enterprise among nature peoples let us turn to the Danish and Moravian missions among the Eskimos of Greenland. Full of fascination is the story of Hans Egede, a Norwegian pastor, born in the seventeenth century, who felt himself called of God to Christianize the Greenlanders, whom he supposed to be forlorn Northmen, descendants of his own Norwegian forefathers. He drew up a memorial petitioning a prominent ecclesiastic to use influence in behalf of his project, which was favorably received, though the bishop's reply, in which he remarks that Greenland is in the neighborhood of Cuba where Spanish and other colonists found gold, indicates his dense ignorance of geography. But, like Columbus, it was only after many years of poverty and repulses, of distrust and suspected lunacy that Egede was able to carry out his cherished plan. In 1721 he sailed from Denmark for Greenland at the head of a trading company, which was under protection of the Danish Government, to make a settlement in that frozen continent, the colonists with the aim of establishing there the rule of their country, Egede with the purpose to establish the rule of Christ.

But the determined missionary found his field very disappointing. The Greenlanders then on the ground were not Northmen, but an aboriginal people whose moral and social condition was extremely low. Their coarseness, stupidity and groveling habits, their constitutional dullness of apprehension between right and wrong, not to mention the difficulties of the language and the extreme severity of the climate, were discouragements almost overwhelming. Although Hans Egede had little success in saving souls, he laid the foundations, and the Moravian missionaries, of whom Matthew and Christian Stach were the first, were more successful though their impediments were hardly less appalling. Dr. A. C. Thompson, in his work on Moravian Missions, writes: "We picture to ourselves the Moravian Brethren, simple-minded men, endeavoring to get access to this people—a people who did not desire their presence, and who seemed determined to have nothing to do with them except in the way of begging or stealing. The language must be mastered, but these newcomers have never seen a grammar. Natives steal the manuscripts which had been written out with wearisome pains, and instead of entering into conversation ask if they are not going away soon."

Thus graphically are portrayed the circumstances under which a typical mission among a barbarous people was inaugurated. We have not space to describe the methods by which worthy, energizing thoughts first found lodgment in the minds of these Eskimos, but that their sensibilities have been educated by the power of the gospel of Christ is evidenced by the results. The Greenlanders as a body have risen from the condition of wild, filthy savages to that of a docile, civilized and nominally Christian people.

A greater contrast could hardly be imagined than that between the conditions of missionary work in Greenland among its simple, rude, primitive inhabitants and in Asia in contact with its "compact, elaborate, venerable, defiant nationalities, civilizations and religions." In China we find a mission field which best represents evangelistic enterprise in the midst of an ancient and conservative civilization almost wholly uninfluenced by outside forces. Customs and institutions fixed for them twenty-four centuries ago have a hold on the people which only increases with age. No other country presents such an invincible front to Christianity as China, and therefore it has been well said that in that land more than anywhere else in the world, perhaps, the missionary must simply fall back on the sovereignty of God and the omnipotent love of Christ.

After reading a book like Dr. Arthur Smith's Chinese Characteristics, one gains a new insight into the peculiar difficulties which confront the missionary among the Chinese—their national pride, their patriotism, conservatism, their unreligious nature, unresponsive to the spiritual appeals of Christianity, their self-righteousness, their mercenary spirit, their absence of sincerity. What they lack is not intellectual ability, patience, practicality nor cheerfulness, but character and conscience. So vast are these obstacles, and so small, comparatively, have been the actual visible conquests of Christianity that some pessimistic individuals think that the missionary effort in China has been a failure. No more convincing evidence to the contrary, however, is needed than the hearty testimonies of such eminent government officials as Minister Denby and Rear-Admiral George E. Belknap, U. S. N., while the new university at Tientsin and a reform movement in Peking are indications that even conservative China is moving.

In India, also, Christianity encounters a conservative civilization and an ancient and elaborate religious system, but under the qualifying influences exerted by European government. The conditions of mission work are intricate and peculiarly difficult on account of the heterogeneousness of India, divided naturally by its numerous races and dialects and religions and artificially by its strange system of caste, but British rule is an integrating force which is rapidly unifying these diversive, discordant and mutually repellent elements, until the idea of one country, one people and one common life is more and more possessing the minds of men. In a recent article, Rev. E. S. Hume, referring to the advantages of British rule in India, declares that it has given the country a strong and stable government as well as the priceless boon of education; the interests of the natives are considered and cared for and Indians are being taught the meaning of justice and honesty. New legal codes are gradually demolishing old, cruel, degrading practices, creating new moral sentiments and impressing Christian ideals.

While owning that there is much in the Indian annals of England which may cause her friends to blush, we believe that Rev. E. A. Lawrence is right in saying: "It is true that more and more, as time has gone on, her voice has spoken Christianity, that her representatives in India, whether through the pressure of public sentiment at home or through the purpose of their own hearts, have done Christian deeds and exerted a Christian influence." The introduction of European learning, customs and ideas is accompanied by peculiar dangers and problems which the missionaries cannot meet without abundant knowledge, tact and faith. But, unlike the Chinese, the Indians are essentially a religious people who, in spite of the dangers of Western skepticism and the attractions of new eclectic systems, partly Christian and partly heathen, are or must become peculiarly open to the living gospel of Jesus Christ.

Sources of Information.

Moravian Missions and Protestant Missions, by Dr. A. C. Thompson.
Amid Greenland Snows, by Jesse Page.
Modern Missions in the East, by Rev. E. A. Lawrence.
Chinese Characteristics, by Dr. Arthur Smith.
The Conversion of India, by Dr. George Smith.
Life and Light for March, 1896.

---

A child's needless tear is a blood blot on the earth.—Cardinal Manning.

You Can't Do Without Soap! Why Not Get The Best?

Sunlight Soap

Has no equal—
For purity.....
For cleansing power..
For taking out dirt...
For dissolving grease.
For saving clothes.....
For preserving hands.

These are some of the reasons why "SUNLIGHT" Soap has the largest sale in the world, and has been awarded

TWENTY-SEVEN GOLD MEDALS and other honors.

Lever Bros., Ltd., Hudson & Harrison Sts., New York.

SUNLIGHT SOAP.

Gold is tried by fire —salt by water. Here's the way to try Bradley's

"Yorkshire" Salt

Stir well two tablespoonfuls of "Yorkshire" in a clear glass nearly full of water and let it stand five minutes. Do the same with the salt you are now using and compare the two. Which one contains lime and dirt?

Send your address and receive free a sample bag to make the trial. All grocers can supply "Yorkshire"—if you insist.

BRADLEY SALT CO.,
49 Jay St., New York. 4 Commercial St., Boston.

BEARS THE PALM FOR PURITY AND EXCELLENCE
LIEBIG COMPANY'S EXTRACT OF BEEF.

WHEATLET

IS AN ECONOMICAL FOOD.

When served as a Breakfast Mush it costs less than one cent for each person.

Sold in 2-lb. packages by all leading Grocers.

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE ROLLERS
NOTICE NAME THUS Stewart Hartshorn ON LABEL AND GET THE GENUINE HARTSHORN

Literature

CRITICISM AND FORETELLING.

The French critic, La Bruyère, said in reproof of the criticism of his time that the surest test of a man's critical power was his judgment of contemporaries. Too much criticism is echo rather than opinion. To like what everybody has agreed to like is but a slight test of discrimination, but to decisively like what has not yet won its way to public esteem and to say so with good courage is the real and prophetic office of criticism. The worst enemies of good authors and the blindest guides of the public are those critics who take their opinions ready-made from publishers' circulars, or wait until they have read what the leading critical journals say in order to repeat their dictum with judicious variations. Unless the critic thinks for himself, and has the material for wide comparison as well as an honest purpose of impartial seeing and clear statement, his opinions are of little worth. Let him be content with stating clearly what the book claims for itself so that his readers may read and decide for themselves, unless he can give that time and undivided attention which alone makes judgment valuable.

It does not follow from this prophetic office of criticism that there is any infallible authority in the newspaper offices. Prophecy is not always true foretelling. Its office is rather that of calling men to thought.

The history of modern criticism abounds with delightfully amusing instances of false judgments and predictions. We all know what was said of Byron by the Edinburgh, of Keats by the Quarterly and of Tennyson by nearly the whole chorus of reviewers of his earliest work. A more striking modern instance is that of the present poet laureate of England, from whose book, The Poetry of the Period, published about 1870, The Bookman quotes the following opinion of his predecessor, Tennyson. He says:

> What I wish to emphasize is that his (Tennyson's) being a great poet is now regarded as an established fact. I am going, not only to challenge, but to deny it altogether, and to implore the age, while there is yet time, to save itself, by a seasonable recantation, from posthumous ridicule and contempt. My proposition is that Mr. Tennyson is not a great poet, unquestionably not a poet of the front rank, all but unquestionably not a poet of the second rank, and probably, though no contemporary perhaps can settle that, not even at the head of poets of the third rank, among whom he must inevitably take his place. The prevailing and universal expression is that he is a great poet, a very great poet, perhaps as great a poet as ever lived. This is the opinion I challenge and denounce, the opinion that will make posterity shriek with laughter and flout us to scorn. Let not the age make itself the laughing stock of an irreverent posterity. We laugh at the contemporaries of Hayley. Do we want to be laughed at by our grandchildren? Mr. Tennyson is much more of a poet than Hayley, no doubt, but then Hayley was never belauded as Mr. Tennyson is by us.

This was honest criticism, doubtless—no sane man would otherwise have made it at the very hight of Tennyson's activity and fame—and it is more wholesome than mere echo of laudation, but it is at once a witness to the limitations of taste in its author and to the vagaries of opinion into which even honesty may sometimes fall.

BOOK REVIEWS.

JOAN OF ARC.

By Francis C. Lowell. The providential ordering which has made a peasant girl of nineteen the national hero and saint of France finds a full and careful chronicler in the author of this book. It is well that the story should be told again in modern form and here in America, for Joan is more than a national possession—she is one of the most striking figures of the world's history, and with too many her real person and life have been hidden in a mist of legend. No one now believes her to have been guilty of the crimes for which she was condemned, but her recent beatification by church and people tends to obscure her real human character, and this is well brought out by Mr. Lowell.

In another respect, too, this careful study is of interest. Joan was condemned at last mainly by an illegitimate use of the dilemma which every one who in earnest considers the question of obedience to the Roman Catholic Church has to consider. Being fully assured in long experience that her voices were from God, she was asked whether she would submit the question of their validity to the church. If she refused, she would be condemned for contumacy. If she agreed, the church, as represented by her judges and accusers, would immediately decide that the voices were from beneath and not from above. In a word, she was essentially a Protestant in having shaped her life by the direct voice of God in heart and conscience, and she met with the fate that all Protestants who were within reach a century later met when they chose to listen to God rather than men.

Mr. Lowell states, without deciding, the question of the nature of the voices, rightly saying that there are only two theories to be considered, that of the modern denial of all supernaturalism and that of the mediæval and modern belief in the activity of God in the affairs of men. We commend the appendix upon this matter and the other which compares Joan with Catharine of Siena to the attention of students of the spiritual manifestations of the ages. Joan of Arc's case is a crucial case, we believe, in the impending conflict between the materialistic and spiritualistic conceptions of man's life. [Houghton, Mifflin & Co. $2.00.]

BIBLICAL STUDY.

Books are multiplying which result from approach to the Bible, not for the purpose of finding material with which to fortify a system of theology already adopted, but simply with the inquiry as to what the Bible teaches. The Theology of the Old Testament, by Prof. W. H. Bennett of Hackney College, London, is a book of this class. It is a condensed manual, summarizing the teachings of the Old Testament in paragraphs, under such chapter headings as Israel in History, The Ideal Israel, and Israel as the People of Jehovah. The author holds that a revelation was made to Israel of which the Old Testament is a record, that Israel receiving this revelation represents mankind and that the relation between the nation and God is a type of the relation which should exist between God and man. Professor Bennett accepts the dates which recent criticism has assigned to the books of the Old Testament, and it is interesting to see the modifications of interpretation which are made by associating the circumstances of these later periods with the writings, historic, poetic and prophetic, as compared with meanings which have commonly been deduced from these utterances by those who supposed them to have been written centuries earlier. This manual furnishes valuable material for studying Old Testament theology and often points to lines of study which the reader is glad to pursue further. [T. Whittaker. 75 cents.]

The Great Meaning of Metanoia, an Undeveloped Chapter in the Life and Teaching of Christ, a New Edition with a Supplementary Essay, by Treadwell Walden. This is a striking and valuable book which we are glad to see in an enlarged edition. It is devoted to the study of a single Greek word, but one which is, perhaps, the most central and important in the New Testament, and also one whose meaning is much hidden by the English equivalent chosen by the first translators and retained against their wish in lieu of a better by the revisers. All Greek scholars know that the word used by our Lord when he began his ministry, "Repent, for the kingdom of God is at hand," means more than sorrow for sin. It is a call to a change of view because of new conditions. "The world is changed by the coming of the Son of God, change with it that you may be partaker of its spirit and its work!" To many this thought, so fully set forth by the author of this book, would bring a wholly new conception of the work of Christianity. There is nothing in the book, in spite of its somewhat forbidding title, beyond the grasp of any one who understands only English, and we hope it may have the widest reading. [Thomas Whittaker. $1.00.]

Volume IX. of The Lutheran Commentary contains Annotations on the Epistles of Paul to the Ephesians, Philippians, Colossians and Thessalonians, by E. T. Horn, D. D., and A. G. Voigt, D. D. These are fresh and reverent comments on the letters of the apostle and fully sustain their place in the series of which they are a part. [The Christian Literature Co. $2.50.]

STORIES.

The artists have a saying in regard to a certain kind of picture that it howls. Something of the kind must be said, we fear, about A Lady of Quality, Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett's latest novel. It is a book of indubitable strength, full of fierce life and violent contrasts. No man of the greater sort, certainly neither Steele nor Addison, could have written with the undeniable coarseness which makes the earlier part of the book painful reading. It is not the situation but the manner of describing it which we have in mind. The Isaac Bickerstaff of the title could never have been the chivalrous Sir Richard Steele. He might, in some morose and reckless mood, have been Dean Jonathan Swift, by whom the pseudonym of Bickerstaff was first invented. The historical machinery of the book indeed is like the scenery of a country theater which is labeled this or that for the occasion. Except for some details of costume and tags of style the scene might be anywhere.

The real value of the book is in its passionate depiction of a strong woman's ideal of a stronger woman than herself—a woman strangely tried and heavily burdened, too much like a man at first, but thoroughly womanly at last in a strong, proud womanhood capable of both love and hate. Traces of the modern woman's dissatisfaction and experiment, and of the discussion of her place and work in the world, are written large all through the book. The most human and admirable picture in the whole swift moving drama is that of the sister whom Clorinda adopts as a chaperone and a foil before she learns to trust her as a friend, but Clorinda herself grows upon us as she passes through trial into a woman's noblest place and work.

The book is certain to be widely read and discussed, defended by some women and disliked by most men (who have not yet learned to love women for the qualities depicted in the book), but it does not, in our opinion, belong near the top of the long list of books which its author has written. [Charles Scribner's Sons. $1.50.]

A Rescued Madonna, by Harriet A. Cheever, is a bright and interesting story for the Eastertime, or, indeed, for any time when the meaning of Christ's death and resurrection for the life of every day needs to be brought home to human hearts. It is well printed and beautifully bound in white and gold. [Cong. S. S. & Pub. Society. 60 cents.]

Elizabeth Stuart Phelps's striking magazine story, The Supply at Saint Agatha's, comes to us in an illustrated edition appropriately bound in white and gold. [Houghton, Mifflin & Co. $1.00.]

George Borrow's Lavengro is reprinted in an illustrated edition with an introduction by Augustine Birrell. Genius falls sometimes to unconventional characters and is put to strange uses. Of Borrow's genius there can be no question, nor of the fascination of its use in this rambling and delightful book. [Macmillan & Co. $1.25.]

At Last, by Mrs. Maria E. Lauder, is not a strong book in spite of its singleness of aim. The author evidently believes with all her heart in the great moral reform to which the work is dedicated, and has a deep faith in the power of the gospel, but in a story these count for nothing without some sense of the congruous and at least a modicum of dramatic skill and power of setting character distinctly before us. [Cranston & Curts. 75 cents.]

In Macmillan's Novelists' Library we have three numbers, A Strange Elopement by W. Clark Russell, The Last Touches and other stories by Mrs. W. K. Clifford, and A Tale of a Lonely Parish by F. Marion Crawford. These are all well printed, are bound in buff paper and will serve admirably for summer reading. [Macmillan & Co. Each 50 cents.]

GUIDE-BOOKS AND BOOKS OF TRAVEL.

Three Gringos in Venezuela and Central America, by Richard Harding Davis. The title reverses the order of travel and of interest in the book. It is of Central America that Mr. Davis has most to tell us. Gringo is a Spanish-American term of contempt for North Americans, and the author, accepting it in fun, fully repays the debt of scorn in these clever magazine sketches of travel. They are light, too light for much permanent value, but they will be wholesome reading for all those who give the word republic an identical meaning under all circumstances and among all races. "The republics of Central America," the author says, "are republics in name only, and the movements of a stranger within the boundaries of Honduras are as closely watched as though he were a newspaper correspondent in Siberia." The book would make a wholesome and agreeable literary diet for all Jingoes whose blood in connection with Venezuela or Nicaragua has climbed and lingers above fever heat. [Harper & Brothers. $1.50.]

The twenty-fifth edition of The Satchel Guide to Europe is before us. The latest information concerning popular routes in Great Britain and on the continent seems to have been inserted. It is about the most convenient and serviceable guide-book we know of for the large territory it covers. [Houghton & Mifflin. $1.50.]

A very complete and satisfactory guide is the Handbook of the New Public Library in Boston, compiled by Herbert Small with contributions by C. Howard Walker and Lindsay Swift. The building is perhaps the most notable public building in the country outside of Washington and the hand-book gives a complete and scholarly account of it. [Curtis & Co., Boston. Paper, 16 cents by mail.]

California of the South by Walter Lindley, M. D., and J. P. Widney, M. D., LL. D., with maps and numerous illustrations. This is the third edition of this well-known guide-book to Southern California and is rewritten and printed from new plates. Those who are interested in the study of what has been called the American Italy will find abundant information as to its advantages for travel or for residence. [D. Appleton & Co. $2.00.]

Those who read French will find much amusement and some instruction in Aux Etats-Unis, by Dr. Auguste Lutand. The book bristles with trivial errors from cover to cover, but its pictures of American cities and life are so naïve and the author's good humor with himself and his entertainers so genuine that the book is highly readable. It is really a guide-book for French travelers in America. [Brentano. Paper, 88 cents; cloth, $1.20.]

MISCELLANEOUS.

Those who wish to understand the Armenian question will do well to buy and read The Rule of the Turk, by Frederick Davis Greene. It is written by one who speaks of what he knows, and the story is one which would move any but a heart of stone. The book is illustrated and has full apparatus in addition to the text for the statement of its case. Everybody ought to read it, and consider what can be done. [G. P. Putnam's Sons. Paper, 50 cents.]

A Silver Jubilee, Celebration of the Twenty-Fifth Anniversary of the First Congregational Church, Montclair, N. J., and of the Pastorate of Amory Howe Bradford, its First and Only Minister. This is a model record of an occasion of great interest to the churches as well as to the church immediately concerned and its pastor, of which we gave a full account at the time. There are portraits of Dr. Bradford at the beginning and the end of his long pastorate, and pictures of the church and parsonage, with full reports of the addresses delivered. [Fords, Howard & Hulbert. Edition limited to 300 signed copies. $1.00, from the publishers only.]

Rev. Salem D. Towne of Bangor, Me., has arranged and published a Marriage Memorial and Wedding Souvenir with Marriage Ceremony and Certificate. Prefaced by appropriate literary selections and followed by blank leaves for the pictures of bride and groom and the autographs of wedding guests, this form of certificate will be just the thing to be referred to as a souvenir of the marriage ceremony.

The Book of a Hundred Games, by Mary White. In one Long Island town not long ago there was a club of twenty people who cared more for games than dancing and were ready to lay aside their dignity and vanity for the sake of making games a success. Out of its experience comes this book, which will stimulate, we hope, both the enjoyment and invention of those who read it. The conditions which made this club a success must be observed by its imitators, but bright and unselfish spirits "agreeing to agree" will be surprised to find how many modifications of old favorites are possible, and what a pleasure there is in new combinations. [Charles Scribner's Sons. $1.00.]

---

NOTES.

— Professor Drummond is ill and has been obliged to postpone all literary work.

— The eagerly anticipated biography of Oliver Wendell Holmes—which, by the way, is said to be largely autobiographical—is promised for the end of April.

— Lovers of travel will be interested to hear that a new edition of the late Professor Tyndale's Glaciers of the Alps, which has long been out of print, is soon to be issued.

— A French ecclesiastic, Abbé Gayrand, is about to publish a volume to prove that Saint Thomas Aquinas, the special intellectual idol of the present Pope, was an Anti-Semite.

— It is hoped that the Amesbury home of Whittier may be preserved as a memorial hall. The women of the town have taken the matter in hand, so that the plan is likely to be carried through successfully.

— The April McClure's Magazine adduces testimony to show that Lincoln's law partner and friend, Herndon, was mistaken in his account of Lincoln's absenting himself on his first appointed wedding day.

— Germany is much interested in its latest and suddenly discovered poet, Johanna Ambrosius. She is a peasant and the wife of a peasant, but has spoken to the hearts of the German people with wonderful power and force.

— Houghton, Mifflin and Company are to issue in the autumn a new and complete edition of the works of Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe. Each copy of a special limited edition on large paper will contain an autograph of the author.

— It seems to be the age of dawning official recognition for literary and scientific merit. Professor Roentgen has just been created a baron by Prince-Regent Ludwig of Bavaria, and also granted a decoration by Emperor William.

— The sixtieth anniversary of the founding of the Yale Literary Magazine, the first college magazine in America, was celebrated in New Haven last week with a banquet. Among letters of regret which were read from invited guests who were unable to be present were those from William M. Everts and Donald G. Mitchell, both former editors of the magazine.

— It is proposed to erect a public memorial library in memory of George Eliot in her native town of Nuneaton and American contributions are invited. Travelers who remember the dreariness of the town, with its ugly and monotonous central streets, will be glad to think that there is to be some brightness added for those who are forced to dwell there.

— The Japanese, while acknowledging that much of what is written about them in the British and American newspapers "is good in its own way" also feel that "for a thorough understanding of our (Japan) country and people it is desirable that foreigners should also know what the Japanese think of themselves and of the world at large." Hence an English edition of The Kokumin-no-Tomo (The Nation's Friend) is issued monthly. It is called The Far East and has for its contributors the leading native and foreign scholars and thinkers of Japan. The Koku- min-no-Tomo has such a standing in Japan that the success of the new venture is assured. The many English-speaking people who wish for reliable information respecting the politics, commerce, industry, religion, science, art and literature of the far East will welcome this new monthly.

BOOKS OF THE WEEK.

A. I. Bradley & Co. Boston.

BOYS OF THE CENTRAL. By I. T. Thurston. pp. 272. $1.00.

JUDITH. By E. E. Greene. pp. 254. $1.00.

Ginn & Co. Boston.

ADVENTURES OF HATIM TAI. Translated from the Persian by Duncan Forbes. Edited by William R. Alger. pp. 326. 50 cents.

Leach, Shewell & Sanborn. Boston

THE ILIAD OF HOMER. Books I., VI., XXII. and XXIV. Edited by W. J. Price. pp. 173. 35 cents.

Silver, Burdett & Co. Boston.

HEAVEN. By Rev. R. Montague, D.D. pp. 192. $1.25.

Charles Scribner's Sons. New York.

A MASTER SPIRIT. By Harriet Prescott Spofford. pp. 135. 75 cents.

MADAME DELPHINE. By George W. Cable. pp. 131. 75 cents.

A FOOL OF NATURE. By Julian Hawthorne. pp. 287. $1.25.

THE HOUSE. By Eugene Field. pp. 268. $1 25.

MADAME ROLAND. By Ida M. Tarbell. pp. 328. $1.50.

Macmillan & Co. New York.

THE ELEMENTS OF PHYSICS Vol I. Mechanics and Heat. By Edward L. Nichols and William S. Franklin. pp. 28. $1.50.

THE BEATITUDES AND OTHER SERMONS. By Alexander Maclaren, D.D. pp. 313. $1.50.

D. Appleton & Co. New York.

CLEG KELLY, ARAB OF THE CITY. By S. R. Crockett. pp. 388. $1.50.

VOICE BUILDING AND TONE PLACING. By H. Holbrook Curtis, Ph. B., M. D. pp. 215. $2.00.

G. P. Putnam's Sons. New York.

LORENZO DE' MEDICI. By E. Armstrong. pp. 449. $1.50.

E. P. Dutton & Co. New York.

VESPER SONGS. 80 cents.

TE DEUM LAUDAMUS. 80 cents.

VIOLETS. 75 cents.

THE GATE OF PARADISE. $1.25.

Dodd, Mead & Co. New York.

IN A SILENT WORLD. THE LOVE STORY OF A DEAF MUTE. pp. 164. 75 cents.

DEDORA HEYWOOD. By Gertrude Smith. pp. 152. 75 cents.

THE FOUR TEMPERAMENTS. By Alexander Whyte, D.D. pp. 102. 50 cents.

THE VISIONS OF A PROPHET. By Marcus Dods, D.D. pp. 185. 50 cents.

Fleming H. Revell Co. New York.

WHERE KITTY FOUND HER SOUL. By Mrs. J. H. Walworth. pp. 36 15 cents.

ONE OF THE SWEET OLD CHAPTERS. By Rose Porter. pp. 48. 30 cents.

RISEN WITH CHRIST. By Rev. A. J. Gordon, D.D. pp 32. 30 cents.

Henry Holt & Co. New York.

EMMA LOU—HER BOOK. By Mary M. Mears. pp. 277. $1 00.

J. Selwin Tait & Sons. New York.

AN OATEN PIPE. By James B. Kenyon. pp. 131. $1.00.

E. B. Treat. New York.

THE TESTIMONY OF THE LAND TO THE BOOK. By Rev. David Gregg, D.D. pp. 52. 35 cents.

Benziger Bros. New York.

THE OUTLAW OF CARMARGUE. By A. De Lamothe. Translated by Anna T. Sadlier. pp. 313. $1.25.

American Book Co. New York

SCHOOL INTERESTS AND DUTIES. By R. M. King. pp. 336. $1.00.

J. B. Lippincott Co. Philadelphia.

A FIGHT WITH FATE. By Mrs. Alexander. pp. 300. $1.25.

PAPER COVERS.

Samuel Usher. Boston.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO CURRENT LITERATURE. By W. H. S.

Case, Lockward & Brainard Co. Hartford.

THE HARTFORD CENTRAL ASSOCIATION AND THE BUSHNELL CONTROVERSY. By Edwin P. Parker, D. D.

G. P. Putnam's Sons. New York.

LITTLE JOURNEYS TO THE HOMES OF AMERICAN AUTHORS. Prescott. pp. 122. 5 cents.

American Academy of Political and Social Science. Pa.

AN EARLY ESSAY ON PROPORTIONAL REPRESENTATION. By Edmund J. James, Ph. D. pp. 80. 25 cents.

RUDOLF VON GNEIST. By Conrad Bornhak. pp. 97. 25 cents.

THE MULTIPLE MONEY STANDARD. By J. Allen Smith. pp. 60. 50 cents.

United States Dept. of Agriculture. Washington.

ARBOR DAY, ITS HISTORY AND OBSERVANCE. By N. H. Egleston. pp. 80.

Flood & Vincent. Meadville.

PICTURE WORK. By Walter L. Hervey, Ph.D. pp. 90. 30 cents.

Hope Publishing Co. Chicago.

PENTECOSTAL HYMNS. Selected by Henry Date. 35 cents.

MAGAZINES.

February. BASIS.—CHARITIES REVIEW.

March. LEND A HAND.—THE FORTNIGHTLY REVIEW.—THE CONVERTED CATHOLIC.—PROGRESS OF THE WORLD.—THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.—THE WRITER.

April. THE PALL MALL GAZETTE.—CASSELL'S.—HARPER'S.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

The Supply at Saint Agatha's

By ELIZABETH STUART PHELPS, Author of "A Singular Life," "The Gates Ajar," etc. Printed on deckel edge paper of high quality, and artistically bound in cloth with a distinctive cover design by Mrs. Whitman. With Illustrations. Square 12mo, gilt top, $1.00.

This is one of the strongest, most suggestive, most illuminating of all the stories Miss Phelps has written. The setting of the story is vigorous and skillful, the narrative is engrossingly interesting, and the revelation of the "Supply" at once startles and uplifts. The book is every way artistic and is admirable for an Easter gift.

George Harris.

Moral Evolution. Crown 8vo, $2.00.

"The general result to which Dr. Harris conducts us is the reassuring conviction that in the moral and religious history of the world the tide bears on to the realization of the divine and human ideals in an advance on the lines of Christian ethics and toward the realization of Christian ideals of faith, life, and duty."—The Independent, New York.

George A. Gordon.

The Christ of To-Day. Fourth Edition. 12mo, $1.50

"He discusses the profoundest truths and mysteries of nature and religion with a breadth and force of grasp, a just discrimination, and also a tender appreciation of actual human needs which few, even among modern leaders of thought, have exhibited in an equal degree. Henceforth he must be conceded a high place among them."—The Congregationalist.

John H. Denison.

Christ's Idea of the Supernatural. Crown 8vo, $2 00

"A great book, a contribution of profound and inspiring thought concerning some of the most serious problems pressing upon the mind and heart of man."—Boston Transcript.

Washington Gladden.

Ruling Ideas of the Present Age. 16mo, $1.25.

The Lord's Prayer. 16mo, gilt top, $1 00.

Applied Christianity. Moral Aspects of Social Questions. 16mo, gilt top, $1.25.

Who Wrote the Bible? A Book for the People. Tenth Edition. 16mo, $1.25.

Tools and the Man. Property and Industry under the Christian Law. 16mo, $1.25.

"There is no religious writer of the present day who presents more original, stimulating, and refreshing thought than Dr. Gladden. The various books which he has written on theological, sociological, and kindred topics have commanded a wide reading and been productive of much positive good."—Christian Work, New York.

Lucy Larcom.

The Unseen Friend. 16mo, gilt top, $1 00.

As It Is In Heaven. Thoughts on the Future Life. 16mo, gilt top, $1.00.

At the Beautiful Gate, and Other Songs of Faith. 16mo, gilt top, $1.00.

Easter Gleams. 16mo, 75 cents.

Breathings of the Better Life. New Edition. 18mo, $1.25; half calf, $2.50

Beckonings for Every Day. A Calendar of Thought. Arranged by LUCY LARCOM. 16mo, $1.00.

"The religious sentiment of New England never had a more winning and graceful interpreter."—John G. Whittier.

Sold by all Booksellers. Sent, postpaid, by

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO., Boston.

THE BEST FICTION

PUBLISHED RECENTLY.

THE DAY OF THEIR WEDDING.

A Novel. By W. D. HOWELLS. Illustrated. Post 8vo, Cloth, $1.25.

DR. WARRICK'S DAUGHTERS.

A Novel. By REBECCA HARDING DAVIS. Illustrated. Post 8vo, Cloth, Ornamental, $1.50.

A CLEVER WIFE.

A Novel. By W. PETT RIDGE. Post 8vo, Cloth, Ornamental, $1 25.

THE SECOND OPPORTUNITY OF MR. STAPLEHURST.

A Novel. By W. PETT RIDGE. Post 8vo, Cloth, Ornamental, $1 25.

TOMMY TODDLES.

By ALBERT LEE. Illustrated by PETER S. NEWELL. Square 16mo, Cloth, Ornamental, $1.25.

More Volumes in the New and Uniform Edition of

THOMAS HARDY.

A LAODICEAN.
THE HAND OF ETHELBERTA.
THE WOODLANDERS.
THE TRUMPET-MAJOR.

Crown 8vo, Cloth, $1 50 per volume. With Etched Frontispieces.

THE APOTHEOSIS OF MR. TYRAWLEY.

A Novel. By E. LIVINGSTON PRESCOTT. Post 8vo, Cloth, Ornamental, $1.25.

THE X JEWEL.

A Scottish Romance of the Days of James VI. By the Hon. FREDERIC MONCREIFF. Post 8vo, Cloth, Ornamental, $1.25.

IN SEARCH OF QUIET.

A Country Journal, May–July. A Novel. By WALTER FRITH. Post 8vo, Cloth, Ornamental, $1.25.

JAMES INWICK, PLOUGHMAN AND ELDER.

A Novel. By P. HAY HUNTER. Post 8vo, Cloth, Ornamental, $1 00

THE DANVERS JEWELS

And Sir Charles Danvers Two Stories. New Edition. 8vo, Cloth, Ornamental, $1.00.

HARPER & BROTHERS, Publishers, New York.

The Independent.

EASTER NUMBER, April 2d, 1896.

The Salvation Army;

ARTICLES BY

Gen. WILLIAM BOOTH (1,000 words by Cable).
Commander and Mrs. BALLINGTON BOOTH.
Commissioner EVA C. BOOTH.

The Immortality of the Soul;

ARTICLES BY

Prof. BORDEN C. BOWNE; Rev. CHAS. A. SAVAGE; Prof. J. MARK BALDWIN; Prof. GEORGE HARRIS, D. D.; DAVID GREENLEAF THOMPSON, Ph. D.; Prof. J. MCK. CATTELL; Prof. GEORGE T. LADD; Prof. E. D. COPE, and Rev. Drs. R. S. STORRS, A. H. BRADFORD, JOHN HALL, WILLIAM HAYES WARD, WILLIAM R. HUNTINGTON, EDWARD JUDSON, and others.

Also Easter Stories, Poems and Articles by CHARLES H. PARKHURST, D. D., IRVING ALLEN, WAYLAND HOYT, D. D., and others.

Price 10 cents, $3.00 per annum.

130 FULTON STREET, New York.

Subscribers' Wants.

Notices under this heading, not exceeding five lines (eight words to the line), cost subscribers fifty cents each insertion. Additional lines ten cents each per insertion.

Wanted, a situation as Organist and Director of Music by a gentleman of large experience. Address "Organist," P. O. Box, 1944, Boston.

Companion. A lady desires a position as companion. Is a good reader and understands music and French. Unexceptionable references given and required. Address "MRS. S.," care Congregationalist.

An Experienced Contralto Singer wishes position in a choir, quartet preferred. Best of references. Address "H.," care Congregationalist.

Send for Free Specimen Pages of

UPLIFTING SONGS
NEW AND OLD
FOR PRAISE AND REVIVAL MEETINGS AND SABBATH SCHOOLS
EDITED BY
C.C. CASE AND J.R. MURRAY
WITH A NUMBER OF HERETOFORE UNPUBLISHED GOSPEL SONGS BY
GEO. F. ROOT.

Price 35¢ post paid.

The Book will contain 224 pages.

Published by
THE JOHN CHURCH COMPANY,
CINCINNATI-NEW YORK-CHICAGO.

Webster's International Dictionary

The One Great Standard Authority,
So writes Hon. D. J. Brewer, Justice U. S. Supreme Court.

☞ Send a Postal for Specimen Pages, etc.

WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY
THE AUTHENTIC UNABRIDGED REVISED AND ENLARGED
G. & C. MERRIAM CO.
WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY
ACCORDING TO ACT OF CONGRESS

Successor of the "Unabridged."

Standard of the U. S. Gov't Printing Office, the U. S. Supreme Court, all the State Supreme Courts, and of nearly all the Schoolbooks.

Warmly Commended
by State Superintendents of Schools, and other Educators almost without number.

THE BEST FOR EVERYBODY
BECAUSE
It is easy to find the word wanted.
It is easy to ascertain the pronunciation.
It is easy to trace the growth of a word.
It is easy to learn what a word means.

THE BEST WORK OF ITS KIND.
The Boston Herald says:—
No dictionary can be final, but for the next twenty-five years the International must be accepted as the best work of its kind in the English language.

G. & C. MERRIAM CO., Publishers,
Springfield, Mass., U.S.A.

Educational.

SCHERMERHORN'S TEACHERS' AGENCY.
Oldest and best known in U. S.
Established, 1855.
3 EAST 14TH STREET, N. Y.

THE FISK TEACHERS' AGENCIES.
4 Ashburton Pl., Boston, Mass.; New York, N. Y.; Chicago, Ill.; and Los Angeles, Cal. 100-paged Agency Manual free. EVERETT O. FISK & CO.

MAINE, BANGOR.
BANGOR THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY.
Course of study complete, thorough, Biblical and practical. Also an elective English course. Advanced Semitic study optional. Entrance examination on Wednesday, Sept. 4. Address Prof. F. B. DENIO Bangor, Me.

BRADFORD ACADEMY.
For the higher education of young women. Buildings unsurpassed for comfort and health. Twenty-five acres—twelve in grove; lake for rowing and skating. Classical and general course of study; also, preparatory and optional. Year commences Sept. 11, 1895. Apply to MISS IDA C. ALLEN, Principal Bradford, Mass.

MASSACHUSETTS, NORTON.
WHEATON SEMINARY
For Young Ladies. Regular and elective courses, literary, scientific, classical. Pupils also fitted for advanced courses in leading colleges. Excellent advantages in art and music. Fine library, laboratory, observatory, gymnasium, bowling alley; outdoor sports, careful physical training. Perfect sanitary arrangements. Best home influences. Beautifully situated, 28 miles from Boston.
61st year. Summer term, April 9, 1896. For illustrated prospectus, address
MISS A. E. STANTON, Principal, Norton, Mass.

Choice Books for Easter.

Heaven. Six Sermons by REV. RICHARD MONTAGUE, D. D With Memorials by Rev. Alvah Hovey, D. D., and Rev. Geo. E. Merrill, D. D. 12mo. With portrait. Cloth, gilt top, $1.25.
Beautiful and effective sermons, touched with a prescience of near immortality. Their eloquence appeals to both mind and heart.

Through Death to Life. Ten Discourses on St. Paul's great resurrection chapter. By REUEN THOMAS, D. D. 12mo, cloth, $1 25.
"A book to be read and prized; full of the light and aroma of the most precious hopes and glorious realities."—The Advance.

Doctrine and Life. By GEORGE B. STEVENS, Ph D., D. D., Yale University 12mo, cloth, $1 25.
"The whole trend of the work is to clarify religious impressions, to develop strong convictions, and to inculate tolerance and candor."—The Congregationalist.

Christian Evidences. By EZEKIEL GILMAN ROBINSON. D. D., LL. D., late President of Brown University. 12mo, cloth, $1.25.
"The ripe product of years of experience and thought and discussion, by one of the keenest minds and one of the greatest teachers of our time."—President Taylor, Vassar College.

Ezekiel Gilman Robinson. An Autobiography, with a supplement by H. L. WAYLAND, D. D., and eleven critical estimates. Edited by E. H. JOHNSON, D. D. 8vo, cloth, 378 pp.
A book of deep interest to all who knew the great teacher; and to those who owed him strong mental or moral stimulus, a memorial of rare value.

Poems of Home and Country. By REV S. F. SMITH, D. D., author of "AMERICA." Royal 8vo, illus., cloth, gilt top, $1.50. Edition De Luxe, $7.50.
The only authorized complete edition, edited under the author's personal supervision.

The Vacant Chair and Other Poems. By HENRY S. WASHBURN. 16mo, illustrated, cloth, gilt top, $1 25
"Its entire contents are flushed with the true song-spirit."—The Independent.

For sale by leading booksellers, or sent, postpaid, by the publishers, on receipt of price.

SILVER, BURDETT & COMPANY,
PUBLISHERS,
110-112 Boylston Street, Boston.

MONEY AND BANKING

Illustrated by American History.

BY

HORACE WHITE.

12mo. Cloth. 488 pages. Illustrated. $1 50.

Professor WILLIAM G. SUMNER, Professor of Political and Social Science in Yale University:
"I have read Mr. White's book on 'Money.' I am astonished that any one should have been able to put so much history and theory into so compact a presentation. The book meets in a most admirable manner the greatest literary need of the time."

Descriptive circular sent postpaid to any address.

GINN & COMPANY,
BOSTON. NEW YORK. CHICAGO.

"It has no equal."

That large remark in small space was made by The Educational Review, of New York, edited by NICHOLAS MURRAY BUTLER and other eminent educators, concerning

The HYMNAL for SCHOOLS

a new, choice book rapidly being adopted by Private, Public, and Sunday Schools The Congregationalist says of it: "It is a fine example of choice work It is a fruit of sound musical culture, but the wants of average pupils are well kept in mind."

Sample pages, or sample copies (returnable), sent by

FORDS, HOWARD & HULBERT,
47 East 10th St., New York.

After Easter?

Overhaul Your Sunday School Library.

Replace worn volumes and add new ones to the extent of the funds at your disposal.

No way so effectual as this for creating new interest in the Sunday School, particularly among the older scholars.

We are EXPERTS, and can help you to secure the best books at lowest prices.

Congregational Sunday School and Publishing Society,
Congregational House, Boston. 475 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

The Bible as Literature.

The Literary Study of the Bible.

An account of the Leading Forms of Literature represented in the Sacred Writings. Intended for English Readers. By RICHARD G. MOULTON, Ph. D., of the University of Chicago.

This book assumes that the English Bible is a supreme classic, the thorough study of which must form a part of all liberal education. It, therefore, deals with the Bible as literature, without reference to theological or distinctively religious matters, or to historical analysis.

The Congregationalist:
"Professor Moulton in a new way has demonstrated the superiority of the Book of books over all other literature. He is peculiarly at home in discussing the poetry of the Bible. This volume will be most welcome to the minister, a work of great value for the classroom, and a prized companion to the Bible in multitudes of homes."

Rev. George A. Gordon, D. D., Pastor of Old South Church, Boston, author of "The Christ of To-day":
"I know of no single volume that furnishes so admirable an introduction to the literary study of the Bible."

Prof. Richard Burton, of Hartford Seminary:
"By far the most thorough and broad treatment of the subject which has yet appeared; a subject destined to receive more and more attention in the days to come.'

Cloth. 545 pages. Large 12mo. $2.00.

For sale by all booksellers, or sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price.

D. C. HEATH & CO., Publishers, Boston, New York, Chicago.

JUST READY.

The Farmer and The Lord.

By GEORGE H. HEPWORTH.

16mo, 242 pages, cloth, 75 cents.

"It is the impressive story of an obstinate infidel, whose life is spent in tilling the soil. An unbeliever he remains until tribulations overwhelm him, when he is forced to confess that there is no solace in his barren philosophy, and that only in religion can a man find comfort in time of need. He is a strong and most interesting character, and we hardly think that the author has portrayed any character with more skill or vigor. He certainly has not written any book which is more deserving of popularity than this one."—New York Herald.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

Hiram Golf's Religion,
Or, "The Shoemaker by the Grace of God."
19th thousand. 16mo, 134 pages, cloth, 75 cents.

They Met in Heaven.
7th thousand. 16mo, 216 pages, cloth, 75 cents.

The Life Beyond.
This Mortal must put on Immortality.
3d thousand. 16mo, 116 pages, cloth, 75 cents.

Herald Sermons.
45 short sermons reprinted from the New York Herald.
12mo, cloth, with portrait, $1.00.

Brown Studies.
Or, "Camp Fires and Morals."
16mo, 332 pages, illustrated, gilt top, $1.25.

Sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of prices.

E. P. DUTTON & CO.,
PUBLISHERS,
31 West 23d Street, New York.

OUR ARMY NURSES.

A BOOK OF UNTOLD TALES.

Written by nearly One Hundred Nurses of the Civil War, and compiled by

MARY A. GARDNER HOLLAND, who served under the direction of
DOROTHEA L. DIX,
Superintendent of Army Nurses.

Introduction by Capt. JOHN G. B. ADAMS, of Massachusetts, Past Nat. Commander, G. A. R.

Clear pica type, extra velvet finished paper, over five hundred and fifty pages, and one hundred fine half-toned engravings.

| | |
|---|---|
| Full Silk Cloth, Gold Imprint | $2.50 |
| Half Morocco | 3.25 |
| Full Morocco | 3.75 |

AGENTS WANTED.

B. WILKINS & CO., Pubs.
93 Federal Street, BOSTON, MASS.

A Beautiful Easter Volume

HEAVEN.

Six Sermons by Rev. RICHARD MONTAGUE, D. D., late Pastor of the First Baptist Church, Newton, Mass., with Memorials. Square 12mo, wide margins, bound in rich garnet cloth with gilt top, illustrated with author's portrait. Price $1.25.

Written and delivered under the stress of a fatal illness, these Sermons have a prescience of coming immortality that touches the heart with tenderness, while their simple, earnest eloquence appeals strongly to the reason.

The six sermons are upon the following topics: "What is Heaven?" "Recognition in Heaven," "Is Heaven a Place?" "The Inauguration of Heaven," "Is Heaven for All?" "The Way to Heaven."

For sale at the bookstores, or mailed, postpaid, on receipt of price, by

SILVER, BURDETT & COMPANY, Publishers,
110-112 Boylston Street, Boston.

SONGS FOR SPRING TIME.

HIGHEST PRAISE FOR THE SABBATH SCHOOL.
$30 per 100 copies.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HYMNS, for YOUNG PEOPLE.
$30 per 100 copies.

Do not substitute inferior books because of lower price. The best are cheapest!!

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO.,
76 East 9th St., New York. 215 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

300 ORDERS in Three Weeks"; "10 orders in every 12 calls"; "$5 to $10 profit every day"; "130 orders in 3½ days." Terms free. Outfit 30 cents. JAS. H. EARLE, Publisher, Boston.

NEW BOOKS.

Cooper's Works.

The "Mohawk Edition," to be issued in 32 volumes. Printed from new plates, and bound in the general style of the new Hudson Edition of Irving's works. The edition will be sold in sets, or in separate volumes, according to the convenience of the buyer. Cloth extra, with frontispiece, per volume, $1.25; per set, $40.00. First group now ready, comprising "The Deerslayer," "Last of the Mohicans," "The Pathfinder," "The Pioneers," "The Prairie," "The Spy."

Books and their Makers

During the Middle Ages. A study of the conditions of the production and distribution of literature from the fall of the Roman Empire to the close of the Seventeenth Century. By GEO. HAVEN PUTNAM, author of "Authors and their Public in Ancient Times," etc. 2 vols., sold separately. 8vo, each $2 50. Vol. I. now ready.

The Question of Copyright.

Comprising the text of the Copyright Law of the United States, and a Summary of the Copyright Laws at present in force in the Chief Countries of the World. Compiled by GEO. HAVEN PUTNAM, A. M., Secretary of the American Publishers' Copyright League. Second edition, revised, with Additions, and with the Record of Legislation brought down to March, 1896. 8vo, gilt top, $1.75.

St. Paul the Traveller

And the Roman Citizen. By Prof. W. M. RAMSAY, author of "The Church in the Roman Empire, A. D. 64–170." With map, 8vo, $3.00.

A Princess of the Gutter.

A Novel of the East End of London. By L. T. MEADE. 12mo, cloth, $1.25.

"Certain aspects of the life of 'the submerged tenth' in the east of London are here sketched by a strong hand. The story is very powerful and convincing. The story of the heroine's service and her influence upon her friends and associates is full of striking and significant incidents. The story better deserves to be classed among the more useful and thoughtful studies of social life than any work of fiction which we have seen in recent days."—Christian Work.

Lorenzo de' Medici

And Florence during the Fifteenth Century. By EDWARD ARMSTRONG, M. A., Fellow of Queen's College, Oxford. (Being No. 16 in the Heroes of the Nations Series.) With upward of 30 Illustrations. 12mo, cloth, $1 50; half leather, gilt top, $1.75.

"Notes on New Books," a quarterly bulletin, and list of successful fiction sent on application. Putnam's Portrait Catalogue sent on receipt of 10 cents.*

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS,
NEW YORK AND LONDON.

NEW BOOKS.

ASPECTS OF HEAVEN. By Rev. BURDETT HART, D. D. 256 pp, 16mo, gilt top, 75 cents.

"A very reverent study of the 'Aspects of Heaven, based on the Word of God. . . . It shows us heaven as a place, the 'Father's House,' the 'City' where we are to be with the Father and the angels, and meet and recognize dear ones gone before."—Christian Observer.

A HARMONY OF THE LIFE OF ST. PAUL. According to the Acts of the Apostles and the Pauline Epistles. By the Rev. FRANK J. GOODWIN. 240 pp., 8vo, $1.75.

"This book will henceforth be indispensable to every Biblical student."—Western Recorder.

"As a book of reference and a thorough exposition and harmony of the Life of St. Paul it excels anything we have yet seen."—Christian Work.

"The student of the New Testament will find the book of great value."—Inter-Ocean.

HEROES OF THE SOUTH SEAS. By MARTHA BURR BANKS. With 22 full-page half-tone illustrations. 220 pp., 12mo, $1.25.

The story of Williams, Hunt, Geddie, Selwyn, Patteson, Paton and other stalwart heroes of the Pacific, is here told in a most entertaining way. The illustrations add much to its beauty and interest.

THE THREE FISHING BOATS, and other Talks to Children. By the Rev. J. C. LAMBERT, of Glasgow. 186 pp., 16mo, 60 cents.

"Most excellent specimens of addresses to children, brief, interesting, lucid, a treasure for parents and teachers."—Detroit Christian Herald.

THE BOW IN THE CLOUD and the First Bereavement. By the Rev. J. R. MACDUFF, D. D. A fine pocket edition from new plates. 32mo, cloth, 50 cents; white cloth, gilt, 75 cents; calf, $1. A delightful book of consolation for the afflicted by an accomplished writer. Send it to sorrowing friends.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK. Cheap edition. 18mo, net, 25 cents.

A most important help to Bible study.

RECENT BOOKS.

THE ISLANDS OF THE PACIFIC. From the Old to the New. Rev. J. M. ALEXANDER. 515 pp., 85 half-tone cuts, 8vo, cloth, $2

"Nowhere has the gospel met with swifter and more sweeping triumphs than among the people of the interesting lands described in this fascinating volume."—Herald and Presbyter.

THE TWO ST. JOHNS. By JAMES STALKER D. D. 12mo, 241 pp., $1.

"A very delightful book."—N. C. Presbyterian.

A LADY OF ENGLAND. The Life and Letters of Charlotte Maria Tucker (A. L. O. E.). By AGNES GIBERNE. 519 pp., 8vo, $1.75.

Four editions have been printed in England.

DR. MACDUFF'S NEW BOOKS

TALES OF THE WARRIOR KING, or Life and Times of David. 8vo, 356 pp., $2.

THOUGHTS FOR THE QUIET HOUR. 16mo, 272 pp., $1. A devotional classic.

Send for our Illustrated Catalogue.

AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY
10 East 23d Street, New York.

Boston, 54 Bromfield St. Philadelphia, 1512 Chestnut St.
Rochester, 93 State St. Chicago, 167, 169 Wabash Ave.
Cincinnati, 420 Elm St. San Francisco, 735 Market St.

TWO GREAT FEATURES IN

THE APRIL CENTURY

"Four Lincoln Conspiracies."

A graphic account of the three conspiracies to kill and one to kidnap President Lincoln, written by Victor Louis Mason, of the U. S. War Department, who has made a careful study of the subject and unearthed much interesting material. The illustrations include pictures, made by special permission of the Secretary of War, of Lincoln relics in the possession of the War Department and not shown to the public and never before photographed.

War Department, Washington, April 20, 1865.
$100,000 REWARD!
THE MURDERER
of our late beloved President, ABRAHAM LINCOLN,
IS STILL AT LARGE.
$50,000 REWARD!
$25,000 REWARD!
$25,000 REWARD!
EDWIN M. STANTON, Secretary of War.

"The Old Olympic Games"

is the title of an article by Allan Marquand, Professor of Archæology at Princeton, of especial timeliness in view of the revival of the games at Athens during the present month. The illustrations are "restorations" of famous games, by the artist Castaigne—a striking series of pictures, with views of

The Chariot Race, The Wrestling Match, The Warriors' Race. The Victor Going to the Temple of Zeus, The Start—The Victor in the Temple—The Finish, etc.

Published by THE CENTURY CO.

Sold Everywhere. Price, 35 Cents.

AYER'S
COMPOUND CONCENTRATED EXTRACT
OF SARSAPARILLA
CHRISTOPHER COLVMBVS OCT·XII MCCCCXCII
WORLD'S COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION IN COMMEMORATION OF THE FOUR HUNDREDTH ANNIVERSARY OF THE LANDING OF COLUMBUS MDCCCXCII — MDCCCXCIII TO J.C. AYER CO.
The Only Sarsaparilla
Awarded a medal at the World's Fair, Chicago, 1893, was....
Âyer's Sarsaparilla
The medal medicine is the model medicine. It is the great blood purifier of the age. Use no other.

lews from the Churches

Meetings to Come.

OSTON MINISTERS' MEETING, Pilgrim Hall, April 0 A. M. Address by Mr. Flemming Osgood on the Use the Voice.

OREIGN MISSIONARY PRAYER MEETING under the pices of the Woman's Board of Missions in Pilgrim ll, Congregational House, every Friday at 11 A. M.

NION BIBLE CLASS, conducted by Rev. Alfred A. ight, D. D., Bromfield Street Church, Boston, Satur-, 3 P. M.

ONFERENCE FOR MINISTERS AND CHRISTIAN ORKERS at Chicago during the month of April. Spe- l lectures by Superintendent Torrey, Prof. W. W. ite and Dr. W. J. Erdman. All who desire to avail mselves of this special conference and stopping at Institute at the reduced price for board and room $5 per week should make application early of Supt. A. Torrey, 80 Institute Place, Chicago, Ill.

SPRING STATE MEETINGS.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| izona, | Tempe, | Wednesday, April 8. |
| xas, | Cleburne, | Thursday, April 9. |
| w Mexico, | Albuquerque, | Wednesday, April 15. |
| w Jersey, | Newark, | Tuesday, April 21. |
| lahoma, | Kingfisher, | Thursday, April 30. |
| ssouri, | Lamar, | Tuesday, May 5. |
| nsas, | Lawrence, | Thursday, May 7. |
| io, | Marietta, | Tuesday, May 12. |
| iana, | Michigan City, | Tuesday, May 12. |
| nois, | Aurora, | Monday, May 18. |
| wa, | Davenport, | Tuesday, May 19. |
| ssachusetts, | Fall River, | Tuesday, May 19. |
| chigan, | Greenville, | Tuesday, May 19. |
| w York, | Canandaigua, | Tuesday, May 19. |
| uth Dakota, | Pierre, | Tuesday, May 19. |
| nsylvania, | Ridgway, | Tuesday, May 26. |
| ode Island, | Westerly, | Tuesday, May 26. |
| rmont, | Bradford, | Tuesday, June 9. |
| nnecticut Asso., | Hartford, | Tuesday, June 16. |

Benevolent Societies.

HE CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY represented in Massachusetts by the MASSACHU- TTS HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY, No 9 Congrega- al House, Rev. Joshua Coit, Secretary; Rev. Edwin Palmer, Treasurer.

WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION, Room . 32, Congregational House. Office hours, 9 to 5. An- al membership, $1.00; life membership, $20.00 Con- butions solicited. Miss Annie C. Bridgman, Treasurer.

MERICAN BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR FOREIGN SSIONS, Congregational House, No 1 Somerset Street, ston. Frank H. Wiggin, Assistant Treasurer; Charles Swett, Publishing and Purchasing Agent. Office in w York, 121 Bible House; in Chicago, 153 La Salle St.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, Rooms 1 and 2 Con- gational House. Miss Ellen Carruth, Treasurer; ss Abbie B. Child, Home Secretary.

HE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION, Bible use, New York. Missions in the United States, evan- istic and educational, at the South and in the West ong the Indians and Chinese. Boston office, 21 Con- gational House; Chicago office, 153 La Salle Street.; veland office, Y. M. C. A. Building. Donations may sent to either of the above offices, or to H. W. Hub- rd, Treasurer, 108 Bible House, New York City.

HE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY Church and Parsonage Building. Rev. L. H. Cobb, D., Secretary; H. O. Pinneo, Treasurer, 59 Bible use, New York; Rev. George A. Hood, Congrega- al House, Boston, Field Secretary.

CONGREGATIONAL EDUCATION SOCIETY.—(Includ- work of former New West Commission.) Aids four dred students for the ministry, eight home mis- ary colleges, twenty academies in the West and ah, ten free Christian schools in Utah and New xico. S. F. Wilkins, Treasurer. Offices, 10 Congre- ional House, Boston, 151 Washington St., Chicago, Address, 10 Congregational House, Boston.

CONG. SUNDAY SCHOOL & PUBLISHING SOCIETY.— ntributions used only for missionary work. Rev. orge M. Boynton, D. D., Secretary; W. A. Duncan, D., Field Secretary; E. Lawrence Barnard, Treas- r, Congregational House, Boston.

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF MINISTERIAL AID.— easurer, Mr. Arthur G. Stanwood, 701 Sears Building, ston. Address applications to Rev A. H. Quint, D. D., ngregational Library, 1 Somerset Street, Boston.

MINISTERIAL RELIEF.—In order to afford a little ely aid to aged and disabled home and foreign mis- naries and ministers and their families, the commit- e of the National Council asks from each church one ndid offering for its permanent invested fund. It o invites generous individual gifts. For fuller infor- ation see Minutes of National Council, 1892, and Year- ok, 1893, page 62. Secretary, Rev. N. H. Whittlesey, w Haven, Ct.; Treasurer, Rev. S. B. Forbes, Hart- rd, Ct. Form of a bequest: I bequeath to the "Trus- s of the National Council of the Congregational urches of the United States" (a body corporate char- ed under the laws of the State of Connecticut) [here ert the bequest], to be used for the purpose of Min- erial Relief, as provided in the resolution of the Na- nal Council of the Congregational Churches of the ited States at its session held in Chicago in October, 6.

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF PASTORAL SUP- Y, established by the Massachusetts General Associ- on, offers its services to churches desiring pastors or ipit supplies. Careful attention is given to applica- ns from without the State. Room 22A, Congrega- nal House, Boston. Rev. Charles B. Rice, Sec.

THE BOSTON SEAMAN'S FRIEND SOCIETY, organized 7. Chapel and reading-room, 287 Hanover St., Boston. en day and evening. Sailors and landsmen welcome. ily prayer meeting, 11 A. M., Bible study, 3 P. M. Sun- y services, usual hours. Meetings every evening ex- pt Saturday. Branch mission, Vineyard Haven. Is Congregational society and appeals to all Congrega- nal churches for support. Send donations of money B. S. Snow, Corresponding Secretary, Room 22, Con- gational House, Boston. Send clothing, comfort gs, reading, etc., to Capt. S. S. Nickerson, chaplain, Hanover St. Bequests should read: "I give and be- eath to the Boston Seaman's Friend Society the sum $——, to be applied to the charitable uses and pur- ses of said society." Rev. Alexander McKenzie, D., President; George Gould, Treasurer.

PASSING COMMENT.

That is the way to pay debts, as the women a New Hampshire church went at it. They e partially ready in advance for the next nergency.

As an unbiased opinion of the late Syracuse eclaration of unity that of the new church in n interior State, speaking through its pastor, inspiring: "The grandest ecclesiastical de- liverance of our day." This church has obeyed its convictions and others of its previous faith, we believe, are following its lead.

The wiping out or large reduction of a church debt often marks an epoch, not only in the organization itself, but in the community. A heroic effort in a struggling church in Pennsylvania has stimulated such an interest in the formerly indifferent neighborhood that greater spiritual and numerical growth may now be looked for.

For a city now supporting so many of our churches as Worcester, Mass., as seen in the annual report this week, the increase of their number has been extraordinary. That a century and more should have elapsed between the founding of the first and second church shows how strong and rapid a growth of Congregationalism, this century, has made up for the last and placed the city about seventh in the rank of the strongholds of the denomination. On the other hand, Chicago, which leads with nearly seventy churches, has organized them all in less than half a century.

CONFERENCES AND ASSOCIATIONS.

IND.—Central Association held a meeting in Brightwood, March 17. The topics were: The Spiritual Quickening of Our Churches, Claims of Our Benevolent Societies, Weak Places in Our Churches and Sunday Schools and How They May Be Strengthened, and American Congregationalism, Its History and Polity. The attendance was large and included three graduating members of the Bible School of Butler College, the Christian institution located at Indianapolis. Three new churches were received.

KAN.—Central Association met at Dover, March 17–19. The general topic was The Place of the Central Association in the Kingdom. Rev. C. M. Sheldon preached the sermon.

CLUBS.

VT.—The Club of Western Vermont met with the College Street Church, Burlington, March 24. The topic was Foreign Missions in the Light of Recent Events. Papers were read on Discouragements in China, Japan and Turkey and A New Forward Movement. Addresses were made by Dr. G. W. Phillips on The Recent Debt and Its Lessons and by Sec. J. L. Barton on Christianity and New Japan.

MINN.—The March meeting of the Minnesota Club in Minneapolis was well attended and strong papers were given on the Future of Congregationalism, Its Unity, Its Democracy, Advantages and Disadvantages, and Its Undeveloped Resources.

WN.—The Puget Sound Club met in Tacoma, March 18. The first address by Pres. M. W. Harrington of the State University was on Arbitration, which the speaker believed to be the next step in civilization to be taken in the near future. Resolutions favoring universal arbitration were adopted and ordered sent to the representatives in Washington. Other addresses were on Armenia and Hawaii.

NEW ENGLAND.

Massachusetts.

WEST SOMERVILLE—Day Street. The church has voted $8,000 for repairs the coming summer. The edifice will be remodeled throughout and a new organ will be put in. Rev. Peter MacQueen is pastor.

MARSHFIELD HILLS.—The meeting house is closed for repairs. Memorial windows, painting, papering, a new pulpit set and a new carpet are contemplated. Part of the funds are raised by the Ladies' Circle and the Y. P. S. C. E.

MANSFIELD.—Last week Wednesday the church celebrated quietly the 40th anniversary of the beginning of Rev. Jacob Ide's pastorate. This period has been marked by unusual unanimity and prosperity. A number of short addresses bore testimony to the esteem in which the pastor is held and a purse of $140 was presented him. Only four members now living were connected with the church at the beginning of this period.

HAVERHILL.—North. Rev. G. H. Reed has been given a vacation of three months and a purse of $250 in gold and a generous parishioner takes him to Europe. This church unites with the Centef and Union Churches in Passion Week services, with preaching by Rev. Messrs. Shipman of Andover, Page of Lawrence and Reid of Newburyport.

DRACUT.—First. The pastor, Rev. E. L. Baker, preached last Sunday a sermon commemorative of the 175th anniversary of the church.

LOWELL.—John Street has again successfully resisted the application of a persistent liquor dealer to establish a liquor shop upon the corner of the street passed by a majority of the worshipers on their way to church. This is the third year that the contest has been carried on, and the church has prevented the granting of the license each year.——Highland is observing Passion Week with special services, having for consideration the seven utterances of Christ upon the cross.——First. The adherents of the pastor, who are in the majority in the church but in the minority in the society, are greatly pleased that the committee of the legislature voted nine to two to report in favor of a bill compelling the society to admit to its membership such church members as have paid six months' pew rent and are of legal age. The House promptly passed the bill to a third reading. This action, if completed by the Senate and governor's consent, will bring into the society all whose application for membership was refused in the early winter. The annual meeting of the society will be held next Monday evening, when it is hoped that some method of settling the long continued controversy may be accepted.

WORCESTER.—The statistics of the city for 1895 report 18 churches. The latest, the Second Swedish, organized the past year, has over 90 members. The Old South is the largest with a membership of 852; the Armenian the smallest, with 43 members. All but four show an increase in membership, the Old South leading with 70 additions and a total gain of 50. The additions in all the churches numbered on confession 228, by letter 184. The total church membership is 5,449, of Sunday schools 5,852 and of the C. E. Societies 1,400. The gifts to foreign missions were $5,596, other benevolences $38,415, home expenses $53,234. The growth of the churches in this conference is noteworthy. Of the 13 in the conference, outside of the city, all but two were organized before the year 1800 and of those in the city only one, the Old South, was organized previous to 1800.——Sunday evening of last week group rally meetings were held in the interest of Welcome Mission. All the Baptist, Methodist, Unitarian, Universalist and Congregational churches united in commending this excellent work. Contributions of $576 were received for the work. The mission is well organized. It has a board and lodging house and woodyard where the needy may work for their living. Gospel meetings are held every night. About 280 men have begun a Christian life here in the last 10 months.

The First and South Churches of Pittsfield are holding union services during Holy Week with preaching every evening. Also the churches in Dalton and Hinsdale are holding special evening services with sermons by neighboring preachers.

Maine.

SOUTH GARDINER.—A large accession to the church has gladdened all hearts—nine on confession and one by letter; many of them were heads of families. At a recent meeting three deaconesses were added to the board of church officers.

EAST MACHIAS.—Rev. Messrs. H. F. Harding and C. E. Andrews have been holding special meetings on Clark's Island, which have been blessed with many hopeful conversions.

BIDDEFORD.—Second. A legacy of $1,000 is left this church by the late Hon. J. L. Adams, who died recently.

New Hampshire.

KEENE.—First. A reception was given, March 19, to Mrs. Rosena Shelley, for a half-century a member of this church, in honor of her 100th birthday. The esteem and good will of the church was tendered her by a neatly written testimonial bearing several appropriate Scripture selections and the signatures of the standing committee. The young people, who have in charge a mission Sunday school, have lately celebrated its second anniversary. The school is held in a dwelling house rented for the purpose, a weekly prayer meeting is sustained, a sewing class and a kindergarten are held fortnightly and occasional entertainments are given. Rev. W. G. Poor is pastor.

EXETER.—Second. Rev. G. E. Street preached his 25th anniversary sermon last Sunday. Monday evening a public reception was tendered the pastor and his wife. The pastorate has been prosperous and has increased the church membership from 79 to 198. The parish includes 150 families.

CONCORD.—The churches have united in special services for a week, under the direction of the Evangelistic Association. The services have quickened the Christian life of all the city. Rev. Drs. Baker, Little and Allbright of Boston and Rev. C. I. Scofield of Northfield have assisted.

NASHUA.—Pilgrim. The women have recently held a successful fair, the proceeds of which were nearly $400, making up the amount, $2,000, which they had promised to raise for the church debt. They have left $118 in the treasury.

SANBORNTON.—During the past year the church has contributed $116 to foreign missions, $71 to home missions, making with other gifts a total of $207 from a membership of less than 100. Rev. N. P. Philbrook is pastor.

LISBON.—The society has recently voted to become self-sustaining, and in the future, as far as able, it will help other feeble missionary churches to the same position.

RYE.—Rev. J. K. Aldrich has just finished his second pastorate of four years. He was previously acting pastor from 1873 to 1876.

Vermont.

WEST RUTLAND.—The thirteen new members all joining on confession have come as the result of a quiet work during the past months. The annual church reunion, held some weeks ago, was unusually successful.

The society at Morrisville has voted to build a new church edifice and will soon adopt plans for it.

Rhode Island.

EAST PROVIDENCE.—United. Stereopticon illustration of sermons is one of Rev. Henry Crane's methods and the congregations appreciate it. The church was surprised on a recent Sunday morning by an upright piano in place and ready for use, a memorial gift from Mr. and Mrs. McCausland to their only son, Robert L., whose death was greatly lamented by the young people of the congregation.

PROVIDENCE.—Union. The 25th anniversary of this church was observed last Sunday. An illustrated souvenir volume has been issued as a memorial of the event.

Connecticut.

NEW HAVEN.—The New Haven Primary Union was favored last Thursday with an illustrated lecture on A Bird's-eye View of the Life of Christ, by Rev. J. N. Earle of Philadelphia.——Plymouth. A series of popular entertainments, which has been running through the season, came to a successful close last week. The church is thriving in its new location in a growing part of the city.——United. The observance of the 10th anniversary of the Y. P. S. C. E. occurred last week. Rev. Erastus Blakeslee of Boston gave the address on Sunday evening.

NEW BRITAIN.—The new organ is one of the finest in the State. It has full electrical action throughout and cost about $18,000, being largely the gift of Hon. Phillip Corbin ——The Rescue Mission, which was recently started under the united auspices of all the churches, is now in successful operation.

WILLIMANTIC.—The women of the church furnished a counter attraction to an infidel lecture last week in the form of a birthday party, features of which were a literary and musical program and a collation. It was well attended and successful.

EAST HARTFORD.—The organ used by this church was purchased 25 years ago and has done excellent service. It has recently been remodeled, and the work is about completed.

MIDDLE STATES.

New Jersey.

PLAINFIELD —The church is in a prosperous condition, over $1,200 having been given for benevolent purposes the past year. It holds special Passion Week services this week. The Sunday school enrollment has been enlarged by a home department of 28 members. The Young People's Society is growing hopefully.

The 35 churches of the State made a net gain of 180 members last year, 551 having been received. The total beneficence was $34,098, a small decrease from the former year. The home expenditures of the churches amounted to $94,518, an increase over last year of $3,532, and an average for each church of $2,625. The Young People's Societies number two more than last year and have added 379 to their membership.

Pennsylvania.

PITTSBURG.—A union meeting of the churches in this vicinity was held with the First Church March 25. Among the subjects were: Missionary Work, The Church and Prayer, Tendencies of the Age, Aggressive Christianity, Religion and Reading, Spiritual Culture. A special period was devoted to the young people. The collation was bountifully prepared. Unusually good music was furnished by the Swedish Church of Lawrenceville. It is hoped to hold this union meeting annually.

FOREST CITY.—Revival interest has been apparent in this church. At the last communion 15 new members were received. Rev. J. G. Evans is pastor here and at Vandling. These fields are comparatively new and furnish opportunity for pioneer work.

NANTICOKE.—Bethel. The friends here have rallied and by earnest and constant efforts have pledged $3,000 to reduce a burdensome debt to $2,000.

The women of Tabernacle Church, Scranton, have added $200 to the building fund.——The church in Guys Mills has been holding evangelistic meetings with the Methodist church, and there have been several conversions.

THE INTERIOR.

Ohio.

SPRINGFIELD.— First. While waiting for the coming of the new pastor, Rev. E. A. Steiner, the church has been busy in the work of preparation. Special services have been held and spiritual fervor and enthusiasm have been manifest. The interior of the edifice has been cleansed throughout to correspond with the beautiful exterior.

Illinois.

ALTO PASS.—The church is greatly encouraged by a series of meetings conducted by the pastor, Rev. D. M. Brown, aided by Evangelist Purdue. Thirty-one persons have been received into membership, and many prominent citizens have become more deeply interested in the religious welfare of the community.

ROCKFORD.—The late Horatio Stone left, among other public gifts, $3,000 to the C. H. M. S. and $2,000 each to the American Board, the A. M. A. and the C. C. B. S.

Indiana.

INDIANAPOLIS.—Southside. This new church was received into fellowship by a large council, March 16. It was formerly connected with the Christian denomination. Under the lead of Rev. G. E. Hicks, the pastor, it made careful preparations for the event and united on the Syracuse declaration of unity of 1895 without a dissenting voice. The sermon was by Rev. J. H. Crum, D. D.——A council met at Broad Ripple school, March 14, and organized a church of 18 members, the outgrowth of a C. E Society, which began meetings last year. At the recognition service Rev. N. A. Hyde preached the sermon and Rev. J. W. Wilson offered the prayer.

FORT WAYNE.—South, Rev. E. E. Frame, pastor. The meeting house, which has recently undergone extensive repairs, was reopened for public worship March 22. Plymouth Church closed its house and joined in the service. There was a collection of $112 toward the improvement fund. The interior is now an attractive place.

DUNKIRK.—Plymouth. Rev. W. A. Thomas, the pastor, has a Bible school which is quite a marvel of success. It is located in a new gas town with many incoming wage-workers, and the new homes have been thoroughly canvassed. A new and larger hall has been secured for the present.

WHITING.—Evangelist W. B. Culliss is assisting Rev. L. A. Townsend in a series of meetings. A special effort is made to reach non-church-goers. A stereopticon is used and the illustrated sermons are attractive. The church began with 11 members three years ago and now has 60.

The church at Elkhart gave $50 for the American Board debt, Plymouth, Fort Wayne, gave $25, and Mayflower, Indianapolis, $55. Terre Haute friends gave $25 and others smaller amounts.

THE WEST.

Iowa.

REINBECK.—At the March communion there were 32 accessions to the membership, 23 on confession. These are the result of special meetings, in which the Congregational and Methodist churches united and in which 75 conversions are reported. Rev. H. E. Warner is pastor

CLARION.—The Sunday school membership is the largest in its history. The C. E. Society is also doing well. The "two cents a week" plan of raising money for missions has been adopted. Rev. Edwin Ewell is pastor.

SILVER CREEK AND KECK —Rev. E. P. Marvin, D. D., of Lockport, N. Y., assisted the pastor, Rev. W. R. Smith, in two weeks of special meetings at each of these points. Thirty conversions resulted, and the churches are strengthened and encouraged.

NEWTON.—Rev. C. C. Harrah has received 46 members since Jan. 1, 40 on confession. Of these 37 united at the March communion.

Rev. H. C. Rosenberger is holding a series of special meetings at College Springs.

Minnesota.

ST. PAUL.—Pacific. Farewell services in recognition of the departure of Rev. E. A. Steiner were held March 22, that in the evening being participated in by the Arlington Hills Presbyterian Church, which has voted to unite with Pacific when its edifice shall have been moved to a mutually convenient site. Mr. Steiner's untiring labors during his pastorate of more than three years in this difficult field, among a widely scattered people, have greatly endeared him to them, and their earnest prayers will follow him in his new work at Springfield, O.

MANTORVILLE.—During the two years' pastorate of Rev. Howard Mudie this weak enterprise, threatened with extinction, has developed into a strong church, exercising commanding influence in the town and the farming community. Nearly 50 persons united with the church on confession last Sunday, and other accessions are expected. This ingathering was largely the result of a revival effort. Mr. Mudie has brought the church to assured self-support, and it asks no further aid of the Home Missionary Society.

LITTLE FALLS.—During the four years' pastorate of Rev. William Moore the church has increased from 54 members to 184 and has become established as one of the strongest in the State. A new meeting house has been built. A revival has added greatly to the strength of the church and increased its spiritual power in the community. Mr. Moore leaves, to the great regret of the people.

NEW ULM.—During the three years' ministry of Rev. J. P. Campbell the church has increased largely in membership, chiefly as the result of a revival, has enlarged its meeting house and strongly affected public opinion in this German community along the lines of education and spiritual Christianity.

GRANITE FALLS.—Mr. J. H. Hjetland, a Norwegian graduate of Yale Seminary, is laboring here with acceptance. The church has been depleted by removals and a Scandinavian population has come in upon whom it is hoped that a Norwegian minister will gain some hold.

STAPLES.—Rev. D. W. Cram has completed a year's work and is invited to remain. A portion of the debt paid, collections for missions, a profitable series of union meetings, an out-station opened in a new field where there are eager listeners, are some hopeful symptoms.

WINONA.—Second. By the coming of Rev. W. L. Dibble this church, pastorless for a year but regularly supplied with preaching, is greatly encouraged. Congregations and Sunday school attendance have increased and the outlook is bright.

BARNESVILLE.—Rev. L. C. Frost is preaching here for three months with view to permanence. The edifice has been enlarged; chiefly on account of the Sunday school, which has outgrown it.

BIG LAKE.—The church is being supplied by neighboring ministers, the salary going to Mrs. Evans, widow of the former pastor. The citizens have purchased a lot and are building a house for her. A pastor is expected in May.

SHERBURNE.—The addition of five members as a result of a recent revival, and well-attended evangelistic services at the out-station, Lake Belt, are encouraging features.

The work of our Sunday School Society is well illustrated by the report of its superintendent for Minnesota, Rev. R. P. Herrick, who has occupied that office in the State for the last eight years. These results, as he states them, of course include the labors of many individuals and churches who have been assisted by him and stimulated to deeper interest:

In 1888 we had 144 Sunday schools on our list, but in 1896 there are 351, a net increase of 206 Sunday schools. The membership reported in 1888 was about 14,000, but the report in 1896 shows a total of 28,583 as our present enrollment, more than doubling the membership enrollment in eight years. The standard of Sunday school work in the established schools has constantly improved, as is shown by the efforts to secure the conversion of the scholars and their training in Christian life, as well as in the establishment of the home department, graded schools and other improved methods of work. The annual gifts to the Sunday School Society increased from $600 to $1,400 in these eight years, while a marked effort has been made in helping all lines of missionary work through the contributions of our Sunday schools.

Kansas.

NEWTON.—The people have paid $300 on the church building during the past year, placing it entirely out of debt. Spiritual life and benevolences are increasing. The pastor preaches on alternate Sunday afternoons in a country district which recently contributed $14 to missions.

COUNCIL GROVE.—Rev. W. R. Bair of Dunlap has recently assisted the pastor in extra meetings with excellent results. Ten persons have since been received into membership, among them the mayor of the city and a former member of the State Senate.

ARSONS.—Sixteen new members joined on confession March 8. Evangelist Robert Layfield and v. H. D. Herr have been efficiently assisting the stor and much religious interest has been awakened. The church is greatly encouraged.

The churches at Alton, Brookville, Muscotah, osho Falls and Valeda all report revivals resulting in the quickening of Christians and conversions.

Nebraska.

AURORA.—State Evangelist Billings closed a successful series of meetings, March 22, with some peful conversions. The pastor, Rev. S. I. Hand, had made thorough preparation and the church s greatly helped and strengthened. Mr. Billings nt at once to begin a series of meetings at Dodge.

REIGHTON.—This church, Rev. G. W. James, stor, has purchased a fine organ which is of great p in the public services. March 22 was home ssionary rally day and all departments made ofings. The out-station at Salem also contributed the same day. There is already prospect of a eting house there.

OGALALLA.—Special services under the lead of e pastor, Rev. W. S. Hampton, resulted in a numr of conversions, among them some of the promint business men of the town. Several persons re welcomed to fellowship March 22.

RVINGTON AND BENNINGTON.—Rev. B. O. Snow, e pastor, has been holding special meetings at nnington, and five persons, all adults, united th the church on confession March 15.

WALLACE.—Rev. C. G. Murphy has held a three eks' special service at one of his out-stations and persons have pledged themselves to the service Christ.

South Dakota.

Four men were added to the new church at Holird March 19. Other candidates were prevented sickness from uniting.—Stone has been hauled r the foundation of the new church building at ndall.

Colorado.

SILVERTON.—The pastor, Rev. W. T. Jordar, is rking earnestly to attract the interest of the peo- in the midst of many discouragements. He uld be much aided by fresh, bright Christian litature, English, Swedish, Italian or Chinese.

PACIFIC COAST.

California.

SAN JOSE.—First. A fine new pipe organ was dicated March 15. Three years ago the Ladies' d Society began active efforts to this end. Mr. illiam Carter, a member of the church, became eatly interested, and the organ is his personal ft in memory of a son and daughter who have tered into rest.

SAN FRANCISCO.—First. The case of Dr. C. O. rown against Mrs. Mary A. Davidson for blackail has been dismissed by the court and the dendant acquitted, Dr. Brown having testified that was not prompted by fear to pay the woman the oney.

Washington.

SPOKANE.—Rev. J. H. Elliott, assisted by Mr. F. Butts as singer, conducted a series of revival eetings in this city during parts of February and arch. They were doubtless the most successful fort of the kind ever attempted here. Careful reparations were made by the local C. E. union presenting eight churches. A choir of over 100 oices was trained. The preacher emphasized the ecessity of the work of the Holy Spirit. He proved imself judicious in his methods. Fundamental uths were preached clearly and convincingly. In ss than a week all the evangelical churches and astors were united in the work and recognized hat God had visited the city. The meetings inreased in interest and large congregations assemled in the afternoons, and the largest meeting ouse in the city, with a seating capacity of nearly 000, was crowded every evening. One day for a me stores were closed and it was a memorable day. large number of cottage prayer meetings were eld all over the city at 9 A. M. Hundreds of Chrisans were revived and many others were hopefully onverted. About 1,200 persons signed cards.—ilgrim dedicated a house of worship March 22, the econd erected in the parish of Rev. Jonathan Edards within two years. A third, to cost $1,200, ill be built in the near future at Pleasant Prairie, here a lot has already been secured.

BELLEVUE.—The gathering of this new church is argely the result of the labors of Rev. Horatio lling, late pastor at Kirkland, but now of New Whatcom, who during the former pastorate gave to hese people a semi monthly service on Sunday beide much pastoral care during the week. This has een followed up by Mr. W. J. Faulkner, a licentiate of Seattle Association, with the result of a church of 26 members, all but five coming on confession, though several of the others had been members of churches of various denominations. The Kirkland church having two communion sets, loaned to the new organization the set which belonged to the old Houghton church consolidated with Kirkland two years ago. This was originally a gift from ladies of the Eliot and Central Churches, Boston, who were old friends of the mother of Rev. Samuel Greene, the organizer and for eight years the pastor of the church at Houghton.

FAIRHAVEN.—Rev. J. C. Wright, the first pastor, has been with this church until now. He has gained the esteem of the community as well as of his church, and all will be sorry to lose him, but he feels that his health will not permit him to continue much longer in this place.

MEDICAL LAKE.—The pastor, Rev. J. D. Jones, received 19 persons to membership last year, 16 on confession. Special meetings were held in January, Rev. T. W. Walters and others assisting. By way of reciprocating Mr. Jones has aided in special work in other churches with good results.

DEER PARK consecrated an edifice March 24, having built it without asking outside aid. Rev. J. J. Hancock, the pastor, has been holding cottage prayer meetings at Kennewick, resulting in several accessions to his church.

NEW WHATCOM.—Rev. Horatio Alling finds the audience-room too small for the growing congregations. The people contemplate enlarging the edifice.

TACOMA.—The people expect in two weeks to welcome home their pastor, Dr. L. H. Hallock, whose rest in California has wonderfully helped him.

---

A student in the American School of Archæology has recently been so fortunate as to bring to a successful issue a task which involved both personal daring and scholarly ability. The inscription on the Parthenon had long been the despair of archæologists. The original bronze letters were gone and only the holes of the nails which held them in place remained. By climbing to the top of the building and lowering himself by a rope ladder, Mr. Andrews has succeeded in making casts of these nail holes and, by studying their relative position, has restored the whole inscription with the exception of a single proper name.

---

A SLIGHT COLD, if neglected, often attacks the lungs. "Brown's Bronchial Troches" give immediate and effectual relief.

---

GOING RAPIDLY AHEAD.—The year 1896 bears witness to some really great improvements in library tables. In another part of this paper is an engraving of one of the new styles now on sale at the Paine warerooms, on Canal Street. The furniture of this present year is, in many important respects, a long stride ahead of anything heretofore known.

Woman's Work

Is never done, and it is especially wearing and wearisome to those whose blood is impure and unfit properly to tone, sustain, and renew the wasting of nerve, muscle and tissue. It is more because of this condition of the blood that women are run down,

Tired. Weak, Nervous,

Than because of the work itself. Every physician says so, and that the only remedy is in building up by taking a good nerve tonic, blood purifier and vitalizer like Hood's Sarsaparilla. For the troubles Peculiar to Women at change of season, climate or life, or resulting from hard work, nervousness, and impure blood, thousands have found relief and cure in

Hood's Sarsaparilla

The One True Blood Purifier. . $1 per bottle. Prepared only by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Hood's Pills are the only pills to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

ALL WOOL SUIT for $5.95

Made in frock or sack suits in the latest styles, equal to any clothier's $12 garments. Higher priced suits equally as cheap. We do not ask you to buy a "blind pig" but will send samples of the leading spring and summer cloths, measurement blank and tape line free. Agents Wanted.

B. JOHN QUINCY & CO.
104-106 West Quincy St., Chicago, Ill.

A NEW-COMER.

Do you recall the story of the woman who bought eggs for 24 cents a dozen, and sold them for 23 cents a dozen? People didn't understand it and asked how it was possible to do such a thing as that. "Well," said she, "you see I do an immense business in them!"

We do business as large as the combined business of six ordinary furniture stores. This is why we can afford to carry in stock 190 different styles in Library Tables and Desks, including at least 50 private patterns of our own. Elsewhere you see about 35 styles.

Here is a novel design in mahogany, with closets and drawers on all four sides. The end drawers are just what is needed for maps, photographs, engravings, etc. The center recess is wide enough for extreme comfort, with two persons working at opposite sides.

The curves and rounded edges of the design are full of beauty. There are carved corner posts and carved claw feet. The Table is finished in oil, as if built to order.

PAINE FURNITURE CO.,

48 CANAL STREET, BOSTON.

Not a Patent Medicine.

Nervous Headache

few escape. It is one of the penalties of the age. Our grandparents never had it. They had nerve but not nerves. In their day more than half the physicians were not prescribing

Freligh's Tonic

A Phosphorized Cerebro-Spinant

as a nerve sedative, as they are today. Contains no opiate of any kind. Perfectly safe. Prompt relief. Builds up and strengthens the whole system.

Regular bottle, $1.00, 100 doses. All druggists. Concentrated, prompt, powerful. Sample by mail 25 cents. Descriptive pamphlet, formula, testimonials, etc., mailed to any address.

I. O. Woodruff & Co.,
Manufacturing Chemists,
106-108 Fulton Street, New York City.

Formula on Every Bottle.

Financial.

Guaranty Trust Co.

of New York.

Formerly New York Guaranty and Indemnity Co.
Mutual Life Building,
65 CEDAR STREET, N. Y.

CAPITAL, - - - - - $2,000,000
SURPLUS, - - - - - - $2,000,000

ACTS AS TRUSTEE FOR CORPORATIONS, FIRMS AND INDIVIDUALS, AS GUARDIAN, EXECUTOR AND ADMINISTRATOR. TAKES ENTIRE CHARGE OF REAL AND PERSONAL ESTATES.

INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSITS
subject to check or on certificate.

WALTER G. OAKMAN, President.
ADRIAN ISELIN, Jr., Vice-President.
GEORGE R. TURNBULL, 2d Vice-President.
HENRY A. MURRAY, Treas. and Sec.
J. NELSON BORLAND, Assist. Treas. and Sec.

DIRECTORS.

| | |
|---|---|
| Samuel D. Babcock, | Adrian Iselin, Jr., |
| George F. Baker, | Augustus D. Juilliard, |
| George S. Bowdoin, | James N. Jarvie, |
| Frederic Cromwell, | Richard A. McCurdy, |
| Walter R. Gillette, | Walter G. Oakman, |
| Robert Goelet, | Alexander E. Orr, |
| G. G. Haven, | Henry H. Rogers, |
| Oliver Harriman, | Henry W. Smith, |
| R. Somers Hayes, | H. McK. Twombly, |
| Charles R. Henderson, | Frederick W. Vanderbilt, |
| William C. Whitney. | |

Safe Mortgages
On improved Chicago property.
Send for list
These investments are certain for income
Principal always safe.
For Example, we offer,

| Amount | Term | Rate | Security |
|---|---|---|---|
| $1200 | 5 years | 6% | $4800 |
| 1600 | 5 years | 6% | 3400 |
| 2500 | 5 years | 6% | 5500 |
| 5000 | 5 years | 5½% | 15000 |
| 7000 | 5 years | 5% | 35000 |

H. O. Stone & Co.
206 La Salle St. Chicago.

Globe Investment Company

MORTGAGES

Bought for Cash.

CHAS. E. GIBSON, 45 Milk St., Boston.

THE BUSINESS OUTLOOK.

The general trade of the country continues unsatisfactory. It is apathetic, and commercial failures are of sufficient magnitude to add disquietude. The cause of the present condition of affairs is difficult to explain, except that a constant display of jingoism in Congress has unsettled confidence and brought about the withdrawal of large amounts of capital.

The business situation may be likened to something that would float, were it not for a weight, not its own, which keeps it under water. That weight is Congress, and it is good opinion among merchants and manufacturers that when it is definitely known when that body will adjourn the relief felt will be reflected in more active trade.

Mercantile collections continue slow, and this is one of the most unfavorable factors confronting wholesalers. It is stated that many Boston houses have practically been carrying their Western customers for several months. This is one of the influences which has reduced deposits in Boston banks so sharply during the past year. However, in looking at things broadly, it can be stated that the better weather has created an improved feeling in nearly all directions.

Wheat, corn and Bessemer pig iron advanced somewhat last week and were about the only favorable features. The shoe trade seems to be in the best condition, but wool and cotton cloths are practically at a standstill, especially the woolen trade. At auction sales of ginghams recently very low prices were obtained. White cotton goods are said to be accumulating at a rapid rate, and stocks of print cloths at Fall River are so heavy that their very low price of two and one-half cents is expected to be still lower.

The stagnancy of trade throughout the country is reflected in the bank clearings for last week, which were the smallest for some time, the total being $897,000,000, or eight per cent. less than last week, and only one per cent. larger than for the fourth week of March last year. The stock market is excessively dull.

7 PER CENT. NET.

First Mortgage Loans on Improved Farms in the Wonderfully Fertile Red River Valley

and in North Dakota and Minnesota. 20 years of experience in the business, and an actual residence of over 8 years in the Red River Valley and of over 22 in Minnesota and North Dakota. A personal knowledge of lands and values. Loans only made to industrious, thrifty farmers, on well improved farms. I give my personal supervision to the business. Loans made in your name and interest coupon-notes and mortgages and applications sent to you and held by you. Interest collected by me and forwarded to you by New York Check. Funds now earning you only 2, 3, or 4 per cent. in Savings Banks will here earn you 7 per cent.—about doubling your income. Remit funds for investment by New York or Boston Draft, or by personal check payable to my order. Address

E. P. GATES,
2628 Portland Avenue, Minneapolis, Minn.

Iowa Loan & Trust Co.,

of Des Moines, Iowa.

Capital, $500,000. Surplus, $335,000.

This old and reliable company has been in successful business operation for over 23 years, and has always met every obligation promptly at maturity.

Its Surplus is now larger than ever before, and the company continues under the same careful management. Its Debenture Bonds are amply secured by

FIRST MORTGAGES ON REAL ESTATE,

$105,000 of such mortgages being deposited for the security of each series of $100,000 Bonds.

Bonds in sums of $200, $300, $500 and $1,000 for sale by

FREEMAN A. SMITH,
Ex-Treasurer American Baptist Missionary Union,
Office, 31 Milk St., Room 22,
Correspondence solicited. Boston

YOU SELL WE BUY

DO YOU WANT TO SELL A Western Mortgage
or Western Land—avoid foreclosure costs—stop sending good money after bad—get a good 5% investment instead? State exact location, condition of title, and your low price. Over $2,000,000 in Western securities successfully handled by the present management of this corporation
THE BOSTON REALTY, INDEMNITY AND TRUST CO.
Send for our Bond List. 38 Equitable Building, Boston

(My mamma used Wool Soap) (I wish mine had)

WOOLENS WILL NOT SHRINK

if Wool Soap is used in the laundry. In the cleansing of winter blankets, flannels and all wool fabrics before storing for the season. The value of is inestimable. Washes silks, laces and all summer fabrics without injury. Equally valuable for bath, household and general laundry purposes. Sold by all dealers.

WOOL SOAP

Raworth, Schodde & Co., Makers, Chicago.
New York Office, 63 Leonard St. Boston, 3 Chatham St.

Leaders of Fashion

Endorse Fibre Chamois as the best support for puffed sleeves and flare skirts in the market.

CAUTION—Beware of imitations. The genuine article is plainly stamped . . . . . .

Fibre Chamois

All dry goods stores. Three weights.

Religious Notices.

Religious and ecclesiastical notices, addresses of ministers, etc., published under this heading at ten cents a line.

President Stephen B. L. Penrose of Whitman College will be in the East until June 1, and desires opportunity to tell the patriotic story of Marcus Whitman before churches, societies, etc. Address 182 Chelten Avenue, Germantown, Pa.

Notice.—A clergyman, who has recently resigned a large church in the city of Brooklyn, N. Y., will, on account of temporary ill-health in his wife, take a country or village Congregationalist church, at a very moderate salary, besides use of parsonage. Apply at once to "Reverend M.," 123 Cross Street, Somerville, Mass. High class references given.

The American Sunday School Union has been at work seventy-one years for the retired rural districts. Its union methods specially commend it to communities of sparse populations divided in religious sentiments. Its missionaries visit families, distribute religious literature, hold evangelistic meetings and organize Sunday Schools. Probably no evangelizing agency has larger results for the amount expended. 11,000,000 children are yet out of Sunday School. Will you help to save them? Send to Rev. Addison P. Foster, D. D., New England Secretary, 1 Beacon St., Room 40, Boston.

ESTABLISHED 1822.

BRECK'S SEEDS PRODUCE PRIZE CROPS

Because they are raised by specialists who exercise more care in growing and selecting than is usual; for this reason they cost the retail merchant a trifle more and therefore not always to be obtained locally. Our method of Free Delivery is equivalent to having Breck's Store in Your Town; promptness in filling orders and due consideration of customers' wishes, without the fatigue of shopping, are features that enhance its value. Full particulars in our illustrated Indexed Catalogue (170 pages.) It also contains news about novelties and standard varieties of Flowers, Bulbs, Plants and Vegetables, approved agricultural and horticultural implements, valuable cultural directions, information how to prevent and destroy plant pests, and particulars of our unique offer to duplicate first prizes offered by all agricultural and horticultural societies in the United States. We Mail It Free, and with it to those who mention this paper, either of the following selections for 16 cts., or the two for 25 cts.

(1.) 1 oz. Breck's Boston Mixture Sweet Pea (60 varieties). 1 pkt. Harvard Sweet Peas, the fashionable crimson. 1 pkt. Blushing Bride Sweet Peas, lovely pink and white. (2.) 1 pkt. Wild Garden Seed, a genuine surprise. 1 pkt. Mixed Cosmos, Autumn's Queen. 1 pkt. Shirley poppies, new shades.

Everything for Farm, Garden and Lawn.

Jos. Breck & Sons, Boston, Mass.

The Lawton Simplex Printer

saves time and labor; money too—100 letters, postal cards, opies of music, drawings, or typewritten opy, in almost no time, and exact copies t that, by using the Lawton Simplex. Requires no washing or cleaning, and aves its cost over and again in sending ut notices. Costs but little ($3 to $10).

CAUTION.—Other things are being made and called implex Printers. The only way to be sure of getng the genuine is to see that yours is the Lawton implex Printer. Send for circulars. Agents wanted

LAWTON & CO., 20 Vesey St., New York

The Modern Health Food

made from cocoanut oil; guaranteed to contain no animal fats.

PURE

Cocoanut Butter

is the purest, most wholesome and palatable shortening. One half to two thirds the quantity will do more than any other shortening. Never becomes rancid. We also make all grades of table butter from the unadulterated oil of the cocoanut.

AT ALL GROCERS.

Send for descriptive pamphlet to

The Pure Food Product Co.

544 N. Water St., Chicago, Ill.

McLELLAN, BRIGHAM CO., 50 Chatham St., Boston, Mass.

CAMPBELL & SHIPMAN, 304 Greenwich St., New York City.

IRON CITY PRODUCE CO., Pittsburg, Pa.

Established 1867.

The Great CHURCH LIGHT

FRINK'S PATENT REFLECTORS for electric, gas or oil, give the most powerful, softest, cheapest and best light known for churches, halls and public buildings. Send size of room. Book of light and estimate free.

Don't be deceived by cheap imitations.

I. P. FRINK, 551 Pearl Street, New York.

WOMAN'S BOARD PRAYER MEETING.

CONGREGATIONAL HOUSE, BOSTON, MARCH 27.

The leader for the morning was Mrs. Wolcott Calkins, who read Mark 12: 28–31, the two great commandments, also other passages from the gospels and epistles showing that God is love and that love is of God, which Tolstoi discovered to be the spirit of the gospel as soon as he gave his attention to the study of it, and which he henceforth made the prominent factor in his life.

The "weary and over-burdened workers" mentioned in the calendar were commended to sympathetic hearts with the exhortation, "Pray and do something for them," and were then earnestly committed by Mrs. Capron and Mrs. Snow to the God who moves hearts and opens hands. Mrs. Capron spoke of one aspect of weary workers as the agony of seeing helpers who have labored with the missionaries dismissed for lack of funds. She said: "Supposing word had gone out that all salaries must be withheld, the missionaries would then have no means of support and must return to this country; what indignation would be awakened here! As it is, many a missionary goes back from mission meeting to his station, gathers his preachers, teachers and catechists about him and tells them he can no longer supply even the small remuneration for their work, dealing what seems a deathblow to the hopes and encouragements which have taken years to grow. What can he do?"

Mrs. Miron Winslow said she went to India at a time something like the present, when schools had been shut up, and she longed for the little sums with which it was possible to accomplish much. As she told of her efforts at present in scattering information and trying to get new subscribers for Life and Light, she furnished an example better than precept.

Mrs Schneider went back just forty years to the day when Dr. Schneider preached the sermon at the ordination of Pastor Krikor over the First Church, Aintab. He was subsequently transferred to the Second Church in the same city and is still its pastor, with Rev M. Papazian, formerly of Rowley, as his associate. Pastor Krikor is now in prison under accusation for preaching that the darkness was passing away and the light dawning. Mrs. Schneider also spoke of Miss Shattuck, who years ago, after a sojourn at Colorado Springs, was not considered physically able to resume missionary work, and yet who begged so hard to be allowed to return to Turkey and spend her remaining days in the beloved service that the permission was granted. Of late stationed at Oorfa without another missionary associate, she has gone through the horrors of the recent massacres there. She reports 107 church members killed and at present has under her special care 150 women, who are sufferers from these terrible experiences, and says, "I feel like a mother with several hundred orphans on my hands."

take the

law in your own hands, ladies, when you ask for

S·H·& M·

REGISTERED TRADE MARK.

Bias Velveteen Skirt Binding

and don't get it. Sentence such a store to the loss of your trade and give it to merchants who are willing to sell what you demand.

Look for "S. H. & M.," on the Label, and take no other.

If your dealer will not supply you we will.

Send for samples, showing labels and materials, to the S. H. & M. Co., P. O. Box 699, New York City

Fashion's Newest Millinery

The one voice of the visitors to our opening exhibition last week was that this is the most beautiful and interesting display of Millinery ever made in Boston.

Hundreds of Hats and Bonnets —exclusive in design, artistically trimmed and very stylish—and the prices are a third to a half less than you've been accustomed to pay elsewhere.

All the correct shapes in Untrimmed Straw Hats and a profusion of the choicest Flowers—truly a wonderful exhibition. You'll marvel, too, at the low prices

One Flower quotation—order by mail:

Velvet Forget-me-nots in Pink and Blue, 25 cents per bunch of six dozen.

Wm. S. Butler & Co.,

The Leading Millinery House,

TREMONT STREET, BOSTON.

"THE RIMS ARE VERMILION IT'S A WARWICK"
BEAUTY OF OUTLINE
INHERENT STRENGTH AND RIGIDITY
COMBINED WITH ITS FAMOUS
DUST PROOF BEARINGS
AND OTHER INIMITABLE POINTS OF PERFECTION ARE CHARACTERISTIC OF
THE WARWICK
"THE WHEEL THAT'S BUILT ON HONOR"
SEVEN '96 MODELS FULLY DESCRIBED IN CATALOGUE MAILED FREE
WARWICK CYCLE MFG CO. SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
245 COLUMBUS AVE. BOSTON. 34 UNION SQ. E. NEW YORK

245 Columbus Ave., Boston, and 34 Union Sq., N. Y.

No Time or Trouble

IS REQUIRED WITH

WHITMAN'S INSTANTANEOUS CHOCOLATE

Delicious in flavor—Best in quality. Requires no boiling. Put up in pound and half pound tins.

STEPHEN F. WHITMAN & SON, Sole Mfrs. Philadelphia.

REX BRAND Extract of BEEF FLAVOR

Sample, 4 cents. Book free. OUDAFY - - SO. OMAHA

Have a POTATO?

18 kinds choicest pedigree stock. Raised by expert on Canada Line. Lowest price in New England. Elegant Catalogue.

E. J. RANSLOW, Swanton, Vt.

WEEKLY REGISTER.

Additions to the Churches.

| | Conf. | Tot | | Conf. | Tot. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| CALIFORNIA. | | | NEBRASKA. | | |
| Los Angeles, East, | 2 | 10 | Bennington, | 5 | 5 |
| Mentone, | 2 | 3 | Fremont, | 12 | 14 |
| Mill Valley, | — | 16 | Hastings, | — | 4 |
| ILLINOIS. | | | OKLAHOMA. | | |
| Chicago, Brighton Park, | — | 28 | Arapahoe, | — | 3 |
| Lincoln Park, | 4 | 13 | Choctaw, | — | 4 |
| Danvers, | 7 | 8 | Cleo, | — | 14 |
| INDIANA. | | | Langston, Liberty Schoolhouse, | — | 36 |
| Alexandria, | 4 | 16 | Tabor, | 1 | 4 |
| Indianapolis, Broad Ripple, | — | 18 | Tecumseh, | — | 5 |
| Solsberry, | 6 | 6 | SOUTH DAKOTA. | | |
| Whiting, | 5 | 6 | Beresford, | 1 | 3 |
| IOWA. | | | De Smet, | — | 40 |
| Newton, | 37 | 37 | Fort Yates, | 15 | 15 |
| Onawa, | 91 | 105 | Meckling, | 8 | 8 |
| Reinbeck, | 23 | 32 | VERMONT. | | |
| KANSAS. | | | Brandon, | 4 | 4 |
| Council Grove, | 10 | 10 | Greensboro, | 1 | 4 |
| Downs, | 14 | 14 | West Rutland, | 3 | 13 |
| Jetmore, | 11 | 11 | WASHINGTON. | | |
| Kansas City, Bethel, | 3 | 3 | Seattle, Plymouth, | 3 | 12 |
| Lawrence, Plymouth, | 4 | 5 | Spokane, Pilgrim, | 10 | 13 |
| Osborne, | 3 | 3 | Westminster, | 73 | 73 |
| Stafford, | 10 | 10 | Sultan, | 3 | 3 |
| Valley Falls, | 11 | 11 | OTHER CHURCHES. | | |
| MARYLAND. | | | Berea, O., | 20 | 26 |
| Baltimore, Second, | 4 | 6 | Curtiss, Wis., | — | 40 |
| Fourth, | 6 | 6 | Greeley, Col., | — | 20 |
| MICHIGAN. | | | Sherburne, Minn., | 5 | 5 |
| Cheboygan, | 22 | 23 | So. Gardiner, Me., | 9 | 10 |
| Wolverine, | 15 | 15 | St. Louis, Mo., Olive Branch, | 4 | 6 |
| | | | Churches with one or two, | 16 | 23 |

Conf., 623; Tot., 819.

Total since Jan. 1. Conf., 6,813; Tot., 11,076

Calls.

BROOKS, Wm. E., Muscatine, Io., to Benton Harbor, Mich.
CONRAD, Geo. A., Lake Preston, S. D., accepts call to Kingsley, Io.
CORNWELL, Stanton A., New Lyme, O., to Cortland.
CUTLER, Temple, Essex, Mass., to West Gloucester. Accepts.
DICKERMAN, Josiah P., Forest Heights Ch., Minneapolis, Minn., accepts call to Fairmont and has begun work.
DICKSON, Jno. W., Oakdale, Ct., to Croton and Lock, O. Has begun work.
DOHNER, Jacob, to Bethel and Zion, Okl.
EMBREE, Jno. H., Linwood, Kan., to Brookville. Accepts.
ENLOW, Chas. E., Edmond, Okl., to Crystal Lake, Ill. Has begun work.
FINDLAY, Jno. J., Bethlehem Ch., Los Angeles, Cal., to Vernondale.
HOULDING, Horace W., El Paso, Tex., to be State evangelist in Washington under the C. H. M. S. Accepts, and has begun work.
JOHNSTON, Frank L., Leadville, Col., to Valley Junction, Io.
KELSEY, Wm., Okarche, Okl., to Alpha, Pisgah, Parker and Otter.
KEVAN, Jas. H., Forman, N. D., to Custer, S. D.
McCLAIN, Jno. E., Dover, Kan., to North Topeka. Accepts, and has begun work.
MERRICK, Solomon G., Gaines, N. Y., to Duxbury, Mass. Accepts, and has begun work.
MILLER, Chas. G., Valencia, Kan., to Dover and Wakarusa Valley. Accepts, to begin work April 1.
MURPHY, J. S., to remain another year at Okarche, Okl.
RANNEY, Wm. W., Phillips, Me., to Park Ch., Hartford, Ct.
SMITH, Mrs. Esther, Wadena, Minn., to Park Rapids.
VROOMAN, Frank B., Cambridge, Mass., accepts call to Kenwood (Pres.) Ch., Chicago, Ill.
WEITZEL, Chas. T., to be pastor's assistant in Plymouth Ch., Brooklyn, N. Y., where he has been laboring.
WOODRUFF, Alfred E., Plymouth Ch., Toledo, O., to Lagonda Ave. Ch., Springfield.

Ordinations and Installations.

CARTER, Chas. F., i. Hancock Ch., Lexington, Mass., March 26. Sermon, Dr. G. A. Gordon; other parts, Rev. Messrs. J. W. Churchill, S. C. Bushnell, E. G. Porter, Nehemiah Boynton, D. D.
McCALLIE, T. S., o. p. East Lake Ch., Chattanooga, Tenn., March 26. Sermon, Rev. Dr. T. H. McCallie, father of the minister-elect; other parts, Rev. Messrs. C. B. Riggs, J. E. Smith, E. A. Berry, D. D.
TUCKER, Fred D., o. p. Morris, Ill., March 24. Sermon, Rev. Dr. Anderson of Chicago; other parts, Rev. Messrs. J. W. Fox and J. H. George, D. D.

Resignations.

ALDRICH, Jere. K., Rye, N. H., after a second pastorate of four years.
BROWNJOHN, Geo. W., Detroit City, Minn.
CAMPBELL, Jno. P., New Ulm, Minn.
DELZELL, Finis E., Hadlyme, Ct.
FIELD, Jas. P., Amity, Mo., to take effect April 30.
FULLER, Geo., Stratford, Ont., to accept a call to London, Eng.
McALLISTER, Alex., Verndale, Minn., to return to Pennsylvania.
MOORE, Wm., Little Falls, Minn.
MOORE, Wm. N., New Duluth, Minn.
SHAW, Gilbert A., Clayton, N. Y., to take effect July 1.

Dismissions.

GOODRICH, Lincoln B., Broad Brook, N. J., March 17.
MORTON, W. Henry, No. Madison and Unionville, O., March 17.

Churches Organized.

ALEXANDRIA, Ind., 24 March, 16 members.
CHICAGO, Ill. Brighton Park, Union Cong'l Ch., March, 28 members.
CURTISS, Wis. German, rec. 18 March, 40 members.
INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Broad Ripple, 14 March, 18 members.
LANGSTON, Okl., Liberty Schoolhouse, 1 March, 36 members.
MILL VALLEY, Cal., 14 March, 16 members.

Miscellaneous.

BUXTON, Wilson B., and his wife, just entering upon their third year in South Acton, Mass., received from their parishioners a purse of $28.
DAVIES, Jno. F., of Parsons, Pa., was tendered a farewell reception prior to his departure for Ohio. Resolutions of hearty commendation were passed, addresses made and salutations sent to the brethren of his new field.
MULNIX, A. H., of Tyndall, S. D., has been absent two months in Portland, Me., at the bedside of his father, who died March 15. President Warren of Yankton College supplied his pulpit March 15 and 22.
SMITH, Rev. L. Adams, of Christopher, Wn., is to take charge of the Leavenworth Ch. until a pastor can be secured.
TENNEY, H. Melville, pastor of First Ch., San José, Cal., was recently elected for the sixth time president of the University Extension Club of that city, one of the most successful of its kind in the country.
WELLMAN, Fred. C., closed his pastorate at South Enid, Okl., March 23, to enter a foreign field.
WOOD, Fred. C., on his birthday, March 22, received from the Cong'l and M. E. churches of Mancelona, Mich., a handsome oak arm-chair, a rocker and six dining-room chairs.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR NOTES.

At a recent celebration of an Indiana society the titles of the addresses were Lift Up, Pay Up, Build Up, Read Up, Talk Up, Sing Up, Clean Up. Hunt Up, Give Up.

The British National Council of Christian Endeavor, by a unanimous vote, has sent to the United Society a formal invitation to hold the World's Christian Endeavor Convention in London in 1900.

The Vermont Juniors have been doing good work in the campaign in regard to the repeal of the prohibitory law by circulating a petition drawn up by one of their own number and asking in their behalf that the law be not changed except to make it stronger.

The first society in Italy has been formed in the Scotch Presbyterian Church at Florence through the agency of a member of a Pennsylvania society. The new organization reports an average attendance of eighteen. Another society has also been organized in a Baptist church.

In the hospitals of Calcutta more than 2,000 bunches of flowers, accompanied by Scripture texts, have been distributed by the young women of a C. E. Society, while services at the almshouse, the medical college and the Railway Institute were sustained by the young men.

The young people in southern California took active part in the preparations for the convention at Los Angeles for the treatment of religious topics and for deepening the spiritual life. A prayer chain was formed among the societies of the vicinity to ask for a special blessing on the meetings.

SCIENTIFIC BICYCLE MAKING

The ball bearings of a bicycle must be very hard. But they must not be brittle, or they will break easily. The COLUMBIA method is right. Soft, tough steel is forged to the shape required, machined down to exact size, case hardened to diamond density on its surface, and then polished. Such bearings rarely break, while they give the matchless ease of running that makes

Columbia Bicycles

$100 to all alike — Standard of the World

Columbias in construction and quality are in a class by themselves.

POPE MANUFACTURING CO., Hartford, Conn.

Columbia Art Catalogue gives full information of Columbias; also of Hartford bicycles, next best, $80, $60, $50. Free from the Columbia agent or mailed for two 2-cent stamps.

NEW MAMMOTH POULTRY GUIDE showing colored plate of chickens in natural colors. Finest book ever published. Almost 100 pages. Tells all about Poultry for Profit or Pleasure. Price only 15c. JOHN BAUSCHER, JR., Box 262, Freeport, Ills.

Souvenir China

Views of Old Boston and the New

We have just landed views engraved from etchings of H. R. Blaney, by Josiah Wedgwood & Sons (exclusively for us), including the following, which are appropriately inscribed at the back of each plate, under the glaze, viz.:

The Old Feather Store, North and Ann Sts., 1680 to 1868.
Site of Adams House, 1845. Lamb Tavern, 1746.
Old South Church, Washington and Milk Sts. Tea Party met here, 1773.
Old North Church, Salem St. Paul Revere's lanterns were displayed here, 1776.
Old Boston Theatre, corner Federal and Franklin Sts., 1794.
Faneuil Hall, Cradle of Liberty; built 1742.
State Street and Old State House, 1888.
Boston Common and State House, 1836.
Old Sun Tavern, 1690 to 1895. Faneuil Hall Square.
View of Boston in 1768.
State House, Bulfinch Front, 1896.
Old State House, State Street.

The above views of old Boston, done in genuine old blue Wedgwood on plaque shape plates and in sepia brown, constitute a dozen of interesting subjects superbly engraved, with matched borders, costing $5.00 per dozen, or may be had separately.

We have also had done by the same artist the Adams Lean to Houses, Quincy.
Washington's Home, Mount Vernon.
Trinity Church, Boston. Longfellow House, Cambridge.
The Public Library, Boston, and Independence Hall, Philadelphia, etc.

We have also souvenir pieces in the Wurtemburg pottery. Trays with pictures of Trinity Church, Public Garden, Old South, Phillips Brooks, Harvard College, etc.

English Parian busts of Gov. Andrew, Sumner, Phillips, Grant, Lincoln, Gladstone, Cobden, Bright, Disraeli, Cleveland, etc.

Visitors will find a superb exhibit of Easter vases. In the Art Pottery Rooms will be seen an importation of Japanese Bronzes and Cloisenné pieces, adapted to bridal gifts.

In the glass department is the new American diamond finish cut crystal glass, which is not excelled in brilliancy or skillful cutting by any foreign or domestic cut glass, and of which we are the sole distributors in Boston.

New importation of Plant Pots and Pedestals, from the ordinary to the large and very large Palm Pots.

INSPECTION INVITED.

Jones, McDuffee & Stratton Co.,

China, Glass and Lamps,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL,

120 Franklin, cor. Federal.

THEOLOGICAL SEMINARIES.

Bangor.

he Penobscot Ministerial Association has con-ted to approbate the students to preach, the fessors having, for good reasons, withdrawn n participation in the matter. The meeting for purpose will probably be held the last of April. Mr. E. P. Lyon of the Senior Class has accepted all to the Baptist church in Westford, Vt —— f. L. L. Paine pleasantly entertained the stu-ts and several friends of the seminary at his he last Friday evening.

Andover.

he spring recess of four days closed March 30. Prof. G. F. Moore examined his class in Old tament theology last week, thus ending his rse.——Prof. J. M. English's last lecture in hom-ics was the occasion of a vote of thanks from the ior Class. Dr. Mackenzie, who succeeds Pro-or English, will begin his course at once.—— . J. K. Browne, the returned missionary from poot, spoke on missions at the church prayer ting last week under the auspices of the Society nquiry.——A number of students attended the nt meeting of the Inter-Seminary Missionary ance at the Episcopal Divinity School in Cam-dge.

Yale.

eviews were given before the class in system-theology last week on Dale's Atonement and Leod Campbell's Nature of the Atonement.—— rly all the members of the Middle Class will t the New Haven Central Association for ap-bation to preach, April 7. Additional require-nts this year are a written statement of doc-al belief, to be not less than 10 minutes in ding, and a written sermon.——Among the spe-lectures of the week was one on Social Life in gland by Mr. G. W. Smalley.——At the public eting of the Leonard Bacon Club last week the stion was, Resolved, That the so-called American tarian Movement was more beneficial than rimental.——Professor Brastow gave a helpful on Church Councils last Thursday, basing his ark's on the recent trial at Madison. Professor her also spoke on the Nature and Function of ncils before his class in church history.—— ong the lecturers already engaged for next r, besides Rev. John Watson, are Professor Gar-n of Amherst and Edward J. Phelps, ex-minister England.——The chief event of interest during ril will be Dr. Henry Van Dyke's Lyman Beecher ures on The Gospel for an Age of Doubt.—— H. W. Johnson of the graduate class is supply-the pulpit of the church at Bethany.

Chicago.

rofessor Mackenzie is engaged to occupy the pit of the late Dr. Allon in London three Sun-s next summer.——Mr. A. N. Fox, an instructor he German department, will take the summer ester at the Univer ity of Halle.

OUNG mothers should early learn the necessity keeping on hand a supply of Gail Borden Eagle nd Condensed Milk for nursing babies as well for general cooking. It has stood the test for ears, and its value is recognized.

HE Cloisonné and Japanese bronze exhibits at es, McDuffee & Stratton's the past week have n discussed by groups of connoisseurs from Bos-and neighboring cities The Wedgwood plates, ing old Boston views, will interest many who e such treasures.

LWAYS USE HOOD'S.—"The paper dolls which were t for one trade-mark from Hood's Pills and ten cents tamps are very beautiful. I always use Hood's Pills like them better than any others. They do not se the griping pain which I have found others to Mrs. P. Gebauer, 6 Jess St., Jamaica Plain, Mass.

OOD'S PILLS act harmoniously with Hood's Sarsa-illa.

Deaths.

he charge for notices of deaths is twenty-five cents. Each itional line ten cents, counting eight words to a line. The ey should be sent with the notice.

RTON—In Hyde Park, March 29, Rev. Walter Bar-n, a retired clergyman, aged 62 yrs., 8 mos., 24 dys.

SHMAN—In Newtonville, March 28, Anna A., eldest aughter of the late James H. Cushman.

VIGHT—In Roxbury, March 27, Mrs. Sally A., widow f Rev. John Dwight, aged 80 yrs., 4 mos., 26 dys.

LT—In Winchester, Annie E. B. Felt, aged 71 yrs.

ORRELL—In Chicago, March 17, Rev. B. F. Worrell, ne of the founders and first deacon of the First hurch, aged 74 yrs. He was an active temperance orker and did eminent service in the Christian ommission during the Civil War.

This plain, honest statement from the Mayor of Trenton, N. J., needs no embellishment — it carries conviction.

Booth's "Hyomei" Pocket Inhaler Outfit

is sent by mail for $1.00. It is the new and wonderful Australian "Dry-Air" treatment of Asthma, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Coughs, Rose Colds, Hay Fever, Loss of Voice, and similar diseases. Plain statements, unsolicited, from men of such prominence, cannot be bought; you must believe them.

Office of the Mayor of the City of Trenton, New Jersey.

Emory N. Yard, Mayor

March 2 d 1896.

R. T. Booth Esq.,

23 East 20th St., New York.

Dear Sir:--

My absence from the city for the past two days prevented my answering your telegram of yesterday. You have my permission to say, that I believe "HYOMEI" to be one of the most wonderful cures for Catarrh and Throat trouble that has ever been discovered. It my case the effect has been marvelous. (and I have not been as persistent in the use of the Inhaler as I should have been to have received the best results.) I enclose you Money Order for $2.00 for two Pocket Inhaler Outfits for friends of mine, to whom I have recommended it, and who I am anxious shall have the benefit of this most remarkable panacea

Very respectfully Emory N. Yard

What more can be said, except to add that hundreds of letters come to us every day bearing witness to positive and permanent cures of Asthma, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Loss of Voice, and similar diseases.

Hyomei Cures by Inhalation.

It is a purely vegetable antiseptic, and destroys the germs and microbes which cause diseases of the respiratory organs.

The air, thoroughly charged with Hyomei, is inhaled through the Pocket Inhaler at the mouth, and, after permeating the minutest air cells, is slowly exhaled through the nose. It is aromatic, delightful to inhale, and gives immediate relief. It stops all spasmodic coughing instantly, clears the voice, expands the lungs, and increases the breathing capacity.

Pocket Inhaler Outfit, Complete, by Mail, $1.00, consisting of pocket inhaler (made of deodorized hard rubber, beautifully polished), a bottle of Hyomei, a dropper, and full directions for using. If you are still skeptical, send me your address, and my pamphlet shall prove that Hyomei does cure. Consultation free at my office.

Hyomei Balm.—An antiseptic skin food for weak chests, burns, scalds, chapped lips, rough hands, frost bites, eczema, etc. Nothing has been discovered so effective for the purposes named. Price by mail, 50 cents.

R. T. BOOTH, 23 East 20th St., New York.

THE CINCINNATI BELL FOUNDRY CO. CINCINNATI, OHIO. U.S.A. Sole Makers of the Blymyer BELLS FOR CHURCH, SCHOOL, FIRE ALARM &c. Catalogue with 2500 testimonials. Prices and terms FREE

BELLS Steel Alloy Church & School Bells. Send for Catalogue. The C. S. BELL CO., Hillsboro, O.

Blake Bell Foundry Established in 1820. Successors to WM. BLAKE & CO. Manufacture bells of every description, single or chimes of Copper and Tin. Address BLAKE BELL CO., Boston, Mass.

IMPROVED Cathedral Tubular Bells, CHIMES AND PEALS (Harrington and other patents.) U. S. Tubular Bell Co., Sole Mfrs., Methuen, Mass.

CHURCH CARPETS AT MANUFACTURERS' PRICES. JOHN H. PRAY, SONS & CO., CARPETS AND UPHOLSTERY, 658 WASHINGTON ST., OPP. BOYLSTON ST. BOSTON.

BIOGRAPHICAL.

REV. JOSHUA SANDERS GAY.

Mr. Gay, the eldest son of Rev. Ebenezer Gay, was born in Stoughton, Feb. 7, 1819. He graduated from Amherst College in 1841 and Andover Seminary in 1845, going immediately to Milltown and St. Stephens, N. B., where for several months he engaged in work preliminary to the formation of the Congregational church. He supplied the churches at Biddeford and Andover, Me., for a brief period and later engaged in missionary work in Winslow, Benton and Dexter, Me. In 1852 he was installed pastor at Pittston, Me. He also held pastorates at Stoddard and Chichester, N.H., Byfield, Mass., Brookfield, Vt., Auburn and Center Harbor, N. H. Of late he has resided at Biddeford, Me., where he died, March 22.

JEREMIAH EVARTS CORNELIUS,

Whose death was recently noticed in our columns, was the son of the late Rev. Dr. Elias Cornelius, who in 1831 succeeded Jeremiah Evarts as secretary of the American Board. He was a descendant of Jonathan Edwards and of Thomas Hooker, and bore the impress of that godly ancestry in his Christian character. His last days were filled with joyful anticipation of the things which God hath prepared for them that love him.

REV. ISRAEL BROWN,

Who died in York, Neb., March 12, at the age of fifty-two, was graduated from Wheaton College and Oberlin Seminary. After successful pastorates in several places in Illinois and Iowa, he accepted a call last summer to York, where he had endeared himself to the people by his unselfish life and earnest preaching. He leaves a wife and four children.

REV. GEORGE C. HALL.

Mr. Hall of Nebraska City, Neb., had not been in his usual health for some little time before he undertook recent evangelistic work. He went home from the service March 15 with what seemed to be an attack of grip. This developed into pneumonia, from which he died March 25. His loss will be mourned by a large circle of friends in Nebraska and in Oregon, where he was pastor at Astoria for several years. He was ordained in 1885 and called to Nebraska City in 1892.

THE ATONEMENT.

If preachers are taking in these times to a sublimated system of Christian ethics, if they have practically discarded the whole Christian revelation except the Sermon on the Mount, the Church may still live, for there is such virtue in Christ that even to touch the hem of his garment is to be healed. But the life will be languid and low. And wherever the atonement is not declared as the central glory and gladness of the Christian faith, it will haunt the background as a thing of fear, for St. Paul's judgment cannot be disputed, if righteousness come by the law, then Christ died in vain; the death which is the hope and peace of the world takes rank as its worst horror and tragedy. —British Weekly.

"1847" Rogers Bros.

Silver Plate that Wears

Make sure of the "1847" if you wish the genuine original Rogers Silverware.

Meriden Britannia Company

MERIDEN, CONN.
208 Fifth Ave, NEW YORK

Book of Illustrations Free.
Please mention this publication.

GLENWOOD RANGES

MAKE

COOKING EASY.

THREE GOLD MEDALS.

WEIR STOVE COMPANY, TAUNTON, MASS.
Agents in All Prominent Cities and Towns in New England.

600 Ministers

ENDORSE

Dr. Warren's Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla Troches.

Rev. R. H. Howard, Millbury, Mass.: "I cannot keep house without them."
Rev. Jos. Greenleaf, New Canaan, Ct.: "Have never failed of removing an annoying cough."
Rev. H. S. Parmalee, E. Canaan, N. H: "Superior to anything I ever used."
Rev. W. H. Dowden, W. Hanover, Mass.: "One of the best remedies for the prevailing influenza."
Rev. C. P. Nash, Camden. Me.: "Nothing I ever used did me so much good."
Rev. E. A. Reed, Needham, Mass.: "I have never found anything to compare with them."
Rev. E. Curtis, Pleasant Valley, Ct.: "The very best ever made."
Rev. John Spinney, Stark, Me.: "In less than two minutes after taking one of Dr. Warren's Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla Troches I was relieved of my hoarseness and tickling in my throat."

DR. WARREN'S WILD CHERRY AND SARSAPARILLA TROCHES
for sale by druggists generally.

Box sent by mail on receipt of 25 cents by the AMERICAN MEDICINE CO., Manchester, N. H.

If you want a sure relief for pains in the back, side, chest, or limbs, use an

Allcock's Porous Plaster

BEAR IN MIND—Not one of the host of counterfeits and imitations is as good as the genuine.

"A" Grade, $60.00
Manufacturers.

PLEASURE CARRIAGES, LADIES' PHAETONS,
BUGGIES, WAGONS, HARNESS, SADDLES & BICYCLES
at Factory Prices. All goods guaranteed as represented and sent on approval anywhere. Write at once for our 1896 beautifully Illus. Catalogue showing all the latest styles and new designs in large variety, from a $10 cart to the most stylish Pleasure Vehicles. Prices in plain figures and Testimonials from every state, sent free to all who mention this paper.
ALLIANCE CARRIAGE CO., N. Court St., Cincinnati, O.

Bicycle catalog sent free. Wheels from $25 up. Established 1888.

The Electropoise

CURE WITHOUT MEDICINE.

A SIMPLE HOME TREATMENT OF UNEQUALED VALUE.

Administered by attaching an instrument to the flesh, which aids the system to take on Oxygen from the Atmosphere, to the utmost amount the system can use.

IT IS A TREATMENT OF THE BLOOD, and by purifying, revitalizing, and loading it with Nature's Nerve Food, ejects DISEASE, by removing its causes. It applies of necessity to all diseases as no other treatment ever has.

THE OXYGEN COSTS NOTHING, the price of the instrument being all the expense necessary for years. It can be used by the entire family.

"I sought the aid of a dozen of the best physicians I could find, but they helped me very little. I also tried Compound Oxygen thoroughly, and the Electric battery, but they helped me very little. On Dec. 17, 1891, I commenced using the Electropoise, and continued it about four months. During this time my disabilities were greatly removed. In the course of a year from the time I commenced using it I enjoyed almost perfect health, which has continued to this date. I have great faith in it." REV. J. H. MANSFIELD, Athol, Mass.

And Hundreds More.

NO HOME SHOULD BE WITHOUT IT.

Call or send for Free Illustrated Circular, with Testimonials, Price List, etc.

L. A. BOSWORTH, 36 BROMFIELD STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

GENERAL AGENT FOR THE NEW ENGLAND STATES.

Y. P. S. C. E.

PRAYER MEETING.

BY REV. ISAAC O. RANKIN.

Topic, April 12–18. Will Our Excuses Stand? Acts 26: 19–28.

Paul had been speaking to Festus, the Roman governor, and Agrippa, the half Roman, half Jewish, king, and in each case we have the excuse or evasion by which they turned aside the message. The governor cries out in sincere amazement that the apostle is mad. The proud and guilty king with ironical scorn reminds him of the difference between their social positions and of the absurdity of trying to make him a Christian by the utterance of a few words of warning and persuasion.

Can these excuses stand? When Christ asks us to take a new and larger view of life, shall we be excused if we refuse to do so because his view contradicts our present way of thinking? Suppose Christ is right and we are wrong? The madman is the man who shuts his eyes when he is asked to look, and not the man who opens his eyes wide to see new truth. Because Christ loved the poor and made them welcome in his kingdom, shall we fear to lose caste by entering the brotherhood of his disciples? If Paul had gathered an army and conquered a kingdom, Agrippa would not have been sarcastic. Shall we look down from our hight of social content and despise other men? Shall we say, when Christ speaks to us and tells us to follow him, "With a very little thou thinkest to persuade me"? Shall we be frightened out of sincere beliefs by a few sarcastic words?

God's judgment upon excuses is not something postponed. It is real today and every day. It is only the publication of the judgment which is to come. We must test our excuses by the thought of that day which shall declare every man's work of what sort it is, but Christ passes upon them at the very moment they are invented.

Excuses, like sins, are of two kinds, for sins committed and for good neglected. All will agree that no excuses for deliberate sins will stand, but the question of excuses for neglect of duty is a wider and more troublesome one. It is exceedingly important, too, because it is upon sins of omission that Christ lays the emphasis of his judgment. "Inasmuch as ye did it not" is the word of condemnation. It is at this point that we shall do well to test our motives. "We were too much occupied for Christian duty." Had we any right to be? "We were too tired." How did we come to be so tired when work for Christ was a part of the day's plan and should have been provided for? "Other matters had the right of way." Has anything a right of way before the Master?

It is to Christ that our excuses must sooner or later be made, as our pledge expresses in that clause of it which relates to the consecration meeting. His loving justice must pass upon them. Why not bring them to him now, before we ourselves accept them for our action, instead of waiting for the judgment declaration when their failure may bring us shame? Prayer for knowledge of Christ's thought and will is the best and readiest test for excuses, and there is no excuse for not applying it in time.

Parallel verses: 1 Cor. 3: 11-15; Matt. 25: 31-46; Luke 14: 16-24; Ps. 139: 1-12.

---

If it be true that man is beckoned onward and with a sovereign gesture by his higher genius, and that he is at once faithless and defeated if he do not obey the call; if it be true, also, that man must make for himself the ground of honorable community as the foundation and sustenance of personal welfare; then it is indeed true that God is a party to the commonwealth; in other words, that all highest duty is implicated in political duty.—David A. Wasson.

ARMSTRONG & McKELVY Pittsburgh.
BEYMER-BAUMAN Pittsburgh.
DAVIS-CHAMBERS Pittsburgh.
FAHNESTOCK Pittsburgh.
ANCHOR, ECKSTEIN } Cincinnati.
ATLANTIC, BRADLEY, BROOKLYN, JEWETT, ULSTER, UNION } New York.
SOUTHERN, SHIPMAN } Chicago.
COLLIER, MISSOURI, RED SEAL, SOUTHERN } St. Louis.
JOHN T. LEWIS & BROS. CO Philadelphia.
MORLEY Cleveland.
SALEM Salem, Mass.
CORNELL Buffalo.
KENTUCKY Louisville.

SO MANY PEOPLE HAVE PRAISED painting done with Pure White Lead that we scarcely need to; but the fact remains that Pure White Lead and Pure Linseed Oil make the best — the most permanent and satisfactory — paint. To secure this make sure that the brand of is genuine (see list). For colors, the NATIONAL LEAD CO.'s Tinting Colors are especially prepared for tinting Pure White Lead to any shade required.

Pure White Lead

Pamphlet giving valuable information and card showing samples of colors free; also cards showing pictures of twelve houses of different designs painted in various styles or combinations of shades forwarded upon application to those intending to paint.

NATIONAL LEAD CO.,
1 Broadway, New York.

What Rudyard Kipling Thinks of the Pocket Kodak.

"I can only say that I am amazed at the excellence of the little Kodak's work."

Rudyard Kipling

Booklet free, tells all about it.

Pocket Kodak loaded for 12 pictures, 1½ x 2 in. $5.00.

EASTMAN KODAK CO.
Rochester, N. Y.

CRITERION
STEREOPTICONS, MAGIC LANTERNS & ACCESSORIES.
PERFECT APPARATUS for VISUAL TEACHING
SCIENTIFIC PROJECTIONS & PRIVATE USE.
ELECTRIC FOCUSING LAMPS
For Photo-Engravers, Stage Lighting, Etc.
J.B. COLT & CO.
115-117 NASSAU ST. NEW YORK.

Nursery Cloth.

An absolute necessity for every modern nursery. Made of bleached muslin on both sides, with white wadding between, firmly quilted, and 34 inches wide. Highly recommended by physicians for bed pads. Thoroughly absorbent and easily washed.

MATTRESS PROTECTORS

made of it are indispensable, absolutely preventing damage from stains, etc. Made for any size bed, bound and ready for use.

Both articles kept by leading dry goods houses. If your dealer don't keep them, write for sample.

Excelsior Quilting Co., Laight St., New York.

WELL DRESSED MEN

wear only merchant tailor made clothes.

A Tailor-Made Suit For $10.00

We'll make to your measure a Frock or Sack Suit of equal to any tailors $18 garment for $10. Other Suits and Trousers just as cheap. We save 50 per cent by buying big lots of woolens direct from the mills—that accounts for it.

ALL WOOL GOODS

All goods sent C. O. D., with privilege of examination and try on before paying express agent. We pay express charges. Send for samples of cloth, tape line and full particulars, Free.

LOUIS I. VEHON, Tailor, 155 W. Jackson St., Chicago.

"THERE'S A BEST IN EVERYTHING"
HAVE YOU SEEN THE NEW STEARNS BICYCLE
THE YELLOW FELLOW
E. C. STEARNS & CO. MAKERS SYRACUSE, N.Y.
TORONTO, ONT. BUFFALO, N.Y. SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

HALE PLUM, TRIUMPH PEACH, BOUNCER STRAWBERRY

and all other best fruits from Hale, who makes more money in fruit culture than any man in America. Free book, tells whole story, no secrets. Address HALE, South Glastonbury, CONN.

It Never Fails

to cure the most severe Coughs and all forms of Throat and Lung Troubles. It has stood the test of public opinion for thirty years and the continued and increased demand proves its value and popularity.

ADAMSON'S Botanic Cough Balsam

More than 10,000 Testimonials have been voluntarily sent, showing spontaneous and heartfelt gratitude for the miraculous cures it has effected.

Prices, 35 and 75c. a Bottle.

Sold by all Druggists.

B

Grand National Prize of 16,600 FRANCS at Paris

QUINA-LAROCHE

Possesses in the highest degree the entire active properties of Peruvian Bark. Endorsed by the medical faculty as the best remedy for FEVER AND AGUE, MALARIA, POORNESS OF THE BLOOD, GENERAL DEBILITY and WASTING DISEASES; INCREASES THE APPETITE, STRENGTHENS THE NERVES and builds up the entire system.

Paris: 22 Rue Drouot
New York:
E. FOUGERA & CO.,
26-30 N. William St.

HOOPING-COUGH CROUP.

Roche's Herbal Embrocation.

The celebrated and effectual English Cure without internal medicine. Proprietors, W. EDWARD & SON, London, England.

E. Fougera & Co., 30 North William St., N. Y.

TRADE MARK REGISTERED.

DIABETES FLOUR

Also Gluten Dyspepsia Flour, Barley Crystals, and Patent Biscuit Cake and Pastry Flour.

Unrivaled in America or Europe.

Pamphlets and Baking Samples Free.

Write Farwell & Rhines, Watertown, N.Y., U.S.A.

DIRECTIONS for using CREAM BALM.—Apply a particle of the Balm directly into the nostrils. After a moment draw strong breath through the nose. Use three times a day, after meals preferred, and before retiring.

CATARRH

ELY'S CREAM BALM Opens and cleanses the Nasal Passages, Allays Pain and Inflammation, Heals the Sores, Protects the Membrane from colds, Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell. The Balm is quickly absorbed and gives relief at once.

A particle is applied to each nostril and is agreeable. Price 50 cents at Druggists or by mail.

ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren Street, New York.

THE INTER-SEMINARY ALLIANCE.

The annual convention of the Boston Inter-Seminary Missionary Alliance was held, March 26, at the Episcopal Theological School at Cambridge, delegates being present to represent six institutions—Andover, Harvard, Newton, Tufts, Cambridge and Boston University.

The morning session opened with devotional exercises led by L. H. Roots of the Episcopal Theological School, after which Rev. Dr. H. S. Nash, on behalf of the Cambridge men, welcomed the visiting delegates, and urged that the discussions assume the most outspoken candor from the first, for nothing could be gained by hiding differences of opinion. A paper was then read by R. L. Hartt of Andover on The Institutional Church, a Social Product, defending this new development of church work by showing it to be a direct response to the needs of the times. The next paper was on The Modern Preacher and Foreign Missions, by B. A. Jenkins of the Harvard Divinity School Mr. Jenkins made a plea for a broad humanitarianism, backed by a broad understanding of the religious life of the so-called heathen nations. Particularly happy was his suggestion that a minister might better spend his vacations in visiting the mission field and getting first-hand information in regard to missionary enterprises than in traveling only in Europe. The paper called out considerable discussion and widely differing views found expression.

At the afternoon session R. T. Capen of the Newton theological institution read a paper on Seminary Missionaries, urging the importance of active Christian work on the part of young men who are still engaged in theological studies. The next paper was by F. M. Bissell of Tufts on The Place for Emphasis in Christian Missions, that place being, in his opinion, the example of the life led by the missionary himself before the eyes of the people he seeks to convert.

At the evening session of the convention Rev. E. Winchester Donald, D. D., of Trinity Church, Boston, delivered a fine address on missions, claiming for the foreign missionary movement the same sanction as for the home ministry.

The value of such a convention as this lies in the broad catholicity of its spirit. Much is gained by an exchange of ideas, but much more is gained by a friendly clasp of hands. Congregationalists, Baptists, Universalists, Unitarians and Methodists met on an equal footing, looked their differences full in the face and learned to understand each other.

R. L. H.

THE CONGREGATIONALIST

AND BOSTON RECORDER.

The Recorder founded 1816: The Congregationalist, 1849.

Published every Thursday.

PER COPY, 6 CENTS. PER YEAR IN ADVANCE, $3.00.
TWO YEARS IN ADVANCE, $5.00; FIVE YEARS, $10.00.
IF PAYMENT IS DELAYED, $3.50 PER YEAR.
ONE OLD AND ONE NEW SUBSCRIPTION, $5.00.
CLUB OF FIVE, ONE AT LEAST BEING NEW, $10.00.

On Trial, 6 Months, $1.00; 3 Months, 25 Cents.

RECEIPTS for subscriptions are indicated by the date of expiration following the subscriber's address, as printed upon the paper. If a special receipt is wanted a stamp should be sent with remittance.

DISCONTINUANCES.—In accordance with the almost universal wish of our subscribers, papers are continued until there is a specific order to stop. In connection with such an order all arrearages must be paid. An order of discontinuance can be given at any time, to take effect at the expiration of the subscription.

ADVERTISING RATES.—25 cents per agate line each insertion, 14 lines to the inch; 118 inches to the column. Discounts according to amount of contract.
READING NOTICES, leaded nonpareil, 50 cents per line, each insertion, net.

W. L. GREENE & CO., Proprietors, Boston.

Entered as second-class mail. Composition by Thomas Todd.

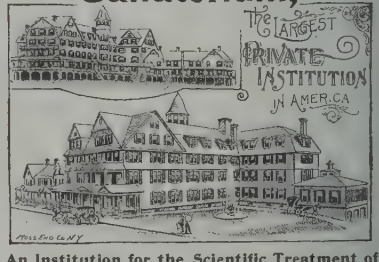
There is... no virtue in the nasty taste of cod-liver oil. Then why take it clear?

Scott's Emulsion

breaks the oil into drops so small that you can hardly taste it.

32-Freezing. A Cold? TRY Madame Porter's BALSAM A safe, sure and pleasant way to get rid of a cold, cough, tickling or hoarseness in the throat. The best way for 60 years. Two sizes, 25 and 50 cts. All druggists, or by mail for the price, if you mention this publication. Address, HALL & RUCKEL, Proprietors, New York. 0-Zero.

The Berkshire Hills Sanatorium,



An Institution for the Scientific Treatment of CANCER

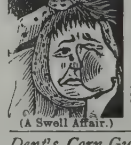
Tumors, and all forms of Malignant Growths,

WITHOUT THE USE OF THE KNIFE.

We have never failed to effect a permanent cure where we have had a reasonable opportunity.

Book and circulars giving description of Sanatorium, Treatment, Terms, and References, free.

DRS. W. E. BROWN & SON, NORTH ADAMS, MASS.



(A Swell Affair.)

DENT'S TOOTHACHE GUM

STOPS TOOTHACHE INSTANTLY.

Ask for DENT'S; take no other. Sold everywhere, or by mail 15 cts. C. S. DENT & CO., DETROIT, MICH.

Dent's Corn Gum Cures Corns, Bunions, Warts.

THE MISSION OF THE PROPHET: WHAT IS IT?

Rev. Dr. George A. Gordon's two recent ctures on this subject, before the students f Yale Divinity School, were as inspiring and ggestive as those delivered last year, which ave since been incorporated in his Christ of oday. He defines the prophet as one who to ascertain and reveal the thoughts of God oncerning the world, an interpreter between he divine and the human. His problem is to ain access to the thoughts of God that he ay bring them to his fellowmen. His mis-on is to look upon the world from the divine oint of view. The basal assumption under-ing the effort of the prophet is that it is pos-ble for the spirit of man to abandon its own oint of view and rise to the divine outlook. aith, with the prophet, is not a substitute r knowledge. His faith is the immediate nse of the divine, the certain intuition of he moral order of society and the vision of od. God to him is the ultimate rational niversal, the ultimate ethical universal and he ultimate social universal.

Also the prophetic consciousness reveals he social ideal, gains a vision of what human fe should be and expresses this in a concep-on of the kingdom of God, and always with ultimate optimism that sees down through l the iniquity and woe of human society the ernal promise of light beyond. The pro-het's inspiration is through the power of certained divine reality and is the purifica-on and extension of vision, the elevation of eling, the enthronement of moral purpose, he rapture of reason under the attack and vasion of God. In the teaching of the hurch, the kingly and priestly offices of hrist have received undue treatment.

C. S. M.

EDUCATION.

— Plans for a new five-story dormitory at ale, to cost $100,000, have just been com-leted.

— Prof. James Seth of Brown University as been appointed professor of ethics in the age School of Philosophy, Cornell Univer-ty.

— Rev. Stephen T. Livingston, pastor of he Congregational Church at South Egre-ont, has been elected instructor in rhetoric nd elocution at Williams College.

— The faculty of Williams College have dopted the "honor system" recently accepted y the students, and the institution hereafter ill conduct its examinations in accordance ith the new code.

— It is announced that Yale University to receive $200,000, which is both a bequest nd a gift. Mr. T. C Sloane, who died four ears ago, left $200,000 to his widow, with he proviso that if she should marry again he money should go to Yale. Mrs. Sloane ow surrenders the bequest, thus showing hat she values the husband she is about to ke more than money and that she appreci-es also the importance of promoting higher ducation. Not often does one have an op-ortunity to do so many good things at the me time with a single sum.

— The New England Assembly at Lake-iew offers many attractions for next sum-er's session from July 20 to Aug. 1. Among hose who will preach or lecture are D. L. Moody, Dr. Russell H. Conwell, Dr. G. A. ordon, Booker T. Washington, Prof. E. S. Horse and Rev. W. H. Milburn, the blind haplain of the United States Senate. There ill be special days for the rallying of na-onal religious organizations as of yore, and he program, as already arranged, is full of ersuasive invitations to those who enjoy ongenial associations under the trees and by he lakeside in July.

— Ahtanum Academy, near North Ya-ima, Wn., rejoices in the many friends who ave come to its relief in time of embarrass-ment. Ever since the erection of its building four years ago it has carried a burdensome debt of over $6,000. Last fall the Education Society offered to contribute $1,000 if $2,500 could be raised. The latter sum has now been secured through the canvass of Rev. D. W. Wise, president of the trustees, and the large gifts of Deacon F. B. Woodcock, which have stimulated a hundred other givers. The remainder of the debt will now be funded at a low rate of interest until the way is open for its entire liquidation.

— The proposal to admit women to the Bachelor of Arts degree came before the Congregation of Oxford University recently. The following resolution was debated and defeated.

That it is desirable, subject to certain conditions, to admit to the B A. degree women who have kept residence at Oxford for twelve terms in a place of residence approved by the university, and who have passed (under the same regulations as apply to undergraduates) all the examinations required for the degree of B. A.

And Cambridge University likewise has refused to grant the petition of the friends of woman's higher education.

The reason why large numbers of persons who constantly attend Christian worship never really live a Christian life is this: they have never by a deliberate act, in which they have concentrated the whole energy of their conscience and their heart, put faith in Christ. —R. W. Dale.

Is your Brain Tired?
Use Horsford's Acid Phosphate.
Dr. T. D. CROTHERS, Supt. Walnut Lodge Asylum, Hartford, Ct., says: "It is a remedy of great value in building up functional energy and brain force."

ONE POUND EQUAL TO TWO OF ANY OTHER KIND

Beardsley's SHREDDED Codfish 10¢ Box

A Superior "Picked up" Codfish,
Is unequalled in quality, economy, and convenience.

Fish Balls and Fish Cream are prepared by its use in 10 to 15 minutes.

It requires no boiling or soaking, therefore creates NO ODOR.

Order a box from your grocer and try it. You see it don't cost much.

PREPARED ONLY BY
J. W. Beardsley's Sons,
179 & 180 West St., New York.
Makers of the Celebrated Acme Sliced Smoked Beef.

Your sink, basins, tubs, etc, never become clogged with grease, if the washing that's done in them is done with Pearline.

A small matter, perhaps—but remember that Pearline saves trouble and annoyance in a great many just such small matters. And the truth is that these little things alone ought to be enough to lead any quick-witted person to use Pearline—even without taking into account the big things, the saving in work, and wear and tear, and time, and money. 478

Millions NOW USE Pearline

Church Cushions
Correspondence Solicited.
Ostermoor & Co., 116 Elizabeth St. New York, N.Y.

CHURCH REMODELING.
THOMAS W. SILLOWAY, Church Architect,
10 Park Square, Boston.
Mr. Silloway's long practice in building or remodeling over 400 church edifices enables him to save and utilize all the valuable parts, and for a comparatively small outlay produce a building preferable to a new one of much greater cost. He proposes to continue the work of remodeling as a specialty, and tenders his services to committees who would practice economy, and where the means are limited.

THE LARGEST MANUFACTUPERS IN THE WORLD OF CHURCH FURNISHINGS
OPERA AND ASSEMBLY CHAIRS
SCHOOL FURNITURE COMPANY
GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

Individual Communion
Cups, Cabinets and Tables, adapted to the customs and usages of all branches of the Christian church. Illustrated descriptive catalogue free.
GLOBE FURNITURE CO., Northville, Mich.
Manufacturers of Furniture for Church, Chapel, Sunday Schools and Assembly Rooms.

THE LARGEST ESTABLISHMENT MANUFACTURING
CHURCH BELLS CHIME & PEALS in the World
PUREST BELL METAL, (COPPER AND TIN.)
Send for Price and Catalogue.
McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY, BALTIMORE, MD.

Buckeye Bell Foundry
E. W. Vanduzen Co., Cincinnati, Ohio.
Best Pure Copper and Tin Church Bells & Chimes.
Highest Award at World's Fair. Gold Medal at Mid-winter Exp'n. Price, terms, etc., supplied free.

"TO SAVE TIME IS TO LENGTHEN LIFE." DO YOU VALUE LIFE? THEN USE SAPOLIO

AMERICAN BEAUTIES USE
Sozodont
FOR THE TEETH
AND BREATH.
As fragrant and refreshing as the flowers, SOZODONT is a favorite with the beautiful and refined women of America, gentlemen of cultivated tastes demand it and children always want it. The test of half a century reveals Sozodont the most wholesome of all dentifrices.
A sample by mail if you send three cents for postage and mention this publication. Address the Proprietors of SOZODONT, HALL & RUCKEL, New York.
AMERICAN BEAUTY ROSES

CLARK'S EXCURSIONS

TO EUROPE, THE HOLY LAND, AND AROUND THE WORLD.

All Traveling Expenses Included.

A series of high class excursions to Europe will leave New York during May, June and July. Programs now ready.

Vacation Excursion sails July 4, per "City of Rome," accompanied from New York by F. C. Clark.

North Cape and Russia Party sails July 4. $550, $800, $900, Limited to 15 passengers.

Fall Holy Land Party starts Sept. 5.

Round the World Party starts Oct. 8.

Other parties to Europe at frequent intervals.

Ocean tickets by all lines. Choice berths.

Send for Clark's Tourist Gazette, containing full particulars, with maps.

FRANK C. CLARK, Tourist Agent, 111 Broadway, N. Y., Official Ticket Agent Pennsylvania and Erie R. R., etc.

Sole Agent for (new) Anglo-American Nile S. S. Co.

VACATION TOURS EUROPE

H. GAZE & SONS, 52d Year.

All expenses—$175 to $800—all expenses.

HIGH CLASS ARRANGEMENTS.

Spring and Summer Vacation Tours, Europe. Thirty Tours, ranging in price from $175 to $800, visiting England, Ireland, Scotland, France, Holland, Rhine, Germany, Italy, Switzerland, Danube, Austria etc.

North Cape and Russia Party, June 27.
Annual Round the World Party, Sept.
Holy Land Party (Egypt and the Nile)—
Spring and Autumn—Four tours annually.

Independent tickets for any desired tour in Europe, with or without hotel coupons. Estimates furnished. Agents all lines steamers. Choice rooms secured. Gaze's Tourist Gazette free, gives particulars.

113 Broadway, New York. H. Gaze & Sons, Ltd., 201 Washington St., Boston.

CRUISE OF THE AMERICAN BUILT STEAMER "OHIO."

The largest and finest yacht steamer in the world. Dining room holds 200 persons, and only this number will be taken on the cruise.

June 27th to August 27th. Cruise to Russia, Sweden, Norway and the Midnight Sun, and the total eclipse of the sun, visible August 8th. Rate, $475 upwards.

June 6th, July 1st and 8th. European Tours. Send for descriptive catalogues.

THOMAS FOREIGN TOURIST CO., 1715 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, or Leon L. Collver, New England Agent, 306 Washington Street, Boston.

EUROPE

Application (with references) may now be made for membership in President Capen's (Tufts College) Party, and in the Harvard and Brown Universities' Parties to visit the Historical, Literary, and Art Centers of Europe. Cards of Membership $265 to $630. Address

LEON L. COLLVER, N. E. Agent Clark's Tours, 306 Washington St., Boston.

Cook's Tours to Europe.

All Traveling Expenses Included.

Our Annual May Party, the first of our high-class parties to Europe, will sail by the White Star Line SS. "Majestic" on May 6. Succeeding departures May 16, 23, 28, June 10, 17, 27. All the arrangements for these parties are in every respect first-class.

Illustrated programs free. Railroad and steamship tickets for individual travelers everywhere.

THOS. COOK & SON, 261 and 1225 Broadway, New York.

Going To... EUROPE?

H. Gaze & Sons (Ltd.)

The Universal Tourist Agts. (Est. 1844) will send out

67 Escorted Parties

of the highest-class. Write for the details. Individual Tours Everywhere, and choicest berths on all steamship lines. TOURIST GAZETTE—POST FREE.

113 Broadway, N.Y.

or 201 Washington St., Boston; 220 So. Clark St., Chicago; 135 So. Fifth St., Philadelphia.

IN CORRESPONDENCE SUGGESTED by announcements in our ADVERTISING COLUMNS, please mention that the advertisement was seen in The Congregationalist

EUROPEAN TOURS.

14th Year. Personally conducted by Dr. and Mrs. Paine. Limited party. Terms reasonable. Address H. S. PAINE, M.D., Glens Falls, N. Y.

85 DAYS IN EUROPE.

Few vacancies in limited party to visit England, France, Germany, Belgium, Switzerland, Italy, Gibraltar. Personally conducted by Prof. Camille Thurwanger, 31 Pierce Building, Boston, Mass.

KIMBALL'S TOURS

n Europe (8th season). Limited party sails June 24, on "St. Louis." Moderate price, comprehensive route.

EDWIN C. KIMBALL, 56 Summer St., Boston, Mass.

DR. CHENEY'S PARTY

TO EUROPE. (9th season.) Conducted by O. D. Cheney, M. D., and wife, of Haverhill, Mass. Limited to 25. 78 days. Cunard steamer "Cephalonia," June 27.

EUROPE for 67 days, or less, starting June 27. Finest Tour going; includes coaching trip. Economical. Write for circulars to Box F., Plainfield, N. J.

EUROPE.—A small family party is being organized for spending the summer in European travel. Leave June 17, return in September. Route to include Belgium, Holland, the Rhine, Germany, Switzerland, Italian Lakes, Italy, France, England. Price $600. References exchanged. Mrs. L. E. Schmeider, 138 W. 4th St., Mount Vernon, N. Y.

BOYS' SUMMER CAMP.

WHITE MOUNTAINS.

Manhannock Island, Lake Winnepesaukee, N. H.

Equipped with entertainment and dining hall, nicely floored tents, with cots; steam launch, ten oared barges, rowboats; tennis courts, baseball and athletic grounds; bathing beach. Tutoring in all branches (optional). References: President Dwight of Yale, Governor Coffin of Connecticut, Hon. Chauncey M. Depew, Rev. Phillips S. Moxom, D. D. Opens July 1st. Illustrated prospectus free. Address Rev. John M. Dick, B. D. (Yale), New Haven, Ct.

SPECIAL. Mr. Dick goes abroad in September for five months and will take a few boys for all or part of the time. Wheeling tour in England, Scotland, and France in September and October.

THE CHRISTIAN INDUSTRIAL LEAGUE.

An organization for men inside the church, with religious, social, business, sickness and death benefits. Send for printed matter to the Christian Industrial League, Springfield, Mass.

PILGRIMAGE TO ENGLAND AND HOLLAND

The Congregationalist's Pilgrimage sails June 4, 1896, by Hamburg-American Express Steamer Columbia, landing at PLYMOUTH, ENGLAND, returning August 1 by the same Line. The Itinerary includes Cologne, the Rhine, Lucerne, Paris, etc.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.—Assignments of staterooms on the "Columbia" are now being made, and the membership of the party, which is strictly limited, will soon be completed. Applications must be sent at once in order to secure favorable consideration. We are holding the very best accommodations on the "Columbia" for our party, and the rush of ocean travel for June is such that we cannot secure a single berth outside of those engaged by us months ago.

NEW WORLD PILGRIMS AT OLD WORLD SHRINES . . .

A unique brochure. Besides the full daily Itinerary and all necessary details and directions, much space is given to "English and Dutch Notes," which treat of the historic and architectural features of the tour, and particularly of points of Pilgrim interest. 42 ILLUSTRATIONS. Price of the Itinerary, 10 cents.

CAMBRIDGE, ENGLAND.

Address PILGRIMAGE, Office of THE CONGREGATIONALIST, Boston,

or HENRY GAZE & SONS, Ltd., {113 Broadway, New York, & 201 Washington St., Boston,} Business Managers of the Tour.

The Congregationalist 12 Weeks for 25 Cents and "The Bonnie Brier Bush" FREE.

Only 1000 More Names

Will be accepted in connection with this offer. The offer must then be withdrawn. All, therefore, who desire to secure 12 copies of the paper, including the anniversary number and The Bonnie Brier Bush, for their friends should send the order at once.

The Paper for 12 Weeks & The Bonnie Brier Bush for 25 Cts.

(If the book is to be sent by mail add five cents for postage.)

For the purposes of our special offer we have purchased an edition of this remarkable classic by Ian Maclaren from the authorized publishers, Messrs. DODD, MEAD & CO. It is a reprint from new plates of the complete copyrighted edition, which is issued at $1.25; making a dainty volume, cabinet size, bound in cloth, with a unique cover design.

Why We Do This.

WE WISH to signalize the completion of our 80th year by introducing the paper to a multitude of new readers.

WE BELIEVE that our old subscribers will appreciate this unusual offer and will recognize in it an attempt on our part to show our appreciation of any effort they may now make in our behalf as well as their past interest in the paper.

The response to the announcements during the past five or six weeks has been most generous. Our expectations have been fully realized.

WE ARE WILLING to send the paper for 12 weeks at a loss, believing that twelve such arguments presented weekly will convince the most skeptical.

CONDITIONS—THESE ONLY:

☞ The "12 Weeks for 25 Cents" subscriptions must be for bona fide new names of persons able to subscribe for a religious paper on their own account. The new subscribers must be sent by a present subscriber of the paper, but the former may in their turn send other new names.

☞ We deliver "The Bonnie Brier Bush" at our office in fulfillment of this offer; or we will send copies, postpaid, to any address for 5 cents additional—30 cents for the paper, the book and postage on the latter. An old subscriber sending us trial subscriptions in accordance with this offer has the privilege of ordering ONE additional copy (not more) of "The Bonnie Brier Bush" at 20 cents, which price includes postage on the book.

☞ Send stamps, silver or bills at our risk. Packages of books will be sent by express, if desired, at the expense of the person ordering. We expect to fill all orders within two weeks of the date of their receipt.

☞ Offer will be withdrawn as soon as the above limit is reached, probably before April 10.

Address "TRIAL SUBSCRIPTIONS,"
THE CONGREGATIONALIST, 1 Somerset St., Boston.

Royal Baking Powder is an absolutely pure cream of tartar powder, analyzed and recommended by the Health Officers of London, New York, Boston, Chicago, etc., who praise it highly for its marvelous purity and leavening strength. Its use is a safeguard against the alum baking powders of which the market is full and which are known to make dangerously unwholesome food. Royal Baking Powder makes finest flavored, lightest, sweetest and most delicious food, and imparts to it positively anti-dyspeptic qualities.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

SEE HOW FLEXIBLE!

New style, No. 224, at $1.00, extra long waist. For young girls' needs—for study, gymnastics, for everyday wear—there is no Waist so yielding, so free from undue pressure and restraint, affording such support to the figure and imparting such grace of contour as the

FERRIS GOOD SENSE

CORSET WAIST

for Misses. Made in all sizes for Women and Children also. Long or short waist, high or low bust. Children's 25c. to 50c. Misses' 50c. to $1. Ladies $1 to $2. For sale by all retailers.

Correspondence Solicited.

Garment Department.

There has been an entire revolution in this department.

SOME OF THE NEW GOODS:

Louis XIV. Coats.
Black Camel's Hair Suits.
Mixed Homespun Suits.
Black Crepon Gowns.
Fig. Taffeta Silk Gowns.
Imported Capes.
Silk and Chiffon Waists
(FOR EVENING WEAR).
New Emb. Madras Shirt Waists.
Bicycle Suits.

R.H.STEARNS & CO.

Tremont Street and Temple Place,
BOSTON.

Volume LXXXI Number 15

THE CONGREGATIONALIST

Boston Thursday 9 April 1896

REV S. E. HERRICK, D. D.

THERE was, and is, something as grand as it is simple about the Pilgrim view of the church relationship. It is not a sentimental liking for an institution; it is not an artificial and superficial union founded upon some preterite history; but it is a giving up of the living man to other living men, wholly, the interest of all the interest of each, and the corporate spiritual life of the body dearer to each than any or all separate and individual interests can be. . . . The foundations that were laid by Brewster and his companions have been loftily built upon by later ages with much that is good, with much also that is evil; something of gold, silver, precious stones, doubtless—something doubtless of wood, hay, stubble, which time and change, and the judgments of God which time and change always bring, will surely burn away. But the foundation will abide of belief in the eternal verities of a just and righteous God, who is the friend of all who obey him; of faith in his Son, who is the divine Saviour, and must be the supreme Master of human life; of a revelation of faith and a law of practice that are sufficient for all the moral needs of men, and adequate to the renovation of the world.—Dr. Herrick, in Some Heretics of Yesterday.

1896

MESSRS. HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN AND COMPANY ANNOUNCE THE FOLLOWING NEW BOOKS.

*

The Expansion of Religion.

Six Lectures delivered before the Lowell Institute by E WINCHESTER DONALD D. D., Rector of Trinity Church, Boston. 12mo, gilt top, $1 50.

In this interesting book Dr. Donald aims to show that religion is not to be confounded with ecclesiasticism, and is a permanent force in human affairs; and he traces its connection today with industrialism, socialism, education, organized Christianity, and the enlargement of human life.

History of Prussia under Frederic the Great, 1756-1757.

By HERBERT TUTTLE, late Professor in Cornell University. With a Biographical Sketch by Professor Herbert B. Adams. Crown 8vo, gilt top, $1.50.

This book contains a thoroughly studied and admirably written account of the early part of the great Seven Years' War, untangling its diplomacy, describing its battles, and forming a valuable addition to the three volumes previously written by Professor Tuttle on the History of Prussia.

Sold by Booksellers. Sent, postpaid, by

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO.,

Boston and New York.

A Beautiful Easter Volume

HEAVEN.

Six Sermons by Rev. RICHARD MONTAGUE, D. D., late Pastor of the First Baptist Church, Newton, Mass., with Memorials. Square 12mo, wide margins, bound in rich garnet cloth with gilt top, illustrated with author's portrait. Price $1.25.

Written and delivered under the stress of a fatal illness, these Sermons have a prescience of coming immortality that touches the heart with tenderness, while their simple, earnest eloquence appeals strongly to the reason.

The six sermons are upon the following topics: "What is Heaven?" "Recognition in Heaven," "Is Heaven a Place?" "The Inauguration of Heaven," "Is Heaven for All?" "The Way to Heaven."

For sale at the bookstores, or mailed, postpaid, on receipt of price, by

SILVER, BURDETT & COMPANY, Publishers,

110-112 Boylston Street, Boston.

Religion of Science Library.

PAPER COVERS YEARLY, $1.50. Single copies according to prices quoted.

1. THE RELIGION OF SCIENCE. Paul Carus. 25c.
2. THREE INTRODUCTORY LECTURES ON THE SCIENCE OF THOUGHT. F. Max Mueller. 25c.
3. THREE LECTURES ON THE SCIENCE OF LANGUAGE. By F. Max Mueller. 25c.
4. THE DISEASES OF PERSONALITY. Th. Ribot. 25c.
5. THE PSYCHOLOGY OF ATTENTION. By Th. Ribot. 25c.
6. THE PSYCHIC LIFE OF MICRO-ORGANISMS. By Alfred Binet. 25c.
7. THE NATURE OF THE STATE. By Dr. Paul Carus. 15c.
8. ON DOUBLE CONSCIOUSNESS. Alfred Binet. 15c.
9. FUNDAMENTAL PROBLEMS Dr. Paul Carus 50c.
10. THE DISEASES OF THE WILL. By Th. Ribot. 25c
11. THE ORIGIN OF LANGUAGE Ludwig Noire. 15c.
12. THE FREE TRADE STRUGGLE IN ENGLAND. By M. M. Trumbull. 25c.
    WHEELBARROW ON THE LABOR QUESTION. By M M. Trumbull. 35c.
14. THE GOSPEL OF BUDDHA. By Paul Carus. 35c.
15. PRIMER OF PHILOSOPHY. By Paul Carus. 25c.
16. ON MEMORY AND THE SPECIFIC ENERGIES OF THE NERVOUS SYSTEM. By Prof. Ewald Hering. 15c.
17. THE REDEMPTION OF THE BRAHMAN. By Richard Garbe. 25c.
18. AN EXAMINATION OF WEISMANNISM. By G. J. Romanes. 35c
19. GERMINAL SELECTION. By Prof. Aug. Weismann. 25c.

The Open Court Publishing Co., Chicago.

AGENTS WANTED—To present to Christian people the grandest, best-selling book of the age. THE PEOPLE'S BIBLE HISTORY. Exclusive territory and attractive commissions given. THE HENRY O. SHEPARD CO., Chicago, Ill.

After Easter?

Overhaul Your Sunday School Library.

Replace worn volumes and add new ones to the extent of the funds at your disposal.

No way so effectual as this for creating new interest in the Sunday School, particularly among the older scholars.

We are EXPERTS, and can help you to secure the best books at lowest prices.

Congregational Sunday School and Publishing Society,

Congregational House, Boston. 475 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

THE ALTRUIST INTERCHANGE.

The News Journal of Philanthropy.

Published Quarterly.—Monthly after October.

Subscription Price, 50 cents for 1896.

Sample Copy, 10 cents in stamps.

LEADING ARTICLES FOR APRIL.

Military Discipline at the Burnham Industrial Farm. Model Lodging Houses. With Portrait of D. O. Mills. A Seaside Camp for London Working Boys. Illustrated. Sociological Investigation by Hampton Graduates.

Two Special Premiums: The "National Flower Guild" Collections.

No. 1. Five of the best varieties of Sweet Peas and "The Altruist Interchange" for 1896, sent free, postpaid, for 50 cents.

No. 2. A Complete Flower Garden. 25 varieties of Seeds and Bulbs, worth $2.00, and "The Altruist Interchange" for 1896, will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of $1 00.

The Altruist Interchange Company,
60 Fifth Avenue, New York.

SONGS FOR SPRING TIME.

HIGHEST PRAISE FOR THE SABBATH SCHOOL.
$30 per 100 copies.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HYMNS, for YOUNG PEOPLE.
$30 per 100 copies.

Do not substitute inferior books because of lower price. The best are cheapest!!

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO.,
76 East 9th St., New York. 215 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

Religious Notices.

Religious and ecclesiastical notices, addresses of ministers, etc., published under this heading at ten cents a line.

THE address of Rev. Rufus B. Tobey is 198 Dartmouth St., Boston. Telephone, Tremont 893.

PRESIDENT STEPHEN B. L. PENROSE of Whitman College will be in the East until June 1, and desires opportunity to tell the patriotic story of Marcus Whitman before churches, societies, etc.. Address 182 Chelten Avenue, Germantown, Pa.

NOTICE.—A clergyman, who has recently resigned a large church in the city of Brooklyn, N. Y., will, on account of temporary ill-health in his wife, take a country or village Congregationalist church, at a very moderate salary, besides use of parsonage. Apply at once to "Reverend M.," 123 Cross Street, Somerville, Mass. High class references given.

THE AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION has been at work seventy-one years for the retired rural districts. Its union methods specially commend it to communities of sparse populations divided in religious sentiments. Its missionaries visit families, distribute religious literature, hold evangelistic meetings and organize Sunday Schools. Probably no evangelizing agency has larger results for the amount expended. 11,000,000 children are yet out of Sunday School. Will you help to save them? Send to Rev. Addison P. Foster, D. D., New England Secretary, 1 Beacon St., Room 40, Boston.

AMERICAN SEAMEN'S FRIEND SOCIETY, No. 76 Wall St., New York. Incorporated April, 1833. Object: to improve the moral and social condition of seamen. Sustains chaplains and missionaries; promotes temperance homes and boarding houses in leading seaports at home and abroad; provides libraries for outgoing vessels; publishes the Sailor's Magazine, Seamen's Friend and Life Boat.

Contributions to sustain its work are solicited, and remittances of same are requested to be made direct to the main office of the Society at New York.

CHARLES H. TRASK, President.
REV. W. C. STITT, Secretary.
W. C. STURGES Treasurer.

Subscribers' Wants.

An educated woman desires a position to care for children and do family sewing; accustomed to children, a good sewer. Address D. 1, care of The Congregationalist.

ESTABLISHED 1836.

ISAAC RILEY,
Successor to Baird & Riley,
PLUMBER AND SANITARY ENGINEER,
85 Joy St., Near Cambridge St., Boston.
Telephone, Haymarket 294.

300 ORDERS in Three Weeks"; "10 orders in every 12 calls"; "$5 to $10 profit every day"; "130 orders in 3½ days." Terms free Outfit 30 cents. JAS. H. EARLE, Publisher, Boston.

Send for Free Specimen Pages of

UPLIFTING SONGS
NEW AND OLD
FOR PRAISE AND REVIVAL MEETINGS AND SABBATH SCHOOLS
EDITED BY
C. C. CASE AND J. H. MURRAY
WITH A NUMBER OF HERETOFORE UNPUBLISHED GOSPEL SONGS BY
GEO. F. ROOT
Price 35¢ post paid.

The Book will contain 224 pages.

Published by
THE JOHN CHURCH COMPANY,
CINCINNATI-NEW YORK-CHICAGO.

OLD BOOKS BOUGHT.
LIBRARIES AND SMALL PARCELS OF BOOKS PURCHASED.
Save the expense and delay of Auction Sales.
N. J. BARTLETT & CO., 28 Cornhill, Boston

THE WORLD FOR CHRIST IN 1901
Is it really possible? Read
"1896" and learn how possible it really is Price 50c. At least send postal for the crusade circular and plans of work.
Crusader Publishing Co., Toledo, O.

SCHERMERHORN'S TEACHERS' AGENCY.
Oldest and best known in U. S.
Established, 1855.
3 EAST 14TH STREET, N. Y.

BRADFORD ACADEMY.
For the higher education of young women. Buildings unsurpassed for comfort and health. Twenty-five acres—twelve in grove; lake for rowing and skating. Classical and general course of study; also, preparatory and optional. Year commences Sept. 11, 1895. Apply to MISS IDA C. ALLEN, Principal Bradford, Mass.

MASSACHUSETTS, NORTON.
WHEATON SEMINARY
For Young Ladies. Regular and elective courses, literary, scientific, classical. Pupils also fitted for advanced courses in leading colleges. Excellent advantages in art and music. Fine library, laboratory, observatory, gymnasium, bowling alley; outdoor sports, careful physical training. Perfect sanitary arrangements. Best home influences. Beautifully situated, 28 miles from Boston.
61st year. Summer term, April 9, 1896. For illustrated prospectus, address
MISS A. E. STANTON, Principal, Norton, Mass.

IMPROVED
Cathedral Tubular Bells,
CHIMES AND PEALS (Harrington and other patents.)
U. S. Tubular Bell Co. Sole Mfrs., Methuen, Mass.

EUROPE.—A small family party is being organized for spending the summer in European travel. Leave June 17, return in September. Route to include Belgium, Holland, the Rhine, Germany, Switzerland, Italian Lakes, Italy, France, England. Price $600 References exchanged. Mrs. L. E. Schneider, 138 W. 4th St., Mount Vernon, N. Y.

The Congregationalist's PILGRIMAGE

The Congregationalist's Pilgrimage sails June 4, 1896, by Hamburg-American Express Steamer Columbia, landing at PLYMOUTH, ENGLAND, returning August 1 by the same Line. The Itinerary includes Cologne, the Rhine, Lucerne, Paris, etc.

☞ We urge prompt application for the remaining vacant places. The party is limited, and the outward steamer accommodations cannot be increased. ☜

A FERRY, LEIDEN.

NEW WORLD PILGRIMS AT OLD WORLD SHRINES . . .

A unique brochure, valuable as a Pilgrim souvenir as well as a record of the tour. Besides the full daily Itinerary and all necessary details and directions, much space is given to "English and Dutch Notes," which treat of the historic and architectural features of the tour, and particularly of points of Pilgrim interest. 42 ILLUSTRATIONS. Price, 10 Cents.

Address PILGRIMAGE,

Office of THE CONGREGATIONALIST, Boston,

or HENRY GAZE & SONS, Ltd., { 113 Broadway, New York. / 201 Washington St., Boston. } Business Managers of the Tour.

About 500 More Names

Will be accepted in connection with this offer. The offer must then be withdrawn. All, therefore, who desire to secure 12 copies of the paper, including the anniversary number and The Bonnie Brier Bush, for their friends should send the order at once.

The Paper for 12 Weeks & The Bonnie Brier Bush for 25 Cts.

(☞ If the book is to be sent by mail add five cents for postage.)

For the purposes of our special offer we have purchased an edition of this remarkable classic by Ian Maclaren from the authorized publishers, Messrs. DODD, MEAD & CO. It is a reprint from new plates of the complete copyrighted edition, which is issued at $1.25; making a dainty volume, cabinet size, bound in cloth, with a unique cover design.

CONDITIONS—THESE ONLY:

☞ The "12 Weeks for 25 Cents" subscriptions must be for bona fide new names of persons able to subscribe for a religious paper on their own account. The new subscribers must be sent by a present subscriber of the paper, but the former may in their turn send other new names.

Address

"TRIAL SUBSCRIPTIONS,"

THE CONGREGATIONALIST,

1 Somerset Street, Boston.

THE CONGREGATIONALIST

AND BOSTON RECORDER.

The Recorder founded 1816: The Congregationalist, 1849

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
- Paragraphs 585
- After Easter What? 585
- Must Christ Be Superseded? 585
- The Presidential Campaign 586
- Thinking on Religious Truth 587
- Current History 587
- In Brief 588

STAFF CORRESPONDENCE:
- Boston 589
- New York 590
- Washington 590
- The Interior 590
- Scotland 591

CURRENT THOUGHT 608

CONTRIBUTIONS:
- The Christian Life. VII. Rev. Floyd W. Tomkins, Jr. 591
- A Baritone's Parish. III. Rev. James M. Ludlow, D. D. 592
- A Distinguished Boston Pastorate. The Editor 594
- Politics and Religion in Utah and Idaho. Rev. W. S. Hawkes 608

THE HOME:
- Immortality—a poem. Mary Bingham Wilson 595
- Paragraphs 595
- In Defense of the Spinsters. One of Them 595
- A Bit of Color. Kate Upson Clark 596
- The Science of Food. IV. Selection and Dietaries. M. V. Shaler 596
- Religious Training—a selection 596
- Closet and Altar 597
- Scientific Jottings 597
- The Walk Toward Emmaus—a selected poem 597
- A True Story of a Stork—a selection 597
- Tangles 598
- If Not, Why Not?—a selection 598
- The Conversation Corner. Mr. Martin 599
- Corner Scrap-Book 599

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL—Lesson for April 19 600

Y. P. S. C. E.—Topic for April 19-25 601

PROGRESS OF THE KINGDOM 601

LITERATURE 602

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES:
- The St. Louis Churches 604
- The Georgia Convention 605
- The Alabama Association 605
- Other Christian Work 614

MISCELLANEOUS:
- Notices 604
- As Others See Us 608
- Business Outlook 610
- Boston Superintendents' Union 611
- Marriages and Deaths 611
- Woman's Board Prayer Meeting 612
- Biographical 613
- Obituary 615

THE CONGREGATIONALIST

AND BOSTON RECORDER.

The Recorder founded 1816: The Congregationalist, 1849.

Published every Thursday.

PER COPY, 6 CENTS. PER YEAR IN ADVANCE, $3.00.

TWO YEARS IN ADVANCE, $5.00; FIVE YEARS, $10.00.

IF PAYMENT IS DELAYED, $3.50 PER YEAR.

ONE OLD AND ONE NEW SUBSCRIPTION, $5.00.

CLUB OF FIVE, ONE AT LEAST BEING NEW, $10.00.

On Trial, 6 Months, $1.00; 3 Months, 25 Cents.

RECEIPTS for subscriptions are indicated by the date of expiration following the subscriber's address, as printed upon the paper. If a special receipt is wanted a stamp should be sent with remittance.

DISCONTINUANCES.—In accordance with the almost universal wish of our subscribers, papers are continued until there is a specific order to stop. In connection with such an order all arrearages must be paid. An order of discontinuance can be given at any time, to take effect at the expiration of the subscription.

ADVERTISING RATES.—25 cents per agate line each insertion, 14 lines to the inch; 114 inches to the column. Discounts according to amount of contract.
READING NOTICES, leaded nonpareil, 50 cents per line, each insertion, net.

W. L. GREENE & CO., Proprietors, Boston.

Entered as second-class mail. Composition by Thomas Todd

CAN YOU DOUBT THIS?

UNITED SOCIETY OF SHAKERS
at Watervliet, Ohio,
P. O. Box 914, DAYTON, O.

DAYTON, OHIO, March 25, 1896.
Leonard Mfg. Co., Sirs:—Spoons I ordered last week received. Am well pleased. They are well worth the money.
In regard to your Tea and Orange spoons as per letter, don't quite understand it. Are there six in a set? Are they the same size and plated same as the ones I ordered. Please give description more fully and then I will see what I can do to gain the premium you offer. Yours truly, (Signed) JOHN O. TYLER, Mgr.

LITTLETON, March 26, '96.
Dear Sirs:—I have sent for six sets of spoons, viz.: One set Coffee spoons and five sets of Teaspoons, and I am more than pleased with them. If I can, I intend to send an order for six sets more. Please send me the Cake Basket for a premium. Please address
E. F. MARTIN,
Box 86,
Littleton Common, Mass.

PITTSBURGH, PA., March 24, 1896.
Gentlemen:—We send you herewith one dollar for another set of the same spoons. Our saying we would be surprised if the quality of the spoons was what you described, should have been "We would be agreeably surprised," and we must confess now that we are "agreeably surprised," for we think they are worth considerably more than you sell them for, and there was no intention on our part to say anything that could be construed differently from what was intended.
Yours truly,
THE JOURNAL PUBLISHING CO.

SULLIVAN, ILL., March 25, 1896.
Leonard Mfg. Co., Chicago, Ill.,
Gentlemen:—I am in receipt of the souvenir spoons and also your letter of the 24th inst. The spoons are very handsome indeed—in fact, they exceeded our expectations a whole lot.
You will please send me three sets of No. 2 and two sets of No. 3 of your full size triple plated Souvenir Teaspoons—same as sent me by my order dated March 19th. I inclose draft to your order for $4.95 to pay for same. This makes six sets I have ordered, so if you feel disposed to put in an extra set of spoons, which is one-third of the premium you offer on twelve sets, I will not only be thankful but delighted. Awaiting your response, I am, yours very truly, T. H. SCOTT.

☞ Thousands of Letters like the above are on file at our Office, and received daily. ☜

$9 Set of Spoons for 99c.

ONLY 99¢

FORMERLY SOLD FOR 9.00

• FOR ALL SIX •

THIS CUT SHOWS EXACT SIZE AND PATTERN OF SPOONS.

Positively the Greatest Bargain ever Offered. We are startling the world. No description will do justice to this Most Handsome and Elegant Silverware; you never saw anything equal to them.

JUST THINK OF IT . . . .

Six Heavy Solid Silver Triple Plated full size World's Fair Souvenir Teaspoons, with the Bowls Gold Plated both Inside and Outside, and only 99c., worth $9.00. They are not the common washed-over stuff, but are stamped "Leonard Mfg. Co. A1," which is a guarantee of reliability and square dealing. This is the most wonderful opportunity you ever heard of. IT IS REALLY THE CHANCE OF A LIFETIME.

You Will Never Have Another Chance to get such beautiful spoons at such a low price. You must send in your order at once. First come, first served.

REMEMBER We positively cannot supply these spoons after this lot is sold, and we reserve the right to refuse orders from dealers for more than twelve sets.

ORDER TO-DAY As you may be too late if you delay. This is the most remarkable offer ever made by a reliable firm, and we refer to the First National Bank of Chicago, any Express Company, and Dun's or Bradstreet's Commercial Reports. The Editor of this paper knows we are responsible and will do as we agree.

Set No. 2: Manufacturers, Horticultural, Woman's, Fisheries, Machinery and Transportation buildings.

Set No. 3: Administration, Art, Agricultural, Electrical, Mining and Government buildings.

In your order please be explicit and say whether you want Set No. 2 or 3. We send by mail prepaid.

Send 99 cents by postoffice or express money order or registered letter only, as we do not accept personal checks.

If the spoons are not exactly as represented you can have your money back.

LEONARD MFG. CO., Dept. M., 152-153 Michigan Avenue, Chicago.

THE CONGREGATIONALIST

Volume LXXXI Boston Thursday 9 April 1896 Number 15

✠ 80th ANNIVERSARY OFFER ✠

The eightieth anniversary offer (The Congregationalist and The Bonnie Brier Bush for 30 cents), as announced on one of our advertising pages, is still open. Five or six hundred new names can still be received.

✠ TRIAL SUBSCRIPTIONS. ✠

6 Months for . . . . . $1.00
3 Months for 25 cts. 4 Weeks Free.

✠ THE CONGREGATIONALIST SERVICES. ✠

Thirty-three services. Samples free.

Price, 100 copies of one number, 60 cts., postpaid.

EVIDENCES multiply of what may be called the Puritan recovery of the observances of the Christian year. Easter has long had a growing recognition among us, with something, often, merely of the natural joy in the turn of the season and the reappearance of leaf and flower; but the remembrance of Good Friday, the sacrifice that precedes the restoration, has come more slowly back into our church life and thought. It is surely well, however, if we are to devote any special day of the year to the remembrance of the resurrection, that we should as publicly and statedly commemorate the sacrifice of which it was the crown; and this conviction, slowly growing up among us, has evidently begun to bear its fruit. In Boston this year all the Back Bay churches united in a Good Friday service with the Old South Church, and in several other churches of the city there were special services running throughout the week and culminating in the meetings of Friday night. In Springfield a similar service was held in the South Church, and we hear of many like observances elsewhere. Even the newspapers of the great cities, which are too much inclined to seize by preference upon the secular and frivolous manifestations of popular observance of church festivals, this year bring abundant testimony to the deep religious impression of the time.

Universities abroad and at home are recognizing the valuable service rendered by broad-minded, aggressive clergymen. Bishop Potter of New York has been invited to preach at Cambridge University, Eng., during May, 1897, and Rev. George A. Gordon of the Old South Church, this city, will lecture at Harvard next year on Immortality. The Hebdomadal Council of Oxford recently proposed to the Convocation of Oxford that the degree of M. A. should be granted, "by decree of the House," to Principal A. M. Fairbairn of Mansfield College. It is the invariable custom that proposals of this kind are accepted without discussion and without division, but the vice-president of Magdalen College opposed the motion and gave his reasons for so doing. Fortunately this type of Churchman was not to have his way. The dean of New College and Canon Ince of Christ Church, the Regius professor of divinity, supported the proposal of the Hebdomadal Council and bore high testimony to the quality of the work done at Mansfield College and urged Dr. Fairbairn's right to the degree and a share in the government of the university which it carries. When the vote was taken a majority of sixty-five in favor of granting the degree was the slap in the face which the bigoted Churchman received who opposed the motion.

The economy of that cheerful and well-considered denominational loyalty which we have often insisted on is illustrated in a report of the meeting of the Alabama Association, which will be found in another column. Without commenting upon the character of the mission referred to, of which we know nothing but what the report tells us, it is evident that the contributions of the association for the last few years could have been more carefully and economically spent through the regular agencies of the churches. It ought not to need an experience of this kind to gain a vote of our associations "approving the work of the churches through their own national benevolent societies."

Passing over Mr. Lafcadio Hearn's slur upon missionary knowledge and truthfulness, which represents an opinion compounded, we suppose, of prejudice and ignorance in about the usual proportions, his article on China and the Western World in the April Atlantic is one of the most effective arguments for foreign missions which we have lately seen. All that it contains, indeed, in the way of rebuke to the conceit of intellectual superiority in the western races and of the possibilities of Chinese commercial and intellectual development has been the commonplace of the more thoughtful missionary utterances for many years, but Mr. Hearn states it with the enthusiasm of a discoverer to an unusual audience and with a high degree of literary power. The argument is that the Chinese are swift to adapt themselves to new commercial methods and ideas, but are extremely conservative in morals and in style of living. Therefore, says Mr. Hearn, under European tutelage they are bound to control the markets of the world. The millions of the Orient are upon us, and our Western civilization bids fair to be crushed by brute numbers and a power of cheap living with which our Western people cannot for a moment compete. The church in its mission enterprises has long foreseen this peril, but its conclusion from the premises is quite a different one. "Therefore," it says, "let us attack the Oriental in his citadel. Let us give him that gospel of Christ which has never failed to change the history of a people." And the church alone has produced the change, in individuals and on a small scale as yet, by which the life of the whole great mass of China is to be uplifted until its prosperity shall be a blessing and not a menace to the world.

AFTER EASTER WHAT?

If we have kept the feast in simple faith the conclusion of its rejoicing is that Christ who died lives to abide with us in joy and sorrow. Out of the remembrance of his death and resurrection comes the assurance of his presence. What that presence means to us is the question for the days to come. If we have kept the Lenten time with self-denial and mean to use its passing as excuse for self-indulgence, then we are taking it in the old false sense which made our Puritan fathers turn from it altogether. The presence of Christ on an occasion, coming to visit individuals or a church, has been a favorite theme of story telling from the earliest ages. Legends abound of his presence unrecognized to test and teach and reward men. Longfellow and Lowell among American poets have employed it and Elizabeth Stuart Phelps has recently, in her Supply at St. Agatha's, used it as a motive for a very suggestive and moving story. Beautiful as these legendary and imaginative uses of the thought of his presence often are, they do not express the practical, everyday privilege of which we all may be partakers. Not in isolated cases but everywhere and for all the risen Christ is with his people to test and help and transform. The gift of the Spirit is his gift to every disciple, and by the voice of the Spirit Christ himself speaks to us. Our joy and efficiency are measured by our grasp and use of this great promise in the needs of every day.

MUST CHRIST BE SUPERSEDED?

In answer to this question, propounded recently in a private letter, The Congregationalist, now as always, brings an emphatic No! Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth, but he is also the end of the age for knowledge. The forward look is always a look toward Christ.

If those who think of him only at the beginning of our Christian history will climb to the apostles' place of hope they will find themselves looking forward through an ever brightening vista to Christ, the judge of the world, the hope of glory, the deliverance of the creation from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the sons of God, the dispenser of gifts to those who overcome. We look backward to what he did, and in this we are like the ancient church, which looked back to what he did in Abraham and Jacob and Moses, but we look forward, as they looked, to a glory and deliverance which were to be revealed. The Christ of our faith and expectation is not to be superseded but to supersede. In his coming all other claims to righteousness and power and glory are to be absorbed and completed.

If our Lord had been only a man—as the Unitarian believes—or only a demi-god—as the Arian imagined—then his teaching, as being partial in essence as well as extent, might have been overtaken and left behind in the progress of the world, but since he is God revealing himself to man in the limitations of a man his teaching may be limited in extent but it is complete in essence, and all experience justifies his claim. The divine nature is the sanction and assurance of the divine word.

It is when we look only at Christ of the brief life history, when we imagine that because his work in that experience was finished on the cross he has not been active in a different service since, that we begin to minimize his influence. The resurrection contradicts us in so false a view. His own words rebuke us. "All power is given unto me in heaven and earth," he says when already the sufferings of the cross are history, "go, therefore, and teach . . . and lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." The visible power and teaching of the Holy Spirit witness that Christ is present and effective in the progress of his church. If we believe that this age, too, is a sacred age, that Christ personally now is calling men to repentance and a change of attitude toward life, that the Spirit still broods over the chaotic thought of man, bringing order and beauty to life and light, we shall never be tempted to think that it is only in looking backward down the hights the age has climbed that we can find the Redeemer of the world.

So far is Christ from being superseded that, in many aspects of his teaching, we are only beginning to understand him, and we must believe that there are other aspects in which yet larger knowledge is reserved for those who shall come after us. So far as personal faith and the vital union of love and character and purpose are concerned, indeed, the repentant sinner has never failed to understand him. Here the child, the savage and the master of learning stand upon an equal plane. But, in other aspects, shall we accept Xavier's knowledge of the hights and breadths of Christ's character as complete? Then we shall have no quarrel with the Inquisition. Shall we accept Calvin's? Then we must—very reluctantly—approve of the execution of an irritating heretic and busybody like Servetus. Shall we look to St. Francis of Sales? Then we must not object to breaking faith with heretics in the interests of mother church. Shall we remain where our own ancestors once stood? Then the hanging of witches must become an allowable part of our creed and practice. It is not Christ, but imperfect and partial views of Christ which justified these wicked deeds to Christian men. If our views are broader, juster, more consonant with the character of him we worship, it is because the Spirit of God has led men through these lower stages and brought them out upon a higher place. It is not our merit, but it is our privilege and responsibility that we have inherited better knowledge, and it should quicken our faith and urge us forward in the search for truth.

In extent our Lord's teaching is limited, in essence it is eternal. It does not reveal to us the particulars which he has since revealed by the teaching of his spirit, but in the germ and essence they are all there, and the later revelation is likewise an unfolding. It is this which makes the words of Christ so pregnant, and the interest in their study so perennial. As one bends down a lilac bough in early spring and sees only the brown bark and the close-fitting winter sheath, and comes back again and again to see the breaking of the cover and unfolding of the leaf, watching the tiny bud shoot forth and grow and take to itself the color of the mountain snow at noon or the faint purple flush of the afterglow, so is it with the words of Christ. We wonder at their simplicity, we study their arrangement, we come back to them again and again, and find that they are unfolding new and living meanings with the progress of our thought, until what seemed a dry twig of wisdom's tree, or a withered paradox, blossoms before us in a beauty and fragrance of which we never could have dreamed. The words of Christ are the words of him who ever liveth, and they are vital with his life. As years go on and he abides there is indeed a superseding, but it is the crowding out of sin and ignorance and folly in our lives, until we come to know him heart to heart, and know that when he shall appear we shall be like him for we shall see him as he is.

"And every man that hath this hope in him, purifieth himself, even as he is pure."

THE PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGN.

The Republican candidate for the next president of the United States will be nominated in a little more than two months from this date. The Democratic nomination will follow soon, and in all probability one of the two men thus named will preside over the destinies of this nation during the next four years. What is the interest of the individual citizen in these nominations and what can he do to influence them?

Not for a long time, certainly, has the necessity of good government to the prosperity of each individual been made so apparent as during the present administration. Private business generally has suffered severely. In many enterprises heavy losses have followed one another, and great public interests, educational and religious, have staggered under constantly increasing burdens. The nation's progress halts and the reasons are plain. Our resources are immense. New ways of developing them are constantly being discovered. We are at peace with the world and free to devote our energies to advancing national prosperity. But during this entire administration we have been running deeper into debt. Month by month our income has been insufficient to pay our current expenses. Repeated crises have occurred in which our national credit, already severely shaken, has been saved only by borrowing money at abnormally high rates of interest through the aid of rich bankers at home and abroad. A considerable party, outside of any political lines, has persistently struggled to compel the country to repudiate its debts in part by paying them in silver at a price about double its actual value in the world's market. Our foreign relations have been disturbed by threats of war with other nations in which Congress has freely indulged while apparently indifferent to the necessity of legislation to provide for our depleted revenues. These are causes of financial distrust, depression, loss and suffering shared by individual citizens throughout the entire country.

The task before the party that wins in this campaign is not an easy one. To establish the country on a sound financial basis, to inspire confidence that the nation means to meet its obligations honestly, which can be done only by being honest, and to maintain peaceful relations with other nations without entering into entangling alliances or avoiding just responsibilities—this will be a work which will call for the highest patriotism and tax the wisdom of our ablest leaders. Not since the election of Abraham Lincoln has the country entered on a presidential campaign so critical as this one.

The part which the average citizen can take is indeed a limited one. State party conventions choose delegates to national conventions, and the voter must choose between the names they offer. Rumors come to us of delegates being purchased by friends of favored candidates, with too convincing evidence that they are true. The arts and influence of unscrupulous business men and politicians are being employed to secure, out of the coming elections, the greatest possible gain to themselves, and they are ready to promise a division of these gains to those who will help them. These conditions the average citizen must recognize and face, and he should not be too sure that they do not exist in his own community.

Yet the fact remains that this is a popular government and is ruled by representatives of the people. With a single exception, the result of an accident, we believe that every one of our presidents has possessed patriotism and moral purpose above the average of the people. The responsibilities of office sober and steady even the most ambitious leaders, and they watch eagerly for popular support in maintaining right and honorable policy. Nor do we believe that any American Congress ever for any considerable time failed to represent the opinions and aims of the majority of the people. Each citizen's opinion has weight, and the voices of many have weight far beyond their votes. The indifference of men of good motives in political campaigns is not less culpable than the vicious schemes of bad politicians. Not only does the choice of candidates largely depend on popular opinion, but the motives and purposes of those chosen are profoundly affected by the same cause. The delegates to the national convention will not nominate men whom they believe the people do not want, nor will they adopt platforms which they think the people will repudiate. Let every one, then, freely express his opinion. Let him find where he stands and make his position known. Especially let those who want honest financial policy, sound money, just and dignified relations with other nations plead for these things.

We address those who believe that God rules the destinies of nations, and that he directs the choices for rulers of those who call on his name. Millions of petitions, we trust, will daily be offered in these months immediately before us that he will give to this nation a president after his own heart, that he will appoint executive officers of the Government and a Congress who by righteousness and wisdom will restore prosperity to our beloved land and make the next four years the most useful and happy years of the entire century.

Fortunate, indeed, are the students of Johns Hopkins University, Chicago University, Auburn and Union Theological Seminaries who are to hear Prof. George Adam Smith of Glasgow lecture during the coming weeks. Our letter from Scotland refers to Professor Smith's visit. With our many educational institutions and strong churches in and around Boston, can it be that we are not to have a chance to hear Professor Smith?

THINKING ON RELIGIOUS TRUTH.

The habit of religious meditation needs encouragement. In the past Christians apparently used to reflect more about the great truths of the gospel, in itself and its practical applications, than most of them do now. This is partly due to the enormous multiplication of topics of interest in modern times, because of the more rapid and comprehensive facilities of intercommunication, the abundance of publications and the advance in valuable knowledge of many kinds. Then religion had nothing like as many competitors as subjects of thought as it has now and men were not so much tempted, as at present, to superficial reflection.

Meditation upon spiritual truth is essential to a substantial and symmetrical Christian growth. It is as important in religious matters as in technically scientific, for example. It has its delights and its rewards yet it involves honest effort. It offers the most alluring and interesting themes and no other sort of reflection equally expands and ennobles the mind. He who possesses only humble natural abilities but who trains himself to meditate earnestly upon divine things soon surprises others by the freshness and force of his comments.

Prayer is the best accompaniment and aid to such reflection. Well chosen devotional reading also proves suggestive and stimulating. Study of the Bible itself is at once necessary and natural and is full of increasing enjoyment. Conversation with Christian people, especially those of experienced and ripened piety, is an important help. And when one has formed, or desires to form, the habit of religious meditation, it is of much advantage to set apart a regular portion of time to be sacredly reserved for it.

Such reflection is most fruitful when guarded from too wide a range at a given time and when concentrated upon one's self so far as to promote self-enlightenment and spiritual improvement. It is our best opportunity of comparing ourselves with our great Example and of discovering how to become like him. And one notable result of it is that many a puzzling subject is cleared up. New points of view are suggested. Mysteries somehow solve themselves reasonably. The divine Spirit keeps the promise of God to his own and real revelations come to us which are of present and eternal value.

CURRENT HISTORY.

A Permanent Arbitration Tribunal.

Cardinals Vaughan, Logue and Gibbons, representing the Roman Catholics of Great Britain, Ireland and the United States, have issued an appeal inviting all who hear their voices to co-operate in the formation of public opinion which shall "demand the establishment of a permanent tribunal of arbitration as a rational substitute among the English-speaking races for a resort to the bloody arbitrament of war." They hold that such a court would form "a second line of defense to be called into requisition only after the ordinary resources of diplomacy had been exhausted," and that it would at least "postpone the outbreak of hostilities until reason and common sense had formally pronounced their last word." The main ground of their appeal, they say, is not that such a course would contribute to the material welfare of all concerned, although they hold that it would do that, "but that it rests upon the well-known character and will of the Prince of Peace, the living fountain, the divine head of Christendom." This joint appeal of these potentates proves how alert the Roman Church is under the leadership of Leo XIII., and it must come with telling force to those adherents of the church in Ireland and this country who cherish the most bitter and warlike sentiments toward Great Britain.

The New York State Bar Association has about finished formulating a plan providing for a permanent international court of arbitration for the settlement of disputes between civilized nations in general and between the United States and Great Britain in particular. The committee hopes to obtain the concurrence and co-operation in the final formation of this plan of all the Bar Associations in this country, and Great Britain, Canada and Australia as well. This is a gratifying announcement, indicating that the jurists of the English-speaking peoples are in sympathy with the grand plan which philanthropists and reformers have been urging. Their aid would be necessary in any case in framing adequate laws, but it is an immense advantage to have them at work now at this early stage of the movement. All the omens for the great conference on international arbitration at Washington, D. C., April 23, 24, are propitious. It is very significant and cheering to see the commander of the Grand Army Posts of Massachusetts urging the veterans to declare for international arbitration.

Our Venezuela Commission is proceeding steadily with its work and is said to be about half through its task of investigating documents and accumulating data. Our ex-minister to England, Hon. E. J. Phelps, one of our leading jurists, in an address given at Brooklyn last week, criticised freely the Administration's interpretation of the Monroe Doctrine. President Diaz of Mexico, in his annual message issued last week, contributed an important statement relative to the Monroe Doctrine and the attitude of Mexico toward it. He says the Mexican Government can but declare its partiality for such a doctrine, and that the whole of Mexico's recent history compels her to rejoice when the United States assumes the obligation of assisting the republics of this hemisphere to resist the attacks of Europe if such attacks are still to be considered as possible. He holds that each of the Central and South American republics ought, by means of a declaration like that of President Monroe, to inform Europe that the Monroe Doctrine, though originating in the United States, "is the doctrine of America in the fullest sense of the word and should become the international law of the American Continent."

The National Legislature.

In the, on the whole, commendable attempt which is being made in Congress this session to cut off appropriations to sectarian institutions, Howard University, to which the A. M. A. contributes for the support of its theological school, passed under the scrutiny of the legislators last week, and after a five-hour debate, in which religious, political, sectional and race prejudices had a wholesale airing, the friends of the university won the fight by a yea and nay vote of 129 to 105, the sum of $32,500 being set aside for the university with the proviso that none of the money shall be expended upon the theological department of the institution.

The debate in the Senate on the proposed consolidation of post offices, under which scheme it would become impossible for the "spoilsmen" to have as much leeway as they have now, called forth from Senator Gorman a characteristic tirade, showing that he has learned nothing from his overwhelming defeat in Maryland.

The House has receded, and by a vote of 245 to 27 accepted the Senate resolutions on Cuba. Mr. Hitt, chairman of the committee on foreign affairs, led in urging their acceptance and adoption, and Mr. Boutelle of Maine in adverse criticism. As they are concurrent and not joint resolutions they do not pledge us to definite action, nor force the hand of President Cleveland.

Sectarian Education in England and Canada.

Questions of sectarian education continue to trouble both the English and Canadian Governments. In the English House of Commons the government has introduced the long looked for and dreaded education bill, which is sure to imbitter the strife of parties for a long time to come. It does not go so far as the advocates of voluntary —that is sectarian—schools hoped and demanded, but it goes far enough to unsettle everything in the present school law, which has been in force since 1870, and it largely increases the aid given to sectarian schools from the public funds. The forces of Nonconformity are arrayed against it, because it puts more power into the hands of the establishment and of the Roman Catholic hierarchy, and increases the friction of English social life. It cannot be adopted without long and bitter debate both in and out of Parliament, but the Conservative majority is so large that it will probably be forced through at last.

In Canada the conference between the Dominion Commissioners and the Manitoba Government has failed. The commissioners are inclined to refer the failure to the haste with which the Remedial Bill was pushed while they were absent on their mission, but the Manitoba Government, while it is ready to accept a compromise of its own offering, which would give the Roman Catholics of Manitoba the same privileges which satisfy their fellow-religionists in Nova Scotia, are firm in refusing to sacrifice the principle of common schools for all the people. "Your proposition," they say in reply to the commissioners, "aims at the legal recognition by the legislature of Manitoba of the right of the Roman Catholic people to separate for school purposes. Our proposition aims at removing every practical objection to the present system without giving a legal right to separate. We understand that by order-in-council your authority is limited to making a settlement satisfactory to the minority, and as a matter of fact the minority will accept nothing short of the statutory right of separation." This defines the difference of opinion and the limits of concession. It remains to be seen whether the Conservative party will insist upon forcing the issue by passing the Remedial Bill.

The Situation in Turkey.

It is possible to report some favorable news from Constantinople and Armenia, although in some respects the outlook was never darker. Mr. Terrell, our minister, arrived in New York on Saturday and we suppose, ere this, has made his peace with the State Department. He seems to have left in charge a representative who has considerable back bone, for as the result of Mr. Riddle's summary action, aided, to be sure, by Sir Philip Currie, the barriers that Turkey was putting in the way of Rev. George Knapp in leaving Constantinople for Bitlis have been removed, and Miss Barton has sent word to England and this country that there is now the fullest opportunity for her and her assistants to go forward in their work of relief, provided they will permit a representative of Turkey to accompany each relief party. There is, therefore, no reason why the friends of suffering humanity in Armenia should not dispatch their funds to Miss Barton, or to the representatives of the American Board, the latter of whom have just been specially commended to the English people by the Armenian Relief Committee in England. Mr. Week's pictures in Harper's Weekly and Mr. Pitkin's articles have won for that journal the honor of being excluded from Turkey. The plight of Matthias Ismirlian, the Armenian patriarch, whose lineaments and character were depicted in our issue of Feb. 20, is becoming most terrible. The Porte, enraged by his fearlessness and honorable conduct in behalf of his people, has given him the alternative of admitting that the Armenians are to blame for all the late disorders, of resigning, or of witnessing the renewal of the massacres of his people; and if a reliable correspondent of the New York Tribune in Constantinople is to be believed, and we think he is, two classes of the Armenians are hoping that the patriarch will either sign the required base indictment of his people or resign. One class is the timid, subservient, money-getting element, and the other is the Huntchagists, the revolutionists, who have found the patriarch unwilling to be their tool. Assistant Treasurer Wiggin of the American Board has transmitted $2,000 directly to Miss Barton, $105,000 to the Board's almoners of mercy and $35,000 from Armenians in this country to their kindred at home. The correspondents of the London News and Chronicle in Constantinople report that a decree expelling all American missionaries from Armenia will soon be issued by the Porte.

The Salvation Army Abroad.

The Indian Witness (Calcutta) says it is not easy for men who have had long experience in affairs in India to take General Booth seriously in his scheme for peasant settlement and his loan agency. It says: "If the peasant settlement scheme gathers up a few hundred thousands only it will entirely fail to change the economic condition of the people of India. If it expands to include millions it will be an interference with the natural course of events, which will bring disaster as surely as any other interference with the methods of nature." General Booth, however, in an interview with the London Daily Chronicle representative just after his return from India, was most sanguine concerning the outcome of his plan for bettering the economic as well as the religious welfare of the natives of India, but we fancy the Indian Witness knows more about India than General Booth. From Japan, however, there come more favorable reports concerning the success of the Salvation Army in dealing with problems there. In a recent Japan Mail a contributor, discussing the Buddhist publications and their comparative lack of influence, after admitting that Japan will before long become more Christian than it ever has been Buddhist, cites the success of the Salvation Army as a sign of the times and reports that, although the army has been engaged in the work there only a little more than three months, already the converts registered number more than 150, and the conversions are of the most unmistakable type.

NOTES.

The rush to California in '49 is paralleled today by the rush to Alaska. Gold!

The Senate committee on territories will report favorably on the House bill requiring a residence of a year prior to beginning suits for divorce in the territories.

The Argentine Republic and Uruguay are fast becoming formidable rivals of the United States in furnishing the granaries and larders of Europe with grain and meat.

A dispatch from Constantinople to the Daily News of London tells of the recent discovery in Asia Minor of a sixth century manuscript of the gospels. Russia has secured it.

A man was killed in a prize fight at Haverhill, Mass., Easter eve. Do the legislators on Beacon Hill need more evidence respecting their duty? Will all who abetted this contest and the contestant who survives be punished as they should be?

A jury last week found the corporation of Trinity Church, New York city, guilty of neglect in providing fire escapes on some of its tenement house property and thereby causing the death of four persons by asphyxiation and burns. Horrible! Most indefensible!

The United States District Court at Wichita, Kan., last week directed the professor of electricity in the State University to test, by using the cathode ray process, the truth or falsity of a claim made against the Santa Fé Railroad by one claiming damages for a fractured wrist.

The questions that many Englishmen are asking are, What if Salisbury was bound to have a war? Why, if a definite alliance was to be formed, was it not done to save perishing Christian Armenians, rather than to conquer African territory or protect the interests of those who hold Egyptian bonds?

It speaks well for the advance of sanitation in England that the death rate of 1895 proves to be lower than that of any year since the mortality statistics have been recorded. If the conditions of the struggle for life are growing harder, at least the combatants do not so easily give up the fight.

The London Independent chronicles the success of an attempt in Birmingham to adapt the Gothenburg system to local conditions. A "model" public house, established by the corporation, has proved so conducive to temperance that the local officials are greatly pleased with the experiment and intend to substitute the new system for the old.

Secretary Morton's statement that the work which Mr. George Vanderbilt is doing for his fellowmen, by managing his vast estate in North Carolina as he is, is quite as valuable as that done by the national department—agriculture—over which Mr. Morton presides, with its large income from the federal treasury and its several hundreds of employés, should set pondering those who denounce the wealthy indiscriminately. It is one of the greatest undertakings that individual enterprise ever attempted, is likely to be public property in due time, and meanwhile scientific teachers of agriculture, forestry, viticulture, dairying and road-making for the South are being trained at private expense.

IN BRIEF.

The Congregationalist Handbook No. 10 will soon be issued, and those who desire to have in an inexpensive, attractive and compact form three of the several notable articles which appeared in our anniversary number will find them in the new handbook. We shall reprint, with portraits of the authors, the article by Prof. Williston Walker on Eighty Years of Denominational History, by Bishop John F. Hurst on Eighty Years of Christian History, and by Prof. A. B. Hart of Harvard University on Eighty Years of Political History. For other details see advertisement elsewhere.

The religious newspapers of England are showing much interest in The Congregationalist's Pilgrimage to England and Holland, a courtesy we appreciate. They chronicle the fact that the Bishop of Winchester has invited the party to spend a few hours at Farnham, lunch with him in the hall of the castle, and be piloted by him through the cathedral. On June 22 and 23 receptions will be given in Memorial Hall, London, by leading English Congregationalists. Many English people are planning to join the party and participate in the trip.

A tobacco manufacturer, in addition to former gifts, has recently presented to McGill University $500,000. Thus a vile weed may after all be put to good uses.

One of the delegates chosen to represent Massachusetts in the coming Republican Convention at St. Louis is Rev. A. E. Winship, editor of the New England Journal of Education. We hope that the whole body may be composed of as good men as he.

Prof. George D. Herron's friends—and there are many such who are not his disciples—will regret to hear that threatened nervous prostration demands that he shall give up all work in this country during the coming year and seek rest and recuperation abroad.

It is strange that so witty a people as the Irish should have so little sense of humor. Here is the Providence Visitor rejoicing with headlines of great joy that some of "our war boats are to be painted green despite A. P. A. threats." And it is to be an olive green at that!

A New York judge has decided that colored children in that State cannot be excluded from the public schools, nor compelled to attend those provided for the colored race only. That is good law for New York. When will the time come when what is commended by law in one section of this country cannot be made a criminal offense in another section?

Superintendent Hawkes, in his article on the situation in Utah, is too optimistic, we fear. The Utah legislature already has memorialized Congress for the return of the church property confiscated a few years ago. Other legislation adverse to Gentile interests has been introduced in the State legislature and a bill is before Congress asking that the northern portion of Arizona be annexed to Utah.

The author of our serial story, A Baritone's Parish, once chided one of his parishioners for not attending the week night prayer meeting. She replied that she became so absorbed in a novel that she forgot the meeting. When he asked her what book she was reading she named one of his own stories. Taken in as short sections as we furnish no one need be kept away from prayer meeting by Dr. Ludlow's story.

The latent heroism of a millionaire—yes, some of them are humane and divine, demagogues to the contrary notwithstanding—came to the test last week. Mr. John Reece, one of the leading men in the Harvard Church, Brookline, an inventor of high rank and beloved as an employer, citizen and neighbor, in inspecting a new manufactory about to be occupied by his firm saw a workman in peril of his life. In attempting futilely to save the workman Mr. Reece lost his own life.

---

The Advance comments on an editorial which recently appeared in our columns. It explains that the phrase in Deut. 14: 21, "That which dieth of itself," evidently means, That which dieth not of itself but is killed, though not according to Jewish rites. The Hebrew warrants no such emendation of the English text, which is correctly translated in both our versions. Such forced interpretations do not increase reverence for the Bible. The further attempts of our contemporary in the same article to improve on the English version are equally arbitrary.

---

The British Weekly, commenting on a recent statement of ours, confesses that it does not know what the degree of L. H. D. would mean if Ian Maclaren were to receive it from an American University. For the benefit of our esteemed contemporary we will state that it is a title which our higher institutions of learning of late have thought fit to confer upon men eminent in adding to the welfare of humanity by the arts of literary composition and pedagogics. Brown University conferred this degree on William Winter. President Gates of Amherst has it and not a few other well-known men. Yes, Ian Maclaren is eligible.

---

Horace Bushnell made Hartford's civic life feel the impress of his convictions as a citizen, and Rev. Dr. George Leon Walker is using The Courant now to induce his fellow-citizens to adopt a wise policy in spanning the Connecticut with a bridge at the right point, for as he says: "Not a city in western Europe has a more lovely river to span, or can present to the eye a more beautiful picture than our Connecticut here at Hartford, if we are only made acquainted with it in such a way as a broad, open, bridge avenue across it would allow us to become." Drs. Cuyler and Storrs last week made known their dissent from the Greater New York law, which the State legislature has passed, an act that they believe threatens the welfare of the city they love and have helped to keep tolerably pure.

---

Dr. Edward Everett Hale, who has lived long and ever kept eyes and ears open, affirms that "temperance reform is in exactly the position, at this moment, which the Christian Church was in at the time of Constantine. It seemed then to excellent good men that if the right arm of the government could be enlisted on the side of Christianity everything would be gained. It proved, alas, that everything was not gained; on the other hand some things were lost, and things of very great importance." Dr. Hale is quite right, only his statement would have been more truthful ten years ago than it is now. The reaction against reliance on the state, the return to moral suasion, to labors with the individual, to the exercise of authority by employers and spiritual guides set in a few years ago, and today there are few so poor as to do reverence to professional clamorers for restrictive legislation by large political units.

---

The credit of the idea of carrying Easter messages, on an extended and systematic scale, to the thousands of aged, infirm and ill who are unable to attend church services, belongs, so far as we know, to Rev. D. W. Waldron of the Boston City Missionary Society. Sixteen years ago he conceived the happy thought of an all-day tour to hospitals and institutions, accompanied by a corps of singers and speakers, and in this way communicating the story of the risen Christ to those who would hear it in no other way. The beauty of this form of service appealed to others and now a party of singers from the New England Conservatory follows in his footsteps, scattering flowers and song, but Mr. Waldron clings to the original plan of making his a distinctively religious ministration. This year he and his co-workers visited nine institutions, representing an audience of 2,118 persons, and Easter literature was sent to 2,313 others.

---

We called attention last week very briefly to the verdict of a London jury condemning a distinguished physician to pay $60,000 damage for betraying a professional secret. "Never before," says the British Medical Journal, "has the tradition of medical secrecy been so severely tested. Dr. Playfair had to balance the grand tradition of medical confidence as against his duty between relative and relative. We find it difficult to say how any other man placed in a similar position would have acted, and have yet to learn that those who censure him so bitterly would not have taken the same course." Here we find the highest professional authority differing from the British judge and jury, and stating the important truth that professional ethics are of less consequence than the conservation of a pure family life. Dr. Playfair may or may not have erred in his diagnosis, but he did not err in seeking to guard the family—his own to be sure—in which he rightfully saw the foundation of all sound society.

---

Chicago is recalling the generosity of Thomas Hughes, who laid the foundation of the city library by his timely gift of 7,000 volumes immediately after the great fire. That was only one example, indeed, of his active friendship for America. It is well to remember, now that he is gone, that it was always what was best and most manly in us that he admired. In the trying days when we were in the throes of combat and most of England's leaders were against the party of freedom, he was one of our steadfast friends because he read the true issues of the contest. His own manliness responded with sympathy to the deepest feeling and purpose of the North. He realized also what was implied in the long work of taking possession of the land for the higher aims of living, and his colony of Rugby was an attempt to bring assistance to us in that task, while he, at the same time, helped some of his own countrymen to a start in life. He knew the manly note in literature, as his own writings abundantly show and as is proved by his special liking for the robust humor and morality of the Biglow Papers and the breezy unconventionality of Whitman. He knew and felt it in religion and gave it expression in his lectures on The Manliness of Christ. To have written the most successful book of the century for boys is honor enough, but a large part of the charm and power of Tom Brown lay in the fact that the reader felt the movement of a strong and vital character behind the book. And to have borne this witness to a generation is higher praise than any that pure literature can give.

---

STAFF CORRESPONDENCE.

FROM BOSTON.

Central Church Adornments.

To the many beautiful windows already in the Central Church edifice three others, the Houghton memorial windows, of great interest and artistic merit have lately been added. The subjects, relating to incidents in the Old Testament, symbolize at the same time faith, charity and hope. In composition the windows harmonize like one by showing a continuous landscape background. The first represents Abraham searching for that place which the Lord promised him as the inheritance for his people. The patriarch is taken as an example of unquestioning faith, and is represented in the traditional dress, calmly and majestically pursuing his way. His people and flock accompany him. David and Jonathan are the figures of the second window, illustrating the time when their souls were knit together. The young David is receiving from the tried warrior the accouterments of war. The spirit of the whole is that of love, charity. Another window shows the great soldier of Israel, Joshua, after the Lord had said unto him, "Fear not, neither be thou dismayed." He is portrayed in consultation with his soldiers and in the act of pointing out to them the plan of battle for the morrow. He seems to doubt not that the city will be his, for he implicitly places his hope in the Lord.

It is plain that the artist has made a careful study of the probable costumes of the times depicted, and is acquainted with the landscape of Palestine. The time of day precedes the twilight hour, and the sky is filled with the glow that foretells the approaching sunset. The windows are original in conception, and give evidence of a thorough grasp of the subjects. The work is all the product of the Tiffany Company of New York. While the church is thus beautifying its own sanctuary, its helping hand is not withdrawn from needy missions. Its recent annual bazar for the home and foreign fields transformed the chapel into a brilliantly illumined resort, tastefully decorated with Persian and Turkish stuffs, jeweled lamps, banners, silks, flowers and plants. The benefit was generously patronized and resulted in gratifying success.

The Forefathers' Progeny.

Some of the Boston children of the early Brewster, Alden, Standish, Bradford and other Pilgrims are now amalgamated as a chapter of the Society of Mayflower Descendants, two years younger than the first chapter at New York. The new order results from the stimulus given to genealogical research a few years ago, and the Boston Chapter starts with about thirty members. There are thousands of persons in New England, it is estimated, who are eligible to membership by descent from the Mayflower Pilgrims, and already many prominent families of the State are represented on the roll.

Vandalism on Beacon Hill.

Lovers of historic associations have not much ground to hope for the preservation of the Bulfinch front of the State House. The Committee on Ways and Means has indorsed almost unanimously the recommendation of the State House Committee that that portion of the building be razed and replaced by a structure to cost $1,500,000. It is feared that all chances favor the approval of these decisions by the legislature. We indorse fully the Boston Society of Architects when it says: "If the General Court of Massachusetts shall decide to obliterate this beautiful, old, historic structure and erect a new building, as proposed, in its place, it will be a needless destruction of one of the most attractive and beautiful public buildings in America, and an inexcusable waste of over a million dollars of the taxpayers' money, and will be on a par with the short-sighted policy which robbed the commonwealth of the famous old Hancock House."

Prospective Librarians on a Tour.

Students of the New York State Library School at Albany are being introduced to the practical side of their future work by a visit in this city to learn about our libraries.

The thirty-three young women and two young men show an appreciation of the methods and facilities of our institutions which it would be well for our own citizens to emulate.

One Year of Burrowing Underground.

The anniversary of the beginning of the subway, work on which during its first year has meant little to outsiders save irritation, was not jubilantly celebrated by the masses for whose supreme benefit the upheaval continues. But the commission observed the year's close by brushing and drying up the accessible interior of the excavations, and escorting a representative party of officials on a tour of examination. The latter were gratified that what the commission and the city had already gone through would not have to be repeated, but refrained from asking minutely how much longer the city must stand it. More has undoubtedly been accomplished than the passers-by realize. And now the plague has broken out in a new section at the junction of Tremont Street and Shawmut Avenue, the site of the proposed southern entrance to the system. Eighteen buildings, some of which have stood on this triangle plot for a century, have fallen prey to the hand of destruction, and all will have disappeared by early May.

FROM NEW YORK.

Questions of the Hour.

Excitement over our two great burning topics, consolidation and the (Raines) excise law, instead of cooling grows hotter day by day. Both measures have passed the legislature, but just how stands the case with either of them few people know, so many, so intricate and often so contradictory are the conditions and hangers-on yet to be interpreted. Consolidation has reached the stage of "hearings" before the mayors of the three cities that are now pronounced to be one, but are far from being so. A large number, the chief speaker being Pres. Seth Low (who favors the union, but cannot accept it in the form prescribed by the law), had a long and patient hearing before Mayor Strong. In Brooklyn Mayor Wurster heard several on both sides, among whom were Drs. Storrs and Cuyler—to what effect in either case does not yet appear. The hearing before Mayor Pat. Gleason of Long Island City has not yet come off, and the bright light to be thrown by him upon the business is anxiously waited for.

Still more numerous are the snarls to be unraveled before the new excise law can be made to work effectively. Perhaps the most hopeful fact concerning it is the rabid hostility to it of the whole liquor tribe, the moans of the small dealers who cannot pay the enlarged tax, and the failure so far to invent easy methods of evading the penalties. Properly enforced it will be an immense gain for temperance.

Our Consolidated Library.

The question of removing the reservoir from Bryant Park (Fifth to Sixth Avenues and Fortieth to Forty-second Street) is up again—this time with the purpose of filling the site with buildings for a popular section of the newly consolidated public library. The site with a cash appropriation of two and a half millions is asked of the city by the library trustees, and is strongly urged by the many who think the Lenox block as yet too far up town for the general reading public, though just the place for the rare works of art and the costly books that are the pride of the Lenox Library. The chief opposition to the proposed removal comes from insurance men who claim that the reservoir is essential to the safety of down-town buildings in case of serious fire. Experts equally interested and competent, however, profess to show better methods of protecting property below Forty-second Street than the reservoir affords.

Affairs in Brooklyn.

The Brooklyn (free) Public Library Association is still actively pressing its case, having secured a legal charter and made plans for a central library with branches in several sections of the city. For a site and building the association hopes to secure a generous appropriation from the city. Ex-Congressman Covert has given an address warmly favoring the movement.

The new building for the free library of Pratt Institute is fast nearing completion and will be admirably fitted for its uses, adopting all the modern improvements for light, heat and ventilation, as well as for classifying, storing and delivering books and facilitating the use of the reading-room for papers, magazines, works of reference and children's books. Electricity will be made to save much manual labor.

The venerable Dr. Cyrus Hamlin took Dr. Abbott's place in Plymouth pulpit on the evening of March 29, giving a discourse on the Crucifixion, Stainer's cantata on that theme being sung by the choir. The same cantata was sung by the Broadway Tabernacle choir at a service on the evening of Good Friday.

The March meeting of the Brooklyn Congregational Club was treated to an address from President Gates of Amherst, on Sidney Lanier, the poet-artist. His life, character and works were invested with peculiar interest under the president's skillful and sympathetic treatment. HUNTINGTON.

FROM WASHINGTON.

The Eloquent Catholic Priest.

A prince among orators here, in the pulpit or on the platform, is Father Stafford, a young Roman Catholic priest. He is a man of fine voice and presence, of broad culture and of lofty spirit. His Sunday night sermons upon the Divinity of Christ have been listened to by an audience that taxed the capacity of St. Patrick's Church. He is one of two assistant priests, and since his ministrations every sitting has been rented; it is impossible to hear him unless one is fortunate enough to get a card from a pew holder. He often preaches an hour and a half. As a lecturer he mingles the simple impassioned style of the preacher with the dramatic power of the born actor. He spoke in the Congregational church at the mass meeting in the interest of the Armenians, and on several other occasions has quite taken his audience by storm with his patriotic eloquence. He is a native of this city. The story is told that when a few years ago he preached here for the first time, his mother said to her friends, "Pray, O pray for Dennis, that he may succeed." Seeing the profound impression that he had made she was heard to say after the service, "Pray, O pray for Dennis, that he won't get proud."

Proposed New Buildings.

We hear that a wealthy ex-Confederate of New York city is interested in a plan to build at the capital a costly memorial building. It is to be a museum of relics of the lost cause and a kind of historic and industrial exhibition of the South. The plans will doubtless soon be formulated, as a large sum of money has been given. Northern capital and enterprise have done much toward developing this beautiful city. It would be a happy thing to have a grand building that should represent the taste and resources of the South, but let the emphasis not be upon a battle abbey draped with the stars and bars. Senator Morrill, who will soon celebrate his eighty-sixth birthday, is now urging the purchase of a site for a building for the Judiciary. The only ground suitable for the purpose is the space across the plaza from the east front of the Capitol. It should be a building corresponding in strength and beauty to the new library building.

An Honest Public Official.

Few men leave such enduring monuments in public works as did General Casey. The State, War and Navy Department, the Washington Monument, and the new library building, besides many other less known structures, have each in turn been the object of his study, construction and supervision. The monument was a half-finished, unsightly object for forty years. When its completion was undertaken, it was learned that the foundations were insufficient. General Casey undertook the phenomenal task of laying new foundations, without disturbing the superstructure already built. The new library, that excites the wonder and admiration of all strangers, is to be turned over to the government on Feb. 27, 1897, just in time for the throngs of people who will come to witness the inauguration of a new President. More than 200 contracts have been awarded during the progress of this building. Probably General Casey worked too hard, but he wrought well and the end was sudden. It was necessary that his successor should be immediately appointed, and Congress most appropriately designated Mr. Bernard Richardson Greene. Mr. Greene has been General Casey's chief assistant during the construction of the library. He is a graduate of Harvard. L. C. W.

FROM THE INTERIOR.

Lincoln Park Church.

This church, Dr. David Beaton, pastor, held its last service in its former house of worship Sunday, March 29. Its present location, Mohawk and Garfield Avenues, owing to changes in the character of the population, has not seemed the best possible for the work of the church. A favorable opportunity to sell the property to a congregation made up of foreign born people was seized and a new location on Fullerton Avenue, near Harvey, selected. The chapel is now completed and will be dedicated Easter morning. The earnestness with which this church has hitherto sought to give the gospel to the poor and the success it has had in its Sunday school work encourage the hope that in this new movement the promise of still greater success may be realized.

The Retreat.

The pastors who met together in the seminary parlors Monday for an all day service were abundantly rewarded. The program had been prepared with reference to spiritual impressions. The devotional element was made prominent. There was much freedom of expression on the part of those who were present. Several brief papers were read on such topics as the pastor in his study, in his pulpit, on the street, among his people and among his young people. All were eminently practical in their character and, therefore, productive of good. But the real value of the gathering was in its fellowship and in the atmosphere of faith and prayer which was breathed. It was felt by all to be a good introduction to the extra work of Holy Week, from which not a few are anticipating excellent results.

Growth of Chicago.

It is hard to believe one's eyes when one reads that more than 45,000 names have been struck from the recent registration list because of suspicion of fraud. This is a simple indication of the seriousness of the municipal problems with which we are contending. From the postmaster's report for the year ending with the last day of March, we learn that for stamps, postals, newspaper wrappers and the like $5,069,532.84 have been received, a gain of $609,255.85, or 13.65 per cent. on last year. This sum only falls below that received at the New York post office by $2,000, while it exceeds that received in Philadelphia by nearly $2,000,000. These are simple hints of the pressure which comes upon the churches simply to keep pace with the enormous growth of the population in the midst of which we live.

Summer School in Chicago.

The success of last year has encouraged the authorities of the University of Chicago to prepare a special list of attractions the coming season. President Andrews of Providence is to be present. Professor Ladd of Yale will give two courses of instruction in philosophy. Prof. Maffeo Pantaleoni of Naples, one of the most famous economists in the world, will offer two courses, one on banking and one on the theory and problems of money. Prof. Bernard Moses will give a course on Spanish American history and on the territorial extension of the United States from 1789 to 1849. Professor Barnes will instruct in the principles of education and Prof. Ewald Flugel in English philology. The three persons last named are from the Leland Stanford, Jr., University.

Attractions in the Divinity School will be lectures on homiletics by Rev. Dr. W. H. P. Faunce of New York, lectures in exegesis by Prof. J. Agar Beet of Richmond College, England, and by Prof. Rush Rees of Newton Theological Seminary in New Testament interpretation. Professor Chamberlain of the Chicago Theological Seminary will give instruction in elocution. All these lecturers and teachers are in addition to the force of instruction already employed. There can be no doubt as to the value of the program of study here set forth.

Convocation of the University of Chicago.

The address by Prince Serge Wolkonsky on Memory and Responsiveness as Instruments of Culture was delivered in good English and was well received. Some of the president's announcements were of more than ordinary interest. A group of four new buildings costing $75,000 each is to be erected out of the recent gift made by Miss Helen Culver in memory of Mr. Charles J. Hull—one for zoölogy and paleontology, one for anatomy, neurology and experimental psychology, one for botany, and one for physiology. They will be ready for occupation in about a year. Prof. John M. Coulter, recently president of Lake Forest University, becomes head professor of botany and will edit the Botanic Gazette, the latest addition to the university's list of scientific journals. The theological department will publish the first number of a review to be called the American Journal of Theology in January, 1897. It will be catholic, scholarly and enterprising. The cooperation of other theological seminaries has been secured. To the names of instructors already given for the summer school that of Prof. George Adam Smith as instructor in Old Testament Theology is to be added. He will also deliver the dedicatory address at the opening in July of the building known as the Haskell Museum.

Chicago, April 4. FRANKLIN.

FROM SCOTLAND.

Prof. G. A. Smith's Visit.

Our brilliant townsman and professor of Hebrew in the Free Church College leaves this week and is due in America on April 5. The welcome you have already given to lecturers and theologians like Professor Bruce, Dr. Stalker and Dr. Denney will, we are sure, be of at least equal warmth in the case of Dr. George Smith. He looks forward with great interest to his three months' stay in America. Professor Smith has chosen Hebrew Poetry as the subject of his lectures. We leave his audiences at Baltimore, Auburn and Chicago to judge for themselves, but we predict that Dr. Smith's magnetic presence and delivery will rouse enthusiasm in America as here, and that those who come in contact with him will be delighted with his charm of manner in private and his force and eloquence in public. We are glad to learn from Dr. Smith and other friends who have recently visited Professor Drummond at Tunbridge Wells that the distinguished writer and scientist, though still weak, is recovering. His interest in his favorite books and his brightness in conversation are reassuring signs.

A Heresy Case.

What is known as the "Kilmun heresy case" has been causing some agitation in theological circles for weeks past and has been the subject of comment and correspondence in our newspapers. The occasion of this break in our intellectual and theological calm is the publication of an outspoken but crude volume, The Saviour in the Newer Light, by Rev. Alexander Robinson, B. D., the parish minister of Kilmun, a quiet and retired spot on the shores of the Clyde, where the Duke of Argyle has his family burying ground. The book is a reproduction in Robinson English of the views of Keim and Pfleiderer, and briefly its "newer light" may be said to be more dissipating than revealing. Miracles and the supernatural are denied or minimized. Jesus is not looked upon as identical with but as revealing the eternal divine soul, and the general standpoint occupied by Mr. Robinson, or at least that he favors in a way flattering to himself, is that of "modern thoughtfulness." The book is not one remarkable for grip or originality, but it has been formally and publicly discussed by Mr. Robinson's presbytery and, following the usual technical procedure, they have decided to serve the writer with a libel, which will state definitely the charges brought against him and give this claimant to "newer light" an opportunity of reconciling his statements with orthodoxy and in particular with such doctrines as the divinity of Christ and inspiration. The writer's opinions have been sharply reviewed by men like Professor Blaikie, Dr. Dods and Dr. W. P. Dickson, the last of whom had Mr. Robinson as one of his students and who thinks his publication of his views both premature and unwarranted. More will be heard of this case and it will give an interesting revelation of the Church of Scotland's orthodoxy.

University Intelligence.

During the week in June given up to entertainment of our Presbyterian visitors, the university and the city authorities will be engaged in doing honor to Lord Kelvin, whose jubilee as professor of natural philosophy will then be celebrated. There are few professors who live to attain their jubilee, and still fewer who attain the eminence of Sir William Thomson, now Lord Kelvin. His part in laying the cable between Britain and America is well known. His practical services to science, and more especially his numerous electrical inventions, have justly extended his fame.

During the past winter Principal Caird delivered the Gifford lectures on Sunday afternoons in the university chapel, known as the Bute Hall. The themes touched on were such as the incarnation and the atonement, and the large audiences that gathered to hear the venerable lecturer were a proof that he still retains his faculty of shedding light on abstruse subjects, and that the spell of his oratory is not yet broken. Unfortunately the course was not completed, owing to Dr. Caird's illness.

Dr. Stalker's View of Preaching.

One of the features of the Glasgow pulpit, this last season, has been the program of lectures to young men delivered by Dr. Stalker in Free St. Matthew's. We have preachers here, as in other places, who pander to the love of the sensational, but Dr. Stalker, like Principal Caird, delights in appealing to the religious intellect of his hearers. The course is entitled Religious Psychology, or the Religious Use of the Powers of the Human Mind. The Body, Soul and Spirit, the Temperaments, the Five Senses, the Memory, Imagination have been separately dealt with, and the interest awakened has justified Dr. Stalker's belief that congregations relish good hard thinking when the results of it are stated clearly and intelligently. W. M. R.

THE CHRISTIAN LIFE.*

VII. THE HOLY COMMUNION.

BY REV. FLOYD W. TOMKINS, JR.

In this dear feast we have the highest and best of all the helps of the Christian life. For Jesus instituted it himself, and asked us to continue it in remembrance of him. And he instituted it at the time of his suffering, so that we always associate it with his agony and bloody sweat, his cross and passion, and then, above all, as he gave the bread and wine he spoke such wonderful words: "This is my body which is given for you; this is the new testament in my blood which is shed for you." It must be a very important service which Christ at the most solemn moment, his last night on earth, asked us to observe. It must be a service full of deep significance when our Lord called the bread his body and the wine his blood.

*Copyright, F. W. Tomkins, Jr., 1896.

It is sad to remember that the hottest controversies of the centuries have been about this service. But is it not wonderful, that, notwithstanding all the trouble and distress occasioned by these discussions, and notwithstanding the divisions amongst God's people, this request of Jesus Christ, "Do this in remembrance of me," has been always and everywhere observed? We have here the one link binding us all together, and binding us to him.

We must think of the holy communion in the simplest way. Whatever meaning Christ's great words may have, he certainly did not mean to make us afraid of the service he asked us to observe. It should be kept as simple as it was when he instituted it, and those who come to it must have the simple faith and love which the eleven apostles had as they gathered about their Master and ate and drank as he commanded them. It is our Father's table, and we, his children, come as his guests. He clothes us in the garment of Christ's righteousness, so we need not be afraid because of our sins. He asks us to come, so we need not wait for any further invitation.

Many names have been given to this service. It is called most commonly the Lord's Supper, which carries us back at once to that dear upper room and makes us realize the simplicity of the feast. It is called the holy communion, which teaches that we are very closely drawn to the Lord and to each other at this service.

> Angels and living saints and dead
> But one communion make;
> All join in Christ, their living Head,
> And of his love partake.

So sang Isaac Watts, and the significance of his words brings a great comfort—that in this service we are brought nearer to the dear ones gone before, whom we call dead, but who are in the truest sense living. They are with Christ and we here meet with him, so we must be drawn nearer to them.

Then this feast is also called the "eucharist," which means a service of thanksgiving, because we thank Christ and praise him for all he has done for us, as we do this in remembrance of him. Some Christians also call it a sacrifice, because we commemorate or celebrate that great sacrifice of the cross, where Jesus died that we might live. And our fathers in America used to give it that old name of "the sacrament," because it is the great testament or pledge between God and his children. As the blood was of old sprinkled on the houses in Egypt where the children of Israel were, and so the destroying angel passed over them, so this service tells us how we are marked by the blood of Christ and saved by his love.

But none of these names, though they each teach a special lesson, must keep us from that simplest and most natural view of the holy communion which is gained from the time and circumstances of the institution. In the "upper room" Christ and his apostles, the infant church, were reclining at the table, a quiet place, a quiet hour, a simple home gathering. And then, taking bread and wine, by his words he associated them with his death, gave to his apostles, and bade them continue the custom till he should come again. Spiritual food, food for our spiritual hunger, an assurance that as our bodies are sustained by nourishment so by Christ our souls are fed, because he died for us—must not that ever be the real message, including all the other messages in this service?

How shall we prepare ourselves to receive the holy communion? St. Paul gives many directions, which may be summed up in these: repentance, love and obedience. We must be truly sorry for our sins, and that we may be sorry we must know what those sins are. So we must examine ourselves honestly during the week, for we want to tell our Lord, when we come to do what he has asked us to do, how sorry we are that we have done what he has asked us not to do. We must love everybody, for how can we come to this feast of the Christ who so loved the world as to die for it if there is some one whom we hate? And while it is impossible to love all alike, we can at least pray for all, even our enemies. And there must be the determination that we will do better, live purer lives, speak and act more kindly in the future, trying hard to follow the example of our Christ. Isn't it a comfort that these are the things which are asked of us as the preparation for the holy communion, rather than any hard questions which we could not answer, or any great deeds which we could not do? And yet we must not trust too much even to this preparation. For after all, we come, just as the eleven came long ago in that upper room, poor, hungry, tired children to our Father's table, and we must not think of ourselves, but of him.

> The bride eyes not her garment,
> But her dear bridegroom's face;
> I will not look upon myself,
> But on my King of grace.

The blessings of the holy communion become very real as we think of them. There is, first, the blessing of forgiveness. What a comfort to have this sure pledge, this sacrament, this divine oath that our sins are pardoned! We can feel certain every time we come to this feast that we are made as clean and pure as little children, not by the eating and drinking but by him who bade us eat and drink. And then there is the blessing of being brought especially near to Jesus. If we can draw nearer to him at one time than another it must be in this Lord's Supper. He asked us to keep it for his sake. He longs for us as much, nay more than we can possibly long for him. As Ian Maclaren so beautifully says: "Jesus careth little for monuments; he careth for hearts. He is only satisfied when the doors are shut to the world and, in a quiet place, his friends meet to keep his commandment. Whether it be in the shadow of a cathedral, where the hushed multitude kneel at the lifting of the Host, or in some Puritan meeting-room, where the elements of the sacrament are passed from hand to hand, or on the mountainside, where Scottish Covenanters keep the feast, or in the dreary catacombs, where early Christians show forth the death they may tomorrow share, it is the same to him who is above all rites, who lives for love." And again here we find strength for every need. When we have a special work, or a heavy burden, or a crushing sorrow, we can come and find in this divine nourishment the force we want. Even our bodies may be strengthened. We ridicule the superstition of men in the middle ages who thought the "mass" a cure for evil, but may we not have lost something by going to the other extreme and not thinking of any real power as coming from this service of love? Where such rest for a tired, weak frame as here at the Lord's feet, fulfilling his request so pathetically made?

A BARITONE'S PARISH.

III.

BY REV. JAMES M. LUDLOW, D. D.

It was more than a month later when a respectable looking stranger called upon Vox at his rooms. The singer was engaged at the time arranging with a lady of the Four Hundred for the vocal culture of her daughters. The visitor quietly awaited his leisure. He was very genteel in appearance. If one had been critical he might have thought that for so stinging cold a day an ulster would have been more suitable than the light fall overcoat he wore, and some might have observed that it was not the fashion that season to wear one's outer garment so short that the tails of the under coat protruded. But Vox was occupied with the stranger's face, which was exceedingly prepossessing.

"Mr. Vox, I believe?"

"My name, sir. What can we do for one another?"

"If I am not mistaken in the person, you once did me a great service."

"You must be mistaken in the person," said Vox, "or else I have done it unconsciously, for I have no recollection of our having met."

The man seemed puzzled. "Possibly," he said slowly, as he scanned the singer's features.

"Undoubtedly it is so," said Vox, and quickly added in the most genial manner, "and I am sorry it is so, for I should be glad to remember that I had served you. Possibly I may do so in the future."

The man hesitatingly began to withdraw. Near the door he stopped, and, glancing about the room, said half to himself and half as an apology to Vox: "Perhaps I have dreamed it. But will you allow me to ask you a question? Do you ever sing Mazzini's Muleteers?"

"Often," replied Vox. "This you mean?" and he struck up the first line. His visitor instantly joined him. Vox stopped as quickly.

"Good heavens!" he exclaimed. "There are not two voices in New York like that." Putting his hand on the man's shoulder, he peered into his face. He could not recall the features, for the dim light in Brady's Harbor and the general slouch of the fellow that night had not really allowed him to see them fairly. He imagined how this man might look with a week's beard on his chin, an untrimmed mustache covering his fine lips and a dirty derby concealing his forehead. "Are you that man?"

"I am, or, rather, I was, that man. But I hope—thanks to God and you—I am a very different man today. I came to tell you my gratitude for a kindness which I had come to doubt one man ever rendered to another, and to apologize for my bestial treatment of you. I was not a man then, Mr. Vox, only a beast; and, if you will believe me, I was not accountable, for I knew no better. I have the vaguest remembrance of that night, as of many another night. When I awoke at daylight in these rooms I had just sense enough to know that somebody had befriended me, or paid a trick on me, and to be ashamed to meet him, whoever he was. So I sneaked away. When I was sobered I couldn't recall the place.

But The Muleteers rang in my ears, and your voice, every note, the tone and quality. I had heard you sing elsewhere, and knew that but one voice, that of Vox, could have sung it. And now it has taken a month for me to get up manliness enough to come and do the decent thing."

"Don't talk in that way," said Vox, coloring as if he were receiving abuse instead of praise. "I did nothing that any man would not do for another." Then he thought of what he had lately said to the Doctor and felt like a hypocrite again. "But don't talk about the past. Let it go. Isn't there something I can do for you now?" glancing at the man's threadbare coat.

"Yes, there is one favor I would like very much to have you do me. I have had a hard struggle with myself these few weeks. I resolved that I would not drink again. I have kept my purpose, but it has been like being tied to a wild beast in a cage. More than once I have started out for a drink, but have come back without it. It is hard to feel that one is all alone in the fight—that nobody knows of it. It's like making that cane stand by itself."

"But you have friends?" said Vox, kindly.

"Friends that have ceased to be friends are worse than strangers," replied the man, in an abstracted sort of way. "My friends don't believe in me. I've got to make new friends who don't know how weak I am. Perhaps they will believe in me for a while at least, and that will give a man some strength. But to be all alone in a fearful struggle! It's the loneliness that takes all the heart out of the fight. You know how one voice steadies another in singing. Drunk as I was when I sang with you, I believe I sang every note correctly; but alone I couldn't have rendered three notes. I want you to let me rest for a while on your confidence, your good wishes, Mr. Vox. And to let me drop in once in a while and tell you that I am all right."

"My good fellow, you can come, and you can stay with me just as much as you want to," said Vox; and for all that he knew that this was a very rash thing to say to a stranger, he would have resented any one's telling him so.

"No," replied the man, "I shall not intrude upon you, but may I ask you to keep this pledge I have written? The paper is crumpled; that's because I have taken it out so often when the temptation was pretty strong. It was something like a friend, and I could say to it, 'You see I have kept faith with you, bit of paper, and I will!' So I would start out on another campaign. But if you will keep it for me I will feel better. I can think then that somebody knows what I am doing."

Vox took the paper. It was written in fine penmanship, and signed "Charles Downs."

"Downs? Charles Downs? Not Downs who used to be in the Mendelssohns? The tenor singer at St. Martha's? And you are speaking of being grateful to me for a common act of humanity! Why, man, I owe more to you than I can ever repay. It was hearing you sing once that gave me my first ambition to be a singer. I began to save my money that night that I might take lessons. I even tried to find you, but you had gone, nobody knew where."

"I was on the road to hell then," said Downs. "Thank heaven you didn't find me; I might have injured you by my example. But no, I think not. You were not inclined my way."

The two men sat in silence for a few moments. Thought was becoming oppressive.

"Come," said Vox, "let's try the old song." If he had deliberated he would not have chosen a reminder of the past. But there was something irresistible about Vox, and Downs joined with him as they rollicked through The Muleteers. Sweezy stood in the doorway listening.

"That," said Vox, "is the greatest compliment a man can have. Sweezy, there, has no more music in him than a horse, but we have woven the spell about him. I believe we do sing well together. Now I will keep this pledge for you, Downs, if you will promise to come every day at twelve and sing with me. We will lunch together, and I will see that you don't get a drop to drink."

The next Sunday night, after service, the Doctor took the singer's arm at the church door with his usual chirpy invitation: "Come, Phil, don't let Mrs. Cupp's pepper and mustard get cold, or the cheese get away from us."

"Walk around the block with me first, Doctor. I've got something to tell you which I'd rather you would hear when you can't see my face."

"Why, what have you been doing now that you are ashamed of, Phil? O, I know. You have proposed to the soprano, or been perpetrating some other trick on your bachelor friends. I'll forgive you at the start, however, because," lowering his voice until there was a frog in it, "because I know something about—but it's none of your business, Phil, so I won't tell you anything about it. No disappointment, my boy?"

"No."

"Then count on me to marry you for nothing, and throw in the benediction beside."

"It's no love affair," said Vox. "Cupid might as well break his arrows on a rhinoceros as shoot at me. It's that drunken fellow. I've been awfully taken in."

"What! has he turned up? Fleeced you?"

"Well, not exactly fleeced me. But he has heaped coals of fire on my head. I want to take back all I have said against him and everything I said against slumming."

He then related what the reader knows. Having worked off the steam of his extra emotion, he accompanied the Doctor to the study. Here Vox gave a description of his new friend—a well-educated man, a splendid all-round musician, a fine business man, has a wife who won't live with him, not even let him see her he has treated her so outrageously, but he loves her tenderly. He was once employed by Silver & Co., who thought so much of him that they were making proposals for his entering the firm when they began to suspect his rum habit. His name is Downs."

"Downs? With Silver & Co?" The names set the Doctor thinking. At length, coming out of his reverie, he picked up from the study table a piece of marble, a bit of a fluted column he had found amid the ruins of the temple of Diana at Ephesus. He traced on it with the pen the word D-o-w-n-s. Then he rubbed the word out with his finger, but a black spot was left that he could not get off the marble.

"There! That's the way I would spoil the job, if I should try to restore the ruins of Downs. Phil, stick to that man. I'll leave him to you. He's your parish, and I believe the Lord has ordained you to shepherd him as truly as he ever ordained me to preach. With your voice and his love of music, and the Christ love between you both, you ought to make him follow you, as the rocks followed Orpheus. That's the meaning of the old legend. You can sing the hardest heart into Heaven if you only believe in yourself and God. Try it, Phil."

The Doctor spent a half-hour next day in Silver & Co.'s office. Just what he and Silver talked about we cannot say. But Silver was overheard to remark as the Doctor was leaving: "My wife thinks the world of the little woman, and when those two women are satisfied with his reformation, all right!"

There never was a finer program for a musicale than that which, several months later, packed the upper Carnegie Hall with the élite of the music lovers of New York. Vox was the drawing card, for he had become, if not the celebrity, at least the fad, of the season. "O, Vox! he's just splendid!" was as familiarly heard as the clicking of afternoon teacups everywhere between Flushing and Orange Mountain. On the occasion referred to he had achieved a seven-fold encore for one performance. To the surprise of everybody, however, when he appeared to acknowledge the ovation he led another man with him to the footlights, one who might have been his twin-brother, for there was just that sort of difference between them that ought to exist between a tenor and a baritone—the former a little slighter in form and features. Curiosity was not allowed to get to the whispering point when they rendered the Graben-Hoffman duet—I Feel Thy Angel Spirit.

The applause was furious. Nothing like it had been heard for six months outside of Brady's Harbor. Vox gracefully stepped a little to the rear. The audience caught his meaning, and the room rang with the cry of "Tenor! Tenor!"

Vox slipped to the piano and played the chords of Salve Dimora from Gounod's Faust. And how grandly Downs sang it! If Deacon Frisk had been there, even he, with his "star-twinkling" and "roof-splitting" metaphors, could not have described it.

"If Faust sang like that," said an elderly gentleman in the audience to his wife, "no wonder he won the heart of Marguerite," and he pressed his wife's hand, which somehow had got into his.

"Hush, John!" replied the woman. Then she put a handkerchief to her eyes instead of her lorgnette.

"He's all right again," said the man, and he squeezed his wife's arm and nudged her nervously.

"John, don't!" and the woman glanced at the woman next to her, as if that individual might care what cooing these old doves indulged in.

This other woman wore a half veil, one of those visors with which women hide their beauty or their freckles from the gaze of the curious. Not seeing her face one cannot say what was transpiring behind the veil, but the veil shook as if some convulsive emotion might be working itself out or struggling to keep itself in.

When Downs left the stage Vox hugged him as a bear would her cub. "Come!" said he, "let's go o in the room and talk to the Silvers."

"The Silvers here!" exclaimed Downs in consternation.

"They were here, but I believe they have left. Yes, their seats are empty. Now that's too bad."

"No wonder they left when they saw me on the stage. Vox, you know they know all about me. They would kick me off their doorstoop if I were a beggar. You've disgraced yourself by bringing me here as I told you you would. The Silvers! of all the people in the world! I wouldn't have sung a note if I had suspected their being here, or anybody who ever knew me. I thought I was dead, buried and forgotten socially long ago. You've insulted your audience by getting me here. Why do you tow my wreck after you that way? You owe it to yourself, Vox, to keep me out of sight."

"Well, you did sing. Thank God for it, too," replied his friend, enthusiastically.

With that he piled up the bouquets, scarcely looking at the cards on them, and the two men went home.

The next Sunday night at the hobnob Vox tried to make a report to the Doctor of the progress of his protégé.

"O! he sang magnificently. I tell you that man is reinstated in this community. Do you know, Doctor, the Silvers were both there?"

"Indeed!" ejaculated his friend, pulling Caleb's tail, and laughing at the dog's surprise. Then he pulled it again, and laughed at the dog's jump as if he had never seen such antics before.

"See here, Doctor, you don't seem to care about Downs. That dog is more to you than a human being. But you've got to listen to me."

Vox got rapturous in his account of Downs's success and ended with: "I couldn't help wishing that his wife had been there to see him, handsome, healthy, true man in every feature and tone of voice. She would have had to fall in love again, or I'll forswear all faith in the sex."

The Doctor rolled himself on the sofa in such glee that the dog accepted his master's antics as a challenge to more of his own and pounced upon him.

"What's the matter with you now?" asked the singer in amazement.

"Matter? Matter enough to make a crocodile laugh. Why, his wife was there!" roared the Doctor.

"The thunder she was!" Vox jumped up as if he had been sitting in an electric chair.

Caleb growled to hear such language in the presence of his patron saint.

"I beg your pardon, Doctor, but how do you know she was there?"

"Why, I suppose she was, because Mrs. Silver promised to go and take Mrs. Downs to hear you sing—to hear the great Vox sing, you know." And the Doctor laughed so loud and hilariously that the collie crept under the lounge, as if in fear of some more serious explosion.

"And you have been playing the hypocrite with me all the time?" Vox was mad. "If I had known that I wouldn't have sung a note, nor would I have let Downs do it either."

"That's the reason I didn't tell you. You'd have spoiled your own job," said the Doctor, working out of his hysteria. "But, Phil, I'm hungry with preaching and laughing at you. Light up the chafing dish. Put in plenty of red pepper, and when your cockles are warmed you may read this," tossing him a note.

Vox read:

Dear Doctor: When I heard Downs sing the other night I felt sure that your judgment of him was correct, and that he is a new man. Mrs. Downs has been with him for several days. God bless that little woman! She has borne up bravely during her trial, never lost heart, and now she has her reward. Of course, Downs has his old place with us. I want to know that Mr. Vox. Bring him around to dine with us Wednesday night. If my wife can persuade them, we will have Mr. and Mrs. Downs too.

Yours faithfully, JOHN SILVER.

While Vox was reading the note Caleb came out from under the lounge, and, putting his head in the singer's lap, gazed as worshipfully into his face as he had ever gazed into that of his master.

A DISTINGUISHED BOSTON PASTORATE.

BY THE EDITOR.

Next Monday Mount Vernon Church will celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the settlement of its pastor, Rev. Samuel E. Herrick, D. D. Many things have combined to make this a remarkable pastorate. The church was organized in 1842, in order that it might fulfill an evangelistic mission to Boston under the leadership of one of the most eloquent and spiritual preachers of his time. As an evangelist Dr. E. N. Kirk had gained wide fame when he took charge of this church in its beginning, and during the nearly thirty years before he welcomed Dr. Herrick as his co-pastor his spiritual zeal did not wane. Mount Vernon Church wielded a peculiar influence over the city, and its plain but stately building on Asburton Place was often the scene of wonderful evidences of the presence and power of the Holy Spirit.

Into this communion of souls trained by a man of prayer, of devout faith and strong emotional nature, came Dr. Herrick, April 12, 1871. He was a son of New England and already a familiar figure in Boston. Born on Long Island, a graduate of Amherst College and Princeton Seminary, he had been for seven years the pastor of the Central Church, Chelsea. He knew his ground. The fullest sympathy existed between him and Dr. Kirk. No one could doubt that who saw him tenderly and reverently guide the hesitating steps of the senior pastor into the pulpit, or heard that pastor pray for his younger brother. But the two men were in some respects quite unlike. Dr. Kirk never preached after the installation of his successor. His fervid appeals were followed by the no less eloquent, scholarly utterances of Dr. Herrick, and Mount Vernon Church continued on for many years with large audiences of the same people and others like them.

Dr. Herrick is pre eminently a scholar. He loves books. His ample study is bright with the presence of rare and choice volumes, as well as with those which mainly furnish the minister's workshop. It bears testimony, too, to many intimate literary friendships highly valued by its owner. Oliver Wendell Holmes, Phillips Brooks and other men of like renown have been at home there. While Dr. Herrick is always devoted to the service of his own people, it would not be easy to beguile him from the study to local civic or religious movements. His presence at the Boston Ministers' Meeting or the Congregational Club would be a surprise. His name would not probably be mentioned as an officer of a municipal league. When called on to preach or read papers at State or national denominational assemblies he usually responds, and with distinguished success, but he would not seek such honors, and is not often present at such gatherings unless he has some part in them by appointment. Yet in his own circle few have warmer friends among ministers, and none value these friendships more highly.

Dr. Herrick's scholarship is in sympathy with popular interests. While his success is in his pulpit he is well acquainted with his people and aims effectively to help them to higher Christian living. He addresses directly the intellect and the conscience, but when he has presented to the conscience the reasons for faith and obedience he leaves it to act of itself. He would not lord it over any man's conscience. Its individuality is sacred in his eyes. To enlighten it with a divine message without weakening its authority is his constant aim. Thoughtful hearers are always interested in his sermons, and they are always finished products. Several of them have been published in The Congregationalist, and none better have appeared in our columns. Some years ago a minister who had preached to the common people with rare success till old age compelled him to retire came to Boston to live, and after attending a number of churches he told the writer there was no one of them to which he would sooner take his family than to Mount Vernon. This testimony has often been repeated. Strangers who go there seeking a place of worship and an inspiring gospel sermon will not be disappointed.

Dr. Herrick believes that a minister's influence is usually greatest when it is continuously exerted in one field. Therefore he has refused attractive invitations to many churches, some of them among the largest in this and the Presbyterian denomination. These calls, some twenty in number during the last twenty-five years, have come from Chicago, Syracuse, Brooklyn, New Haven, Hartford and other cities. He has also been offered three college professorships, but, secure in the affections of his people, he has preferred to remain with them rather than undertake new work in a new field. During his ministry he has found time to prepare several courses of lectures, which have attracted much attention outside his own congregation. One of these was on religious movements, of which the Reformation was the center, another on Christian Missions of the Middle Ages and a third was on authors who have been great spiritual forces. This last was published in a volume under the title Some Heretics of Yesterday.

The pastor of Mount Vernon Church is now in the prime of his years and his intellectual vigor. The new edifice in which he preaches, located on Beacon Street near the new park and the new bridge to Cambridge, is in the midst of a growing community and easily accessible from every direction. A great multitude of friends wish him and his church a united career of still greater prosperity in coming years. While it is to serve the larger public interest in this notable anniversary that we place his portrait on our cover page this week—entirely without his knowledge—the strong ties of a friendship of many years between him and the editors of this paper make it an added pleasure to place this picture in our gallery of portraits of the eminent preachers of this generation.

The Home

IMMORTALITY.

BY MARY BINGHAM WILSON.

As April sun and April showers
Bring slow to life the budding flowers,
My heart is filled with longing pain
For those I shall not see again.
They watched with me the coming spring,
They loved each little growing thing,
And can it be that never more
My life shall know them, as before?
That all my joy—too sweet to last—
Is buried with them in the past?

I know my life has lost its spring,
The charm no other touch can bring,
Yet in my heart a healing balm
Brings to the troubled spirit calm.
My loss is but for earthly years,
And love can live beyond the tears;
Although they cannot hear my call
My Father's love is over all;
And in each swelling bud, I see
The sign of immortality.

The interest with which women are entering into the movement for a better observance of Sunday shows that the time is ripe for concerted action and that God's hand is in it. The initial step towards reform was taken some months ago by organizing the Woman's National Sabbath Alliance, which has headquarters at 203 Broadway, New York. In Washington, where social customs encroach upon the Lord's Day more seriously than anywhere else in America, the movement is heartily endorsed by Mrs. Cleveland, by the wives of the Cabinet officers and others holding high social positions. Miss Morton, sister of the Secretary of Agriculture, is president of the Washington branch. But in order to insure success something more is needed than the noble example of a few prominent individuals. They ought to be fortified by the influence and aid of women's clubs, for experience proves that these organizations rarely fail to carry through any reformatory measures which they undertake. Here is a grand opportunity to show that the constituency of these clubs, as a rule, is allied to the forces that make for a better social life.

One of the greatest difficulties encountered by the advocates of Lord's Day reform is the way in which their teachings are neutralized by the habits of professing Christians. A case in point occurred not long ago in a suburban church. The teacher of a class of boys in Sunday school being absent inquiry was made if he were ill. To which his son replied that his father went to the theater the night before and reached home so late that he was still resting in bed. The pupils of this man were bright lads about twelve years of age. Could any one convince them, in the light of their teacher's conduct, that he cared as much for their spiritual welfare as for a play? This is by no means an isolated case but the mention of it may emphasize the truth that any thorough scheme of Sunday observance must include the manner of spending Saturday evening. Without returning to the strictness of early New England days we may yet wisely cut off entertainments and indulgences that lay heavy mortgages upon the Lord's Day.

Rummaging over old newspaper files lately we came across some of Timothy Titcomb's letters to young women, written nearly forty years ago, which afford an amusing contrast to the sentiments held by modern young women concerning their place in the world and their relations to men. Among other propositions gravely laid down by Dr. Holland are these: God meant that you should be dependent upon men. It is entirely natural for you to rely upon them for much that you have. You are never to quarrel with this arrangement. You will only make yourself unhappy by it, because, by quarreling with God's plans, you essentially unsex yourself, and become a discord. Therefore recognize your dependence gladly and gracefully. If you lead a worthy, womanly life, it will be a home life, free from great excitements. The current of your thoughts will flow in retired channels. He then argues that it is easier for women than for men to enter into the Christian life, "because a feeling of dependence is native in the female heart," and adds with utmost seriousness, "I suppose it is very rare that those who are denominated strong-minded women become religious." All of which reminds us of the man who stoutly maintained the impossibility of steam being used as a motive power for vessels at the very time when the first steamer was gracefully gliding up the Hudson. And what a number of "discords" who have become "unsexed" there are nowadays in the splendid missionary and temperance organizations of women!

IN DEFENSE OF THE SPINSTERS.

BY ONE OF THEM.

Women with "a career," "the new woman," and especially unmarried women, have long received more than their share of open and covert criticism. This is particularly hard to bear after we have reached that stage of life and single blessedness when we are supposed to console ourselves with cats, philanthropy and religious observances. Some of the critics are marking out new paths for women, if we may interpret their words literally. One minister in his comments on the Sabbath school lessons not long ago said: "The highest place to which a woman can attain is that of wife and mother." Attainment signifies something reached by effort on the part of the individual. Therefore we must understand this reverend gentleman to imply that women who do not attain to this position have been lacking in proper energy. Or perhaps he means to encourage a change of established customs in regard to matrimonial proposals. Inasmuch as in certain sections of this land there are hundreds, even thousands, more women than men it would seem kinder to direct such attacks toward the rapidly increasing class of men who, through pride or selfishness, prefer a luxurious bachelor existence to family life.

Another clergyman has given valuable advice to women and especially mothers, but gives little attention to the fathers. Surely there are more men than women who do not live up to the ideal home life, while the women most alive to the need of education and the ballot are true to the demands of the home. A would-be witty poem on the new woman dwells upon the dreadful fact that while this abnormal creature was doing something else her husband was putting the twins in bed. There seems to be no good reason why the father should not sometimes put the children to bed and in some households this custom has long prevailed with good effect. This state of affairs certainly is preferable to that in the household where the small boy referred to his father as "that man who stays here Sundays." Much as good mothers are needed by the coming generations there is greater danger that they will lack good fathers. Perhaps the men of this generation would have higher standards of political honor if they had had better fathers or if the mothers, to whom their training was intrusted, had had a practical knowledge of methods of civic government.

Mother love is not wholly an attribute of actual motherhood, but in some degree belongs to every woman and if she has no children she must find some outlet for it. It takes at least two women to bring up every family of children, and whether the second be nurserymaid, sister, aunt, grandmother, teacher or stepmother she often has as much power over the child's after life as the real mother. Many a child has been more influenced for good by the teacher at school than by the mother at home. The giving of life by birth is not all. The mother may devote herself so closely to the home that she cannot give the fresh life which her children need each day. Therefore her horizon must be enlarged by outside interests. Some needless details in the home may be neglected, but the children will be broader, truer men and women.

It is natural and right that mothers of young children should give those years to home life, but this period is but a fraction of a woman's life. The average woman of this age must be able to use her voice to some extent in public. Perhaps if more women practiced public speaking they would weigh the words spoken in private more carefully. The conspicuousness which some dread is only self-consciousness, one form of selfishness. The woman who is filled with big thoughts forgets herself and her own aims. This is apparent in the gatherings of our missionary societies. The college woman whose mind and voice have been trained to think and speak clearly will not neglect her home, and after the children have gone from the home nest she has some of the best years of her life left for philanthropic work.

The women who do not marry often have the highest ideals of what true homes should be and are far from undervaluing the privileges of motherhood, but they can justly claim that equally important offices have been given to them. What would become of the missionary societies, the Sabbath school, the prayer meetings and the social life of our churches if there were no unmarried women? Who would take charge of the public schools, boarding schools, homes for orphans and charitable institutions of all sorts if every woman had a home of her own? If every daughter married, who would be left to bring up the younger brothers and sisters and take care of the old parents? Margaret Sidney's story of The Pettibone Name has had many prototypes in real life where the heroine has failed to find a hero.

Women like Susan B. Anthony, Clara Barton, Frances Willard, Louisa M. Alcott have wiped away the reproach which once rested upon the title of "old maid." Such women, and the rank and file who are earning a living for themselves and others, come in actual contact with evils that need remedy and thus realize the value of the ballot as women in less active life cannot appreciate. Women of this stamp do not shrink from responsibility laid upon them through fear of publicity and do not need to chose "between womanliness as a profession and the business of politics."

The American woman of this generation was born in the midst of a national struggle and is intensely patriotic. What wonder that she is not satisfied to confine her efforts to the house in which she lives, but reaches out toward the work which should be done in the town and country and, therefore, desires a share in municipal and national housekeeping? School laws, sanitary measures and temperance legislation are vitally connected with the home life. The chief trouble with our private and public life in the present era is that the one domain has been given over entirely to women and the other wholly to men when the united efforts of both are needed in the home and in the guidance of the town and state. Men have been so engrossed in business that they have come to look upon their homes only as places of recreation, and fail to realize that they have further responsibility beside giving food and shelter.

Thus the poor women have spent all their energies in the home and have quite overdone the housekeeping until its details are more cumbersome than in any other branch of business. The whole system is one-sided. Men build the houses and leave the women to cover up or overcome as they may obstacles which need never have arisen had the two planned and worked together. But the twentieth century will see these questions settled by their united effort, whether in the home or in the government of the state.

A BIT OF COLOR.

BY KATE UPSON CLARK.

Many must have been struck by the prevalence in these days of neutral tints in the furnishing of parlors and reception-rooms. In mansions containing innumerable apartments, there are, naturally, varieties of color, but in the ordinary parlors of the well-to-do citizen there is apt to be a symphony of drabs and browns, or hushed and funereal reds and greens, which is depressing to the visitor and must be more or less so to the family itself. The Congregationalist has given its readers much good advice in regard to schemes of furnishing when a room is to be entirely made over, but most of us cannot tear to pieces our original designs and replace our worn articles with new ones, even though we should like to. One thing we can do, however. We can place a bit of color here or there which will quite alter the impression produced by the whole. One lady found that a pair of bright brass candlesticks, containing gold and cherry-colored candles, very noticeably cheered an entire apartment. Another used a large blue jar with similar effect.

In a certain home a gayly embroidered screen relieves the gloom of a commonplace group of dull brown chairs. One parlor, "done" in shades of brown, has in one corner a table over which is thrown a pale green silk cover. On it stand a shaded green and white vase, a photograph in a dark green morocco frame, a low pile of delicately bound books, and a grass-green vine, growing out of a darker green jardinière, spreads its tendrils here and there. It is a symphony in greens which refreshes every eye that looks upon it.

As the sense of smell is affected by odors, and the sensitive ear by discords and harmonies in music, so the eye is influenced by color. We all love color. Because barbarians use it too liberally and crudely, the idea seems to have arisen that repression of all decided hues and a timid adherence to characterless tints of slate and brown indicate the hight of refinement. On the contrary, it snows a lack of appreciation which is almost as painful as downright philistinism—indeed, perhaps that term best describes it. A sunshiny yellow vase, a rose-pink jar, a lavender picture frame, fitted in with taste and care may most agreeably change the air of a now dull and depressing room.

THE SCIENCE OF FOOD.

IV. SELECTION AND DIETARIES.

BY M. V. SHALER.

It is frequently claimed that much thought given to the study of food and what we shall eat tends to fastidiousness and the loss of that valuable safeguard of human nature which enables us to resist evil effects by being unconscious of their presence. When General Grant said: "What you are not afraid of won't hurt you," he referred to whizzing bullets, and the remark will not apply to a diet which is opposed to every physiological demand. If knowledge makes us less wise then, indeed, are we helpless.

There is not yet an established solution to the problem of the quantity and quality of food as required by various persons and different ages. The distinct individuality of each person respecting power to digest and assimilate makes it impossible to set up one standard of dietaries for all persons, but knowledge is sufficiently definite to lay down certain principles, the rest to be learned by personal experience and a modicum of common sense. Professor Atwater says: "We can never expect to reduce this matter of diet to an exact science. Nutrition of man is not a mere matter of pounds of protein and units of energy. Even when the complex laws of our physical being are learned there will still remain factors outside the domain of chemistry and physiology, factors for which no physical measure is now or ever can be possible."

Our alternative, then, is to observe the effects of food upon our physical and mental capacity to perform work, and by acquaintance with the constituents of food and their uses in the body, and the facility with which we digest the different foods, regulate the selection, suiting it to our own individual requirements in order that the body may come up to its best capacity for work. We should consider ourselves much as the mechanical engineer considers the size and power of his engine when he selects his building material. A powerful engine must be built of heavier steel than one which is destined for lighter work, and a man doing manual labor in the open air requires heartier and more food than one whose life is spent within doors and is a sedentary one. A man requires more food than a woman, and a woman than a small child. Aged people require less than those younger. Growing children require easily digestible diet.

The majority of people in good health are able to digest and assimilate the common articles of food, but do not know the proper proportion, that is, whether there is a balance of protein and fat with starchy foods. It is affirmed by students of hygiene that brain workers and people of sedentary habits use an excess of fat, starch and sugar. Again people of the same class require different proportions, some easily digesting a food that would overtax the stomachs others. Children are vastly different in their demands, proving beyond cavil the importance of the spread of information and the need of investigation in this line.

Germany leads in the experimental field respecting the problem of the amount of protein an average laboring man needs to supply the waste of muscle, tendon and other nitrogenous tissue, the quantity of fat and carbohydrates to keep up heat and energy, and thereby make of him a perfectly working machine. The dietary standard of Professor Voit of Munich is taken most often as a criterion from which to make our own deductions. The American standard dietary is somewhat larger than the foreign, because the American plane of living and labor is much higher. The foreigner coming here does more work than he does at home. He earns more money, lives better, and his food is of greater variety with more protein and fat in it. Professor Atwater would put the standard for a laboring man at moderate work at 0.30 pounds protein, 0.21 pounds fat and 0.88 pounds carbohydrates. But, while a standard must be fixed from which to figure, it is not supposed that all dietaries will be arranged exactly to suit these figures, for individuality and occupation regulate quantity as well as quality. "A pound of sirloin beef of medium fatness will furnish on an average 0.15 pounds of protein in the lean and 0.16 pounds of fat. A pound of wheat flour of average quality will contain about 0.11 pounds of protein in the form of gluten, 0.01 pounds of fat, which, if extracted from the flour, would be an oily substance, and 0.76 pounds of carbohydrates, of which nearly all will be starch." "A pound of cheese furnishes on the average 0.28 pounds of protein, while a pound of milk has 0.04 and potatoes 0.02." Milk, though it is the most perfect food, is low in protein and fuel value, because it is seven-eights water. The digestibility of different foods affects their value because there is so much difference in their composition, the animal food being more easily digested than vegetable foods. The protein of meat is practically all digested by healthy people, while the same persons might digest only a part of the nutrients of wheat bread, and not all of potatoes or other vegetables.

RELIGIOUS TRAINING.

More and more there is growing up a disposition among parents to permit all matters of religious observance to be with their offspring mere matters of choice or preference. Your child must learn French or German and drawing; but he shall learn his catechism and his Bible lesson and a reverent observance of God's holy day if he chooses, and not otherwise. A more dismal and irrational folly it is not easy to conceive of. I do not say that there may not have been folly in another and in an opposite direction. But surely we can correct the excess without straightway flying to an opposite and worse one. And so I plead with you who are parents to train your children to ways of reverent familiarity with God's word, God's house and God's day.—Bishop H. C. Potter.

Closet and Altar

Blessed be God, who has made earth and heaven one in the heart's unquenchable thirst for him!

Lord, test us by trial if thou wilt, but O! stand at our side to aid when it is needful to test us by success. At least in hours of aching heart and empty hands we know our refuge and are glad to seek its safe and blessed shadow; but when all goes according to our wish and the distractions of pleasure join the lulling song of flattery to put our sense of the need of God to sleep, O! then forsake us not, for that is deadly peril from which thou alone canst bring deliverance.

There is a great deal of that is shadowy and dubious about the communion that many have with God. They have no such consciousness of having met and conversed with God as they have of their communications with men. They know that God is revealed in his word as gracious and merciful toward the race of man, but they have not considered that it is the province of faith to single out the believer and bring him by himself into the presence of his Maker. He is to enter into peculiar and well-understood relations to God. God is his God, he is the child of God, and there must be a conscious acquaintance and intimacy quite distinct from the general goodness of God to mankind. We must resolve to be satisfied with nothing less than the bright shining of the divine presence upon our individual soul.—George Bowen.

What wondrous grace! Who knows its full extent!
A creature, dust and ashes, speaks with God;
Tells all his woes, enumerates his wants,
Yea, pleads with Deity and gains relief.
'Tis prayer, yes, 'tis effectual, fervent prayer
Puts dignity on worms, proves life divine,
Makes demons tremble, breaks the darkest cloud,
And, with a princely power, prevails with God.
And shall this privilege become a task?
My God forbid! Pour out thy Spirit's grace.
Draw me by love and teach me how to pray.
Yea, let thy holy unction from above
Beget, extend, maintain my intercourse
With Father, Son and Spirit, Israel's God,
Until petitions are exchanged for praise.
—Irons.

Blessed Father we seek thy face. Nothing less will satisfy our heart's desire. Show thyself to our inmost thoughts and give us glimpses of thy beauty when our eyes are wearied by this world's mocking fascinations. A sight of thee will be more than heaven to our souls. Thy presence will turn our night into day; thy voice will reduce to harmony the discords of a life that is full of trouble. We wait for thee. Our love watches with joyful eagerness for every sign of thy drawing nigh; our heart is as a prepared guest chamber waiting thine arrival. Do thou keep our souls in the assurance of thy presence and care and infinite mercy; so shall we escape all the vain disquietudes of life. Give unto us, we humbly pray thee, the right spirit, the holy temper, the serene and contented disposition, a childlike longing after God; thus shall all prayer be answered in one sweet benediction. Amen.

SCIENTIFIC JOTTINGS.

Readers of our series of articles in the Science of Food will be interested in watching the results of a series of experiments recently conducted in Middletown, Ct., by Professors Atwater, Rosa and Wood under the direction of the United States Government. For six days a student was confined in an air-tight room, fresh air and food being conveyed through an air-tight tube. All food and waste were weighed, the object being to gain an accurate knowledge of the kinds of food that make bone, flesh and blood.

Another invention of modern science in the interest of the agriculturist is the hospital for insects, under charge of Prof. Frank H. Snow of the University of Kansas. In this case the object is not to cure disease but to spread it. Insects damaging to crops are artificially inoculated with disease and then shipped to farmers, who scatter them abroad in their fields, thus spreading a plague which effectually disposes of the pests. Last season's consignments of sick insects were forwarded to 3,000 farmers in Kansas alone.

The new Yerkes telescope for the Chicago University stands supreme among gigantic astronomical instruments, its magnifying power ranging from about 200 to 4,000. This highest power will bring the moon optically to within just about sixty miles from the observer's eye. The forty-inch lens was made by the sole survivor of the famous firm of Alvan Clark & Sons of Cambridge, which sent out the thirty-inch objective of the great instrument at Pulkowa, and the still larger thirty-six inch lens of the Lick Observatory. The glass from which the lenses were made, however, is of foreign manufacture.

The announcement that the American School of Classical Studies at Athens has received permission to begin excavations upon the site of ancient Corinth calls attention to the valuable service which has already been done in Argos. The remains of both temples of Hera, of long porches and colonnades, as well as many buildings have been successfully unearthed, making a really imposing sight when seen from above, while hundreds of baskets of prehistoric pottery fragments have been transported to Athens. With the French and Germans the object is excavation, but with the American School it is simply archæology as the handmaid of philology and general culture.

The most interesting question about the North Pole is whether human beings are to be found in its vicinity. That it is not wholly improbable may be inferred from the fact that at north latitude 68° is situated the town of Werkojausk in Siberia. Whatever the uncertainty regarding human life, however, it is an undisputed fact that the unexplored polar region is inhabited by various animals. The rosy gull, two species of sandpiper, as well as one variety of ducks are known to breed there. Moreover, there is good reason for believing that fish abound in the open Polar Sea and a probability of a flora as extensive as is found in Spitzbergen—mosses and lichens with even a few flowering plants, such as the yellow Arctic poppy.

Enough has already been demonstrated to make it clear that Professor Röntgen's discovery is applicable to many things besides the human body. For instance, engineers may inspect metals and other materials, thus increasing the safety of iron bridges and similar constructions. The strength of a gun may be known with accuracy by the "shadowgraph" and armor plates may be tested by the X rays. These are often spoiled by firing at them for a test, which is rather expensive, considering that each costs the Government $10,000. Among the latest experiments on the human body is an examination of Emperor William's withered arm and eminent Berlin surgeons claim that, by a slight operation, he may recover nearly the full use of his hand.

A hospital for sick plants has been established in Washington with the purpose of studying diseases which attack growing things in field and garden. Curiously enough, the plants when brought into the great glass house are perfectly healthy, but they are made ill by inoculating them artificially. This spring the Government officials have been engaged in studying the strange complaint which has attacked the Easter lily, and one ward of the hospital has been devoted to these beautiful plants. Experts have also been trying to discover the extraordinary disease which fastens itself upon Sea Island cotton, killing it in a few hours. In the new vegetable hospital there is also a surgical ward where unhealthy twigs or branches are amputated.

THE WALK TOWARD EMMAUS.

Walk with us, Jesus, when the day is spent;
The robin's voice is full of tenderness,
And all the air is silent with excess
Of sweet devotion, peace and calm content.
Ope thou our hearts that we may see aright
The scripture of the world, the burning page
That shines upon our eyes from every age,
A warning fire to sin, a tender light,
With vistas of the great immortal throng.
Ask us, O Jesus, if we understand,
The wondrous voices of the sea and land,
As thou did'st them who read the prophet's song,
And knew him not their blessed risen Lord.
Read thou with us thy Father's hidden word!
—Martha Perry Lowe.

A TRUE STORY OF A STORK.

A writer in Our Animal Friends relates a curious incident about a stork which made its nest upon the roof of a house in northern Germany, and, having been petted by the children, became very tame and companionable:

At the first signs of approaching cold weather the stork prepared to flit to warmer climes. The children were sad at the thought of losing their pet, but their parents consoled them with the assurance that the bird would surely return the next spring. The children, still uneasy at the idea of the stork not being cared for during the long winter, consulted together and evolved a brilliant idea, which they immediately proceeded to put into execution. They wrote a little note in their best German script, stating that the stork was very dear to them and begging the good people in whose country it might spend the winter to be kind to their pet and send it back to them in the spring.

They sealed the note, fastened it to a ribbon, tied it round the bird's neck and tucked it under its wing. The next day they sadly watched the stork wing its way toward milder skies. The snow and ice came; Christmastime brought the children gifts and fresh amusements, but their summer pet was not forgotten. When the spring came round again their little feet used to climb to the roof day by day, looking and longing for the stork's return; and behold, one fine morning there it was, tame and gentle as ever.

Great was the children's delight, but what was their surprise to discover round its neck and under its wing another bright band with a note attached, addressed to "the children who wrote the letter the stork brought." The ribbon was quickly untied and the missive opened. It was from a missionary in Africa, stating that he had read the children's note and had cared for the stork, and thought that young people whose good hearts had prompted them to provide for the comfort of a bird through the winter would be willing to help clothe and feed the destitute boys and girls of his mission. A full name and address followed. The German children were full of sympathy, and the missionary's note won a golden answer from the family. Other letters came and went by post between them until by and by the children learned to know the missionary and his little black waifs almost as well as they knew the beloved stork that had proved so trusty a messenger.

Tangles.

[For the leisure hour recreation of old and young. Any reader who can contribute odd and curious enigmas, etc., of a novel and interesting kind is invited to do so, addressing the Puzzle Editor of The Congregationalist.]

33. ANAGRAMS.

A poet retired from the busy throng,
And summoned the figures that flit through song.
"O, come, little fairies, come to my aid,
I would write a deathless poem," he said.
From the realm of thought came a joyous band,
And awaited the poet's swift command.
"I SMILE on the bard," the first one cried,
"And always stand by the orator's side."
"As this," said another, "is no PRIM AGE,
I flash my wit on the author's page."
"Give me MORE PATH," laughed the next, "and I Will bring thee flowers that can never die."
"And fame," said the fourth, "shall come to thee;
SO A PROPHET, O poet, I fain would be."
"O, singer, with me sound A CLIMAX NOTE,
Like the song that comes from a skylark's throat."
"Tho' thy theme," said one, "IS THE SAINT in rest, Thou too must tell of the soul unblest."
"MY TONE, MY help I will give to thee,
For I hold high place in poetry."
"IF PROSE I CONTAIN, yet in me ye'll find Poetic gems that enrich the mind."
"Choose well," said the last; "where I REALLY GO
Like tracks of light my footprints glow."
The poet wrote, and sweet is the song;
And all through the poem the bright forms throng;
And the precious thoughts, in their setting sublime,
Shall be read by men till the close of time.

E. E. C.

34. A LONGFELLOW PUZZLE.

Longfellow led a quiet life, and one which had sad memories, yet among all my books I find none of the poets with a serener spirit. There seemed to be always a gleam of sunshine to lighten up even the rainy day, placid as the light of stars, and refreshing as rain in summer. He loved children, flowers, the sound of the sea, with its seaweed drifting on the wave, the murmur of the brook, the varying lights and shades of an April day, fitful as the moods of maidenhood, the gleams of light from the lighthouse, through the open window, as he sits before the fire of driftwood when the day is done, building castles in Spain. To him the rustle of dry leaves in autumn, the tracery of the bare boughs of the hemlock tree against the gray sky of approaching twilight, in the woods of winter, on an afternoon in February, the falling of snowflakes, the quiet gleam of the evening star or the harvest moon, or even the somber pictures of night, were as beautiful as the brighter pictures of a sunrise on the hills, the gay blooms of spring, or a day of sunshine.

Well, when old age came at last, and he, who in the spirit of poetry had learned the secret of the sea, heard the footsteps of angels and saw the celestial Pilot coming to guide him home, he might well feel that he had drained the goblet of life, and that he need not mourn over something left undone. And we who witnessed the burial of the poet knew that he did not lie in a nameless grave; so that, when at the children's hour we tell to a child, while the old clock on the stairs ticks in the dusk, the story of this good man now singing the song of the Silent Land, we feel our sorrow mingled with resignation.

DOROTHEA.

(Hidden in the above paragraphs are certain titles of poems by Longfellow. To the reader who forwards the best list of these hidden titles before April 20 a copy of Longfellow's Poetical Works, in a neat, single volume edition, will be presented. In case of a tie, neatness and care in arrangement of list will count.)

35. CHARADE.

PHONETIC.

The FIRST is last in twenty-six,
But pardon grant, though "in a fix"
I place you; since, as learned in youth,
"First shall be last" is Bible truth.

The LAST is but a babbling brook,
O'er which the shepherd, with his crook,
Guides well his charge, lest ill betide
Ere it has reached the farther side.

The WHOLE, upon the Midland Sea,
Rides here and there unharmed and free;
For friendly gales, though given to sport,
Yet waft it safely into port.

NILLOR.

ANSWERS.

27. Oconomowoc.

28. Naught (0).

29. The agent owed the town $81.60—that is, $31.37 in liquor on hand and $50.23 in cash. Our correspondent gives a complete statement in these three accounts:

| | | | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| CASH. | | | LIQUOR. | | | TOWN. | |
| $59.91 | Paid for liquor, | $32.17 | | $102.97 | Sales during the year, | $32.17 | Cash at beginning, |
| 25.00 | Agent's salary, | 102.97 | | 31.37 | On hand at close of year, | 57.54 | Liquor at beginning, |
| 50.23 | Balance on hand, | | | | | 16.89 | Profit on liquor, |
| $135.14 | | $135.14 | | $134.34 | | $106.60 | |
| | | | Beginning of year, | $57.54 | | $25.00 | Agent's salary, |
| | | $50.23 | Sales of liquor, | 59.91 | | 81.60 | Balance to credit of town, |
| | Balance on hand, | | Bought during year, | 16.89 | | | |
| | | | Profit credited town, | | | | |
| | | $134.34 | | $134.34 | | $106.60 | |
| | | | On hand at close of year, | $31.37 | | | Town's credit, |
| | | | | | | | $81.60 |

30. Xebec. (Z beck.)

31. 1. Frances E. Willard. 2. Harriet Beecher Stowe. 3. Charles Dickens. 4. Mark Twain. 5. Martin Luther. 6. W. H. Prescott. 7. R. W. Emerson. 8. Edmund C. Stedman. 9. Bill Nye. 10. Charlotte Brontë. 11. Daniel Webster. 12. C. H Parkhurst. 13. P. T. Barnum. 14. Henry W. Longfellow. 15. Wilkie Collins.

32. Nabor, Rohan.

More than forty readers correctly solved the "Nations" and "Cities" (Nos. 25 and 26), making it necessary to award the prize by neatness and arrangement of the answers. On careful comparison it is considered that the list of F. H. Loud, Colorado Springs, Col., somewhat excels others in these respects, and he is awarded the prize. These are some of the merits of Mr. Loud's list, which are very nearly equalled by three other competitors. His writing is neat and legible, he correctly addresses the "Puzzle Editor of The Congregationalist," his note concerning the answers is direct and terse, his signature is followed by his address in full and the answers are so arranged just below—on the same page—that they may be read at a glance.

Solutions given to other puzzles of March 12 were: By Edith J. Baker, West Dedham, Mass., 23, 24; Alice L. Moss, Chester, Ct., 23, 24; P. J. Stone, Shelburne, Mass., 23, 24; Marion G. Aldrich, Concord, N. H., 23, 24; Mrs. Frank Warren, Naugatuck, Ct., 23, 24; Mrs. John E. Eddy, Marshfield, Vt., 24; C. E. H., Lowell, Mass., 23, 24; H. H., Sherbrooke, Quebec, 23, 24; Annie R. Peabody, Topsfield, Mass., 23, 24; E. S. Hazeltine, Melrose Highlands, Mass., 23, 24; Nillor, Middlebury Springs, Vt., 23; C. H. Day, Providence, R. I., 24; M. J. H., Wakefield, Mass., 23, 24; E. M. Barry, Boston, Mass., 23, 24; Mrs. Mary E. Otis, Lynn, Mass.

IF NOT, WHY NOT?

You are not a queen, or a princess, or a peeress, and because you cannot do everything you sit still and do nothing. No. But have you not a fireside, and a lady friend or two, and a spare hour on a Saturday or a Sabbath night? And are there not tradesmen lads and shop lads, and lads in offices and thousands of students in the city who have neither mother nor sister nor womankind near them? Consider, could you not make yourself into a mother or a sister to some of those young men? Could you not see through their college sessions safely, say, two or three young ministers, young doctors, young lawyers and such like? If you cannot patrol the streets to take home every soul of those for whom Christ died as much as he died for you, could you not, at the least, lay a plot to keep a little more off the streets some of those who are beginning to take their dark and dangerous walks there? Or, again, could you not be a little more patient and persevering with that ill brought up, ignorant, untidy, impudent scullery girl—yours or your neighbor's? If you discharge her and wash your hands of her, do you never think to what she may betake herself under your windows? Have you no imagination? Have you no heart? Have you no apprehension? Have you no son or nephew?—*Rev. Dr. Alexander Whyte of Edinburgh.

To Cook Before An Audience

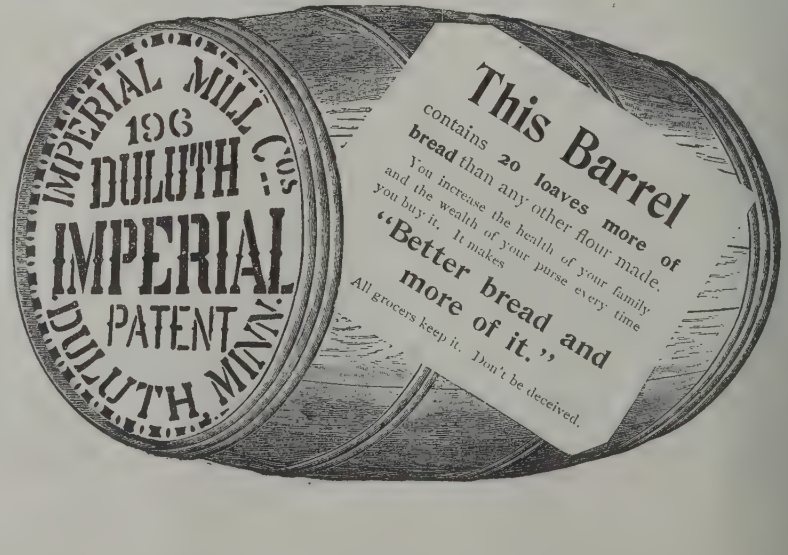
of bright housewives who are noting every step in the operation isn't easy. Besides, the cooking must be perfect.

Teachers of cookery know this and they use only what they can depend on every time.

That's why they all use Cleveland's Baking Powder. It never fails.



IMPERIAL MILL Co's
196
DULUTH
IMPERIAL PATENT
DULUTH, MINN.
This Barrel
contains 20 loaves more of bread than any other flour made.
You increase the health of your family and the wealth of your purse every time you buy it. It makes "Better bread and more of it."
All grocers keep it. Don't be deceived.

The Conversation Corner.

MY DEAR CORNERERS: There was not room last week for all the notes that might properly have been introduced under the "Flag of our Union" that floated over our columns. One was a kind letter on the varied interests of the Corner, from Mrs. Jessie R., who lives in the "Shenandoah Valley," and who says she was "the daughter of the 34th Regiment of Massachusetts Volunteers." What associations those names bring up! Was not the "34th" encamped, in the winter of 1865, at Camp Holly, near Professor Whitney's "White Oak Station" of the United States Christian Commission, say two or three miles from "Jones's Landing"? Did I not meet at the "Point of Rocks" a member of that regiment from a Worcester County town, who was wounded in his left shoulder? Did not the regiment encamp at "Sutherland's," about ten miles from Petersburg, in the pursuit of Lee? And was it not at Appomattox Court House thirty one years ago today? I have no doubt many a Cornerer's father—or grandfather?—was in that regiment!

Some time last year inquiry was made for a book of war songs. I have now found by far the best collection, called American War Ballads. (Putnams, 2 vols. in one; $1.50.) It is edited by George C. Eggleston and contains all the historic songs of the country, going back to the Revolution and the War of 1812 and including some of the more familiar rebel songs. Here are Paul Revere's Ride, Dr. Dwight's "Columbia, Columbia, to glory arise," the later "Hail Columbia," Key's Star-spangled Banner, Holmes's Old Ironsides, O'Hara's Bivouac of the Dead, the Battle Hymn of the Republic, Marching Along, Barbary Frietchie, Kearsarge and Alabama, Glory Hallelujah, and a hundred others, which we occasionally wish to find quickly. I wish every Cornerer had a copy of the book!

Here is a question of a patriotic character, though relating to another country:

Dear Mr. Martin: . . . Can you tell me what the phrase, "Erin go bragh," so frequently seen on goods of Irish manufacture, means?
LOUISE A.

To Americans the phrase is familiar in connection with Thomas Campbell's famous poem, The Exile of Erin—

> Where once in the fire of his youthful emotion,
> He sang the bold anthem of Erin go bragh.

Although this couplet implies that it was the title of an old Irish melody, I fail to find—I inquired diligently on St. Patrick's Day—any such anthem. I did find the statement that it was probably an ancient war-cry of the Irish patriots. I asked three different natives of Erin, whom I met, and they all replied without hesitation: "Erin go bragh—Ireland forever!" In Campbell's poem the last word rhymes with "draw," which doubtless shows the proper pronunciation.

Speaking of St. Patrick's Day, which was the ninth birthday of our Kitty Clover, I must acknowledge for him the receipt of two little boxes of catnip, one from Amherst, the other from Fitchburg. He is sound asleep now on the rug and I do not like to wake him up to express his thanks, but if his benefactors could have seen his delight as he rolled over and over when the boxes were opened and bits of the contents placed upon the floor, they would be repaid. This catnip reminds me of a letter I have received from a new member, asking advice as to her sick cat.

EASTPORT, ME.

Dear Mr. Martin: I am six years old. I have a doll named Nina and she lost a red silk dress. I have a cat and his name is Dick. He has six toes on his forward feet. Dick has a swelling on his ear. I thought you might tell me what to do for it, for Dick is a very nice cat. Our doctor lanced it twice, but it swelled up again. Mr. Holton is our pastor and he thought I could join the Corner. Can I? EDNA R.

Certainly. I am sorry for Dick, but it would not be proper, according to the code of medical ethics, for me to prescribe for him while you have a competent physician in attendance unless I were in consultation with him. But you might suggest to him a poultice—if cataplasm is too hard a word—of catnip leaves. He might think it well, also, to administer as a tonic an infusion of the same, ter die (just before meals), ad lib.

And here is a patriotic American boy celebrating a national holiday in the heart of a despotic monarchy. You saw his picture on The Congregationalist cover, Feb. 6:

TREBIZOND, TURKEY.

Dear Mr. Martin: We celebrated Washington's Birthday by pulling molasses candy and helping distribute relief money to crowds of Armenians. Last night was the night of the eclipse of the moon and we watched for it and saw it. When the Turks saw it they were frightened. The Muezzin began to call the people to prayer, and a lot of men began to sing, and then they began to fire their guns, pistols, revolvers, etc. They were trying to frighten away the evil spirit which was eating up the moon. They began at 10 o'clock P. M., and kept it up till midnight. The Armenians, thinking it was another massacre, were very much frightened, and several took refuge in our wash-house till morning. Please send me a Corner certificate and one to Ruth. Your loving Cornerer, JULIUS P.

Certificates sent. I am glad if there is anything that will frighten those men. It is better for them to fire the guns at the moon rather than at innocent Christians!

The question was asked March 19 whether the acting governor, taking the place of Governor Greenhalge, was entitled to the name of governor, and the Civil Government Class added another—whether he would have the salary of the governor or the lieutenant governor. (The salaries are, respectively, $8,000 and $2,000.) The last question was answered at once, for on the cars I happened to sit with a gentleman whom I found to be the senior member of the House of Representatives. He said that by law the acting governor would only receive the lieutenant governor's salary, but that the legislature would make a special appropriation for the emergency, and this was afterwards done. The answer to the first question was courteously given by a high authority at the State House: "His Honor, Roger Wolcott, Lieutenant Governor, Acting Governor."

This letter is from a little girl in the West:

Papa says that you have the American flag up as our colors, so I send you a new kind of sweet pea. Plant them and I hope you will have a good many "Americas" to remind you of . . . . ELIZABETH.

With this came a little paper of seeds, labeled "America," said to be "the only real scarlet and white Sweet Pea in existence." I have no garden, but I will give them to a little Corner boy close to me, who is always ready for any work, and we will see how many "America" blossoms he has by July 4.

Mrs Martin

CORNER SCRAP-BOOK.

Anti-Squirrel Convention. It will be held in Spokane, Wn., next month. The object is to devise means for exterminating the ground squirrels, which destroy every year hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of crops. The delegates, however, should learn if harm will not come from banishing the squirrel. The Jamaicans imported the mongoose from India to kill snakes. The mongoose ate up the snakes—also the toads and lizards. But the toads and lizards eat ticks. Now the ticks have become so plentiful that parts of the island are almost uninhabitable. Meantime the mongooses multiply, climb the trees, eat the birds, their young and their eggs. We should like a report from that Spokane convention.

Alligators vs. Mice. A similar result of interfering with nature is seen in Florida. Alligators were so much in demand for the manufacture of alligator-skin bags and purses that they were shot in great numbers and their young captured for Northern travelers who wished to carry home such pets, or to start alligator farms. But as the alligators decreased the mice which they had been accustomed to eat increased, until the farmers who wished to raise some other crops besides alligators became great losers on account of those little rodents and had a law passed to protect the alligators!

How Much Is a Dog Worth? That depends on the dog. At a recent exhibition in Birmingham, Eng., "Lord Hatherton," a St. Bernard dog, two years old, took the first prize and when put up for sale brought £470, that is, over $2,300!

How Much Is a Postage Stamp Worth? That depends on the stamp. At an auction in Boston last month two twelve-penny Canadian stamps were sold for $1,320. It was a curious fact that the stamps were bought by a gentleman from Ontario who had some time ago sold the same specimens to the auction company for $1,500. One of the famous five-cent St. Louis stamps of 1845-46 sold for $251.

How Much Is a Little Boy Worth? The boy was a pet in the family of an Illinois Congressman. One day he told his little daughter that a man had offered him the room full of gold for her baby brother. "If I sell him for that sum," he said, "I can buy you everything in the world you want. Shall I sell him?" He was delighted when she replied, "O no, papa!" And then she added, "Keep him till he's bigger—he'll be worth more then!"

The Importance of One Letter. It was the letter H. The organist in an Exeter (N. H.) church on a recent Sabbath, shortly before the service began, sent the organ boy to ask Hall (the janitor) to go to the vestry. The boy thought he was to ask all to go and accordingly went into the audience and whispered to one and another that they were requested to go to the vestry. One after another they went, to the surprise of the rector, who thought, however, that they wished to speak to the bishop, and told them that he would soon be in. At that point the mistake was discovered—Hall went to the vestry and all went back to the audience!

Another H Story. A still more serious mistake was once caused by that troublesome h. It was in the old days when children carried their dinner to the district school. One boy asked another to carry his pail to the stove in the schoolhouse and heat his dinner. Boy No. 2 obeyed the order—without the h—and when at last he went out and was asked where the dinner was, replied, "I did just what you told me—I eat it!"

L. H. M.

The Sunday School

LESSON FOR APRIL 19. Luke 15: 11-24.

THE LOST FOUND.

BY REV. A. E. DUNNING, D. D.

The essence of the gospel is in this matchless parable. The revelation of God is to his own children. It is the message of the Father and none but his children can understand it. To the wandering and lost this word of Christ comes to bring them to themselves and then back to the family they have dishonored. To the saved the same word comes as a revelation of the love of God and of his measureless mercy to them. The teacher may help his pupils to enter into the spirit of the parable by an analysis of the prodigal's experience. It includes:

1. His ruling purpose. It was to look out for his own pleasure. He wanted his father's property, not his father's presence. He claimed as his right what could be his only by gift, what as a gift was a trust. To him his father's money was "the part of substance that falleth to me."

The true test of character is its attitude toward God. Those who want, not him, but only the portion of substance that may be got from him, are prodigals, though they may not openly have left home. What a father wants of his children is companionship, oneness of interest with himself. To withhold that from our heavenly Father is to wrong him and destroy one's self. The prayerless boy of today will be in the far country tomorrow.

2. His departure from home. He did not stay long with his father after he found that he could be independent. His interest was centered in himself, and he set out to find what would gratify himself.

Whoever does not habitually pray to God and obey him speedily withdraws from him. As he loses sight of God he ceases to appreciate the character which God loves. He loses reverence, abhorrence of wickedness, the courage of gentleness, the true generosity, which is love to men for their good. In rejection of divine authority he sees the spirit of independence. He becomes sensitive to the suspicion of having filial relations with God. Charge him with desires after holiness and he is angry. Charge him with indulgence in sin and he is amused. He is journeying into a far country.

3. His riotous living. He devoted himself to wasting the substance that fell to him. None of it was put out at interest, he simply spent the principal as fast as he could. He sought others for what he could get out of them. They sought him for what they could get out of him. What he spent on them and what they gave him was alike wasted.

The self-seeker is always spending his principal. Not only outward possessions, but youth, intellect, affection, personal attractions are wasted by the prodigal. If he is talented, as he grows sensual he uses his talents to conceal and adorn his passions. He makes art the handmaid of sin. Pencil and brush are laid under tribute to cover the grossness of vice. Music is called in to drape its nakedness. Men and women not bold enough to talk together of the pleasures of drunkenness listen with delight when its joys are sung. Fine names are given to things which are disgraceful. Fashion is enlisted to recommend them. Many have acquired citizenship in the far country who do not wear its dress.

4. His degradation. When he had spent all a mighty famine began. Then society cast him out. His money gone, he was nothing to the company he had chosen. All that was left to him was companionship with hogs, and he could not get enough of their food to satisfy his hunger.

The natural gifts of man are soon wasted by riotous living. Youth passes. Manhood ebbs surely. The prodigal has cast off his father and run through his inheritance to win the friends who have cast him off as soon as they have got what they could out of his substance. But the glory of the gospel is that the prodigal in want is so by his own choice as truly as the prodigal in riotous living. He is befooled by the idea that there is virtue in maintaining independence in vice. How many a prodigal, reared in a Christian home, is a barkeeper to some sot, because he thinks it more independent to be the swineherd of a heathen than to be a child of God.

5. His coming to himself. Loss, poverty, sickness, desertion of friends are often the best things which God can send to a man, especially to a prodigal. They helped this prodigal to discover his own condition. While he was thinking within himself: "What would others say of me if I should go home to my father?" he had not thought to ask: "What are they thinking of me now among these swine?" But when in his wretchedness he remembered the happy condition of the servants in the house where he had once enjoyed the privileges of a son, he confessed to himself the one cause of all his misery: "I have sinned." Here he came to himself.

Many men call God cruel after they have wasted the abundance of gifts they have received from him and find themselves in want. But so long as a man lays the blame of his moral condition on some one else his friends can have no encouragements for him. Blessed is the hour when, coming to himself, he can say, "Father, I have sinned."

6. His coming to his father. He felt his own want; he began to realize his folly in the light of his father's character. He sought no longer to maintain his pride, but only to confess the truth and escape his shame. To be a hired servant in his father's house, with bread enough, was better than to be a hired servant of a heathen hungry for swine's food.

He acted at once. Honest repentance always does. When a sinner sees himself as he is, he prefers any humiliation to his present condition. Clean service, even the most menial, is more welcome to the awakened soul than the highest place in the kingdom of Satan. The prodigal could get nothing in the far country that would make him presentable at home. His gay attire when he was spending his living with harlots was more repulsive to his father than his rags. He was not to become better that he might go to his father, but to go to his father that he might become better. He was going to make a confession, not to claim anything as a right, but to ask only the place of a servant as a favor.

7. His father's love. He had long forgotten that he had a father, but in his father's thought he had never ceased to be a son. This truth cannot be too much emphasized. When the father saw him a great way off he did not say "There goes a ragged wretch whom I will adopt." His heart swelled instantly with the recognition, "That is my own boy." Before the son can utter his confession or ask a servant's place the father's arms are around him, the father's head is on his neck, the father's kiss of forgiveness is pressed on him. The old rags are all removed. The mantle of divine love falls on the repentant soul. The robe of honor, the royal signet ring, the shoes transform him. The old life vanishes and is remembered only to give added heartiness to the welcome home.

This is the heart of God. "Before they call I will answer, and while they are yet speaking I will hear." God in Christ comes to the repentant sinner who has rejected the gifts bought by his blood, rejected them with a spirit of selfishness too mean to be described, and watches still to welcome the first desire of his lost son to return to him.

O God, how our deepest love falls short of comprehending thee! Thou dost forestall our confessions with the kiss of forgiveness. Thou dost meet the shame of sin with royal robes, the tears of penitence with the merriment of a feast of welcome. Thou sayest, "I will be merciful to their iniquities, and their sins will I remember no more." This is the love that passeth knowledge.

Sweet as new mown hay is the linen, washed in the Sunlight way, with

Sunlight Soap

Everywhere—from every user of this soap, come words of highest praise and commendation.

If you have not already done so, try it for yourself. It saves in every direction, time, money, labour and the clothes. One fair trial will convince you.

Lever Bros., Ltd., Hudson & Harrison Sts., N.Y.

Cooking School Authorities RECOMMEND

WHEATLET

RICH IN GLUTEN

AS THE STANDARD

Breakfast Dish.

Wheatlet is never absent from our breakfast table,—that has long been our standard breakfast dish. In making gems, muffins, etc., it is unsurpassed; in fact, Wheatlet is so hearty and affords nourishment so lasting that it seems in a great measure to supply the place of flesh food.

Mrs. HESTER M. POOLE.
Metuchen, N. J. Jan. 28, '95.

Sold in 2-lb. packages by all leading Grocers.

FRANKLIN MILLS CO.,
LOCKPORT, N. Y.

The inventor of the term

Beef Tea

was the great chemist,

Baron Justus von Liebig, who allowed his signature and endorsement to be used only by

Liebig COMPANY'S Extract of Beef

Christian Endeavor

Official Badge, Scarf or Catch Pin. Solid gold, $1.00; silver, 25 cents. . . . . .

Topic Cards Beautiful embossed designs. Send for samples, free. Complete price-list of all supplies sent free.

United Society of Christian Endeavor,
646 Washington St., Boston. 155 La Salle St., Chicago.

PROGRESS OF THE KINGDOM.

OUR OWN WORK.

Spain and the United States. A recent letter om Rev. W. H. Gulick shows how keenly nericans in Spain are made to feel the ained relations between that nation and the ited States. He writes: "Undoubtedly e daily papers keep you well informed as to ny of the passing events, but they can rdly make you understand what it is to be the midst of it. The whole country is ething in excitement. To my mind the nder is that there has not been more vio- nce, that their righteous anger, as they unt it, has not been shown in attacks upon lividual Americans." Fortunately our mis- naries in San Sebastian have not suffered y personal attack, although the local Re- blican paper that in the past has openly aised them and their work has been as rce as its monarchical rival in heaping the st violent abuse on the whole race of Yankees." When, in the most influential y club, it was proposed that a "public man- station" should be made before the resi- nce of the Gulicks, as the principal repre- ntation of American interests, the plan was renuously opposed and finally given up. In gard to the attitude of their Spanish friends r. Gulick writes: "The young women and rls of this school, even to the smallest, nile not a whit behind the most loyal of eir race in patriotism, act like the true la- es they are and we cannot but deeply sym- thize with them in their really trying posi- on as inmates of a house and members of a mily belonging to the people that are now bitterly attacked by all their countrymen. e feel that of all times this is just the time hen the Christian people of the United ates should not withdraw the helping hand r lessen its gifts in aid of those who do love d respect us for our work's sake, and who ish for the continuance of peace and good ill between the two countries."

Impressions of Indian Christians. Miss Child the Woman's Board contributes a delight- l letter to Life and Light, giving her im- ressions of mission work in Ahmednagar in graphic and enthusiastic manner. At a re- ption tendered on her arrival by the Chris- an community, Mr. Hume in an address of elcome gave details of woman's work in at city, and Mr. Modak, a leading lawyer, n of a famous Brahman convert, expressed eep gratitude for what the missionaries have one for his people, while most interesting all, she writes, "was the address of Mrs. Varubai Costa, or Warubai, the Bible woman, I love to think of her—a lovely young lady, ith soft, black eyes, light olive skin and the veetest of smiles. Covered from head to oot with her pure white lugadi, she went into he pulpit and with the ease and graceful dig- ity of the president of the Woman's Board erself welcomed the 'representative of the hristian women of America' in behalf of he Christian women of Ahmednagar. It was n ocular demonstration of what mission ork can do for women delightful to see." iss Child was impressed with the large umbers gathered into the boarding schools, abbath school and Mrs. Bissell's noon Bible lass of women, but she hastens to add: "It is ot only in numbers that the work tells. We ave often heard of the wonderful transfor- ation that a Christian education makes, but elieve me, friends, you can form no adequate lea of it until you have seen it." But she ucceeds in making her readers see it through er eyes, as in a series of pen pictures she races the elevation of the Indian youth from he humble village school to the station oarding schools, and finally to the comfort nd refinement of a Christian home. Another estimony to the value of educational agen- ies in building up the kingdom of God in ndia is Rev. R. A. Hume's statement that of he fifty-two persons whom he received into hurches on profession of faith thirty-four ere pupils in the Girls' School in Ahmedna- gar and thirteen were boys from the Normal School.

THE WORLD AROUND.

Return to the Scene of Chinese Riot. Several American missionaries have returned to Chentu and steps are being taken to re-establish the Canadian Methodist and the American Methodist Episcopal missions. Mr. H. Olin Cady of the latter mission, who, in company with Mr. Vale of the China Inland Mission, entered the city in the early winter, sends a lengthy account of their reception and the present attitude of the city officials to The Chicago Record. The two men were met when ten miles distant, given a sumptuous feast and escorted with honor into Chentu. Mr. Cady succeeded in establishing the claims of his mission for damages through the American Commission and has purchased suitable quarters until new buildings can be erected on the old site. He refers enthusiastically to the work of the American Commission and takes a cheerful view regarding the safety and influence of missionaries in the future which is based on the friendliness and good promises of the present officials. A decidedly less hopeful letter comes from Rev. G. E. Hartwell of the Canadian Methodist Mission, whose remarks about the American Commission are in a satirical vein and who expresses suspicion of the smooth-tongued officials. Of the attitude of the people he says: "Passing along the road or through the streets everything is quiet. The natives evidently understand that the foreigners are here by official consent. That there should be a strong undercurrent of feeling at this juncture is only what might be expected. It will take a little time to disabuse the minds of those who thought us guilty. But the darkest clouds often have a silver lining. Neighbors, friends, teachers, street officials, merchants, unreservedly came to our dwelling as soon as it was known we had arrived. The guest room was a scene of jubilee for two or three days. Walking along the streets where we were best known the people flock out to welcome us."

Catholics Commend Protestant Missionary Enterprise. Much suggestive reading is to be found in the first number of a new Catholic publication, The Missionary, which calls itself "A record of the progress of Christian unity," and is the official organ of the Missionary Union, a society whose avowed object is to disseminate a better knowledge of the teachings of the Catholic Church among non-Catholics. The new periodical is edited by the Paulist Fathers. Its editorial plea for merging all religious sects into one broad Church of Christ is plausible enough until one discovers that this ideal organization is the Catholic Church. The most significant feature of The Missionary, however, is the recognition of the success of Protestant missionary enterprise. In an article entitled An Example to Emulate, attention is called to the vast work being done by the Board of Home Missions of the Presbyterian Church and Catholic activities unfavorably compared with it, as this sentence shows: "If the ordinary machinery of the [Catholic] church were but re-enforced by the missionary energies put forth by this one denomination our spiritual desert places would blossom as a fruitful garden." It is interesting to note, also, that this publication advocates new missionary methods and emphasizes the importance of the increase of missionary literature and its wider distribution.

A Society to Uplift African Slaves. A new plan for crippling and perhaps eventually abolishing the internal slave trade in the Dark Continent is being laid before philanthropists in this country by Heli Chatelaine, the African explorer, missionary and philologist. The fruit of many years of thought and observation on the ground is an organization known as the Phil-African Liberators' League. Its general policy is not to fight the Arabs or the native slave dealers, nor to attack slaveholders or the native institution of slavery where it is still legal, but to take the slaves liberated by the various governments and transform them into hard-working, civilized, law-abiding and Christian citizens of the countries where they reside. Mr. Chatelaine's plan is to secure concessions of land from England, Germany, France, Portugal, or the Congo State for the slave refuges or settlements. This land is to be laid out in lots and assigned to the Africans, whom he proposes to have instructed in farming and industries as well as in the elementary branches of education and in Christian truths. To start such a settlement for the first year, provision being made for 200 men and women, will cost about $10,000; for the second year only about one-fifth of that amount, while in a short time it is thought the colonists will be self-supporting. Mr. Chatelaine declares that his plan is an important one from the missionary standpoint, as the settlements will offer a splendid opportunity for service to laymen who cannot find a place in regular missionary societies.

Y. P. S. C. E.

PRAYER MEETING.

BY REV. ISAAC OGDEN RANKIN.

Topic, April 19-25. What We Should Be Doing to Save the Lost. Luke 15: 1-10.

This is peculiarly a Christian Endeavor topic. We are united in fellowship that we may give, as well as get, that we may help to save, as well as work out our own salvation. The spirit of selfishness in a Christian Endeavor Society is the spirit of decay and death. Whatever others may think, we cannot be satisfied to go to heaven alone.

In trying to save others we are working in partnership with God. We cannot get along without him, but he does not choose to get along without us. "Ye are an epistle (a letter) of Christ, ministered by us, written not with ink, but with the spirit of the living God," writes Paul to the Christian Endeavor Society (that is, the church) in Corinth. How do you suppose the people of that great city knew anything about Christ except as they read him in the lives and knew him in the words of those few church members?

The first thing is to live so near to Christ that our lives will be invitations. Some Christians are like the broken aqueducts which stretch across the Roman Campagna. There is plenty of water in the hills, but it never gets to the thirsty people in the city because the aqueduct is broken. If it were not for other aqueducts which carry in the cooling streams the whole city would be dry. Two or three unfaithful Christians may keep a crowd of sinners from the knowledge of the water of life.

To this unconscious invitation of our daily lives we ought to add the deliberate invitation of our words. If we know the way, we ought to show the way. If we really want any one to go where we are going, we find some way of giving them an invitation. Andrew heard of a good thing, and immediately went off and found Peter to share it with him. We cannot speak to everybody. We cannot go all through the world taking men by the hand and talking to them about Christ, but we can help support our missionary representatives, and surely there are some who are near us whom we may invite if we will only take the pains.

Parallel verses: 1 Cor. 3: 9–15; 2 Cor. 3: 3; John 9: 5. Compare with Matt. 5: 14–16; 1 Thess. 4: 12; John 1: 40–42; Acts 1: 8; Matt. 12: 20.

THE CHURCH PRAYER MEETING.

Topic, April 12–18. Thinking on Religious Truth. Ps. 119: 97–105; Phil. 4: 4–9.

With what aids; at specific times; with personal applications; in solving problems.

(See prayer meeting editorial.)

Literature

BOOK REVIEWS.

MORAL EVOLUTION.

The author of this new contribution to the study of ethics, social and political economy and theology, is George Harris, D. D., Abbot professor of Christian theology in Andover Theological Seminary. Its title is strikingly appropriate. Its author accepts at the outset the doctrine of evolution, which is revolutionizing the scientific and religious thinking of our time. He seeks to find in it the key to interpret the moral and spiritual development of man, the right relations of men to one another and to God. He discusses the ethical theories which at different times have prevailed and states his own theory with a frankness, clearness and force which hold attention and command respect, and which, we think, will win the approval of the great majority of his readers.

These chapters have the appearance of having been wrought into their present shape through the influence of the classroom. They apply the principles which the author advocates to the entire range of ethical problems now being discussed, whether of the individual, the family, society, the state or the church. Professor Harris, we think, has been moved in part to publish this book by the wide proclamation of socialistic and communistic views as characterizing the coming kingdom of God. The distinctive feature of the book is its admirably supported assertion that self-preservation and self-development are essential to human progress toward the divine ideal. The author says, "The religion which is most altruistic, which makes ministration its law, and which teaches that greatness is for service, is the religion which makes equally important the salvation, that is, the perfection, of the individual who, by reason of his self-realization, enters into that kingdom which is the true society." The temptation to quote from these pages is almost irresistible, they are so rich in quotable sentences. Professor Harris's clear, crisp utterances on this subject of self-realization, which he makes central in this volume, are like a clarifying stream of good sense sent out through the quagmires of sentimental altruism.

We do not always find ourselves in entire agreement with Professor Harris. For example, he makes the moral ideal the good and the moral law the right, which is the obligation to attain the good. To our mind the right is itself the end and not a means of attaining the end. To fulfill all righteousness is to exemplify perfect goodness. Nor can we in all points accept Professor Harris's applications of principles to which we give unqualified assent. Yet even where we differ with the author we find ourselves following his lines of argument with no less interest. Professor Harris has made a real and notable advance in the study of ethics and has furnished, we believe, one of the most valuable contributions of recent years on this great subject.

The style of the book enhances the pleasure of reading it. No one need mistake the author's meaning. Short sentences abound. Qualifying clauses are rare, sometimes too rare. Their absence occasionally makes the author appear to be cynical or to relax his dignity unduly. For example, he says: "One who never smiles should be kept in solitary confinement." Yet he has uttered many a cogent argument or keen criticism in a single terse phrase.

If evolution is accepted its application to religious doctrines is a necessity. We believe that it is now coming to be generally accepted by thinking men, but many who accept it do not as yet realize the extent of the changes in stating theological doctrines which must follow the acceptance of evolution. Professor Harris faces the necessity and does not shrink from it. This book may be a step in the evolution of old faiths, but it does not express them all in the old forms. It affirms unhesitatingly the fundamental Christian doctrines of salvation from sin by faith, of redemption through Christ, of regeneration by the Holy Spirit and of immortal destiny determined by character. But when Professor Harris plants himself squarely on belief in evolution he cannot help antagonizing such beliefs as that Adam was created a being of holy character and that his fall plunged the whole race into helpless bondage in sin, that man is morally incapable of becoming righteous and that the righteousness of God's dealings with men cannot be apprehended by human reason. Statements like these appear in the creed of Andover Seminary, which Professor Harris has solemnly affirmed that he believes and which he has publicly promised to teach. Inevitably attention will be directed to the contrasts between what he does teach in this volume and what the creed affirms. We mention a few examples:

The Andover creed says: "I believe . . . that God, of his mere good pleasure, from all eternity elected some to eternal life."

Professor Harris says: "'The mere good pleasure of God' is as mischievous a phrase as theologizing man ever coined to misinterpret God" [p. 207].

The creed says: "I believe . . . that God created man after his own image, in knowledge, righteousness and holiness."

Professor Harris says of man at the beginning: "We should call him a savage. . . . He could not have remained in the primitive, characterless state" [p. 296].

The creed says: "I believe . . . that, being morally incapable of recovering the image of his Creator, which was lost in Adam, every man is justly exposed to eternal damnation."

Professor Harris says: "Man, as sinful in whatever degree, has capability of goodness, which is not destroyed, but which, under appropriate conditions, asserts control" [p. 295].

The creed says, "I believe . . . that by nature every man is personally depraved, destitute of holiness, unlike and opposed to God."

Professor Harris says: "Man has a religious nature, but not on that account a religious character. Before character is established by fixed purpose, the religious nature goes out at times in sweet and pure desires. Not until character has become decidedly irreligious do sinful feelings predominate, and even then better desires often arise. Therefore representations of human nature as absolutely and totally corrupt and depraved were misrepresentations of the facts, and were untrue to the feelings which men actually have."

It would not be fair to pronounce judgment on Professor Harris on these contrasted sentences alone. Whoever would do that ought to read his entire book and comprehend its spirit. He ought also to study the Andover Creed and to know its history. But if this book represents the prevailing convictions of Christian teachers today, it marks more striking changes in methods of expressing theological belief since the Andover Creed was formed than had then taken place since the time of the Reformation. [Houghton, Mifflin & Co. $2.00.]

LITERARY STUDIES.

Lord Tennyson, a Study of His Life and Work, by Arthur Waugh. This is a careful and loving study of the career and writings of a great poet and most interesting personality. The work had been his companion for two years, Mr. Waugh tells us, at the time of Tennyson's death, and was the result of careful study of all the public sources of information in regard to his life and work. While not taking the place of an official biography, therefore, it will supply those who wish to know as much as possible about Tennyson, with much interesting material. The book is full of information and of interesting gossip, which never passes the line of proper reticence, however, and it often very happily illustrates the mood or meaning of a poem. The literary criticisms are usually happy, though sometimes too long drawn out. The illustrations add to the interest of the book, except the portraits, one of which is vague enough, being a photograph from the well-known oil painting by Watts, while the other shows once more the perils of photography and the half-tone process for the living and especially for the dead. Most of us think ourselves fortunate if we can find time and fitting opportunity to read the works of the great poets without a commentary, but for those who are so happy as to have leisure and an enthusiasm for more this book will be a delight. [Macmillan & Co. $2.00.]

The latest volume of the American Men of Letters series is Albert H. Smyth's Bayard Taylor. Mr. Smyth has made a capital book of reference provided with full critical apparatus, and the sketch of the author's life is thoroughly and agreeably done. There is an interesting preliminary essay on Pennsylvania in Literature, in which the best is made of a rather meager case. Taylor's range of activity was so wide as traveler, essayist, critic, newspaper writer, statesman and poet that only the force of a strong and lovable personality gives unity to it. Mr. Smyth deals tenderly with the pathetic element of his hero's unsatisfied poetical ambitions, and makes clear the lesson of a life hampered by too great financial undertakings. With fewer self-imposed burdens Bayard Taylor might have given us a stronger, because less hurried and less diffuse, poetical product. Mr. Smyth's use of English sometimes affronts our taste. Such words as stirp, schediasm and gavelkind seem to us out of place in a book of literary criticism and appreciation, nor can we assent to the appropriateness of "enchant society unto him," or "when his spiritual power was spongy to the imagination and melody of Goethe and Schiller." [Houghton, Mifflin & Co. $1.25.]

Introduction to American Literature by Brander Matthews, professor of literature in Columbia College. This is a model textbook for beginners, clear, not by compression but selection, intelligently illustrated and fully indexed with the addition of a Brief Chronology of American Literature. With this discriminating introduction and these bright and just biographies those boys and girls to whom the history of literature can have any meaning will be led on to read and study for themselves. We heartily commend the book to old and young. [American Book Company. $1.00.]

SCIENCE.

The Elements of Physics, a college textbook, by Edward L. Nichols and William S. Franklin. Vol. I., Mechanics and Heat. This book is an evidence of the great advance in the method and machinery of modern American scientific teaching. Coming from Cornell, where Professor Nichols is the head and Professor Franklin one of the assistants in the elaborately equipped physical laboratory which stands with the great universities of Europe in the number of special students which it trains, it is fully abreast of modern research, and in arrangement, illustration and the mechanical adjuncts of clear print and good paper leaves nothing to be desired. [Macmillan & Co. $1.50.]

Movement, by E. J. Marey of the College of France, is translated by Eric Pritchard, M. A., and belongs to the International Scientific Series. Professor Marey is the best French representative of that school of scientists who have devoted themselves to the photographic study of action by means of instantaneous exposures following each other at infinitesimal differences of time. In this he has utilized and extended the work of Professor Muybridge, which is known to our readers through recent newspaper notice and illustration. The book is a comprehensive summary of the discoveries and observations, and is full of suggestion for the physicist, the artist and the thoughtful general reader. [D. Appleton & Co. $1.75.]

The Story of the Solar System, simply told for general readers by George F. Chambers, F. R. A. S. This is a useful, little, popular, descriptive survey of its subject on the lines of a previous book narrating the story of the stars. It is admirably illustrated and will give in brief space what everybody ought to know about the sun and its companions. [D. Appleton & Co. 40 cents.]

RELIGIOUS.

In David, Shepherd, Psalmist, King, Rev. F. B. Meyer has found a congenial subject for his remarkable gift of suggestive exposition and comment. Accepting the traditional view, which assumes that the Psalms bearing his name in the title were written by David, Mr. Meyer uses them as at once the expression and the record of his life experience. The book is thoroughly enjoyable for devotional reading. [Fleming H. Revell Co. $1.00.]

The Gospel in Isaiah, by Charles S. Robinson, D. D. These sermons are an exposition of the sixth chapter of Isaiah. Dr. Robinson has used his wide knowledge of Scripture, literature and human life to make an interpretation in the prophet's personal life history of the common experience of men and of God's way of leading them. It is a very readable and interesting book, and is prefaced by a striking portrait of the author. [Fleming H. Revell Co. $1.25.]

The qualities of Scripture knowledge and spiritual insight, which made the late Dr. A. J. Gordon so successful as a preacher and pastor, appear in the address on the resurrection, Risen with Christ. It was delivered at Northfield in the last season of Dr. Gordon's presence there, and comes to us in an attractive little volume, which ought to have a wide circulation. [Fleming H. Revell Co. 30 cents.]

Biblical Character Sketches. This is the second edition of a series of brief chapters of Scripture biography by a number of well-known British clergymen: Dean Farrar, the Bishop of Ripon, James Stalker, Thain Davidson, F. B. Meyer, Marcus Dods and others. The interest varies somewhat both with the author and the subject treated, but it is pleasant to see the Bible approached on this side with such a wide range of sympathy and interpretative power. [T. Whittaker. $1.00 ]

Ebenezers, or Records of Prevailing Prayer, written and selected by H. L. Hastings. This is a very interesting and suggestive compilation of recorded answers to the prayer of faith. It is part of a great mass of material, most of it uncollected, which bears testimony to the presence of Christ with his church. [H. L. Hastings. Paper 50 cents; cloth, $1.00 and $1 50.]

STORIES.

The X Jewell, A Scottish Romance of the Days of James VI. In this book the Hon. Frederick Moncreiff has given us a successful and enjoyable historical romance of the times of Scottish anarchy in the youth of James and the later years of Queen Elizabeth of England. The story is full of stirring adventure, and proceeds upon competent acquaintance with the period in which its scene is laid. It is told with a reserve which we are sometimes tempted to wish might have been abandoned in order to give us fuller glimpses both of character and of action, but which is nevertheless an element of real strength. Taking it at its own estimate as a romance it is a capital one with a high poetic quality and will well repay the reader for the time he gives it. [Harper & Brothers. $1.25.]

Irralie's Bushranger, one of the Ivory Series, by E. W. Hornung, is a striking sketch of Australian life in which the heroine has the advantage of being the only girl mentioned and of being able to act without the slightest regard for conventionalities. While driving alone she picks up an exhausted man in the garb of a bushranger, who claims to be the expected new owner of her father's place. She falls in love with him at once, although she cannot help suspecting him of deceit and is hardly surprised when another claimant appears. A series of adventures follows, which end appropriately in her marriage. The whole story is cleverly told, and Irralie captivates the reader as she did her English father-in-law. [Charles Scribner's Sons. 75 cents.]

A bright little story, all the better for its brevity, is Where Kitty Found Her Soul. There is the secret of a life of happiness, and what is better, usefulness, in its few pages. [Fleming H. Revell Co. 30 cents.]

Another Easter story—a fragment the author calls it—is One of the Sweet Old Chapters by Rose Porter. It tells of the meaning of the life of sacrifice and the goodness of God in Christ. [Fleming H. Revell Co. 30 cents.]

MISCELLANEOUS.

In Proportional Representation Prof. John R. Commons of Syracuse University puts his finger on the present trouble in our American life, in the loss of popular confidence in our legislative bodies. His first chapter is devoted to the failure of legislative assemblies, and is followed by a discussion of the present method of choosing their members and the improvement suggested by the American Proportional Representation League, of which he was the founder. This is not a mere system of cumulative voting, but a system which allows a voter to indicate second and third choices to be counted in case his votes are not needed to elect the candidate of his first choice. We cannot describe and illustrate the method here, but commend the book to students of political reform. It is evident that some remedy must be found for the degeneration of our legislative bodies, and the discussion of the matter is timely and helpful. [Thomas Y. Crowell & Co. $1.25.]

The Dictionary of the Targumim, the Talmud Babli and Yerushalmi and the Midrashic Literature, compiled by M. Jastrow, Ph. D., makes progress. We have received Part VIII., containing pages 685–780, beginning with the letter Lamed. [Imported by G. P. Putnam's Sons. $2.00.]

The Youth's Dictionary of Mythology for Boys and Girls is edited with an introduction by Edward S. Ellis. It is a well-printed little book, which is likely to be useful in helping to form the habit of inquiry at an early stage of the child's life. The body of the book is sometimes, however, as loosely put together as the title. For example, any American child on being told that Clytie was changed by Apollo into the heliotrope and (on following the reference according to the suggestion of the text) that she was changed into a sunflower will be likely to lose implicit faith in dictionaries, though the inconsistency is not puzzling to the classically trained mind. [Woodfall Co. 50 cents.]

A group of little books printed in colors in Nuremberg and suitable for springtime come from E. P. Dutton & Co. Bound in white and gold are Te Deum Laudamus [80 cents]; Vesper Songs [80 cents]; The Gate of Paradise [$1.25]; on cardboard in box, Violets [75 cents.]

---

NOTES.

—— Prof. Herman Grimm of Berlin recently received from the emperor the order Pour le Mérite, which was at the same time given to Bismarck.

—— Mr. Gladstone enters the lists for Purcell's Life of Cardinal Manning, which he calls "By far the most extraordinary biography I have ever read."

—— Perhaps the best defense of the extreme application of the Monroe Doctrine which has yet appeared is that by Theodore Roosevelt in the March Bachelor of Arts.

—— Dr. Parker of London does not mean that any one shall think him idle. Perhaps the successes of the Scotch school of writers will not let him rest. His latest venture is a sketch of Northumberland life under the title of Tyne Folk.

—— Bishop Hurst has discovered in Switzerland a manuscript journal of an American, Capt. William Pote of Falmouth, Me., kept by him in his captivity in Canada during the French and Indian War, from May, 1745, to August, 1747, and it is soon to be published in facsimile.

—— In commemoration of the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Horace Mann, on May 4, many school celebrations have been planned. A timely book for anniversary reading will be Horace Mann, the Educator, which Mr. Winship of The Journal of Education has prepared.

—— There seems to be a good prospect of a revival of the lecture system—if we may believe the reports of American and foreign speakers who are to take the platform next autumn. The New York Tribune gives a list which includes Dr. John Watson (Ian Maclaren), Hall Caine, Henry Furniss, the political cartoonist of Punch, Miss Rose Kingsley, Henry van Dyke, Robert E. Pearey, Hamilton W. Mabie and others.

BOOKS OF THE WEEK.

United Society of Christian Endeavor. Boston.

OUR UNIONS. By Amos R. Wells. pp. 122. 35 cents.

SOCIAL TO SAVE. By Amos R. Wells. pp. 155. 35 cents.

PRAYER MEETING METHODS. By Amos R. Wells. pp. 174. 50 cents.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co. Boston.

HOUSE OF THE SEVEN GABLES. By Nathaniel Hawthorne. pp. 378. 60 cents.

GULLIVER'S TRAVELS. By Jonathan Swift. pp. 193. 40 cents.

Ginn & Co. Boston.

THE PLUTUS OF ARISTOPHANES. Edited by Frank W. Nicholson. pp. 123. 90 cents.

Macmillan & Co. New York.

BROTHER AND SISTER, A MEMOIR AND THE LETTERS OF ERNEST AND HENRIETTA RENAN. Translated by Lady Mary Loyd. pp. 323 $2.25.

CLASSES AND MASSES. By W. H. Mallock. pp. 139. $1.25.

CHRISTIANITY AND HISTORY. By Adolf Harnack. Translated by T. B. Saunders. pp. 68. 80 cents.

Frederick A. Stokes & Co. New York.

THE BROOM SQUIRE. By S. Baring Gould. pp. 345. $1 25.

A WOMAN INTERVENES. By Robert Barr. pp. 375. $1 25.

Thomas Whittaker. New York.

HE SUFFERED. MEDITATIONS FOR HOLY WEEK. By Wilfred Monod. Translated by Annie D. Perkins. pp. 118. 60 cents.

Hunt & Eaton. New York.

BEAUTY FOR ASHES. By Rev. W. C. Wilbor, Ph. D. pp. 63. 35 cents.

Fleming H. Revell Co. New York.

BIBLE CHRONOLOGY. By Rev. Smith B. Goodenow. pp. 386. $2.00.

Maynard, Merrill & Co. New York.

IMMENSEE. By Theodor Storm. Edited by H. S. Beresford-Webb. pp. 142. 40 cents.

Cassell Publishing Co. New York.

ROBERT ATTERBURY. By T. H. Brainerd. pp. 284. 50 cents.

S. S. McClure, Ltd. New York.

THE EARLY LIFE OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN. By Ida M. Tarbell, assisted by J. McCan Davis. pp. 240. $1 00.

J. B. Lippincott Co. Philadelphia.

THE FAILURE OF SYBIL FLETCHER. By Adeline Sergeant. pp. 269. $1.00.

Stone & Kimball. Chicago.

THE MASSACRE OF THE INNOCENTS AND OTHER TALES. By Belgian Writers. Translated by Edith W. Rinder. pp. 292. $1 25.

A HOUSE OF CARDS. By Alice S. Wolf. pp. 281. $1.25.

A. C. McClurg & Co. Chicago.

SONGS, CHIEFLY FROM THE GERMAN. By J. L. Spalding. pp. 215. $1.25.

SONGS OF NIGHT AND DAY. By F. W. Gunsaulus. pp. 144. $1 50.

PAPER COVERS.

Cassell Publishing Co. New York.

A DAUGHTER OF THE SOUTH AND SHORTER STORIES. By Mrs. Burton Harrison. pp. 281. 50 cents.

A ROMANCE OF A TRANSPORT. By W. Clark Russell. pp. 404. 50 cents.

Hunt & Eaton. New York.

OLD TESTAMENT HISTORY. By George W. Pease. pp. 38. 10 cents.

United Society of Christian Endeavor. Boston.

WISDOM FROM THE BOOK. By Rev. J. R. Simmons. pp. 83. 25 cents.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co. Boston.

A BUNCH OF HERBS AND OTHER PAPERS. By John Burroughs. pp. 102. 15 cents.

Open Court Publishing Co. Chicago.

THE REDEMPTION OF THE BRAHAM. By Richard Garbe. pp. 82. 25 cents.

AN EXAMINATION OF WEISMANISM. By George John Romanes, F.R.S. pp. 221. 35 cents.

Leach, Shewell & Sanborn. Boston.

THE ADELPHŒ OF TERENCE. Edited by W. L. Cowles. pp. 73.

L. Prang & Co. Boston.

HEAVEN IN EASTER. By Rev. Ernest W. Shurtleff.
EASTER IN HEAVEN. By Rev. E. W. Shurtleff.

G. H. Ellis. Boston.

SERMON ON DEATH. By M. J. Savage.

Rev. James Brand. Oberlin.

MAN AND HIS HELPMATE.

U. S. Geological Survey. Washington.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE AMERICAN FORESTRY ASSOCIATION. Vol. XI.

MAGAZINES.

April. PLEASANT HOURS.—CATHOLIC WORLD.—LIPPINCOTT.—OUR COUNTRY.—THE BOOKMAN.—SCRIBNERS.—ST. NICHOLAS.—THE HOMILETIC REVIEW.—THE TREASURY.—THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY.—THE PREACHER'S MAGAZINE.—THE SILVER CROSS.—KINDERGARTEN NEWS.—THE PULPIT.—INTERNATIONAL JOURNAL OF ETHICS.—THE ART AMATEUR.—THE AMERICAN KITCHEN.—THE JOURNAL OF HYGIENE.—THE SHADOW.—THE CONQUEROR.—THE FORUM.—MCCLURE'S.

News from the Churches

Meetings to Come.

BOSTON MINISTERS' MEETING, Pilgrim Hall, April 13, 10 A. M.

FOREIGN MISSIONARY PRAYER MEETING under the auspices of the Woman's Board of Missions in Pilgrim Hall, Congregational House, every Friday at 11 A. M.

UNION BIBLE CLASS, conducted by Rev. Alfred A. Wright, D. D., Bromfield Street Church, Boston, Saturday, 3 P. M.

HAMPDEN ASSOCIATION, The Chandler, Springfield, April 14, 9.30 A. M.

SUFFOLK WEST ASSOCIATION, Boston, United States Hotel, April 13, 11.30 A. M.

WORCESTER SOUTH CONFERENCE, Grafton, April 22.

CONFERENCE FOR MINISTERS AND CHRISTIAN WORKERS at Chicago during the month of April. Special lectures by Superintendent Torrey, Prof. W. W. White and Dr. W. J. Erdman. All who desire to avail themselves of this special conference and stopping at the Institute at the reduced price for board and room of $5 per week should make application early to Supt. R. A. Torrey, 80 Institute Place, Chicago, Ill.

THE ANNUAL MEETING of the Congregational Sunday School and Publishing Society will be held in Pilgrim Hall, Congregational House, Boston (Monday being a legal holiday), on Tuesday, April 21, at 3 P.M., for the purpose of reporting the proceedings of the society, presenting the accounts, choosing officers, and for the transaction of other business. Also to take action on the following change in Article 7 of the constitution of the society which is recommended by vote of the board of directors. The last clause to be altered to read: "They shall be ex-officio members of each of the standing committees, without vote, except in the committee on publications."

All life members are entitled to vote; also, five delegates duly attested by credentials from every State association, conference, or convention of Congregational churches, and one such delegate from each Congregational church annually contributing to this society.

GEORGE M. BOYNTON, Secretary.

SPRING STATE MEETINGS.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Texas, | Cleburne, | Thursday, April 9. |
| New Mexico, | Albuquerque, | Wednesday, April 15. |
| New Jersey, | Newark, | Tuesday, April 21. |
| Oklahoma, | Kingfisher, | Thursday, April 30. |
| Missouri, | Lamar, | Tuesday, May 5. |
| Kansas, | Lawrence, | Thursday, May 7. |
| Ohio, | Marietta, | Tuesday, May 12. |
| Indiana, | Michigan City, | Tuesday, May 12. |
| Illinois, | Aurora, | Monday, May 18. |
| Iowa, | Davenport, | Tuesday, May 19. |
| Massachusetts, | Fall River, | Tuesday, May 19. |
| Michigan, | Greenville, | Tuesday, May 19. |
| New York, | Canandaigua, | Tuesday, May 19. |
| South Dakota, | Pierre, | Tuesday, May 19. |
| Pennsylvania, | Ridgway, | Tuesday, May 26. |
| Rhode Island, | Westerly, | Tuesday, May 26. |
| Vermont, | Bradford, | Tuesday, June 9. |
| Connecticut Asso., | Hartford, | Tuesday, June 16. |

Benevolent Societies.

THE CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY is represented in Massachusetts by the MASSACHUSETTS HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY, No 9 Congregational House, Rev. Joshua Coit, Secretary; Rev. Edwin B. Palmer, Treasurer.

WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION, Room No. 32, Congregational House. Office hours, 9 to 5. Annual membership, $1.00; life membership, $20.00 Contributions solicited. Miss Annie C. Bridgman, Treasurer.

AMERICAN BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS, Congregational House, No 1 Somerset Street, Boston. Frank H. Wiggin, Assistant Treasurer; Charles E. Swett, Publishing and Purchasing Agent. Office in New York, 121 Bible House; in Chicago, 153 La Salle St.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, Rooms 1 and 2 Congregational House. Miss Ellen Carruth, Treasurer; Miss Abbie B. Child, Home Secretary.

THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION, Bible House, New York. Missions in the United States, evangelistic and educational, at the South and in the West among the Indians and Chinese. Boston office, 21 Congregational House; Chicago office, 153 La Salle Street.; Cleveland office, Y. M. C. A. Building. Donations may be sent to either of the above offices, or to H. W. Hubbard, Treasurer, 108 Bible House, New York City.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY—Church and Parsonage Building. Rev. L. H. Cobb, D. D., Secretary; H. O. Pinneo, Treasurer, 59 Bible House, New York; Rev. George A. Hood, Congregational House, Boston, Field Secretary.

CONGREGATIONAL EDUCATION SOCIETY.—(Including work of former New West Commission.) Aids four hundred students for the ministry, eight home missionary colleges, twenty academies in the West and South; ten free Christian schools in Utah and New Mexico. S. F. Wilkins, Treasurer. Offices, 10 Congregational House, Boston, 151 Washington St., Chicago, Ill. Address, 10 Congregational House, Boston.

CONG. SUNDAY SCHOOL & PUBLISHING SOCIETY.—Contributions used only for missionary work. Rev. George M. Boynton, D. D., Secretary; W. A. Duncan, Ph. D., Field Secretary; E. Lawrence Barnard, Treasurer, Congregational House, Boston.

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF MINISTERIAL AID.—Treasurer, Mr. Arthur G. Stanwood, 701 Sears Building, Boston. Address applications to Rev A. H. Quint, D. D., Congregational Library, 1 Somerset Street, Boston.

MINISTERIAL RELIEF.—In order to afford a little timely aid to aged and disabled home and foreign missionaries and ministers and their families, the committee of the National Council asks from each church one splendid offering for its permanent invested fund. It also invites generous individual gifts. For fuller information see Minutes of National Council, 1892, and Year-Book, 1893, page 62. Secretary, Rev. N. H. Whittlesey, New Haven, Ct.; Treasurer, Rev. S. B. Forbes, Hartford, Ct. Form of a bequest: I bequeath to the "Trustees of the National Council of the Congregational Churches of the United States" (a body corporate chartered under the laws of the State of Connecticut) [here insert the bequest], to be used for the purpose of Ministerial Relief, as provided in the resolution of the National Council of the Congregational Churches of the United States at its session held in Chicago in October, 1886.

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF PASTORAL SUPPLY, established by the Massachusetts General Association, offers its services to churches desiring pastors or pulpit supplies. Careful attention is given to applications from without the State. Room 22A, Congregational House, Boston. Rev. Charles B. Rice, Sec.

THE BOSTON SEAMAN'S FRIEND SOCIETY, organized 1827. Chapel and reading-room, 287 Hanover St., Boston. Open day and evening. Sailors and landsmen welcome. Daily prayer meeting, 11 A. M., Bible study, 3 P. M. Sunday services, usual hours. Meetings every evening except Saturday. Branch mission, Vineyard Haven. Is a Congregational society and appeals to all Congregational churches for support. Send donations of money to B. S. Snow, Corresponding Secretary, Room 22, Congregational House, Boston. Send clothing, comfort bags, reading, etc., to Capt. S. S. Nickerson, chaplain, 287 Hanover st. Bequests should read: "I give and bequeath to the Boston Seaman's Friend Society the sum of $——, to be applied to the charitable uses and purposes of said society." Rev. Alexander McKenzie, D. D., President; George Gould, Treasurer.

PASSING COMMENT.

The annual average of $1,716 for other than parish benevolences for twenty-five years is an unusually creditable showing for a church the running average expenses of which have been only a little over $2,000 per year. A New Hampshire church makes this report.

It is well that our churches are so well established as pioneers on the Minnesota frontier.

Few instances of such thorough, consecrated and helpful observance of the Lenten season have been heard from as that in a Boston suburb.

Should we cull extracts from the pastoral Lenten letters which have passed before us within a few weeks, we believe that no subject would be so often brought to notice as prayer—by the church members for themselves and the pastor. This being true, how welcome should be the influence of the increased observance of Lent in our churches.

THE ST. LOUIS CHURCHES.

Pilgrim Church and all Congregationalists in the city have been renewing old acquaintance with Dr. and Mrs. H. A. Stimson of New York. Dr. Stimson preached for Pilgrim Church March 15 and the following Monday addressed the Ministers' Meeting, telling how New York problems are identical with those in St. Louis. In the evening the Congregational Club held a meeting at the Southern Hotel with 250 persons in attendance, the largest in its history. As Dr. Stimson was the founder of the club, and during all his pastorate here supported it heartily, many former members were present. Fraternal greetings were wired the New York Club, in session at the same time, where Dr Michael Burnham was among the speakers on the work in great cities. Dr. Stimson's address on The Outcome of Twenty-five Years of Scientific Controversy was calculated to strengthen faith in the gospel, showing that the real outcome of research and debate has been the strengthening of the Christian position.

The new edifice of the Church of the Covenant at Maplewood, just outside the city limits, but counted within, was dedicated with appropriate ceremonies on the evening of the 13th. The church is the direct outgrowth of work of our City Missionary Society, and one of its most thriving children. At its beginning there was no church near. There are several now and this field, that can hardly support more than one good church properly, is divided among two or three. But our enterprise is doing fine work. A year ago it secured a lot by payments from all who would contribute. The result was gratifying. The edifice just erected is the best yet planned by Superintendent Love, who gave personal attention to purchasing material and directing men, thus saving a large sum on the contract. The cost was a little over $6,000, and it would be difficult to find a more attractive and useful edifice for its size. The church now numbers about forty members drawn from several denominations, but heartily one in the work.

When the Compton Hill built its handsome edifice two years ago many were fearful of disaster. Times were hard and there was general lack of confidence. The enterprise was successful, however, and the debt was balanced by the reduced cost of the building. A pipe organ was not provided at the time, but an excellent instrument is now to be in position about June 1. The edifice is situated in a district hardly favorable to our churches. The inhabitants are largely well-to-do Germans, the few American families being already connected with other organizations.

The church now enrolls 150 members, one eighth of them of German descent.

The Third Church, which recently absorbed the Aubert Place, is now popularly called Fountain Park, but its corporate name remains unchanged. Its field is unusually attractive, among many beautiful residences. The Aubert Place Church had adopted plans and put in a foundation for a new building, but the united organization has changed the design, diminishing the cost. Rev. H. C. Vrooman is pastor.

One of the hardest problems in city work is that of the new church that grows faster than the faith of its founders planned for. Reber Place Church illustrates it. Its building was such that it could be divided into a double tenement if the Sunday school proved a failure. Now, after a revival, the building is entirely inadequate, and the people have strained every nerve to buy a lot for a new church edifice. But orders for retrenchment of missionary aid have laid a heavy burden on the church. Another church which has exceeded the expectations of those who planned it is Hope, rightly named, for while it did not seem to promise rapid growth it has gained rapidly and paid its debt, and its Sunday school can hardly be accommodated in the building. A new house equal to the opportunity is the cry. Meanwhile Bethlehem and Tabernacle Churches are waiting for the buildings that have been talked of for some time. The needs are great, the amount of consecrated money is not large and fine openings have been neglected in holding what is already on foot.

The old First, under the pastorate of Dr. J. H. George, is making healthful growth. It numbers 450 members, is well organized, perfectly united and drawing to itself the full share of the population in that part of the city. Last year it was successful in drawing large Sunday evening congregations by special features. Many times the auditorium was packed. It has largely increased its giving and was especially active in the heavy lifting to set Drury College on its feet.

G. C. A.

THE GEORGIA CONVENTION.

The fifth annual session was held in the First Church, Atlanta, April 1. Rev. L. B. Maxwell was selected to preside in the absence of the moderator. The subject, The Essentials of Congregationalism, was profitably discussed by the delegates. Rev. H. H. Proctor led in the discussion of the theme The Promotion of Spirituality in Our Churches. Unfortunately, the dissensions of last year along the lines of color and race were repeated. As certain constitutional amendments are to be discussed at the next meeting, which amendments affect the question of representation in the convention, it does not seem probable that that session will be conducive to harmony and Christian fellowship unless there is more candor and a seeking for and obedience to the Holy Spirit.

X. Y. Z.

THE ALABAMA ASSOCIATION.

This body met at Selma, March 29–31. After the opening sermon by Rev. J. R. Sims, Rev. Abraham Simmons was chosen moderator. The attendance was large. Addresses were made on different phases of church work, and most of the proceedings were of the usual character. The salient feature of interest came from Rev. A. T. Burnell's paper on Our Duty to Our National Congregational Societies. It emphasized the points of Mr. Capen's address on Denominational Loyalty, which has had such wide and pervasive influence.

A vigorous discussion ensued as to the Alabama mission of Rev. C. B. Curtis, near Selma, which, at his urgent request, was indorsed by vote of the association some years ago. A committee brought in an elaborate business report, alleging that Mr. Curtis has not paid for the lands with the $35,000 he has received and used and that, at the time of his last published report, he was in debt over $30,000. A former member of Mr. Curtis's board of directors vouched for all the statements of the committee and gave facts from his own experience. Other former workers for Mr. Curtis testified similarly and said that very little mission work had been accomplished, so much money being sunk in carrying on the plantation business at a constant loss. A unanimous vote was passed withdrawing indorsement from this scheme and approving the work of the churches through their own national benevolent societies. The closing evening was given to temperance addresses. The next annual meeting will be held at Mobile.

X.

THEOLOGICAL SEMINARIES.

Bangor.

The Bond lectures by Dr. Newman Smyth, D.D., on the general topic The Relations of the Minister to Social and Municipal Work, opened March 31. Dr. Smyth was a student in Bangor Seminary in 1865 and a pastor of the First Church from 1870 to 1875. The first three lectures were given last week on Individual and Social Salvation, The Minister in His Study of Social Problems, and The Sociology of the New Testament.——Sociology is in the course of studies for Seniors, and is considered necessary for the full equipment of the ministry of today. Last Friday this class delivered eight-minute addresses on What Is Society, and How Far Is It Accomplishing Its Ultimate Ends?

Andover.

The fellowship has been awarded to H. H. Walker.——Commencement appointments are as follows: E. H. Abbott and J. P. King for the theological department; G. M. Ward, Old Testament; J. H. Olmstead, New Testament; R. A. MacFadden, homiletics; H. H. Walker, church history.——During holy week a service was held in the Seminary Church every afternoon but Saturday, with sermons by Professor Taylor, who occupies the seminary pulpit during the month of April.——Dr. Mackenzie gave his first lecture to the Seniors last Tuesday.——On Thursday, Friday and Saturday of the present week the Oriental Society will meet here. Pres. D. C. Gilman of Johns Hopkins will preside.

Yale.

The annual catalogue has just been issued.——Optional courses are offered by President Dwight and Professors Brastow, Curtis, Blackman and Porter. The courses offered to the Graduate Class are especially good, one by Dr. Bacon on The Discourses and Parables of Jesus studied in the light of the teachings of the Jewish synagogue.——An unusually large number of courses in the university are offered the students. A course preparatory to foreign mission work is offered.——The programs of public lecture courses and concerts and of the clubs are rich and varied.——Ten scholarships of $50 each from the William H. Fogg Fund are offered to members of the Junior Class, and the Downs prizes for hymn and Scripture reading to the Middle and Senior Classes. A graduate fellowship of $600 for two years is offered to the class entering in September, 1896.——The total number of students is 104.

The regular meeting of the missionary society was addressed last week by Mr. S. H. Hadley of the New York Jerry McAuley Mission.——The following Commencement speakers have been appointed from the Senior Class: A. G. Beach, C. W. Collier, James Davies, J. H. Grant, J. H. Kimball, W. M. Short, C. N. Thorp and E. C. Wheeler.——Special lectures here last week were: Poise and Power by President Gates of Amherst, Typical Eras in Skepticism by Prof. A. C. Armstrong, Jr., of Wesleyan.——Passion Week services were held on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings.

Pacific.

The students in Oakland returned the hospitality of the Presbyterian students by entertaining them on a recent evening. The fellowship was delightful, part of the time being given to addresses on the following themes: The Relation of the Minister to Amusements, Why Women Have a Place in the Pulpit, The Poetical Minister, Civic Duties of the Minister, Advantages of the Married Man over the Bachelor in the Pulpit.

CLUBS.

MO.—The March meeting of the St. Louis Club was the largest ever held, the attendance of members and guests reaching 259. Rev. H. A. Stimson, D. D., of New York, formerly of this city, addressed the club on The Outcome of Twenty-five Years of Scientific Controversy. The audience was a splendid tribute to Dr. Stimson's work and popularity in this city, as also were those who listened to him in Pilgrim Church and at the Ministers' Meeting.

NEW ENGLAND.

Boston.

The usual programs of Easter were carried out generally by the churches, and the elaborate floral decorations and special music were appropriately arranged. Strong themes held the attention of unusually large congregations, so well favored by the mild temperature and a clear sky.

At the Ministers' Meeting Monday morning Mr. Flemming Osgood gave advice on the use of the voice, making his treatment pertinent to the needs of those who sat before him.

Massachusetts.

CAMBRIDGEPORT.—Pilgrim. Last week Tuesday evening a large number of the friends of the retiring pastor, Rev. Charles Olmstead, gathered in the vestry, made attractive by elaborate floral decorations, to say the farewells to him. Besides the expressive words of appreciation a generous purse of over $200 was given in behalf of the church and a camera by the C. E. Society. The pastorate has lasted seven years. The church membership has gained largely and is now greater than ever. The farewell sermon was preached on Easter Sunday.

CHELSEA.—Central. The program of this vigorous church, Three Weeks Before Easter, promised a rich feast for the hundreds of persons who annually crowd the vestries at this season. No signs of abating interest were manifest this year, and the pastor, Rev. C. E. Jefferson, led his people along the lines of inspiring and helpful thought. Tuesday and Friday afternoons an hour was spent by the pastor with the boys and girls for instructional services, and every week day and evening, save on Saturday, special meetings were held during this period with such subjects as: What Led Me to Christ, What I Might Do, In the Upper Room, Alone with Jesus, The Last Warning, The Last Prayer.

SOMERVILLE.—The union service in the Prospect Hill meeting house on Good Friday included all the churches, and the pastors took part generally. The address was by Rev. C. L. Noyes. The communion was celebrated.

NORTH ATTLEBORO.—Rev. E. L. Warren closed a faithful pastorate of a little over two years with Trinity Church on Easter Sunday. During his ministry a beautiful chapel has been erected, costing with the lot $6,000, and 25 new members have been added. Mr. Warren begins work at Westerly, R. I., the first Sunday in May.

SALEM.—The usual union Good Friday service of the churches was held with the Crombie Street Church. Dr. D. W. S. Clark preached and the communion was celebrated.——Rev. H. G. Hale of Warren held services during Passion Week, with large and interested congregations. He has been assisted by Professor Harris and Rev. Messrs. A. B. Bassett and D. W. S. Clark.——The A. B. C. F. M. will have a "field day" with the churches April 12.

WORCESTER.—Rev. J. C. Villiers read a paper on The Origin and History of Congregationalism in England at the Ministers' Meeting March 30. His early ministry in English Congregational churches added interest to the paper, and the history and descriptions made many wish they might join the English pilgrimage next June.——Piedmont. The two days' Easter sale netted the church nearly $900 for recarpeting the audience-room.——Pilgrim. The class in carpentry, numbering 25, and the sewing school, numbering 100, held their closing exercises March 28. Exhibits of the work done were displayed and prizes awarded for excellence. The pastor gave an address to the boys and girls and refreshments were served. The church observed Passion Week with week night services.

Maine.

PORTLAND.—The churches of the city held a union missionary service in the Second Parish vestry March 24, in honor of Miss M. S. Morrill's birthday, one of the city's beloved representatives in China. Addresses were given by Miss Alice Kyle, Mrs. W. H. Fenn and Mrs. J. B. Carter.——Williston. The auxiliary of the W. B. M. reported at its annual meeting just held offerings of over $100 for the year. Mrs. W. H. Fenn and others spoke and a charming missionary tea and social hour followed ——St. Lawrence Street. The persistent and courageous efforts of the pastor, Rev. A. H. Wright, and his helpers guarantee the necessary $25,000 for the new edifice before July 1. Eighteen thousand dollars are already in hand. Each Congregational church in the city is planning for a "field day" in the interest of this worthy enterprise.

PRINCETON.—Great good in the spiritual quickening of the churches resulted from the union meetings which continued five weeks. There are new attendants at services and over 60 persons have begun or renewed their Christian lives. The pastor, Rev. C. H. Leverton, is much encouraged.

STRONG.—Rev. Charles A. Breck reports a small but active working church. Many young people attend and are interested in the work. The music is greatly assisted by the local orchestral quartet in addition to the organ and choir. An enthusiastic Junior Society has been formed.

CASTINE.—The meeting house here, Rev. J. P. Cushman, pastor, will be improved by new pews and a steel ceiling. The town will celebrate its centennial this summer, in which event the church is much interested.

FARMINGTON.—A pretty booklet, issued by the church, gives information in regard to services, officers, music and the various societies, also a calendar with programs for missionary concerts and socials.

BANGOR.—Elm Street is prosperous and well united in its pastor, Rev. L. D. Evans. His sermons are evangelical and unique. The Sunday school is well supported and led by Rev. T. E. Brastow as superintendent.

SOUTH PORTLAND.—The promising new church recently organized is soliciting funds for a modest edifice. Besides the $1,000 pledged on the field $2,000 are expected from outside sources.

New Hampshire.

EXETER.—Second. During the 25 years of the pastorate of Rev. G. E. Street, just celebrated, the benevolent contributions to objects outside the limits of the parish amounted to $42,907. Besides, $1,750 were spent on the renovation of the edifice, $2,600 for the purchase, remodeling and renovation of the chapel and $2,200 on the parsonage. The church received 135 to its membership on confession and 88 by letter.

FITZWILLIAM.—Evangelist E. A. Whittier closed a two weeks' series of union revival meetings last week. Notwithstanding bad weather a glorious work was accomplished, the most hopeful for many years. About 40 persons gave evidence of conversion. The Baptists united in the work.

NEWINGTON.—Rev. C. W. Rogers closed his labors with this church March 31 and will take another charge in Rhode Island. His relations with this people as acting pastor have been pleasant and in a measure successful. A number of persons have started on the Christian life.

MANCHESTER.—First is completing a house to house visitation of the parish, with results that promise much good in promoting a large attendance at church worship and Sunday school. A good number of persons has been added to the home department.

CONCORD.—The churches held special services during Passion Week. They all show a quickened spiritual life as a result.

Vermont.

HARDWICK.—Special meetings have been held in the new meeting house during the week. Rev. J. W. Harris of Greensboro has assisted. Miss Hattie Warner has conducted successful children's meetings.

DANVILLE.—The late J. C. Fuller left $150 to the Congregational and $100 to the Methodist church. It is expected that an equal amount extra will also be received by the final settlement of the will.

Connecticut.

NEW HAVEN.—The churches on the green united in Passion Week services Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of last week, conducted by Dr. Munger and Professors Sanders and Curtis.——The closing meeting of the people's services was held in the Grand Opera House, March 29, Rev. I. C. Meserve preaching. These services will probably be resumed next season and it is proposed to hold similar open-air services during the summer.——At the last Ministers' Meeting Rev. W. T. Brown of Madison read a paper on The Cross and the Kingdom. ——On Fast Day, April 3, union services were held with United Church. In the morning Rev. W. L. Phillips, D. D., preached the annual sermon. In the afternoon there was a missionary rally at Center Church, addressed by Dr. Barton on Turkey.—— Howard Avenue. This church for the past five years has not required assent to any specific creed. Only a covenant is ascribed to.——United. The Men's Club service last Sunday evening was addressed by Ex-Pres. A. D. White of Cornell on The Development of Criminal Law.——The settlement of the contest over the will of the late Hiram Camp gives, among other bequests, $19,575 to Northfield Seminary and the Hebrew Charity Association together and $3,000 to the New Haven City Mission.

BRIDGEPORT.—A series of five pre-Lenten services were held on successive Monday evenings in March in one of the theaters of the city. Christian unity was visibly exemplified by the active co-operation and presence of the pastors of all the Protestant churches in the city and suburban parishes. The interest in the meetings was intense and hundreds were unable to gain admittance. The community as a whole had the privilege of hearing from the lips of some of this country's most eminent thinkers and the different denominations were brought into close kinship.

WILLIMANTIC.—Mr. Job E. Cushman, whose death recently occurred in Los Angeles, Cal., left $1,323 each to the First Church of this city, the Mansfield Center church, the Y. M. C. A. and W. C. T. U. of this city.

ROCKVILLE.—At the recent annual meeting last Friday night the reports showed total expenses of $4,936. The receipts were $4,060.

DEEP RIVER.—A birthday party was given recently by the Ladies' Aid Society that netted $112 for the organ fund.

WEST TORRINGTON.—The birthday party recently given was a success, netting $50 to complete the new carpet fund.

Four young women of the Old Lyme church prepared a birthday supper lately, realizing $50 for the Sunday school library.——The late Henry C. Bowen left the First Church, Woodstock, $1,500.

MIDDLE STATES.

New York.

NEW YORK.—Broadway Tabernacle. Before this is read this church, at a meeting held April 8, will have accepted or declined the resignation of Rev. Henry A. Stimson, D. D., who read to his congregation last Sunday morning a statement of why he felt it best that the church should have an opportunity either to release him from service as pastor or, on the other hand, to assure him of loyal, undivided support in the future. Until this matter is settled definitely further comment would not be opportune.

WEST GROTON.—The first of a series of fellowship meetings, inaugurated at the last session of the Central Association, was held March 18 at this place. The attendance was good. The subjects, excellently treated, were The Holy Spirit, and The Family Altar. At the evening session Rev. Dr. W. E. Griffis preached an able sermon. The meeting was a real success and warmed the hearts of the people. Rev. John Cunningham has had a notable pastorate here and done solid work. He is universally loved and trusted by his people.

COLUMBUS.—Rev. W. F. Ireland closed his ministry here last week Sunday to begin work with the South Avenue Church, Syracuse. Eight persons were received into the church on his last Sunday, the fruit of special meetings held in January. At the farewell meeting the usual presents were given by the church, which much regrets his departure. His ministry has been a great blessing to this little town.

HONEOYE.—An earnest revival has been experienced by this church, Rev. S. M. Day, pastor. A series of gospel meetings, conducted by Rev. E. E. Davidson, evangelist, has been greatly blessed. Over 100 persons came forward for prayer, a good number of them young men.

BUFFALO.—The home missionary rally reached here March 29 and touched five churches. Secretary Wiard has spoken upon home missions in a number of churches in this State during March and the churches made generous response.

SYRACUSE.—A union Good Friday service was held with Plymouth Church, all the Congregational churches in the city participating. The address was by Rev. H. N. Kinney.

THE SOUTH.

Maryland.

BALTIMORE.—Last week Monday a meeting of the four city pastors and church committees was held to discuss mission and church work in the city. Beside social features these meetings are intended to do the work of a city mission committee. It is hoped to start new work in the eastern suburbs.

THE INTERIOR.

Ohio.

CLEVELAND.—Franklin Avenue has refused to accept the resignation of Rev. H. O. Allen.——Hough Avenue held a service every evening during Passion Week, with preaching by Rev. W. C. Rogers of Brecksville.——Pilgrim held ten days' special services before Easter with addresses.——Rev. E. A. Paddock of Weiser, Idaho, is speaking in Northern Ohio under the H. M. S. and in the interests of Weiser Academy. His descriptions of Western life and the needs of our frontier towns awaken largely increased interest.——Principal Frissell and the Hampton Institute students delighted large congregations in the city at several of the Congregational, Baptist and Presbyterian churches, and at a union meeting in the Y. M. C. A. building at which Bishop Leonard presided.

SPRINGFIELD.—First. Rev. E. A. Steiner, the new pastor, preached last week three interesting sermons on the Last Supper, Gethsemane, and the Crucifixion, by way of preparation for the Easter communion service. The attendance has been unusually large and the reception of the pastor by the people cordial, earnest and loving.——Lagonda Avenue. Rev. A. E Woodruff, who has just accepted a call by this church, preached here of late. He is an active and zealous worker.

PAINESVILLE.—First. A successful two weeks' evangelistic service under the leadership of Messrs. Reed and Chafer has just closed. A number of conversions are a part of the immediate results. The community listened to a reasonable and tender presentation of the truth. Mr. Chafer has been asked to become musical director and assistant of the pastor, Rev. P. W. Sinks.

BEREA.—The pastor, Rev. S. B. Beard, held three weeks' special meetings, resulting in 26 additions at the last communion, 20 on confession. In the last six months a debt of $275 has been paid, chiefly through the efforts of the women. In this pastorate, now in its second year, all departments have been greatly strengthened and inspired to more efficient work.

PENFIELD.—This church, long on the decline, has steadily prospered in the three years during which Rev. W. A. Schwimley has served it. He has held an extra series of meetings this winter three miles out, resulting in 15 conversions. The annual meeting in March found the church in the best condition it has ever known.

Illinois.

ROCKFORD.—First. The pastor, Rev. W. W. Leete, will accompany The Congregationalist's Pilgrimage to England and the Continent next June. The church unanimously and heartily voted to grant him a ten weeks' vacation and to supply the pulpit during his absence.

Indiana.

ALEXANDRIA.—The organization of the new church took place, by council, March 24. It was a delightful occasion, and 16 persons were received. The sermon was by Rev. F. E. Dewhurst. The services were held in the Christian meeting house. The town has developed greatly from a railroad crossing with about 300 persons to a city of 8,000. The city is being built rapidly and handsome blocks are going up. The Congregationalists have a Sunday school of 100 and the council was entertained in new homes.

HOSMER.—Superintendent Curtis spent March 22 with this church, Rev. Thomas Smith, pastor. At special services the attendance was large. The thank offerings, the result of a self-denial week, amounted to $35 and the total collections for the day were $60, of which $20 were for home missions. This church has small means, but carefully prepares each year for a missionary anniversary in which general interest is developed.

TOLLESTON.—Rev. H. A. Shearer has opened work in this growing railroad village where three lines cross. He preaches once in two weeks Tuesday evening and a Sunday school has been organized with 50 members. The place is largely German and this is the first religious enterprise using the English language.

The latest statistics for Indiana show 52 churches, with a total membership of 4,336, a gain of one church and 590 members. The number of additions was 667 and there are 42 ministers in all. The Sunday school membership, 5,398, shows a gain of 318. Thirty-six C. E. Societies report 1,454 members. Benevolent contributions were $4,632, an increase of $670. Home expenditures were $56,268, somewhat less than last year.

Michigan.

Rev. H. D. Wiard, Mrs. H. S. Caswell and Rev. W. G. Puddefoot will make a canvass for home missions in Michigan with Sec. W. H. Warren during April.

THE WEST.

Missouri.

SPRINGFIELD.—Central has just voted to become self-supporting. All departments have made steady gain since the coming of Rev. George S. Brett 18 months ago. The interest-bearing debt of $2,000 has been paid and several hundred dollars have been laid out in repairs. All services show a steady gain in attendance.——First is seeking to enlarge its work through district visitation and cottage prayer meetings. Thirty-one new members have been received since the first of the year. Rev. Pearse Pinch is pastor.

Iowa.

CORNING.—Rev. A. M. Beman closed a successful six years' pastorate Easter Sunday, to go to Aurora, Mo. The net gain in membership has been about 100, the church building has been improved, a fine parsonage built and the church greatly strengthened in every way. His influence was felt not only in his own parish, but in the local association and the State, and it will not be easy to fill his place.

NASHUA.—A series of union meetings under the leadership of Rev. H. Corder, evangelist, closed March 22, with about 50 professed conversions. The Congregational church, Dr. H. C. Scotford, pastor, will receive a large number of accessions. One result of the meetings is the organization of a Christian Citizenship League, auxiliary to the national league.

WHITING.—A wonderful revival is in progress, Rev. J. E. McNamara of Sloan assisting the pastor, Rev. G. H. Crocker. At the last report there had been 60 professed conversions, the majority being men. The interest is unabated.

EXIRA.—Twelve members have been received since Jan. 1. The Sunday school has doubled its membership in the past three months and the congregations have greatly increased. Rev. H. L. Wissler is pastor.

WEST BURLINGTON.—The pastor, Rev. C. R. Shatto, returns his commission to the Iowa H. M. S., the church assuming self-support by yoking with that at Danville.

WAVERLY.—The church is observing Passion Week with daily services. The pastor, Rev. J. E. Brereton, is assisted by Rev. Mandus Barrett of Shell Rock.

CARNFORTH.—Several students from Iowa College are holding special meetings with this church during their spring vacation.

Minnesota.

ASH CREEK.—This is one of three churches under the care of Rev. W. J. Conard, and has been blessed with conversions during revival services, the whole field having made great advance during the year. A parsonage has been secured at Ellsworth.

MAZEPPA.—Some divisions have been wiped out, a better spirit exists in the church and a Sunday school has been organized at Bear Valley. The Mazeppa and the Zumbro Falls churches are looking toward self-support during the year.

STEWART.—Evangelistic services have resulted in a number of conversions, Evangelist J. I. Sanford of Chicago assisting. This church, with its yokefellow Browntop, has made steady progress during the present pastorate.

PARK RAPIDS.—This enterprise, discouraged by losing its pastor, has been revived by the visits of Rev. Esther Smith, the wife of Rev. J. H. B. Smith of Wadena, and is endeavoring to secure her services.

WALKER.—This new town on the shores of Leech Lake has already secured the service of a minister, who preaches in the hotel and is planning for a building.

A three weeks' series of meetings has been held at Lake Park, with several conversions, the church being greatly revived.

The Red Lake Indian reservation, to be opened next month for settlers, contains a little less than 1,000,000 acres of land. Large immigration is expected. Congregationalists have planted churches on all sides of the reservation, and have the best foothold for introducing missionaries. At present there is not a dollar of missionary money in prospect for this work.

Nebraska.

CAMBRIDGE.—Rev. D. R. James has established a second out-station at the Pea Ridge neighborhood, where interest is constantly growing among the farming population. A good Sunday school is maintained. At the home church the Sunday evening congregations have been increasing until the house is comfortably filled at each service. The junior C. E. is promising. March 31 was home missionary rally day, and generous response was made to the appeal of Superintendent Bross for frontier work.

BURWELL.—March 29 was home missionary rally day, and there was ready response to the earnest appeal of the pastor, Rev. H. M. Evans. The church has been making payments on its debt, thus freeing its hands for future effort. During the month of March 13 members have been received. The new parsonage proves comfortable and convenient.

VERDON.—Rev. J. D. Fisher in resigning his work here to accept the call of the churches at Camp Creek and Minersville leaves a record of two fruitful years. Congregations have increased and all departments have been strengthened. Without special or protracted services 39 persons have been received to membership.

GRANT.—The pastor, Rev. G. W. Knapp, welcomed six new members March 29, baptizing three of them. Since the late special meetings there have been 37 accessions, doubling the resident membership.

RED CLOUD.—This church, pastorless since last October, has invited Rev. T. E. Horton to spend a month or two in special work.

North Dakota.

ANTELOPE.—A revival began about two weeks ago, and is still in progress. About 20 persons have decided to lead a Christian life. The pastor has been assisted by Supt. E. H. Stickney and Mr. W. A. Wilkinson of Minneapolis.

South Dakota.

HENRY.—The work on this field, under Rev. F. L. Drew, is hopeful. The Sunday school is growing and the C. E. reaches nearly all the young people of the community. The pastor also has charge of a mission Sunday school, where he preaches Sunday afternoons. He recently held special meetings with good success.

PLANKINTON.—This church has lost heavily by removals during the past year, but interest is growing. Special services have been held preparatory to the coming of evangelists in April.

ALCESTER AND GOTHLAND.—General missionary D. R. Tomlin has just closed a long and successful series of meetings at these points, and helpful results are evident throughout the field.

DE SMET.—This field, in care of Rev. E. J. Sarkis, is hopeful. During the winter, as a result of special meetings, 44 new members have been received and others are expected.

MITCHELL.—The recent special meetings conducted by Evangelists Thomson and Gamble were even more fruitful than those held during the opening of the winter.

Miss E. K. Henry's meetings at Bethel and Letcher have given great impetus to the work and a number of accessions will result.

Wyoming.

BIG HORN.—Considerable interest has been awakened here by a course of Lenten lectures arranged by the pastor, Rev. George Wadsworth. The students and faculty of the Wyoming Collegiate Institute have been constant in attendance.

PACIFIC COAST.

California.

SAN RAFAEL.—A movement is on foot to buy the edifice recently vacated by the Presbyterians. Towards the $2,250 needed nearly $1,000 are available. If aid is secured from the C. C. B. S., the transfer will probably be made.

MILL VALLEY.—Sixteen persons, nearly all heads of families, have united in a Congregational church. Plans have been drawn for a building, the Land Company having given the site.

SAN FRANCISCO.—Christian Jews are organizing for fellowship and work among their own people. Thus far 16 have openly confessed Christ.

NILES.—Rev. F. H. Maar is being assisted in revival services by neighboring pastors, Rev. Messrs. J. T. McCollom and L. D. Rathbone.

The Redwood meeting house and parsonage have been furnished with electric lights.

Washington.

COLVILLE.—A fellowship meeting, held March 25, 26, discussed the need of a Christian academy on this field, for so many years held by Dr. Eells alone. Committees were appointed to find a site, and to canvass the town for subscription toward a building. Private enterprises have supplied the deficiency of public schools heretofore. Naturally the people now desire a permanent institution under Congregational management.

LYLE AND WHITE SALMON.—These two churches on the mid-Columbia River, organized years ago by Dr. Atkinson, have had a somewhat checkered career, and two or more years ago were in a low condition. Now under the care of Mr. T. M. Whitcomb, a lay worker, who seems to be doing faithful service, congregations and interest are increasing.

ST. JOHN.—Rev. J. A. McCroskey finds his new field in fine condition. For six months it has been pastorless, yet 19 members have been added during the past 10 months.

The town of Sprague is being canvassed for the purpose of securing the attendance of non-church-goers.—Oakesdale and Rosalia will seek a pastor soon.

WEEKLY REGISTER.

Calls.

BEMAN, Albert M., Corning, Io., to Aurora, Mo. Accepts.
BREARLY, Wm. H., Douglas, Wyo., to Wahoo, Neb. Accepts.
CHAFER, Lew S., to become pastor's assistant and music director of First Church, Painesville, O.
DAMON, Cyrus W., Wauwatosa, Wis., to Seymour. Accepts.
DONALDSON, Levi J., Clarcona, Fla., to Tavares. Accepts.
EVANS, David E., Sherrard, Ill., to Larchwood, Io. Accepts.
FISHER, Jesse L., Verdon, Neb., to Camp Creek and Minersville. Accepts.
GORTON, Philo (Pres.), Cascade, Io., to Chapin.
HAWKS, Jno. S., Hennessey, Okl., to Glenella and Alvaretta.
HAYNES, Chas. S., to the permanent pastorate in Lancaster, Mass., where he has been supplying. Accepts.
HORSEY, Harold J., of Congregational College, Montreal, Que., to Welcome-Zion, Ottawa, Ont. Accepts.
KILBOURN, Jas. K., Genesee, Wis., to Pewaukee. Accepts.
LYDGATE, Jno. M., Steilacoom, Wn., to Kalama.
MCCAIN, And. J., to Union Ch., Central, Ala. Accepts.
NUTTING, Jno. K., to be acting pastor at Rock Rapids, Io., during the absence of Rev. W. B. Pinkerton now studying at Harvard. Accepts, and began work March 1.
POLLOCK, A. F., Congregational College, Montreal, Que., to Speedside and Fergus, Ont. Accepts.
RODGERS, Jas. G., Buffalo, N. Y., to the presidency of Benzonia College, Mich. Accepts.
SMITH, Jas. E., Whitehall, Mich., to Fifth Ave. Ch., Minneapolis, Minn. Accepts, to begin May 1.
STAPLETON, Robt., Belle Plaine, Io., to Fairmount, Ind.
STURTEVANT, Ernest W., Hartland, Vt., to E. Braintree and W. Brookfield.
TRACY, Isaac B., Valley City, N. D., to Grand Forks.
WESTPHAL, Louis W., Ironton, Mich., to Clio. Accepts.
WOODRUFF, Alfred E., Plymouth Ch., Toledo, O., accepts call to Lagonda Ave. Ch., Springfield.
WYLAND, Geo. V., to Lyndon, Ill. Accepts.

Ordinations and Installations.

INGALLS, Edmond C., i. Colchester, Ct., March 31. Sermon, Rev. A. B. Bassett; other parts, Rev. Messrs. J. P. Harvey, Lewellyn Pratt, D. D., Marcus Burr, C. F. Weeden.
JESSEE, C. C., o. p. Lamoille, Ill., March 19. Sermon, Rev. Edwin More, Jr.; other parts, Rev. Messrs. F. G. Brainard, D. A. Evans and William Anderson.
RENAN, S. R., o. Christian Hill, Ala.

Resignations.

BELT, Salathiel D., Ellensburg, Wn., to take effect May 15.
CLAIBORNE, Cyrus H., New Iberia, La.
DIVEN, Clarence L., Olympia, Wn.
HALLOCK, Leavitt H., First Ch., Tacoma, Wn., to take effect at once.
HAWN, Robt. G., Wenas and Natchez, Wn., to take effect April 1.
JENKINS, Owen, Collinwood, O., to take effect May 1.
MCWILLIAMS, Jno. W., Waynoka, Okl.
PRIOR, Arthur E., New Baltimore, Mich., to take effect May 31.
SMITH, Ira A., First Ch., Charlemont, Mass.
TREVOR, Ernest A., Rio and Wyocena, Wis., to seek health in Colorado.
WATHEN, Chas. B., South Main St. Ch., Manchester, N. H., after a six years' pastorate.
WILLIAMS, Mark W., Bureau and De Pue, Ill., to take effect May 15.

Dismissions.

HUNT, Theo. C., Riverside, Cal., March 18.
OLMSTEAD, Chas., Pilgrim Ch., Cambridgeport, Mass., March 24.
PLASS, Norman, Vine St. Ch., Cincinnati, O., March 30.

Churches Organized.

ATLANTA, Mich., —.
CENTRAL, Ala., Union Ch., 11 members.
DARK CORNERS, Mich., Independent Ch.

Miscellaneous.

BEEBEE, A. Geo., closed his labors at West Hawley Mass., April 1.
COUSINS, Edgar M., was welcomed to his new field in Gray, Me., by a party of his people who left with him $150.
GRANGER, Calvin, of East Poultney, Vt., celebrated his 91st birthday, March 26, with the assistance of a party of former parishioners in Middletown Springs. "Father" Granger is the Nestor of Vermont and almost of the denomination, there being only one living Congregational minister in America ordained earlier than he.
LLOYD, Prof. Rhys R., of Pacific Sem., is about to go abroad for several months' study.
MILES, Milo N., of Iowa City, the oldest Congregational minister in Iowa, celebrated his 89th birthday anniversary March 24. He is still hale and hearty.
ROGERS, C. Wellington, closes his work in Newington, N. H., to go to a Free Baptist Ch. in Rhode Island.
TUTTLE, Henry W., of Manchester, Io., as a result of overwork in revival and church building lines, is obliged to rest for two or three months, and is now at the home of his parents in Vesper, N. Y.
WOOD, Sumner G., and wife, were surprised March 24, on the fifteenth anniversary of their marriage, by calls from two companies of their parishioners, who left valuable gifts.

---

It may have been effective military discipline which led Mrs. Booth-Tucker to obey the command of her father and come to this country, leaving behind her sick a seven-weeks old baby who has since died without a mother's care. But it was the poorest kind of religion. The mother who can thus abandon her child to the tender mercies of others to go on a mission can preach no gospel strong enough to counteract her vicious example. And this leads to the further question, whether this sort of army discipline is best calculated to develop obedience to one's own conscience, without which there can be no real Christian life.

POLITICS AND RELIGION IN UTAH AND IDAHO.

BY REV. W. S. HAWKES, SUPERINTENDENT OF HOME MISSIONS, SALT LAKE CITY.

Utah is now a State, and has full representation in the national Congress. What the outcome will be few care to predict. Most of the Protestant Christians preferred to have admission still further delayed, but so much could be said on both sides that few were willing to oppose the evident drift towards it. The leaders of the Mormon Church made as solemn promises concerning their future action and attitude as it was possible for men to make. It is the prevailing opinion that they are honest in these expressions, and it is generally believed that influences are working among the younger portion of the Mormons which will still further modify the actions of that organization, if their professions are now trusted. It has been evident for some time that Mormons were engaging in business enterprises, in general charity relief and to some extent in moral reforms, with non-Mormons, as they would not a few years ago. This is looked upon by many as showing a powerful influence towards an honest separation of the Mormon Church from politics, but after having wholly directed its members in that respect for fifty years an entire separation cannot be expected at once. If it is seen that the tendency is strongly that way it will be hailed as a hopeful omen, and fears will be allayed. No one expects a recurrence of the old forms of opposition and terrorism. A change almost amounting to a revolution has taken place in Utah in the last decade. This furnishes abundant ground for hope that a greater one is now going on.

It is thirty-one years since evangelical mission work began in Utah, and now there are eighty evangelical churches, nearly all of which are small and weak and only eight self-supporting. The present population of Utah is about 250,000, thus it will be seen that Christian influences are still weak. The greatest visible changes are other than religious, yet it is undoubtedly a fact that religious changes which cannot be tabulated have been very great.

While great activity is apparent in the Mormon Church it is believed that great changes are going on within it, and close observers of it for many years say they should not be surprised if a leader should arise among them and lead towards a vital Christianity. It has always seemed to Protestant Christians as though the Mormon religion had very little power in it to control and shape for good the hearts and lives of its followers. Profanity, intemperance, loose morals and utter disregard for the sanctity of the Lord's Day do not seem to affect church standing. Facts reported indicate a shocking condition of things among the young people, particularly in the rural communities.

One strong argument for Statehood was that it would open the way for the incoming of outside capital, and present facts point that way. Companies are being formed to irrigate large tracts of fertile lands and to bring Eastern colonists to settle upon them, and plans are being considered whereby those of the same religious preference shall be brought together, settled in the same locality and thus be able to have their own church from the beginning. This would be in the interest of all denominations, tend to prevent the instances of two or three weak churches of different denominations in the same settlement, would lessen friction and produce more real Christian fellowship. Scattered all over this inter-mountain country, sometimes called the "Great Basin," are isolated Christian families, frequently scores of miles from any church or Sunday school and often a hundred miles from a church of their own denomination. The Great Basin in Utah and Idaho has one of the finest climates in the world, particularly favorable for persons of weak lungs. The colony idea, which took those of like faith and sympathies who had their own church from the start, and a cluster of such colonies which soon had its Christian academy, was a prominent feature in the settlement of New England and many parts of the Interior States. Recently an organized colony has gone into western Idaho to settle in the great fruit region. The plan includes the "farm village," with "home lots" for gardens and village conveniences and the farms outlying. Many of this colony are from the vicinity of Boston and Chicago, but they have made no agreement regarding a church and there may yet be two or three weak ones of different denominations.

CURRENT THOUGHT.

AT HOME.

In the literary study of the Bible, which has been pursued with so much profit of late, it has been attempted to find the dramatic element in Job and the Song of Songs, both of which are written in dialogue, but neither of which fully conforms to the dramatic requirements laid down by the Greeks. Under the title of An Old Testament Drama, a writer in Lippincott's (April) shows how fully the story of Naaman meets these requirements, being thoroughly dramatic in essence, although narrative in form. "Then, too, the narrative falls inevitably into the usual five acts," says the writer, "and these carry out strictly the Aristotelian analysis of dramatic tragedy—the beginning, increase, climax, declension, consequence or fall—and all takes place in such a way that that purification of the mind by calling forth the feelings of pity and terror, the artistic and ethical aim of tragedy, is fully accomplished." The article is an interesting one and shows once more the varied power of the literature which makes up the Bible.

ABROAD.

Mr. A. E. Fletcher, in the New Age, using the recent Free Church Congress as the text for an editorial on the Mission of Nonconformity, describes the omnipresence of sacerdotalism in the English Church, and points out why this fact should inspire Nonconformists "to present the religion of Christ to the people divorced from priestly claims. If Christianity cannot be detached from spurious claims which are in their essence largely pagan revivals, there will be no middle line for the average man in the future between a dreary agnosticism and a full recognition of church authority, which will ultimately mean Roman authority, just as people discover the fact that Anglican claims are built on a shifting foundation. It is for organized Nonconformity to prevent such a disaster. It can only do so by gladly welcoming all the new truths, from whatsoever quarter they may come, and by preserving an open, imaginative mind to the ever-renewed revelation of the divine in the world of man. And, in the next place, it must be the function of the new Nonconformist movement to incarnate in the actual world those teachings of brotherly love which Christ brought to men, and which are the fruition and fulfillment of all the law and the prophets. Either these ideas are true or they are not. There is no halfway house. If they are true much of the fabric of our civilization stands condemned."

Rev. Prof. James Orr, D. D., of Edinburgh, well known in Chicago by reason of his lectures at the theological seminary there, was recently asked by the Christian Commonwealth's interviewer what influence Biblical criticisms are having upon thoughtful people generally? He replied: "My impression is that it is both good and bad. One effect has been greatly to revive the study of the Old Testament as a living book, and to produce a deepened impression of the unique character and supernatural origin of the religion of Israel—a conviction which cannot but react on many of the critical theories. On the other hand, the free way in which large portions of the historical Scriptures, including the most of the Pentateuch, have been relegated to the domain of myth or fiction, with the extraordinary boldness of assertion as to error and non-historicity in the Old Testament generally, must do much to weaken the faith of multitudes in it as containing a sure word of God. Opinion meanwhile is evidently in a state of great confusion, and we can only hope that time will do something to clear it up."

One may sympathize entirely with Count Tolstoi's abhorrence of war and his denunciation of the militarism which is rampant in Europe without accepting his statement, in the London Chronicle, that patriotism "not only is incompatible with the teachings of Christ, but with the very lowest demands of morality in any Christian society." Moreover, he asserts that "if Christianity is truth and we wish to live in peace, then not only must we not desire power for our nation, but we must rejoice at the weakening of that power and further its weakening; . . . if we really would live up to our professions, we must not desire the power of the state we live under, but we must seek its diminution, its weakening, and help toward this with all our powers. . . . We have so far forgotten Christ and corroded out of our lives all that is Christian that the teaching of Buddha and Confucius stands incomparably higher than the bestial patriotism which guides our present Christian nations."

AS OTHERS SEE US.

We feel a pride that is pardonable, we trust, in the many kind words that have been spoken concerning us lately—words drawn out by our recent anniversary number. From the many letters and editorials that have come to our notice we print a few of the more quotable sentences:

For its purpose the number was in all respects a model one.—The Critic.

Under the present management it ranks easily as among the best religious journals in the country.—New York Tribune.

I should think it was always high noon at The Congregationalist's office by the monotonous way in which your clock always strikes twelve.—O. S. Dean, D. D.

It still pursues the even tenor of its way, with no sign of age except the improvement that quite naturally comes from a ripe experience.—Cambridge Tribune.

The development of religious newspapers as illustrated by the development of this paper is not the least remarkable of the developments of this period.—The Advance.

The Congregationalist, under its various names, has been in the very front rank both for ability and influence. No denominational paper has surpassed it.—New York Independent.

It quite surpasses itself by its special number of 12 March. . . . In all respects a credit to their enterprise, literary capacity and good taste.—The Independent and Nonconformist, London.

Among the religious journals of the world none holds higher place than our esteemed Boston contemporary, the venerable, but ever young, aggressive and wide-awake Congregationalist.—The Examiner.

Old as it is it was never younger than it is today, if youth means brightness, energy, enterprise and strength. Judged by these standards there are few younger newspapers in all the world.—Golden Rule.

The Congregationalist has accomplished much noble and effective work in the past in the direction of human progress and deserves the hearty thanks and unstinted praise of all lovers of humanity.—The Brooklyn Eagle.

There has been at work an influence that has almost accomplished a revolution in religious journalism. . . . The Congregationalist is, perhaps, the best exemplification of this evolutionary development.—Newspaperdom.

In the front rank of American religious weeklies, and while representing one denomination, it is yet broad and sympathetic. Given a cultured denomination, and a refined, cultured weekly follows as a matter of course.—The Jewish Messenger.

Our contemporary is a very old newspaper, whether the very, very oldest newspaper (we do not say it is not) is a mere bagatelle when we regard its present ability, its history, character and success, in which we heartily rejoice.—Christian Work.

It has been a great help to me in my ministry during fifty years in the West. . . . The Congregationalist has accomplished a great and useful mission in the past; may its shadow and usefulness never be less in the future.—Prof. G. S. F. Savage, D.D.

It may justly be said that The Congregationalist today is the best religious newspaper published in New England. It is liberal in spirit, recognizes a wide field of usefulness and has illustrated in late years, to a remarkable degree, the amenities of religious journalism.—The Boston Herald.

The worthy crown of fourscore years of splendid service to the denomination represented and the general Church of Christ in America. We wish our octogenarian contemporary, which combines the wisdom of age with the vigor of youth, many happy returns of the day.—Christian Commonwealth, London.

In enterprise, spirit, vigor and scholarship The Congregationalist is always admirable. From start to finish it is edited with the utmost care, the simplest announcement of a news item being edited with as much care as its most emphatic denominational utterances. It is the oldest religious newspaper in the world and the best.—Journal of Education.

It is the leading and most authoritative organ of the Orthodox denomination in this country and represents, more than any other, the advanced Christian thinkers and expounders of Biblical literature. . . . While it is liberal in theological matters it maintains an unshaken hold on all so-called fundamental doctrines of the Orthodox faith.—Boston Transcript.

Newspapers, like men, are constantly changing their relative positions, and there has been a notable readjustment of values in religious journalism in the last ten years. Among the small group of journals which have rightly interpreted the signs of the times and have broadened their scope with the broadening of life, The Congregationalist holds foremost rank.—The Outlook.

It comes about as near the ideal of what a religious paper should be as the exigencies and demands of a matter-of-fact, work-a-day existence will permit. It has never thought itself so good at any time that it has not kept trying hard to get better all the while. It knows how to be orthodox without treading in a circle, how to be progressive without being foolhardy.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Moved, That the hearty congratulations of this association be communicated to The Congregationalist upon the celebration of its eightieth anniversary and upon the rich and beautiful number by which this event was commemorated on the 12th instant. Many of us have read The Congregationalist regularly for many years. We have considered it a very helpful paper in its general influence in our parishes and we rejoice now in its wide circulation. We are proud of its high position among denominational newspapers. Many of the reminiscences in this anniversary number have awakened most tender recollections. We are thankful to God for the good men who have been prominent in its management, and we anticipate for it increasing influence in the time to come.—Resolution adopted by the Middlesex Union Association, Mass.

A Cleveland pastor: "I rejoice in the standard which you set for the other religious papers It has been a favorite remark of mine that The Congregationalist is edited every week to its remotest corner."

Spring

Is the season for purifying, cleansing, and renewing. The accumulations of waste everywhere are being removed. Winter's icy grasp is broken and on all sides are indications of nature's returning life, renewed force, and awakening power.

Spring

Is the time for purifying the blood, cleansing the system and renewing the physical powers. Owing to close confinement, diminished perspiration and other causes, in the winter, impurities have not passed out of the system as they should but have accumulated in the blood.

Spring

Is therefore the best time to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, because the system is now most in need of medicine. That Hood's Sarsaparilla is the best blood purifier and Spring medicine is proved by its wonderful cures. A course of Hood's Sarsaparilla now may prevent great suffering later on.

Hood's

Sarsaparilla.

Is the One True Blood Purifier. All druggists. $1. Prepared only by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Hood's Pills cure Liver Ills; easy to take, easy to operate. 25c.

IT COSTS NO MORE.

"Do you object to having an added beauty and originality in your house, at no extra cost?"

This is our inquiry of the patrons of our Wood Mantel department. It is only another way of explaining that, although our patterns are made by our own draughtsmen from strictly private designs, we place them in competition with the commonplace styles of the average furniture dealer at no extra cost.

It is because of this enterprise that our Mantel trade has increased until it is today the largest in this country. We send our Mantels to every State in the Union. Low price and a high artistic and architectural beauty are powerful factors in bringing us these orders.

May we not estimate on any Mantels you may require? On request we send our latest Mantel Catalogue for 1896, which shows engravings and prices. Four cents postage should be inclosed if it is to come by mail.

PAINE FURNITURE CO.,

48 CANAL STREET, BOSTON.

ESTABLISHED 1849
MACULLAR PARKER COMPANY
400 WASHINGTON ST BOSTON
166 WESTMINSTER ST PROVIDENCE
THE BEST CLOTHING FOR MEN AND BOYS

VACATION TOURS EUROPE

H. GAZE & SONS, 52d Year.

All expenses—$175 to $800—all expenses.

HIGH CLASS ARRANGEMENTS.

Spring and Summer Vacation Tours, Europe. Thirty Tours, ranging in price from $175 to $800, visiting England, Ireland, Scotland, France, Holland, Rhine, Germany, Italy, Switzerland, Danube, Austria, etc.

North Cape and Russia Party, June 27.
Annual Round the World Party, Sept.
Holy Land Party (Egypt and the Nile)—
Spring and Autumn—Four tours annually.

Independent tickets for any desired tour in Europe, with or without hotel coupons. Estimates furnished. Agents all lines steamers. Choice rooms secured. Gaze's Tourist Gazette free, gives particulars.

113 Broadway, New York. H. Gaze & Sons, Ltd., 201 Washington St., Boston.

CRUISE OF THE AMERICAN BUILT STEAMER "OHIO."

The largest and finest yacht steamer in the world. Dining room holds 200 persons, and only this number will be taken on the cruise.

June 27th to August 27th. Cruise to Russia, Sweden, Norway and the Midnight Sun, and the total eclipse of the sun, visible August 8th. Rate, $475 upwards.

June 6th, July 1st and 8th. European Tours. Send for descriptive catalogues.

THOMAS FOREIGN TOURIST CO., 1715 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, or Leon L. Collver, New England Agent, 306 Washington Street, Boston.

Cook's Tours to Europe.

All Traveling Expenses Included.

Our Annual May Party, the first of our high-class parties to Europe, will sail by the White Star Line SS. "Majestic" on May 6. Succeeding departures May 16, 23, 25, June 10, 17, 27. All the arrangements for these parties are in every respect first-class.

Illustrated programs free. Railroad and steamship tickets for individual travelers everywhere.

THOS. COOK & SON,
261 and 1225 Broadway, New York.

Going To... EUROPE?

H. Gaze & Sons (Ltd.)

The Universal Tourist Agts. (Est. 1844) will send out

67 Escorted Parties

of the highest-class. Write for the details. Individual Tours Everywhere, and choicest berths on all steamship lines. TOURIST GAZETTE—POST FREE.

113 Broadway, N.Y.
or 201 Washington Ft., Boston; 220 So. Clark St., Chicago; 135 So. Fifth St., Philadelphia.

THE MIDNIGHT SUN

By S. S. "OHIO," the largest and finest steam yacht in the world, leaving New York, June 27, 1896, visiting England, Russia, Finland, Denmark, Sweden, Norway and the Midnight Sun, stopping at Bodo to witness the total eclipse August 8. Lectures on astronomy by Miss Procter and others. $475.00 and upwards.

University Cruise September 16, as far east as India $950.00 and upwards.

European Tours June 6th, July 1st and 8th.

THE THOMAS FOREIGN TOURIST CO.,
1715 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
LEON L. COLLVER, N. E. Agt.,
306 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

EUROPEAN TOURS.

14th Year. Personally conducted by Dr. and Mrs. Paine. Limited party. Terms reasonable. Address H. S. PAINE, M.D., Glens Falls, N. Y.

85 DAYS IN EUROPE.

Few vacancies in limited party to visit England, France, Germany, Belgium, Switzerland, Italy, Gibraltar. Personally conducted by Prof. Camille Thurwanger, 31 Pierce Building, Boston, Mass.

KIMBALL'S TOURS

in Europe (8th season). Limited party sails June 24, on "St. Louis." Moderate price, comprehensive route.
EDWIN C. KIMBALL, 56 Summer St., Boston, Mass.

THE NEWTON REST CURE
WEST NEWTON, MASS.

A private house in a fine situation has been arranged by a physician to receive a limited number of ladies temporarily disabled through nervous diseases

Not a Patent Medicine.

In cases of

Paralysis
Vertigo
Dyspepsia
Insomnia
Constipation
Sick and Nervous Headaches

Freligh's Tonic

A Phosphorized Cerebro-Spinant.

has been prescribed by over forty thousand physicians with wonderful success. Sample by mail, 25 cents; regular bottle, $1.00, 100 doses. Concentrated, prompt, powerful. Descriptive pamphlet, full directions, testimonials, etc., sent to any address.

I. O. Woodruff & Co.,
Manufacturing Chemists,
106-108 Fulton Street, New York City.

Formula on Every Bottle.

Financial.

7 PER CENT. NET.

First Mortgage Loans on Improved Farms in the Wonderfully Fertile Red River Valley

and in North Dakota and Minnesota. 20 years of experience in the business, and an actual residence of over 8 years in the Red River Valley and of over 22 in Minnesota and North Dakota. A personal knowledge of lands and values. Loans only made to industrious, thrifty farmers, on well improved farms. I give my personal supervision to the business. Loans made in your name and interest coupon-notes and mortgages and applications sent to you and held by you. Interest collected by me and forwarded to you by New York Check. Funds now earning you only 2, 3, or 4 per cent. in Savings Banks will here earn you 7 per cent.—about doubling your income. Remit funds for investment by New York or Boston Draft, or by personal check payable to my order. Address

E. P. GATES,
2628 Portland Avenue, Minneapolis, Minn.

Iowa Loan & Trust Co.,
of Des Moines, Iowa.

Capital, $500,000. Surplus, $335,000.

This old and reliable company has been in successful business operation for over 23 years, and has always met every obligation promptly at maturity.

Its Surplus is now larger than ever before, and the company continues under the same careful management. Its Debenture Bonds are amply secured by

FIRST MORTGAGES ON REAL ESTATE,

$105,000 of such mortgages being deposited for the security of each series of $100,000 Bonds.

Bonds in sums of $200, $300, $500 and $1,000 for sale by

FREEMAN A. SMITH,
Ex-Treasurer American Baptist Missionary Union,
Office, 31 Milk St., Room 22,
Correspondence solicited. Boston

YOU SELL WE BUY

DO YOU WANT TO SELL A Western Mortgage
or Western Land—avoid foreclosure costs—stop sending good money after bad—get a good 5 % investment instead? State exact location, condition of title, and your low price. Over $2,000,000 in Western securities successfully handled by the present management of this corporation
THE BOSTON REALTY, INDEMNITY AND TRUST CO
Send for our Bond List. 38 Equitable Building, Boston

YOUR MONEY

Is safe when invested in my Iowa Farm Mortgages. No loss for 22 years. Address

ARTHUR S. LAKE, Shenandoah, Iowa.

THE ST. DENIS,
Broadway and Eleventh Street,
Opposite Grace Church, - NEW YORK.
EUROPEAN PLAN.

"There is an atmosphere of home comfort and hospitable treatment at the St. Denis which is rarely met with in a public house, and which insensibly draws you there as often as you turn your face toward New York."

THE BUSINESS OUTLOOK.

The past week has witnessed, if not an actual revival in trade, at least a revival of hope. The general feeling in financial and commercial circles is improved undeniably, and with favorable weather it would not be surprising to see quite a brisk trade develop. The situation is much more promising than some pessimists will allow, as witness railroad earnings, bank clearings and the condition of several important industries.

A feature in the trade situation since our last report has been the formation of a combination of steel manufacturers to regulate the production and price of steel. An immediate result of this combination was an advance of $3 per ton in steel billets and $1.25 per ton in Bessemer pig iron. These advances have given other iron products a corresponding stimulus, and the whole iron industry is reported more active, in marked contrast to its dull and flat state of a week or two ago. The beneficial effects of this improvement in iron and steel trade cannot fail to be communicated to other industries.

The situation in boots and shoes and leather continues to improve, but there is little improvement as yet in cotton and woolen goods, especially the latter. More woolen mills have closed down, and wool houses report the demand for raw wool as excessively dull. While jobbers in various lines do not report much improvement, it is known that retailers are disposing of more goods and this must soon result in calls upon jobbers.

The stock market has reflected the better feeling and security values have recorded moderate advances, although the volume of trading upon the stock exchanges has continued limited.

For allaying hoarseness and irritation of the throat, use "Brown's Bronchial Troches." 25 cents a box. Avoid imitations.

Half an Inch on Your Nose.—It has been well said that half an inch on a man's nose makes quite a difference in his appearance. It is a small matter, but its importance does not come from its size, but its prominence. The same argument might well be used of certain pieces of household furniture or decoration, notably in the case of a wood mantel, which, perhaps, more than any other low priced purchase, gains added importance from the prominence of its position. Our readers should do nothing toward the purchase of a wood mantel without first visiting the mantel warerooms of the Paine Furniture Company on Canal Street.

Chandler & Co.

RETAILERS OF FINE GLOVES.

THE BEST MAKES ONLY.

Our line of Spring Styles is now open, and the

Duchesse Perfect Fitting Glove

is more popular than ever. We unhesitatingly warrant it to be the best glove made.

Four Button, Colors, Plain Back, $1.50
" " Black, " " 1.75
" " Colors and Black, Embroidered Back, . . . 1.75
Seven Hook, Colors and Black, Embroidered Back, . . . 1.75

Gloves sent anywhere by mail, and satisfaction guaranteed.

CHANDLER & CO.,
Winter Street, Boston.

Bottlebinding.

You can't judge of the quality of a book by the binding, nor tell the contents by the title. You look for the name of the author before you buy the book. The name of Robert Louis Stevenson (for instance) on the back guarantees the inside of the book, whatever the outside may be.

There's a parallel between books and bottles. The binding, or wrapper, of a bottle is no guide to the quality of the medicine the bottle contains. The title on the bottle is no warrant for confidence in the contents. It all depends on the author's name. Never mind who made the bottle. Who made the medicine? That's the question.

Think of this when buying Sarsaparilla It isn't the binding of the bottle or the name of the medicine that you're to go by. That's only printer's ink and paper! The question is, who made the medicine? What's the author's name? When you see Ayer's name on a Sarsaparilla bottle, that's enough. The name Ayer guarantees the best, and has done so for 50 years.

Our Great Millinery Display

Has attracted thousands of lovers of artistic headgear. Expressions of delighted surprise and admiration have been heard on every hand. All agree that never before have they seen such an elaborate exhibition of Trimmed Hats and Bonnets, Untrimmed Straw Hats, exquisite French Flowers and Beautiful Millinery Ornaments.

Every woman of refined taste will want to see this display—it's worth a visit to Boston.

The best in Millinery at prices lower than elsewhere.

Wm. S. Butler & Co.,
The Leading Millinery House,
TREMONT STREET, BOSTON.

BOSTON SUPERINTENDENTS' UNION.

Essentials to Successful Teaching, the subject at the meeting last Monday night, dealt with the most important feature of Sunday school work. Mr. G. W. Pease of the Springfield Training School inspired his hearers with the present day need of normal teaching, since teachers well taught are the primary necessity of good work in the Bible school. Teaching, the speaker said, is one of the finest of fine arts, and like any profession it contains an element of specialization which must be developed to the highest possible degree by way of preparation. Not alone is Bible knowledge a requisite, but child-study is only second in importance, and this is hardly more needed than knowledge of the principles of teaching. Ideals are the products of normal study and seeds of thorough teaching.

That the personality of the teacher is a factor not to be disregarded was made apparent by the words of a regular teacher, Mr. E. W. Church. His ideal personality at the head of every class would be a composite of good health, punctuality, frankness and love. A few supplementary thoughts were given by Mr. E. E. Grover, touching on education in general, and may be summed up in the words, "teaching is being," showing that every quality of the teacher's nature should be such as to call forth a response from the complex organisms under his care.

For Over-Indulgence
Take Horsford's Acid Phosphate.
It preserves and renews the vitality, strengthens the nerves and stimulates the stomach to healthy action.

Marriages.

The charge for marriage notices is twenty-five cents.

BROWN—WARREN—In Needles, Cal., March 14, Rev. John Fletcher Brown, pastor of the church there, and Evangeline Warren.

Deaths.

The charge for notices of deaths is twenty-five cents. Each additional line ten cents, counting eight words to a line. The money should be sent with the notice.

BOYNTON—In Calistoga, Cal., March 11, Charlotte Augusta, daughter of the late Rev. John and Charlotte Freeman Boynton, formerly of Phippsburg, Me., aged 66 yrs.

DWINELL—In Oakland, Cal., March 22, Mrs. Rebecca Maxwell, widow of the late Prof. Israel E. Dwinell, D. D., a native of Jonesboro, Tenn., aged 72 yrs., 4 mos.

HIPPS—In Hartford, Ct., March 9, Elizabeth F. A., wife of the late Abner J. Phipps, Ph. D., and daughter of the late Dr. Alanson Abbe of Boston, aged 71 yrs. Interment at Forest Hills Cemetery.

WILSON—In Orono, Me., March 27, Mrs. Abby A. Wilson, widow of Hon. Nathaniel Wilson and mother of Rev. F. A. Wilson of Andover.

The Story of # Puritana.

Prof. Dixi Crosby, M. D., LL. D., who for thirty-two years was at the head of Dartmouth Medical College, belonged to the famous Crosby family of physicians, which for several generations has furnished more distinguished medical men than any other family in America. His father was Dr. Asa Crosby, of Dartmouth, who procured the charter of the State medical society, of which he was for thirty years a conspicuous member; one brother, Dr. Josiah Crosby, invented the invalid bed and the method of making extensions of fractured limbs by adhesive strips; another brother, Dr. Thos. R. Crosby, was chief surgeon in Columbian College Hospital during the war, and later professor of animal and vegetable physiology at Dartmouth College; while Dr. Dixi Crosby himself was the inventor and discoverer of various important improvements in medicine and surgery, including a new and unique mode of reducing métacarpophalangeal dislocation, opening of abscess at hip-joint, etc., etc.

At the early age of twenty-four his extraordinary skill and success in overcoming disease had already attracted the attention of medical men throughout the world, and won for him the highest honors. His greatest achievement was the discovery of an original method for perfecting and compounding in permanent form what has become known as his "prize formula," and which, under the name of Puritana, is legally protected.

The foundation of this remarkable medical discovery consists of simple New England roots and herbs, and the original family recipe for it has descended to the long line of Crosby physicians from their Puritan ancestors. Its peculiar vegetable composition rendered it necessary to brew it whenever needed in the early days of its history, and after the scattering of the Puritan families to remote localities, where the necessary ingredients were not to be found, many attempts were made to put it up in permanent form, all of which failed until Dr. Dixi Crosby discovered means and methods, the result of which is: Nature's Cure compounded in the laboratory of Common Sense.

It cures from head to foot.

Puritana

Nature's Cure

For diseases of the Stomach Liver
Heart
Blood Kidneys
And for Weak Lungs
Starved Nerves
Fagged Brain

It cures after everything else has failed. It cures cases that have been given up as hopeless. It cures pleasantly. It cures positively. It cures permanently.

Puritana is the prize formula of Prof. Dixi Crosby, M. D., LL. D., for over 30 years at the head of Dartmouth Medical College.

Get of your druggist this great disease-conquering discovery (the price is $1 for the complete treatment, consisting of one bottle of Puritana, one bottle of Puritana Pills, and one bottle of Puritana Tablets, all enclosed in one package) or write us, and you will bless the day when you heard of Puritana. The Puritana Compound Co., Concord, N. H.

JOEL GOLDTHWAIT & Co.

Have received per steamers "Angloman," "Bothnia," "Peruvian," "Sachem," "Sagamore," "Scythia" and "Victoria,"

60 BALES OF CHOICE
Oriental Carpets and Rugs.

These goods were culled from the markets of the East by our Mr. RANNEY on his annual trip, and the number of provinces represented in the collection, the assortment of sizes and patterns and range of prices, combine to make the most attractive display of Persian, Indian and Turkish floor coverings we have ever shown. We shall give our entire street floor to the exhibition and sale of the above goods, and invite inspection.

Genuine Oriental Rugs and Carpets
At Exceptionally Low Prices.

JOEL GOLDTHWAIT & CO.,
163 to 169 Washington Street (Near Cornhill), Boston, Mass.

Church Cushions
Correspondence Solicited.
Ostermoor & Co., 116 Elizabeth St New York, N.Y.

Blake Bell Foundry
Established in 1820.
Successors to WM. BLAKE & CO.
Manufacture bells of every description, single or chimes of Copper and Tin. Address
BLAKE BELL CO., Boston, Mass.

THE LARGEST ESTABLISHMENT MANUFACTURING
CHURCH BELLS CHIMES & PEALS in the World.
PUREST BELL METAL, (COPPER AND TIN.)
Send for Price and Catalogue.
McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY, BALTIMORE, MD.

Buckeye Bell Foundry
E. W. Vanduzen Co., Cincinnati, Ohio
Best Pure Copper and Tin Church Bells & Chimes.
Highest Award at World's Fair. Gold Medal at Mid-winter Exp'n. Price, terms, etc., supplied free.

BELLS
Steel Alloy Church & School Bells. Send for Catalogue. The C. S. BELL CO., Hillsboro, O.

A BELLS all kinds, big and little—for Church and School, for Fire, Factory and Farm.
Catalogue FREE. AMERICAN
BELL FOUNDRY CO., NORTHVILLE, MICH.

Unequalled in Strength

The high-carbon steel and nickel steel used in the tubing of Columbia bicycles have no equal in their power to resist the strains to which a bicycle frame is put. This tubing is all made in the Columbia mills especially for Columbias

Standard of the World

Columbias in quality and construction are in a class by themselves. $100 to all alike

The Columbia Catalogue, handsomest art work of the year, is free from the Columbia agent, or is mailed for two 2-cent stamps.

POPE MFG. CO., Hartford, Conn.
Columbia Branch Houses and Agencies are almost everywhere.

IT'S MOTTO IS "PERFECTION"
STRENTH AND BEAUTY
COMBINED WITH SUCH UNSURPASSABLE FEATURES AS ITS FAMOUS ABSOLUTELY DUST PROOF BEARINGS AND OTHER POINTS OF SUPERIORITY BACKED BY YEARS OF SUCCESS ACCHIEVED BY THE FACT IT IS THE WHEEL THAT HAS ALWAYS BEEN "BUILT FOR HONOR"
THE WARWICK
FORE MOST IN THE RANKS OF HIGH GRADE WHEELS
+ CATALOGUE FREE +
WARWICK CYCLE M'F'G Co SPRINGFIELD, MASS
245 COLUMBUS AVE. BOSTON
34 UNION SQ. NEW YORK

245 Columbus Ave., Boston, and 34 Union Sq., N. Y.

Nursery Cloth.

An absolute necessity for every modern nursery. Made of bleached muslin on both sides, with white wadding between, firmly quilted, and 34 inches wide. Highly recommended by physicians for bed pads. Thoroughly absorbent and easily washed.

MATTRESS PROTECTORS

made of it are indispensable, absolutely preventing damage from stains, etc. Made for any size bed, bound and ready for use.

Both articles kept by leading dry goods houses. If your dealer don't keep them, write for sample.

Excelsior Quilting Co., Laight St., New York.

NEW MAMMOTH POULTRY CUIDE showing colored plate of chickens in natural colors. Finest book ever published. Almost 100 pages. Tells all about Poultry for Profit or Pleasure. Price only 15c. JOHN BAUSCHER, JR., Box 262, Freeport, Ills.

THE CHRISTIAN INDUSTRIAL LEAGUE.

An organization for men inside the church, with religious, social, business, sickness and death benefits. Send for printed matter to the Christian Industrial League, Springfield, Mass.

WOMAN'S BOARD PRAYER MEETING.

PILGRIM HALL, CONGREGATIONAL HOUSE, BOSTON, APRIL 3.

Good Friday furnished its own topic for the hour. Mrs. De Witt S. Clark of Salem presided and read from Matt. 27 the story of the crucifixion. She spoke of the draped churches and cathedrals in token of the death which the day marks, of the thousands of pilgrims whom one might meet in Jerusalem, of the women who were at the cross and the privilege which is granted to the women of today in standing before the cross; also of the fact that many make for themselves crosses heavier to bear than those which our Lord himself lays upon them.

Mrs. J. L. Hill said it was a comfort to find that in the trial of Jesus before the governor a woman resisted his conviction, and so the message of Pilate's wife has made her memorable in all the ages, with the Marys who stood at the cross. The joyful Easter news was given to women, and for women this is really the gladdest time in all the year.

Mrs. Judson Smith called attention to the promise, "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me," which has been verified in the experience of Christians the world over. She also spoke of the spiritual awakening in Foochow of which Miss Newton has recently written.

Mrs. Thompson said that the crucifixion was a time of great sadness among the disciples, not only because their beloved master was leaving them, but because they did not comprehend the full meaning of his death. We look from a different standpoint and sing, "In the cross of Christ I glory." Mrs. Hill, Mrs. Goodell, Mrs. L. S. Ward, Miss Ives, Miss Gilman, Mrs. C. C. Coffin and Miss Washburn led the devotions of the hour.

Mrs. Cyrus Hamlin sent an extract from a recent letter from Mrs. Lee of Marash, showing the work that has been done in caring for refugees and the desperate need of those who have been left without home, food or clothes.

The death of Rev. J. F. Smith of Marsovan was mentioned and deep sympathy expressed for Mrs. Smith, formerly Miss Sears, for his children and for the Marsovan station, again sorely bereaved so soon after the death of Miss King.

Mrs. Strong read a letter from Mrs. Winsor of Sirur, in which she told of a guest, a heathen man, who came to see Miss Child when she was in the city. He was the chief of twenty villages, who waited five days for her arrival and whose object in coming was to beg her to send a preacher and an experienced Bible woman to his villages. At first Mrs. Winsor interpreted for her and then she seemed to catch all his meaning from his intense manner, even without any knowledge of his language, and promised to do the best she could for him. The meeting closed with a prayer of consecration led by Mrs. Clark.

Remember!

You are wasting money when you buy cheap b nding instead of the best

Remember there is no "just as good" when the merchant urges something else for

S·H·& M·
REGISTERED TRADE MARK.

Bias Velveteen Skirt Binding.
Look for "S. H. & M.," on the Label, and take no other.

If your dealer will not supply you we will.

Send for samples showing labels and materials, the S. H. & M. Co., P. O. Box 699, New York City

The use of the Bouillon Spoon adds to the gentle art of entertainment at dinner—it lends charm as well as elegant convenience to the guest. The delicate chaste designs of our silverware are always a pleasure to the lover of the useful combined with the beautiful.—Jewelers will show you them. Interesting booklet about Spoons and Forks sent to any address free Holmes & Edwards Silver Co., Bridgeport, Conn. New York Salesroom, 2 Maiden Lane, 2d door from Broadway. 142

What Rudyard Kipling Thinks of the Pocket Kodak.

"I can only say that I am amazed at the excellence of the little Kodak's work."

Rudyard Kipling

Booklet free, tells all about it.

Pocket Kodak loaded for 12 pictures, 1½ x 2 in. $5.00.

EASTMAN KODAK CO.
Rochester, N. Y.

WELL DRESSED MEN
wear only merchant tailor made clothes.

A Tailor-Made Suit For $10.00

We'll make to your measure a Frock or Sack Suit of

ALL WOOL GOODS

equal to any tailors $18 garment for $10. Other Suits and Trousers just as cheap. We save 50 per cent by buying big lots of woolens direct from the mills—that accounts for it.

All goods sent C. O. D., with privilege of examination and try on before paying express agent. We pay express charges. Send for samples of cloth, tape line and full particulars, Free.

LOUIS I. VEHON, Tailor, 155 W. Jackson St., Chicago.

REX BRAND
Extract of BEEF FLAVOR
Sample, 4 cents. Book free.
CUDAHY - - SO. OMAHA

A. B. & E. L. SHAW
Established 1780.
Largest Manufacturers of
PULPIT SUITS
27 SUDBURY ST.
Boston, Mass.
Send 5c. stamp for new 100-page catalogue.

BIOGRAPHICAL.

REV. JUDSON. G. SPENCER.

he church in Charlton has sustained a great loss, the entire community has been saddened by death of the pastor, Rev. J. G. Spencer, who ed away very suddenly, March 26, in his fifty-nth year. He had returned from a visit to raska a few weeks since, and had not been well, his condition was not thought serious till a few rs before his death. He had been pastor of the rch about two years, and had been an untiring, nest worker, sustaining services also in different ts of the town with good results. Mr. Spencer born in St. Lawrence County, N. Y., in 1839, lied at Fairfield College in New York, and was ained in 1864 and his early ministry was in the te of New York. Afterwards he went to the st and preached in the States of Iowa, Illinois, nnesota, Colorado and Nebraska, much of the e in the employ of the Home Missionary Society. leaves a wife, one son and four daughters. The eral services took place Sunday, March 29, at the rch, Rev. S. A. Burnaby of Southbridge offici-g, assisted by the Methodist Episcopal minister, . Mr. Harwood. A large concourse of people present, testifying to the great esteem in which brother was held.

REV. AUSTIN WILLEY.

ev. Austin Willey died in Northfield, Minn., rch 28, aged ninety. Mr. Willey's native place Campton, N. H., where he was born June 24, . He graduated from Bangor Seminary, class 37, and accepted a call to preach deliverance to oppressed as editor of The Liberty Standard of tland, Me., which continued till his health ed and he went West and was ordained at An-, Minn., in '59. Engaged again in journalism, was editor of the first religious paper in the te, The Northfield Journal, and continued to age to use all his powers by voice and pen in first of anti-slavery, and afterwards of temper-e, writing for religious and temperance papers.

REV. JOHN F. SMITH.

he American Board loses one of its ablest mis-naries in the death of Mr. Smith at Marsovan, rkey, March 20, at the age of 63. He was born at ndsor, Vt., received his education at Dartmouth the University of Wisconsin, being graduated n the latter in 1857. He studied theology at he Seminary and, a year after completing the rse, sailed for Turkey in May, 1863. He labored tinuously in his chosen field of service, occupy-in later years the chair of theology in Marsovan lege. He was a man of ripe scholarship, capable in practical affairs, and greatly beloved by all knew him. His wife, Mrs. Sarah E. Smith, sur-es him.

REV. WALTER BARTON.

Ir. Barton was born in Granby in 1833, graduated m Amherst College in 1856 and from Hartford eological Seminary in 1861. For a brief period supplied churches in Oxford, Ct., and in Graf-, Vt., until he was ordained and settled over the rch in South Amherst in 1864. He afterwards d pastorates in Suffield, Ct., Lynn and Attleboro. 1893 he became a resident of Hyde Park, where died March 29.

HOME MISSIONARY FUND.

| | |
|---|---|
| Friend, Whitinsville | $5.00 |
| Subscriber of Congregationalist | 5.00 |
| Augustus S. Fitch, Walton, N. Y. | 2.00 |
| S. Crane, Detroit, Mich. | 2.00 |
| bie M. Smith, Norwich, Ct. | 2.00 |
| Tomlinson, Shelton, Ct. | 2.00 |
| s. J. R. Gillette, Nordhoff, Cal. | 2.00 |
| arles T. Bauer, Jamaica Plain | 2.00 |

further sum is needed to cover for 1896 the nes already upon our home missionary list. As none have been cut off, and we hope no such essity will arise.

HOUSANDS have tested the great building-up ver of Hood's Sarsaparilla and have found re-ved strength, vigor and vitality in its use.

PRINGTIME is when nearly every one feels the d of some blood purifying, strength invigorating l health producing medicine. The real merit of od's Sarsaparilla is the reason of its widespread pularity. Its unequaled success is its best ommendation. The whole system is susceptible the most good from a medicine like Hood's saparilla, taken at this time, and we would lay cial stress upon the time and remedy, for tory has it recorded that delays are dangerous. remarkable success achieved by Hood's Sarsa-illa and the many words of praise it has received ke it worthy of your confidence. We ask you to e this medicine a fair trial.

ARMSTRONG & McKELVY Pittsburgh.
BEYMER-BAUMAN Pittsburgh.
DAVIS-CHAMBERS Pittsburgh.
FAHNESTOCK Pittsburgh.
ANCHOR, ECKSTEIN } Cincinnati.
ATLANTIC, BRADLEY, BROOKLYN, JEWETT, ULSTER, UNION } New York.
SOUTHERN, SHIPMAN } Chicago.
COLLIER, MISSOURI, RED SEAL, SOUTHERN } St. Louis.
JOHN T. LEWIS & BROS. CO Philadelphia.
MORLEY Cleveland.
SALEM Salem, Mass.
CORNELL Buffalo.
KENTUCKY Louisville.

"LET WELL-ENOUGH ALONE" is a safe maxim to follow in painting — as in everything else. Pure White Lead and Pure Linseed Oil are and always have been the best and standard paint. To be sure of getting examine the brand (see list genuine brands).

Pure White Lead

For colors tint White Lead with the NATIONAL LEAD CO.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors. They are the best and most permanent.

Pamphlet giving valuable information and card showing samples of colors free; also cards showing pictures of twelve houses of different designs painted in various styles or combinations of shades forwarded upon application to those intending to paint.

NATIONAL LEAD CO.,
1 Broadway, New York.

THE HALF-HOSE THAT ARE STAMPED
Shawknit TRADE MARK. ON THE TOE
Fit Well, Look Well, Wear Well.
They are the only half-hose constructed in accordance with
THE SHAPE OF THE HUMAN FOOT.
Sold by the trade generally, and obtainable direct from the makers, who will send a Descriptive Price-List to any applicant,
SHAW STOCKING CO., Lowell, Mass.

STEARNS BICYCLES
The Yellow Fellow
Handsome Catalogue Mailed Free
The Stearns is a modern wheel of advanced construction. Lightest, strongest and lasts the longest. The '96 Stearns surpasses all former models.
E. C. Stearns & Co., Syracuse, N.Y.

They both use Pride of the West muslin for their white skirts.

How to buy Silverware—

Make sure of a well-known trade-mark on every article.

Our own marks are:
On spoons, knives, and forks
"1847 Rogers Bros."

On other articles MERIDEN B. COMPANY or 1847 ROGERS BROS. SILVER PLATE

New patterns are shown in our Free Book of Illustrations
MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO.
Meriden, Conn.; 208 5th Av., New York
(Please mention this paper.)

OTHER CHRISTIAN WORK.

The most recent census of Roman Catholics in the archdiocese of Boston gives an estimated population of 600,000. There are 34,382 pupils in the parochial schools, 412 students in the colleges and academies for men and 760 pupils in the academies for young women; 427 priests minister in the 159 churches. The city of Boston has 38 churches and seven different nationalities are provided with pastors who preach in the vernacular.

In order to encourage and stimulate greater study of the Bible the American Institute of Sacred Literature in Chicago offered, last year, two prizes of $100 and $50 each to college students for the best examinations in Hebrew, New Testament Greek and the English Bible. Eighty-one colleges were represented by the competitors and the winners were: In Hebrew, Isaac Husik of the University of Pennsylvania and Godlove C. Seibert of the German Theological Seminary, Bloomfield, N. J.; in New Testament Greek, Edna White of the University of New Brunswick and Clyde V. Foyle of the University of Oregon; in the English Bible, Grace E. McCaw of Rockford College and H. Edwin Hawkes of Yale. Not the least interesting feature of this competition, as reflected in the names, is the diversity of nationality represented.

Through the generosity of the Boston & Maine officials, the railroad branch of the Y. M. C. A. at Concord, N. H., has become a reality with permanent headquarters in the two-story building furnished for the purpose on Depot Square opposite the passenger station, and entirely remodeled and fitted up with every facility and convenience suited to the wants of the hundreds of railroad employés who spend some portion of every day in the city. It has bathing and sleeping rooms, a reading-room and a hall for gatherings and entertainments, which are open day and night for all railroad men and their families. Over 300 are already enrolled as members. The home was formally opened for inspection March 24, and in the evening were held the dedicatory services in one of the large halls of the city. Good music was furnished by an orchestra and several addresses were made, closing with one by Hon. Lucius Tuttle, president of the system, in which he said the branch was located in this city because of the goodness of the soil, and he wished to give it every advantage. Its success would determine the location of other branches at different points in the system. The officials do not consider it in the sense of a charity, but the recognition of a need to stimulate the highest loyalty and efficiency in service. The home is in charge of R. E. Burleigh, late of Brooklyn, N. Y., who is fast proving himself the right man for the place.

Whittier House, Jersey City, the only social settlement in the State, continues to increase in usefulness, its only limitations at present being in the line of money and workers. Its building is a handsome one on a prominent street, but the section round about overflows with the classes that are needy in more ways then one. The original mothers' class continues to brighten tired lives and sweeten dreary homes. The first mystery about the class and suspicious questionings as to meetings, where social and creed distinctions were absent, are passing away. The sewing school that began with three members now numbers 275. The free kindergarten is increasing in popularity and is more than twice as large as at first. The Young Women's Club thrives so well that the head worker, Miss C. F. Bradford, was asked to start a Men's Club, which she has done amidst much enthusiasm. There are now, also, a Young Citizens' Club, a Lincoln Club for boys and a Newsboys' Club started not long ago. The latter numbers 77, and as many more have been turned away because of lack of accommodations. Another truly, though still not formally, Christian agency of the house is the mission for street girls. It has been successful in winning the confidence of many of this class. The classes with small fees continue to be well attended. Instruction is given in about ten branches. Other forms of activity are lectures, entertainments, loan and saving funds, the services of a poor man's lawyer, a poor man's doctor, etc. The circulating picture gallery continues to be one of the most popular features. The pictures—reproductions of genuine works of art—are explained to the friends of the house in the neighborhood and then loaned for two weeks or longer.

Catarrh. The best remedy is Pond's Extract. For old and obstinate cases, use Pond's Extract Catarrh Cure, 75 cents, and Nasal Syringe, 25 cents.

IT'S TALKED ABOUT.—A cured man has a quick memory, and those who have once tried Adamson's Cough Balsam think of it, talk of it, and get it for themselves and their friends, whenever troubled with coughs, colds, or other throat and lung complaints.

MESSRS. JOEL GOLDTHWAIT & CO. are displaying a most attractive line of Persian, Indian and Turkish floor coverings, as well as sixty bales of choice Oriental carpets and rugs, which will be sold at exceptionally low prices. A cordial invitation is extended by the firm to inspect these creations of the East.

anæmia

If you are anæmic, your blood is starving for fat; you are not assimilating your food-fat. You can assimilate

Scott's Emulsion.

MADAME PORTER'S BALSAM

THIS LADY

whose portrait appears on every bottle of Balsam sold, is liked very much by girls and boys, little and grown up, everywhere. For 60 years the pleasant taste of "Madame Porter's" has been in the mouths of the people, and millions own to the wonderful relief it affords when a cold is caught and a cough is mocking good nature. There's safety, too, in "Porter's." Better have it on hand.

Safe and Sure Good as Candy

Druggists sell it, to cost not over 25 and 50 cents (two sizes).

Proprietors: HALL & RUCKEL, Wholesale Druggists, New York.

MR. ZADOC PORTER'S BITTERS

DENT'S CORN GUM

Cures Corns, Warts, Bunions, etc. So easy to apply—it sticks fast. Ask for Dent's; take no other. Sold everywhere, or by mail 10 cents. C. S. DENT & CO. DETROIT, MICH.

Try Dent's Toothache Gum.

Good Health

It's glorious to be healthy; to sleep well; eat well and think well of all. Most diseases are of the nervous system and yield readily to

Dr. Miles' Nervine

Which Restores Health.

It is sold by all druggists on positive guarantee first bottle will benefit or your money will be refunded.

Dr. Miles Medical Co.

ELKHART, IND.

ALL DRUGGISTS SELL IT. BOOK ON HEART AND NERVES FREE.

I suffered terribly from roaring in my head during an attack of catarrh, and because very deaf, used Ely's Cream Balm and in three weeks could hear as well as ever.—A. E. Newman, Graling, Mich.

CATARRH

ELY'S CREAM BALM Opens and cleanses the Nasal Passages, Allays Pain and Inflammation, Heals the Sores, Protects the Membrane from colds, Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell. The Balm is quickly absorbed and gives relief at once.

A particle is applied to each nostril and is agreeable. Price 50 cents at Druggists or by mail.

ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren Street, New York.

HOOPING COUGH CROUP

Can be cured by using ROCHE'S HERBAL EMBROCATION

The celebrated and effectual English cure, without internal medicine. W. EDWARD & SON, Props., London, Eng. Wholesale, E. FOUGERA & CO., New York

THE GENUINE DR BLAUD'S IRON PILLS

have been prescribed with great success for more than 50 years by the leading physicians of Europe in the treatment of female patients. Specially recommended for

Poorness of the Blood and Constitutional Weakness.

Imported by E. Fougera & Co., N. Y.

To avoid imitations BLAUD is stamped on each pill.

The "Harris" Method of Giving

This little tract has been of immense service to the churches in suggesting systematic methods of giving. It was first published as an article in the Congregationalist, and attracted wide notice. Many large editions of the "True Method of Giving" in its present form have been sold. Price, 100 copies, $2.50; 35 copies, $1.00.

For sale at the office of The Congregationalist, Boston.

If you want a sure relief for pains in the back, side, chest, or limbs, use an

Allcock's Porous Plaster

BEAR IN MIND—Not one of the host of counterfeits and imitations is as good as the genuine.

CHURCH CARPETS AT MANUFACTURERS' PRICES. JOHN H. PRAY, SONS & CO., CARPETS AND UPHOLSTERY, 658 WASHINGTON ST., OPP. BOYLSTON ST., BOSTON.

OBITUARIES.

REV. THERON GAYLORD COLTON.

the morning of Friday, March 20, the spirit of T. G. Colton entered into rest. His death was the of a noble life and a useful Christian ministry. m do we see a life more complete. He was a ar of rare attainments, a pastor thoroughly de- to those whom it was his mission to serve, a her of more than usual interest and power and a d to every philanthropic movement.

was born at Westford, N. Y., July 31, 1820. His stors were of Puritan stock, and many were active aking the early history of this country. Since for five generations, there was no time when member of the family was not a student at Yale. ly all of them on graduation entered the Congre- mal ministry. At the age of eighteen Mr. Colton to New Haven to prepare to enter Yale College, e his older brother was tutor and two other broth- ere students. Six brothers attended that institu- and made brilliant records in scholarship, Mr. n taking honors in the class with which he gradu- i in 1844.

849 he graduated from Yale Theological Seminary was soon after ordained to his chosen calling, to h he gave nearly half a century of noble service. as married to Miss Jane Harwood at Lockport, , Sept. 13, 1849. Soon after his marriage he began ife work as a minister of the gospel at North n, Ct. He had two long pastorates in Ware and on, Mass., in the latter place writing two books storical value and interest. In 1866 he moved West e health of his family, and settled as pastor at ewater, Wis. He continued his pastorate at White- r till 1875, when he was called to Hudson, Mich. faithful labors with this church continued nine . In 1884 he was called to Rootstown, O., where mained eight years. He then returned to Hudson, cting to retire from public service, but his active and his devotion to the work of the ministry led acceptance of a call to the church at Sylvania, O. now in his seventy-third year, he divided his between his work in Sylvania and his home in on until he was stricken of paralysis Dec. 26, 1895, e seventy-sixth year of his life. He leaves a w, one daughter and three sons. One son is pastor e Congregational church at Patchogue, L. I.

Colton was greatly interested in our denomi- nal papers and lent important service in the ization of the Advance. His scholarship was well n and appreciated at Yale, during the early part s ministry. Soon after his ordination he was the e as professor of history in that institution. A e illness of typhoid fever prevented his election. vigorous health, his keen and well-trained mind ls aptness as a student of history and the classics important factors in his faithful ministry. Still important were his evangelical faith, his deep and his consistent daily life. All who knew him him, and were attracted toward the life which it is mission to proclaim. There was no uncertain from his pulpit, nor uncertain influence from fe. A blessed life has passed away, a blessed ory is left us. H. A. P.

GEORGE W. PRATT.

George W. Pratt died in Boston, at the home of C. A. Dickinson, D. D., March 21. He was born 22, 1855, in Everett, Mass., where his father was r. He was the grandson of Hon. Z. Eddy of East leboro, and in that town his early youth was spent.

Pratt was a man of rare ability, and, although he or many years an invalid, he exerted an influence h was effective and lasting. He was a superior ar. He and the late F. G. Pratt of the Youth's anion began the study of the languages at a very age under the tuition of their father, the late cis G. Pratt. George fitted for college at Phillips emy, Andover, and entered Harvard in 1873. In school and college he showed great intellectual y, standing among the first in his class and giving ise of a brilliant future. He was obliged to give s college course on account of ill health, and since with the exception of a brief time of service on oston Advertiser, he has been unable to do any con- us work.

had a remarkably comprehensive knowledge of ible and a deep religious nature, broad sympathies, rnest faith, great patience under trial and a living ction that for him to live was Christ. Restrained active service by the weakness of the flesh, he hat he was an ambassador in bonds; but he served his King, and by his Christian graciousness, sin- y and integrity he reflected honor upon the king- which he represented. He was conscious to the nd his death was a triumph of Christian faith. A er survives him, who has seen all the members of amily pass over before her during the past four

HANNAH WAITT.

March 6 entered into the heavenly rest Mrs. Han- (Vose) Waitt at her residence in Roslindale. She led out almost fourscore and ten years of a life of lar sweetness and unselfishness. In remarkable ssion of bodily and mental powers she patiently rustfully waited day by day the summons which knew could not long be delayed. It came at last out premonition. While she was busy about some tomed duty in her chamber the Lord called her. sat calmly down in her chair and immediately ed on. It was not death, but transition—the appro- e exodus of a mellowed and sweetened life.

n in Boston, Mrs. Waitt in early years was prom- ly identified with its social and religious life. As mber of the Bowdoin Street Congregational Church vas a recognized leader in its social and charitable . But few of her contemporaries survive her now member the faithful and loving service she ren . The Seamen's Friend and the Children's Friend eties were among the charitable agencies which ed her prayer, service and gifts and in whose gement she took an active part in the years long About thirty-five years ago Mrs. Waitt connected lf with the Central Congregational Church, Ja- a Plain, and was still an honored and beloved ber of the same at the time of her decease. She ved her husband, Henry Waitt, about forty years. down to the last she was interested in all current ts in the world, particularly in everything which ed to the condition and growth of her Master's dom. She was a constant and appreciative reader he Congregationalist for many years. The many thronged her home on the day of the funeral, both nd young, testified that sweet and fair and gentle her life as the flowers she loved and in which they gly embowered her, and her memory as pleasant eir perfume. J. B. K.

ELIZABETH B. WILD.

e Congregational church at Norton feels keenly oss of Mrs. Wild, who for more than twenty years een closely identified with its work and interests. Wild was born in Elizabeth City, N. J., but the r part of her life has been passed in Norton. A g mother, a most charitable neighbor, a devout tian, the pervasive influence of her spiritual life felt in every circle of the community, and every ement having for its purpose the building up of t's kingdom found in her a loyal and earnest sup- porter. She died March 24 at the age of 69 yrs., 4 mos., and 14 days, having outlived her husband, the late George W. Wild, less than a year. Three sons and a daughter, the wife of Hon. H. C. Joyner of Great Barrington, survive her.

ADELINE C. ADAMS.

Died in Camden, Me., at the homestead on High Street, March 25, Mrs. Adeline Cushing Adams, widow of the late Samuel G. Adams, aged 89 yrs. and 8 mos. Born in Camden, her whole life has been identified with the town, its progress and its interests. Early in her married life, at the same time with her husband, a prominent business man of the place, she joined the Congregational church, which she loved and labored to honor and strengthen. Always exemplary in life and character, her friends and acquaintances were led to respect and love her. But it was in the home and as a mother that she was best known. Four sons and six daughters constituted her ideal home and they were her care and her comfort. These children were trained "in the nurture and admonition of the Lord."

In later years it was her delight to have them with her and often as they gathered around her she would request the singing of some familiar hymns which she knew by heart and, until a few weeks of the end, she would join in a firm, sweet voice. Sometimes she would call for her favorite hymn, in the tune of Dennis:

Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Christian love.

So hers was indeed an ideal home.

Seven of the children survive the mother, thankful that they have been permitted to watch over her in the declining years, and they all, with fourteen of the grandchildren, were present for the farewell services at the home, which were happily conducted by her pastor, Rev. L. D. Evans. A son-in-law offered the committal prayer at the grave, when the sons and sons-in-law affectionately laid away her loved form in the family lot and beside her kindred dust. As to the real mother they could say:

Rest spirit, rest,
In heaven blest.

Her place can never be made good in the old home, so dear to children and children's children, for she herself was what made it home to them. But tender memories will make it ever a sacred shrine, as from time to time they may visit there. And now they are consoled by the thought that the mother was ripe for the change which has taken her to the mansions prepared in the heavenly home. Because of this, it is easy to say "Thy will be done." "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord." J. E. A.

A POUND of facts is worth oceans of theories. More infants are successfully raised on the Gail Borden Eagle Brand Condensed Milk than upon any other food. Infant Health is a valuable pamphlet for mothers. Send your address to the New York Condensed Milk Company, New York.

Leaders of Fashion

Endorse Fibre Chamois as the best support for puffed sleeves and flare skirts in the market.

CAUTION—Beware of imitations. The genuine article is plainly stamped . . . . . .

Fibre Chamois

All dry goods stores. Three weights.

105 COOK BOOK

Remember these Directions for using Cottolene

COOK BOOK 106

105

For shortening never use more than two-thirds as much Cottolene as you would of lard. When frying with Cottolene always put it in a cold pan, heating it with the pan. Cottolene produces the best results when very hot, but as it reaches the cooking point much sooner than lard, care should be taken not to let it burn—when hot enough, it will delicately brown a bit of bread in half a minute. Follow these directions in using Cottolene and lard will never again be permitted in your kitchen or in your food. Genuine Cottolene is sold everywhere in tins with trade-marks—"Cottolene" and steer's head in cotton-plant wreath—on every tin.

THE N. K. FAIRBANK COMPANY, Chicago, 224 State St., Boston, Portland, Me.

Quick as Thought

No time lost with WHITMAN'S INSTANTANEOUS CHOCOLATE.

Taste, flavor and quality the best. Put up in pound and half-pound tins.

Stephen F. Whitman & Son, Sole Mfrs. Philadelphia.

ALL WOOL SUIT for $5.95

Made in frock or sack suits in the latest styles, equal to any clothier's $12 garments. Higher priced suits equally as cheap. We do not ask you to buy a "blind pig" but will send samples of the leading spring and summer cloths, measurement blank and tape line free. Agents Wanted.

B. JOHN QUINCY & CO.

104-106 West Quincy St., Chicago, Ill.

When good, live seed is sown, the planter's battle is half won. The seeds for wide-awake farmers and gardeners are

GREGORY'S HOME GROWN SEEDS.

Their vitality is assured. Everything that pays they grow. Get Gregory's Seed Catalogue for 1896 (mailed free) and you'll have a book worth reading. Filled with hard facts for planters.

J. J. H. GREGORY & SON, Marblehead, Mass.

BURPEE'S SEEDS, Philadelphia

A postal card addressed as above will bring you BURPEE'S FARM ANNUAL for 1896, if you intend to purchase Seeds, otherwise the price is ten cents (less than cost). It is a bright BOOK of 184 pages, with hundreds of illustrations and colored plates painted from nature. It tells all about the BEST SEEDS that Grow!

NORWICH FOLDED PAPER CARPET LINING

Appeals to Every Saving Housekeeper.

Some Carpet Dealers

persist in recommending and selling smooth-faced carpet linings (same kind they have been selling for years) that protect the floor from wear more than they protect the carpet.

The Norwich costs the purchaser no more than other linings (10c.) and saves its cost on the yearly wear of the carpet.

LARGE SAMPLE FREE.

For sale by Best Carpet Dealers. If your Dealer will not supply you, it can be ordered direct from the Factory in any quantity over 20 yards, express paid, at 10 Cents a yard.

NORWICH CARPET LINING CO., NORWICH, CONN.

DECORATIONS

THE painter decorates the wall; the artist-in-needle-work decorates the furniture; the emperor decorates with a medal the faithful soldier; but dirt decorates all neglected things and places with its own peculiar badge—a badge of disgrace. Decorative art is a good thing if it does not lead people so high up that they cannot see the dirt that accumulates in the kitchen and in the corners. It is those housekeepers who use SAPOLIO that win the medal of honor and have houses and reputations free from the imputation of a decoration of dirt.

POND'S EXTRACT

The Bicycler's Necessity

YARDSLEY—Go down to the drug-store and get a bottle of Pond's Extract, will you?—The Bicyclers, by John Kendrick Bangs.

CURES

Piles
Colds
Wounds
Bruises
Sprains
Toothache

Catarrh
Headache
Hoarseness
Chilblains
Rheumatism
Sore Throat

CHECKS BLEEDING REDUCES INFLAMMATION QUIETS PAIN

USE POND'S EXTRACT After Shaving—No Irritation
USE POND'S EXTRACT After Exercising—No Lameness

LIPS chapped or a little rough? Use POND'S EXTRACT LIP SALVE—Healing, Softening, Delicious Odor, Beautiful Color. 25 cents.

POND'S EXTRACT OINTMENT is simply a marvel. How instantly it cures Piles! What relief from excruciating pain! 50 cents.

BUY GENUINE POND'S EXTRACT if you want genuine cures
Buy imitations if you want imitation cures

POND'S EXTRACT CO., 76 Fifth Ave., New York.

BROWN'S French Dressing

A Brilliant, Lasting and Flexible Polish . . .

Known in almost every land where boots and shoes are worn. For nearly fifty years it has been the choice of discriminating ladies. It gives a brilliant polish which lasts and leaves the leather soft. When wet it will not soil the skirts. Do not experiment with doubtful polishes, but buy Brown's. It has a record . . . .

Ahead in Quality and Quantity.

. . . . MOST ECONOMICAL . . . .

DOES NOT HARDEN OR CRACK THE LEATHER.

Insist on Having Brown's.

Volume LXXXI Number 16

THE CONGREGATIONALIST

Boston Thursday 16 April 1896

REV. WILLIAM H. DAVIS D D

THE great twin principles of Puritan polity, liberty of conscience and brotherhood of life, . . . I believe that these are to be the great watchwords of the coming church, whose doors and mind will be open to all new truth and new methods in the kingdom of God, and whose pews will be filled with the rich and poor alike. Freedom in religious discussion, in matters of conscience, a faith which trusts God and his people in the administration of its affairs, a sense of brotherhood with all Christian churches and Christian workers —these have been our characteristics in the years gone by. And may they continue to be so in the years to come.—Dr. Davis, in his sermon at the jubilee of the First Church, Detroit.

PILGRIMAGE TO ENGLAND AND HOLLAND

The Congregationalist's Pilgrimage sails June 4, 1896, by Hamburg-American Express Steamer Columbia, landing at PLYMOUTH, ENGLAND, returning August 1 by the same Line. The Itinerary includes Cologne, the Rhine, Lucerne, Paris, etc.

ST. PETER'S CHURCH, LEIDEN.

✠ ✠

☞We urge prompt application for the remaining vacant places. The party is limited, and the outward steamer accommodations cannot be increased.

✠ ✠

THE JOHN ROBINSON HOUSE, LEIDEN.

NEW WORLD PILGRIMS AT OLD WORLD SHRINES A unique brochure, valuable as a Pilgrim souvenir as well as a record of the tour. Full daily Itinerary and "English and Dutch Notes," which treat of the historic and architectural features of the tour. 42 ILLUSTRATIONS. Price, 10 Cents.

---

Address PILGRIMAGE, Office of THE CONGREGATIONALIST, Boston,

or HENRY GAZE & SONS, Ltd., { 113 Broadway, New York, & 201 Washington St., Boston, } Business Managers of the Tour.

---

A Few More Names

Will be accepted in connection with this offer. All, therefore, who desire to secure 12 copies of the paper, including the anniversary number and The Bonnie Brier Bush, for their friends should send the order at once.

The Paper for 12 Weeks & The Bonnie Brier Bush for 25 Cts.

(☞If the book is to be sent by mail add five cents for postage)

For the purposes of our special offer we have purchased an edition of this remarkable classic by Ian Maclaren from the authorized publishers, Messrs. DODD, MEAD & CO. It is a reprint from new plates of the complete copyrighted edition, which is issued at $1.25; making a dainty volume, cabinet size, bound in cloth, with a unique cover design.

CONDITIONS—THESE ONLY:

☞The "12 Weeks for 25 Cents" subscriptions must be for bona fide new names of persons able to subscribe for a religious paper on their own account. The new subscribers must be sent by a present subscriber of the paper, but the former may in their turn send other new names.

☞An old subscriber sending us trial subscriptions in accordance with this offer has the privilege of ordering ONE additional copy (not more) of "The Bonnie Brier Bush" at 20 cents, which price includes postage on the book

Address

"TRIAL SUBSCRIPTIONS,"
THE CONGREGATIONALIST,
1 Somerset Street, Boston.

All for 25 cts.

The Anniversary Number of The Congregationalist

The Bonnie Brier Bush

The Congregationalist regularly for Eleven Weeks

All for 25 cts.

"THE NOVEL OF THE SEASON"

A Lady of Quality
by Frances Hodgson Burnett

Charles Scribner's Sons
Publishers, N. Y.

For Sale by all Booksellers
12mo, $1.50

SCHERMERHORN'S TEACHERS' AGENCY.
Oldest and best known in U. S.
Established, 1855.
3 EAST 14TH STREET, N. Y.

THE FISK TEACHERS' AGENCIES.
4 Ashburton Pl., Boston, Mass.; New York, N. Y.; Chicago, Ill.; and Los Angeles, Cal. 100-paged Agency Manual free. EVERETT O. FISK & CO.

MAINE, BANGOR.
BANGOR THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY.
Course of study complete, thorough, Biblical and practical. Also an elective English course. Advanced Semitic study optional. Entrance examination on Wednesday, Sept. 4. Address Prof. F. B. DENIO Bangor, Me.

MASSACHUSETTS, BRADFORD.
BRADFORD ACADEMY.
For the higher education of young women. Buildings unsurpassed for comfort and health. Twenty-five acres—twelve in grove; lake for rowing and skating. Classical and general course of study; also, preparatory and optional. Year commences Sept. 11, 1895. Apply to MISS IDA C. ALLEN, Principal Bradford, Mass.

MASSACHUSETTS, NORTON.
WHEATON SEMINARY
For Young Ladies. Regular and elective courses, literary, scientific, classical. Pupils also fitted for advanced courses in leading colleges. Excellent advantages in art and music. Fine library, laboratory, observatory, gymnasium, bowling alley; out-door sports, careful physical training. Perfect sanitary arrangements. Best home influences. Beautifully situated, 28 miles from Boston.
61st year. Summer term, April 9, 1896. For illustrated prospectus, address
MISS A. E. STANTON, Principal, Norton, Mass.

NEW BOOKS.

Books and their Makers
During the Middle Ages. A Study of the conditions of the production and distribution of literature from the fall of the Roman Empire to the close of the Seventeenth Century. By GEO. HAVEN PUTNAM, author of "Authors and their Public in Ancient Times," etc 2 vols., sold separately. 8vo, each $2 50 Vol. 1 (A. D 476–1600) now ready.

The Bible in Spain;
Or, the Journeys, Adventures, and Imprisonments of an Englishman in an Attempt to Circulate the Scriptures in the Peninsula. By GEORGE BORROW. Edited, with notes and a glossary, by Ulrick Ralph Burke, M. A., author of "A History of Spain," etc. 2 vols., illustrated, 8vo, $4.00.
"To mention a vagabond in connection with Spanish ground cannot fail to call to the memory the name of that prince of vagabonds, George Borrow, and we have spent some hours in dipping into the pages of his breezy romance, so full of originality, of humor, and of wild adventure. It is a book of which one never tires."—London Spectator.

The West Indies and the Spanish Main.
By JAMES RODWAY, Fellow of the Geographical Society. Illustrated. 8vo, $1.75.
"This volume gives a history of the European settlements in the West Indies. It will possess special interest in connection with the attention now being directed to the northern districts of South America."

A King and a Few Dukes.
A Romance. By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS, author of "The King in Yellow," "The Red Republic," etc 8vo, $1.25.

* "Notes on New Books," a quarterly bulletin and list of successful fiction, sent on application.

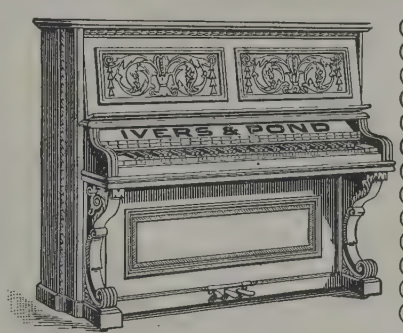
G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS,
NEW YORK AND LONDON.

SONGS FOR SPRING TIME.
HIGHEST PRAISE FOR THE SABBATH SCHOOL.
$30 per 100 copies.
CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HYMNS, for YOUNG PEOPLE.
$30 per 100 copies.
Do not substitute inferior books because of lower price. The best are cheapest!!
THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO.,
76 East 9th St., New York. 215 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

Ivers & Pond Pianos



HOW TO OBTAIN ONE EASILY.

In addition to our large wholesale and retail business, we have arranged a plan for supplying our pianos on Easy Payments to residents of any village or city in the United States where they are not sold by a local dealer.

We make first-class pianos, but one grade — the best. We refer to the New England Conservatory of Music, Boston, which has bought and has in daily use 125 Ivers & Pond Pianos.

Musically and in point of durability our pianos are not excelled. Catalogue and prices, both for cash and on easy payments, mailed promptly, free. Write for full information.

IVERS & POND PIANO COMPANY,
114 Boylston Street, Boston.

THE CONGREGATIONALIST
AND BOSTON RECORDER.
The Recorder founded 1816: The Congregationalist, 1849

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
Paragraphs 621
Are Our Missionaries to be Expelled? 621
Florida versus the A. M. A. 622
Congregational Isolation 622
Congregational "Team Work" 622
Presenting Our Bodies to God 623
Current History 623
In Brief 624
STAFF CORRESPONDENCE:
The Interior 625
London 626
CURRENT THOUGHT 627
CONTRIBUTIONS:
The Work of the Yale Band in Washington. One of Its Members 627
The Work of the Andover Band in Maine. Rev. E. R. Smith 628
Rev. W. H. Davis, D. D. An Appreciation. Rev. Dr. De Witt S. Clark 629
THE HOME:
"God Bless You, John"—a selected poem 631
Paragraph 631
Angel Ministrations. Mrs. M. E. Sangster 631
The Science of Food. V. Milk and Its Products. M. V. Shaler 632
Afield With Young Naturalists. S. J. Bucklin 632
Closet and Altar 633
Mothers in Council 633
Dandelion—a poem. Isaac Ogden Rankin 634
About People 634
Primrose Day—a selection 634
The Conversation Corner. Mr. Martin 635
Corner Scrap-Book 635
THE SUNDAY SCHOOL—Lesson for April 26 636
Y. P. S. C. E.—Topic for April 26–May 2 637
PROGRESS OF THE KINGDOM 637
LITERATURE 638
NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES:
Easter in Nebraska 640
MISCELLANEOUS:
Some Observations on the Present Distress 630
The Gospel for an Age of Doubt 630
Notices 640
A Quarter of a Century at Mt. Vernon Church 643
Egypt and North Africa's Gifts to Christianity 645
Education 645
Business Outlook 646
Woman's Board Prayer Meeting 647
Proposed Changes in the Meeting of the Massachusetts General Association 648
Colorado College 649
Marriages and Deaths 650
American Oriental Society 651

THE CONGREGATIONALIST
AND BOSTON RECORDER.

The Recorder founded 1816: The Congregationalist, 1849.

Published every Thursday.

PER COPY, 6 CENTS. PER YEAR IN ADVANCE, $3.00.
TWO YEARS IN ADVANCE, $5.00; FIVE YEARS, $10.00.
IF PAYMENT IS DELAYED, $3.50 PER YEAR.
ONE OLD AND ONE NEW SUBSCRIPTION, $5.00.
CLUB OF FIVE, ONE AT LEAST BEING NEW, $10.00.
On Trial, 6 Months, $1.00; 3 Months, 25 Cents.

RECEIPTS for subscriptions are indicated by the date of expiration following the subscriber's address, as printed upon the paper. If a special receipt is wanted a stamp should be sent with remittance.
DISCONTINUANCES.—In accordance with the almost universal wish of our subscribers, papers are continued until there is a specific order to stop. In connection with such an order all arrearages must be paid. An order of discontinuance can be given at any time, to take effect at the expiration of the subscription.

ADVERTISING RATES.—25 cents per agate line each insertion, 14 lines to the inch; 11½ inches to the column. Discounts according to amount of contract.
READING NOTICES, leaded nonpareil, 50 cents per line, each insertion, net.

W. L. GREENE & CO., Proprietors, Boston.

Entered as second-class mail. Composition by Thomas Todd.

A. C. ARMSTRONG & SON

Have Now Ready By

PROF. GEORGE ADAM SMITH, D. D.,

in

THE EXPOSITOR'S BIBLE,

THE BOOK OF THE TWELVE PROPHETS,

Commonly Called the Minor. 2 Vols., by GEO. ADAM SMITH, D D. Author of "Isaiah," 2 vols. Expositor's Bible, "Historical Geography of the Holy Land," etc.

Vol. I. now ready. Containing Amos, Hosea and Micah. Crown octavo, price $1.50.

Send for full descriptive circular of the 49 volumes in the Expositor's Bible Series, with special terms on 10 or more volumes. $1 per vol. Express prepaid.

New Work by

DR. H. GRATTAN GUINNESS.

Creation Centred in Christ.

A Popular Scientific Work. By H. GRATTAN GUINNESS. Uniform with same author's "Approaching End of the Age." Large crown octavo, cloth, $2 50

This new work by the well known English divine, Rev. H. Grattan Guinness, D. D., will be welcomed by the readers of his previous volumes, "The Approaching End of the Age," "Light for the Last Days," etc. As the title indicates, the purpose of Dr. Guinness in this book is to prove that nature, science and history center about the person and work of Christ, just as theology is more and more controlled by the thought of Him.

The Epistle of James

And Other Discourses. By R. W. Dale, D. D Crown 8vo, cloth, $1.75.

"The result of the profoundest English scholarship is given us in so charming and popular a style that the dullest mind will be interested in it."—N. Y. Churchman.

Copies mailed, postpaid, on receipt of price.

A. C. ARMSTRONG & SON,

51 East 10th St. (Near Broadway), N. Y.

Send for Free Specimen Pages of

UPLIFTING SONGS
NEW AND OLD
FOR PRAISE AND REVIVAL MEETINGS AND SABBATH SCHOOLS
EDITED BY
C. C. CASE AND J. R. MURRAY
WITH A NUMBER OF HERETOFORE UNPUBLISHED GOSPEL SONGS BY GEO. F. ROOT
Price 35¢ post paid.

The Book will contain 224 pages.

Published by

THE JOHN CHURCH COMPANY,

CINCINNATI-NEW YORK-CHICAGO.

A Beautiful Easter Volume

HEAVEN.

Six Sermons by Rev. RICHARD MONTAGUE, D. D., late Pastor of the First Baptist Church, Newton, Mass., with Memorials. Square 12mo, wide margins, bound in rich garnet cloth with gilt top, illustrated with author's portrait. Price $1.25.

Written and delivered under the stress of a fatal illness, these Sermons have a prescience of coming immortality that touches the heart with tenderness, while their simple, earnest eloquence appeals strongly to the reason.

The six sermons are upon the following topics: "What is Heaven?" "Recognition in Heaven," "Is Heaven a Place?" "The Inauguration of Heaven," "Is Heaven for All?" "The Way to Heaven."

For sale at the bookstores, or mailed, postpaid, on receipt of price, by

SILVER, BURDETT & COMPANY, Publishers,

110-112 Boylston Street, Boston.

AGENTS WANTED—To present to Christian people the grandest, best-selling book of the age. THE PEOPLE'S BIBLE HISTORY. Exclusive territory and attractive commissions given. THE HENRY O. SHEPARD CO., Chicago, Ill.

NEW BOOKS.

The Empire of the Tsars.

By ANATOLE LEROY-BEAULIEU, Member of the Institute of France. Translated (from the third French edition), with Annotations, by Zénaïde A. Ragozin, Member of the Royal Asiatic Society of London, of the Société Ethnologique of Paris; author of "The Story of Chaldea," "The Story of Assyria," etc. 3 vols., each part complete in itself. 8vo, per volume, $3.00

Part III.—The Religion. Completing the work.

PREVIOUSLY ISSUED:

Part I.—The Country and Its Inhabitants.

Part II.—The Institutions.

"This work contains some of the best informed, most strikingly written, most wisely sympathetic discussion, as well as soundest critical judgments of Russia and her people that we have seen."—New York Times.

"Leroy-Beaulieu's work will be found of a surpassing interest, combining the triple excellences of complete preparation, unbiased judgment, and the piquancy of Gallic expression."—Chicago Tribune.

"From whatever point of view examined, whether that of the student of history or the curious inquirer into the manners of the men of our own day, the publication of Leroy-Beaulieu's great work on Russia, in English, is one of the literary events of the year."—New York Recorder.

Buddhism:

The History and Literature of Buddhism. By T. W. RHYS-DAVIDS, LL. D., Ph. D. Being the American Lectures on the History of Religions for 1894-95. 12mo, $1.75.

I. Development of Religious Belief in India Previous to Buddhism. II. The Buddhist Sacred Books. III. Life of the Buddha. IV. The Secret of Buddhism. Part I. The Four Truths, the Chain of Life and the Ideal. V. The Secret of Buddhism. Part II. Mystic Trances and Arahatship. VI. Later Developments of Buddhism. The Great and Little Vehicle.

A King and a Few Dukes.

A Romance. By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS, author of "The King in Yellow," "The Red Republic," etc. 8vo, $1.25.

At Wellesley. Legenda for '96.

Stories and Studies by the Senior Class of Wellesley College. 12mo, $1.00.

 "Notes on New Books," a quarterly bulletin and list of successful fiction, sent on application.*

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS,

NEW YORK AND LONDON.

THE WORLD FOR CHRIST IN 1901

Is it really possible? Read "1896" and learn how possible it really is. Price 50c. At least send postal for the crusade circular and plans of work.

Crusader Publishing Co., Toledo, O.

MESSRS. HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN AND COMPANY ANNOUNCE THE FOLLOWING NEW BOOKS.

*

Tom Grogan.

By F. HOPKINSON SMITH, author of "A Gentleman Vagabond," "Colonel Carter of Cartersville," etc. Beautifully printed, and bound in a strikingly artistic style. Illustrated with nineteen designs by C. S. REINHART. Crown 8vo, $1.50.

This is the strongest and most striking story Mr. Smith has yet written. The heroine, "Tom Grogan," is a superb and original character; the incidents are dramatic, and illustrate some burning questions of the day; and the style and humor lend peculiar charms to a remarkable story.

Spring Notes from Tennessee.

By BRADFORD TORREY, author of "A Florida Sketch-Book," "Birds in the Bush," "A Rambler's Lease," "The Foot-path Way." 16mo, $1.25.

A delightful group of papers, several never before printed, containing observations of birds and scenery in Tennessee, some of them on famous battle-fields—Chickamauga, Lookout Mountain, etc.

Pirate Gold.

A Novel. By F. J. STIMSON ("J. S. of Dale"). 16mo, $1.25.

A story of Boston in the middle of this century. It is not an historical novel, but reproduces with great fidelity and charm the social atmosphere of the place and time. The season will bring few brighter or more readable novels.

Four-Handed Folk.

By OLIVE THORNE MILLER, author of "Bird-Ways," "In Nesting-Time," "Little Brothers of the Air," "A Bird-Lover in the West." Illustrated. 16mo, $1.25.

A very attractive book describing observations of various pets—the kinkajou, "living balls," the lemur, marmoset, chimpanzee, ocelot, and several kinds of monkeys.

Froebel's Occupations.

Vol. II. of "The Republic of Childhood." By KATE DOUGLAS WIGGIN and NORA ARCHIBALD SMITH. 16mo, $1.00

"Froebel's Gifts" has been received with great favor as of special value to both kindergartners and mothers. This volume continues the admirable scheme begun in that.

Tom Brown's School Days.

By THOMAS HUGHES. From new plates, large type, and bound in cloth, 12mo, $1.00.

A very desirable edition of one of the most interesting, most popular, and most wholesome English books ever written.

Sold by Booksellers. Sent, postpaid, by

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO.,

Boston and New York.

300 ORDERS in Three Weeks"; "10 orders in every 12 calls"; "$5 to $10 profit every day"; "130 orders in 3½ days." Terms free. Outfit 30 cents. JAS. H. EARLE, Publisher, Boston.

NOW

Overhaul Your Sunday School Library.

Replace worn volumes and add new ones to the extent of the funds at your disposal.

No way so effectual as this for creating new interest in the Sunday School, particularly among the older scholars.

It is a fact worth noting in this "dull" year that our library trade was never better than it is now. The above advice is not only good but many schools are following it. Why should not all?

We are EXPERTS, and can help you to secure the best books at lowest prices.

Congregational Sunday School and Publishing Society,

Congregational House, Boston. 175 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

THE CONGREGATIONALIST

Volume LXXXI Boston Thursday 16 April 1896 Number 16

✠ 80th ANNIVERSARY OFFER ✠

The eightieth anniversary offer (The Congregationalist and The Bonnie Brier Bush for 30 cents), as announced on one of our advertising pages, is still open. After this week we shall not be able to send the anniversary number in connection with this offer. The offer of the "Brier Bush" and twelve current numbers of the paper will be open during April.

✠ TRIAL SUBSCRIPTIONS. ✠

6 Months for . . . . . $1.00
3 Months for 25 cts. 4 Weeks Free.

✠ THE CONGREGATIONALIST SERVICES. ✠

Thirty-three services. Samples free.

Price, 100 copies of one number, 60 cts., postpaid.

ONE by one some of our leading churches, an unprecedented number of which during the past few months have been without pastors, are finding their leaders and taking up the work with renewed hope and activity. On Easter Sunday Mr. Beach began his work with the Plymouth Church, Minneapolis; this week Dr. Davis will be installed in the Eliot Church, Newton, and the First Church, Omaha, will soon be enjoying the ministrations of Rev. Frank A. Warfield, recently of Brockton. Dr. Stimson's withdrawal from Broadway Tabernacle, New York city, leaves that important pulpit to be provided for and frees him to devote his rare power as a pastor, executive and able preacher to some church which desires to be set at work solving the problems of today. Dr. Stimson's record in Minneapolis, Worcester and St. Louis was such that his many friends feel that his powers have not had a suitable opportunity in New York, and they covet for him a place suited to his gifts.

America, perhaps, has little but sympathy to give toward settling the question of control in Asia and Africa, but surely Christian America ought to think of her own principle of religious freedom in giving sympathy. It is a fact beyond question that Russia suppresses religious freedom, and France and Germany reduce it to the lowest possible point. We may not like English manners or approve of English greed, but at least we know that under the British flag religion as well as trade is free. Russian, French or German domination in these matters involves a retrogression from the present position of liberty for teaching and believing in heathen lands. Bad as the Turk is, in the matter of evangelization the Russian will be worse. With all the other conquering and ambitious nations, except England and Japan, religion is still, as in mediæval times, an instrument of statecraft, and therefore of oppression for all nonconformists to the national creed, but England opens the door of opportunity for all and holds the balance of justice true.

The plain issue raised by the case of pulpit plagiarism in which Dr. D. Parker Morgan of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Heavenly Rest in New York acknowledges having "conveyed" his Easter discourse, bodily as to thought and almost completely as to language, from a printed volume of sermons by the late Rev. Dr. George Putnam, is the issue of honesty. Dr. Morgan's first plea in mitigation was that he was worn out with the duties of Holy Week and, for the first time in his life, made use of a sermon written by another man. Left at this point the explanation would, no doubt, have been accepted in mitigation of the offense and the incident would soon have been forgotten. Later, however, the offender has expressed sorrow, not for his sin against the accepted code of pulpit honor, but that, by the mistake of his private secretary, the sermon was published in full, so that a complete and public exposure was possible. It becomes a duty, therefore, to sink all consideration of the unrepentant offender in condemnation of the offense. Dr. Morgan's apologists, including, we are sorry to see, Dr. Parkhurst, are doing their utmost to bring discredit upon the pulpit and the church. Abuse of the exposer can be no excuse for the sin. It is understood in America that sermons are original, unless the preacher expressly states the contrary. If a man is overworked and must borrow, at least he need not steal. Printed sermons are at any man's disposal at the easy price of an acknowledgment. In our opinion Mr. Lee, except for one unfortunate sentence which lays him open to the suspicion of professional jealousy, has done his simple duty in this matter.

There is a proportion and a timeliness of faith as well as of the other acts and thoughts of life. We cannot always be thinking directly and immediately of God, because we have the works of our stewardship to carry on and these demand our full attention. To trust lies back of all our labors and preoccupations, and there are times when it should be the conscious mood in which we approach the work, and more especially the troubles, of life. "What time I am afraid I will trust," said the wise Psalmist. That was the testing time for faith, and then he learned its power and value. A little child may run to and fro across the path and glory in its freedom, but let the shadow of danger come and then it hurries to the father's clasping hand, while we, who have too little of the childlike spirit, trust God when the skies are clear and the events of life go to our liking and complain of him when peril comes. What is faith good for in a world in which it is foretold that we shall have tribulation if it fails us when the hour of tribulation comes? It is more than the joy of worship. It is help in the storm, communication when all other avenues are closed, rest and counsel in perplexity, the highest wisdom rescuing our lives from folly. "I will trust the Lord at all times." That is the ideal, but if there must come a time of interruption and forgetfulness let it not be in the times when we are afraid.

ARE OUR MISSIONARIES TO BE EXPELLED?

It can safely be said that the peace of Europe has been maintained during the past twenty years chiefly because Russia has been content to remain in her own corner of the world. But Russia is well known to be a nation that keeps a treaty only so long as the breaking of it promises her no advantage. She is ready to ally herself to any power that she thinks she can employ for her own advancement. Unprincipled in politics and trained in diplomacy, she waits and plans for the time when she can dictate to all Europe, and through Europe direct the politics of the world.

Turkey is the key to the Mediterranean. The first-class power that possesses Turkey, with its capital at Constantinople, can easily make terms for Greece, Italy, Spain, North Africa and Egypt, and can even hold the Suez Canal and India under its direction. A railroad across Syria and Mesopotamia would make it possible to place a large army in India at short notice, while at the same time the English were held at bay in the Mediterranean.

Should Russia be that power it would have great advantage in that its territory would be still compact and advantageously connected with a vast inland sea, and for recruiting purposes impregnably defended from all outside attacks. Turkish territory is rich and capable of great development. Her peasants make excellent soldiers. They are hardy and fearless. Trained by Russian officers and well armed they would make a formidable foe to meet. Assured of their monthly pay, with proper food and clothing, a vast army could be gathered at short notice. Russia at Constantinople, with all the resources of Turkey at her command, would be the severest menace to the peace of Europe and Asia, and she could there dictate terms to the world unless there were a vast combination against her.

Every indication points to the fact that this is the aim of Russia today in her dealings with Turkey. Already there is an understanding between them. United efforts are being made to expel the American missionaries in Turkey, Turkey acting under the advice of Russia in order to prepare the country for Russian occupancy. Every week reveals the completion of the arrangements for the final announcement of a Russian protectorate for the sick man of two continents. A protectorate would be only another name for early Russian occupancy and control, unless Europe acts soon and that, too, with vigor.

With her will wrought in Turkey, will the outlook for Christian Protestant missions in China next become as dark as the outlook now is in Turkey? Are Great Britain and the United States leading the English speaking peoples of the world to witness, without protest of the most emphatic kind, without a recourse to arms, if need be, the triumph of the Slav and Moslem in Turkey and the Slav and Buddhist in China? Do both the Protestant and Roman Catholic rulers of Europe realize how profoundly far-reaching are the issues at stake? It would appear not, judging by the success Russia and Turkey have had during the past year, else Germany and Austria would not have played into Russia's hand.

Our Department of State has a simple duty before it, viz., to insist upon adequate consular protection, the right of all American citizens to a trial before a non Turkish tribunal, immunity from arrest by irresponsible Turkish officials and a speedy return to their daily tasks, whether religious or otherwise, when proven innocent. Religious teachers are guaranteed rights which Turkey cannot withdraw without breaking treaties with France and with us, and any attempt to expel a single missionary should call forth such action on our part as will be unmistakable. Fortunately, as we go to press, it seems as if the joint action of our charge d'affaires in Constantinople, Mr. J. W. Riddle and Sir Philip Currie, the British ambassador, had influenced the Porte to refrain from issuing its decree expelling all the missionaries until Russia's further purpose had been ascertained, but that such a decree exists in a tentative form there is little doubt.

FLORIDA VERSUS THE A. M. A.

When the State of Florida arrested Principal Rowles and eight teachers of the Orange Park Normal and Industrial School last week for breaking the following law:

> Be it enacted by the Legislature of the State of Florida:
>
> Section 1. It shall be a penal offense for any individual body of inhabitants, corporation, or association, to conduct within this State any school of any grade, public, private or parochial, wherein white persons and Negroes shall be instructed or boarded within the same building, or taught in the same class, or at the same time, by the same teacher.
>
> Section 2 Any person or persons violating the provisions of Section 1 of this act by patronizing or teaching in such school, shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined in a sum not less than one hundred and fifty dollars, nor more than five hundred dollars, or imprisoned in the county jail for not less than three months, nor more than six months, for every such offense.

it began a legal contest which will not end until the decision of the United States Supreme Court is given. Meanwhile Floridian ethical and educational ideals will be pilloried in the sight of all men.

This law was passed by the Florida legislature in 1895 at the instigation of the superintendent of State instruction, Mr. Sheats. The ethics of Christ, Pilgrim traditions and the United States Constitution seemed paramount to the opinions of Florida legislators, and the highest officials of the A. M. A. decided to defy and test the law. That the denomination stands back of them may be reasonably inferred from the following resolution passed by the last Triennial National Council, which, after suitable introduction, says:

> Therefore the National Council of Congregational Churches of the United States, regarding the enactment not only as repugnant to Christian principle, but also as opposed to our civil rights guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States to all citizens, do call upon our representative, the American Missionary Association, to unceasingly and courageously resist this wicked enactment in all lawful ways, and to exhaust all legal measures to defend these guaranteed rights and privileges, and to carry if necessary this case to the Supreme Court of the United States, for adjudication, and we pledge to the Association in pursuance of this our hearty co-operation.
>
> Let the A. M. A. have the sinews of war with which to employ the ablest counsel.

CONGREGATIONAL ISOLATION.

The central and essential element of Congregationalism, like that of any other institution, may be its weakness. The Pilgrim churches will never surrender their title to independent management of their own affairs. No Episcopal or Presbyterial system is likely to commend itself to our denominational consciousness. There is all the more reason, therefore, why we should not dread the effects of a closer federation of our interests as Congregational churches. What we suffer from in some quarters is a spirit of Congregational independence which practically resolves itself into Congregational isolation. This, we believe, is as harmful to those immediately concerned as it is divisive from solidarity and church unity. No church can afford to ignore its relation to its sister churches. Ecclesiastical property in these days of shifting population is not a guaranteed thing. Churches, which twenty years ago in our large cities were at the high tide of their prosperity, are today looking to other churches and the denominational societies for means wherewith to live. That organization, therefore, which holds itself in a large measure aloof from its sister organizations, even though now it is strong, may sometime itself feel the need of the quickening and strengthening that arises only from a sense of being leagued with many. Certainly a church has the right, for instance, to forbid any agent from a benevolent society to ascend its pulpit. It has a right to exhibit little interest in the conference of which it is a member, and to have no participation whatever in the clubs and social organizations which are such a feature in modern church life, but we believe that such a church in the long run loses, not only in the esteem of sister churches, but in the vigor and propagating power of its own spiritual life.

Ministers differ in their valuation of the means of communication with their brethren. Some, no doubt, make too much of the organizations which bring ministers into friendly contact with one another. We understand how, in these busy days, a minister covets every hour he can get for his study, but we believe there is a golden mean. We remember Dr. Burton's lectures to Yale students and how he urged upon them the duty of regular attendance, if possible, upon the conferences and associations. It was his own habit, and his influence, especially among the younger ministers in the State of Connecticut, was great and wholesome. Nor do we think that his own intellectual and spiritual equipment was diminished because he availed himself of such means of communication with his fellow Christians and fellow Congregationalists.

The moral we wish to point is briefly this: When Congregational independence becomes Congregational isolation they who practice it are not genuine Congregationalists and are not on the highway to the largest growth and usefulness. When an individual church views its concerns purely from a selfish standpoint it makes a grave mistake. No church, for instance, can afford to move its house of worship in utter disregard of the opinion and advice of the denomination. Moreover, no church ought to set its peculiar prospects apart from the sympathy of the denomination so far as that is accessible and available. We should like to see in our large cities such a federation of interests that no one church shall feel itself alone in the carrying on of its work, that no prosperous church which comes out at the end of the year with money in the treasury shall exult over its less successful neighbor, and that no church in the midst of adverse conditions should feel itself unsupported. We are speaking now not merely of financial assistance, but of that exchange of good wishes and that expression of friendly interest which ought to prevail between those engaged not merely in the same Christian work but are allied with the same branch of the great Church of Christ. In most of our cities recent years have witnessed a larger development of fellowship expressing itself through more frequent exchanges of pulpits, through local Congregational clubs and through other channels. The church which isolates itself altogether from its fellows or maintains only a formal and perfunctory connection, is today a marked church. The pastor who has nothing to do with his fellow pastors is a marked man. We welcome this increase of denominational friendliness. We rejoice that in Boston, for example, it has recently taken shape in an organization which intends not only to cherish a sympathetic spirit, but to express it in tangible form for the upbuilding of Congregationalism and for the glory of God.

CONGREGATIONAL "TEAM WORK."

The States of Maine and Washington are important outposts of our national territory on its northern boundary. The one is a comparatively ancient commonwealth in which Congregationalism took root and flourished years ago. The other entered the Union in 1889 and the first Congregational church edifice erected there was built as late as 1865. In some parts of Maine the problem of the Congregational pastor is much like that of his brother in Washington who is dealing with life in new towns and with people alien to American political ideals and Congregational religious principles. In other towns in Maine the pastor is face to face with problems that arise from the decay of ancient communities and churches, and the necessity of readjustment to new industrial and agricultural conditions.

The Congregational isolation, which we describe above, has been modified somewhat in both of these States by adapting to denominational activity the system of co-operation, which in football is known as "team work." Can any one after reading the articles on the Yale Band and the Andover Band, which we publish this week, doubt the wisdom of the plan of co operation which these pastors and churches accepted so heartily and worked out so admirably? It has proved itself in results which are as striking in the development of the individual character of the members of the bands as in the growth and spiritual uplifting of the churches to which they were commissioned. We hope these descriptions of the working of so fruitful an experiment may lead others of our students of theology, who have learned in the experience of the seminary to love and trust each other, to plan for new fields a like co-operative method.

PRESENTING OUR BODIES TO GOD.

We sometimes feel as if our souls are God's but our bodies, which, in their present character, have to do only with this life, are our own. Of course this is a grave error. The body is God's as truly as the soul and the interdependence of the two is so close and complete that the soul is hampered by whatever injures or enfeebles the body. This is true notwithstanding the fact that some grand souls exhibit their beauty and power in spite of the infirmities of the bodies in which they are housed. Therefore it is part of our duty to God to care well for the body.

It goes without saying that every gross, lustful indulgence is shameful and full of harm to the human body. Even those habituated to excess understand this. Probably they comprehend it most clearly. But any one accustomed to study people's habits, any competent physician, for example, will testify that the body often is abused intolerably by many well-meaning persons who are unaware how they ill treat it.

For instance, many are afraid of fresh air. They stifle themselves in close rooms by day and sleep without ventilation at night instead of training themselves to use a constant supply of pure air, and merely to avoid dangerous draughts. They grow pale and feeble and pity themselves for the invalidism which is their own fault. Again, food of inferior quality or injudiciously prepared has ruined more lives than many an epidemic disease. It is our duty to God to eat wholesome food, and it is not costly. Furthermore, hundreds of people dose themselves continually with medicines. Any patent mixture which is heard of favorably is used, often in utter ignorance of its elements or true purpose, and many who scorn such remedies take much more legitimate medicine than is good for them, and grow to depend upon it.

These familiar facts suggest the lines along which multitudes of otherwise sensible and God fearing persons need to learn how to honor their Creator by better care of the body.

CURRENT HISTORY.

Commander Booth's Statement.

Commander and Mrs. Ballington Booth have broken their long silence in regard to the causes of secession from the Salvation Army, and have issued a statement explaining and defining their position. Significantly, it begins by a quotation from the preamble of the Declaration of Independence, and carries throughout the idea of nationality in the administration of religious movements. During the visit of General Booth to this country, his son writes, "from first to last, he impressed us with his displeasure and his dissatisfaction with us personally and with our method of administration of affairs. We loved and understood this country. He exhibited prejudice and misconception of it and its people. He objected to the display of the national flag . . . and constantly spoke deprecatingly of the country, its people and its institutions." The experience of a foreign despotism, even though it was that of their own father, grew constantly irksome; the difficulty of referring every petty detail to London diminished the efficiency of the work; and the burden of responsibility for opinions and expenditures without representation grew too heavy to bear. The culminating difficulty seems to have arisen with General Booth's fixed determination to link the army of Canada to that of the United States—a plan already partially carried out, the Salvation Army of our Northwestern States being governed and administered from Toronto; and Commander Booth's refusal to accede to this plan was met by the appointment of unfriendly subordinates. Reviewing the case upon the admitted facts, and in the light of this (ex parte) statement, we think that Commander Booth's patience was strained to the breaking point, and that he was quite justified in refusing to accept further responsibility under so arbitrary and unteachable a leadership. No religious organization governed by the despotic authority of an individual in England or Canada or Italy can permanently succeed among the plain people of these United States.

Mrs. Booth-Tucker failed last week to win her brother back to allegiance to the army. Our letter from the Interior chronicles important developments there, but Major Fielding's retirement from the Army to the Volunteers is more significant than the return of Colonel Glenn and his wife to the Army after a brief service with the Ballington Booths.

The National Legislature.

The senators, including, we regret to say, such a man as Senator Hawley of Connecticut, have negatived the proposition of Postmaster-General Wilson to provide for further consolidation of post offices in large centers of population, under which system, as tried thus far, admirable results have been secured, less expense incurred, better service rendered and the area of authority of Civil Service principles extended. A debate in the Senate has begun, which promises to be one of the most stirring and important of the season, upon the clause in the Indian Appropriation Bill, providing for the support of Indian schools. Senator Carter of Montana, a Roman Catholic, moved to strike out the clause directing that no part of the money ($1,135,000) shall be paid for education in sectarian schools. Senator Gray of Delaware agreed with him, as did Senator Hawley of Connecticut, but Senators Lodge, Gallinger, Hoar and Allison insisted on the retention of the clause. As the Roman Catholic schools are the only ones now accepting Government money, of course the proposed action disturbs their equanimity, but they realize that it must come sometime and all that Senator Carter pleaded for was a gradual, not a summary, withdrawal. An interesting side issue in the debate was the discussion as to whether Hampton Institute of Virginia and Lincoln Institute, Philadelphia, could consistently receive appropriations if the Senate agreed to accept the House clause. The Senate committee on appropriations hold that they cannot and has moved to strike out the items for these institutions.

A Permanent Arbitration Tribunal.

The Pope has said Amen to the action of Cardinals Gibbons, Vaughan and Logue which we chronicled last week and, in a letter to the London Chronicle, expressed his hope that God will "crown the praiseworthy efforts to create a permanent tribunal for the purpose of deciding international controversies."

The Rhode Island Republican Convention honored itself by passing the following resolution:

Believing war, as the ultimate method of settling international disputes, to be un-Christian and consequently uncivilized, the Republicans of Rhode Island urge upon the national Government the creation of an international court of arbitration, to which shall be referred for adjudication all differences with nations consenting thereto which, from time to time, may arise and which, without the intervention of this august tribunal, might lead to appalling destruction of life and property and to the demoralization of the republic.

And it is to be hoped that a similar plank will be found in the platforms that are formulated at St. Louis and Chicago.

We have received from the National Congress of Evangelical Free Churches of England the following appeal, which should meet with replies worthy of it from all gatherings of Christian people in this country during the coming months:

Dear Brethren: Among the many questions of supreme interest and importance in relation to the kingdom of God which have been occupying our attention, there is none which lies nearer to our hearts than the continuance of that love between England and America which has been growing strong for many years of increasing intercourse between us. We rejoice that in the difficulty which arose, during the closing days of 1895, between your government and ours, relative to Venezuela, the influence of the pulpit on both sides of the Atlantic was immediately and successfully exerted to repress angry feeling, and to declare that no difference must be allowed to be a cause of war; that there could be none which the Christian wisdom of the two nations could not peaceably settle. We are anxious, as we are sure you are, to turn that expression of the best feeling and the clear conscience of the two nations into a basis of continued and honorable peace. Your Congress and our House of Commons have declared themselves in favor of accepting the principle of arbitration in settlement of differences between us. Many of our most distinguished men in all departments of civil life—including the past and present leaders of the House of Commons—have deliberately declared in favor of the principle, since the emergence of the Venezuelan difficulty. It is, however, to the churches in the two lands that we look to sustain this purpose, and to urge political parties to accept it as a settled matter of policy, and devise means for carrying it into effect. We wish to pledge you, as we pledge ourselves, not to relax watchfulness and endeavor, until the principle of arbitration in all our differences be embodied in a binding treaty, and a permanent tribunal of arbitration be established. We intend to send a copy of this our memorial to our political leaders, and to give it all publicity, so as to bind ourselves to you as emphatically as we can. Should you find yourselves able to do something of the same sort in America we shall rejoice. Again we assure you of our affection for you and our unceasing prayer on your behalf. Among many memories we have in common, dear and sacred as they are, the closest tie which unites us—closer even than our blood relation—is this; that your churches and ours have a common origin, a common martyr history, a common experience of missionary zeal and triumph, a common enthusiasm for man and freedom, as well as a common type of religious doctrine, spiritual life and ethical character.

Signed on behalf of the council, H. Price Hughes, president, Charles A. Berry, ex-president, Alexander Mackennal, secretary.

The Olympian Games.

Boston has been called, with somewhat scornful emphasis, "the modern Athens," but her athletic representatives at least have been causing the real Athenians at the Olympian games to open their eyes, and are to bring home a goodly number of laurels. Even the empire of athletic supremacy seems to have taken a westward course, and the Greeks are left to console themselves with their triumphant victory in the long race of twenty six miles from Marathon and a few other trophies, which no American, remembering what the run with news from Marathon once stood for, will for a moment grudge them. The American victories are particularly creditable because they were won under the disadvantage of lack of time for practice in a new climate. Perhaps the most striking of all, looked at in the historic setting, was that of young Garrett of Princeton in the discus-throwing. This is not a modern feat of strength and skill—our corresponding sports of hammer-throwing and weight-putting being derived from Scotland—and most of us associate it entirely with figures cut on antique gems and one famous statue of the discus thrower, which is among the greatest of the works of sculpture which have come down to us. The times have changed, and this may be called the American Olympiad. It was not Olympia, but Athens; not the century of the Greek supremacy, but the age of the modern and Western world; and we hope that the strength and skill which gave the victory to an American undergraduate student may be significant and prophetic of something of the Greek spirit in a higher form than love of mere physical prowess and beauty, resident and to grow in our university and general life. And when the games come in their turn to America, may our crowds of spectators emulate the self-control and courtesy of the Greeks.

REV. GEORGE P. KNAPP.

What Does Turkey Mean?

When charges of fostering sedition were filed against Rev. George P. Knapp, the American Board missionary at Bitlis, several weeks ago, and Turkey was preparing to hale him before a Turkish tribunal to find him guilty on manufactured evidence and then hustle him out of the country, Mr. Terrell, our minister at Constantinople, insisted so strenuously upon a fair trial before him in Constantinople that Turkey assented, and Mr. Knapp, leaving behind his family and Mr. Cole, in due time set forth for Constantinople under guard. As we went to press last week the rumors of his being cast into prison at Diarbekir came to us, but could not be confirmed. It has since been learned that he was incarcerated there and treated as a common criminal, although Turkey, of course, denies this; and subsequent dispatches seemed to indicate to the officials of the Board in Constantinople that Turkey was preparing to deny him a trial even in Constantinople and force him to leave the country, the question of the wholesale expulsion of his fellow-workers to be determined by the success or failure of the attempt to summarily eject him. As we state elsewhere, Mr. Riddle and Sir Philip Currie, upon hearing of this, acted so promptly and vigorously, protesting against this violation of treaty rights, that Mr. Knapp has been escorted to the representative of the United States at Alexandretta, from whence he will proceed to Constantinople, there to be tried.

While it is true that an important point was gained when Turkey was forced to agree to his trial before a non-Turkish court, a mistake was made in not insisting that he be tried by such a court at Bitlis. Once out of a missionary station it requires a double expenditure of skill and force to put a missionary back there when proved innocent. Any adoption in a general way of a policy of securing justice at such long range will subject the American Board and its servants to expenditures of money and loss of time and prestige which it and they cannot well afford to meet.

Miss Barton cables for more funds and states that relief work has begun in several towns and that no serious obstacle to her work is now in her way. Epidemic rages in Marash. The significant news from Russian Armenia is that Russia has prohibited the collection of funds to be sent to the relief of the suffering in Turkish Armenia. Julia Ward Howe has sent forth to her fellow-American women a most stirring and admirable appeal, calling upon them to come to the relief of humanity in Armenia.

NOTES.

Mayors Wurster of Brooklyn and Strong of New York have withheld approval of the Greater New York Bill.

The Holland Society of New York is to be commended for its decision to erect a statue of William the Silent in New York city. D. C. French will be the sculptor.

Emperor William and King Humbert have been in consultation, and rumor has it that the papal succession as well as the future of the Triple Alliance have been discussed and a policy outlined.

The death of M. Tricoupis in France removes "the Gladstone of Greece." Mr. John A. Cockerill, the American journalist who died in Cairo last week, had won signal honors in his profession.

The official courtesies shown last week to Count Yamagata, field marshal of the Japanese army, en route to St. Petersburg, where he will be the representative of the mikado at the czar's coronation, by the State of New York officials were the first he has received, and might well not be the last.

Russia must pay 45,000 roubles to an American citizen whom she clapped into prison eight years ago. This is supposed to atone for ruined eyesight. The man still has a claim of 250,000 roubles for false imprisonment. It is gratifying to see that our State Department has influence at St. Petersburg.

The appointment of Gen. Fitzhugh Lee of Virginia as our consul-general in Havana will enable the State Department to gain information respecting the respective military strength of the combatants and the state of affairs in Cuba, which will enable it to proceed more intelligently.

The New York Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church passed resolutions last week urging the Government to resist any scheme for expelling missionaries from Turkey. Should it seem necessary to remind the State Department of its duty, let the petitions flood—not pour, that is too mild a word—in.

The part which cheap transportation has already played and is to play still more completely in the future history of the world is suggested by the news that there is a probability of famine in a large part of India, while the farmers are drying and burning their potatoes for fuel in western New York because they are nearly or quite unsalable.

Governor Morton of New York has injured his reputation by consenting to permit those who are to execute the Raines Law to evade the Civil Service provision in the new constitution; and Mr. Lyman, whose appointment as head of the department for executing the law seemed to indicate that Governor Morton was indifferent to the desires of the party boss of the State, has selected such men as his subordinates that it is apparent the law is to be used to aid the party machine as well as control the liquor traffic and increase the State's revenues.

The Rhode Island Republican Convention indorsed Mr. Reed and gold. The Oregon Republican Convention instructed its delegates to vote for Mr. McKinley and adopted a neutral plank on monetary standards. The Oregon Democratic Convention adopted a free silver plank, and instructed its delegates to support a candidate who favors the free and unlimited coinage of silver in the ratio of 16 to 1. The A. P. A. bids fair to have something to say in deciding the Republican nomination. The third term talk relative to President Cleveland increases, and ex-President Harrison is being considered favorably by many who, though hostile to him personally, believe he alone can stem the McKinley flood.

The Egyptian and British troops are slowly advancing up the Nile, cautiously feeling their way and taking care not to come in conflict with the Mahdi's forces before the proper time to strike. Joseph Chamberlain and President Kruger are ceaselessly sparring, with the points, thus far, in favor of the president of the Transvaal, which has begun to seize the mining property of those who plotted against its life. From Central Africa there comes the welcome news that British forces, late last December, routed the forces of Mwasi Kazunga, the great Arab slave dealer and ruler, and captured a large number of prisoners, much spoil, and opened a direct highway into the British Central African Company's territories near the Luangwa and Luapula rivers. This opens up a country rich in cattle and ivory.

Sir John Gorst, vice-president of the committee of the council on education, in introducing the Education Bill, to which our letter from London this week refers, in the House of Commons, contrasted the system of rural education in France and Denmark with the British system, and attributed to the inferiority of the latter the ease with which the French and Danish farmers are beating the British farmers in their own markets. He acknowledges the need of reform in the educational department itself, and advocates the bill because it would decentralize the department and encourage local self-respect and self-government. The opposition to the measure is formidable and increases rapidly. The National Teachers' Union, the Educational League of the Free Churches, The Tablet, the Roman Catholic organ, many Unionist and all the Liberal papers condemn it roundly.

IN BRIEF.

Several new Pilgrims have been booked the past week for our tour of England and Holland. Those who have the matter still under advisement should decide without delay in order that desirable accommodations on the Columbia may be assigned them. The late comers must take what remains—good, but perhaps not the best. A London friend sends us this breezy post card of recent date:

From Land's End to John O'Groat's the British press—from Court Journal to Reynold's News—is ringing with the news of the descendants of the Pilgrim Fathers who are coming to visit the homes of their forefathers.

Our letter from the Interior describes an admirable job in municipal house-cleaning.

Socrates and Plato salute John Calvin and Jonathan Edwards. Princeton and Boston reign in Athens.

Seventy-one Congregational churches within the limits of the larger Chicago. A superb record!

Rev. Dr. Cuyler of Brooklyn preached his jubilee sermon April 5. Rarely has it been given to a man to wield so great an influence with voice and pen. Not only is he one of the oldest contributors to religious journals, but the most prolific and the most popular.

Paderewski played in a Western city recently and the receipts were $2,750. The same evening a mass meeting to arouse interest in Armenia was held, a collection taken and the receipts were $27.50. Music and self-gratification too often are to charity and "otherness" as 100 to 1.

It is difficult to see why the Presbyterians feel called upon to establish the so-called Sheldon Jackson College in Utah. We were first on the field. The State needs no such paralleling of effort and halving of resources. Too much Presbyterian money already has been sunk in Utah, too much occasion given for the scoffing of the unregenerate.

The Examiner quotes the London Academy on infant baptism and folk-lore to the effect that the source of infant baptism is to be found in old popular traditions and usages. If The Examiner is really intent upon discovering a precedent of this kind, we would respectfully refer it to the customs of the Hebrews as indicated in Gen. 17: 10–14.

Dr. Theodore Cuyler recently questioned Ian Maclaren's orthodoxy as revealed in his fiction, and he is catching it from some correspondents of English religious newspapers. A poem we publish in the Home Department voices the opinion of the many who are indifferent to theology but love goodness, whether found in living men or in the characters of fiction.

Men who sneeze when others take snuff we have heard of, as also of those in New York who turn up their trousers when it rains in London, but it has been left to The Church to describe the Protestant Episcopal Church as "still in large measure a provincial church, having our thinking done outside, and believing in umbrellas when it rains somewhere else."

The effect of the A. B. C. F. M. retrenchment in India may be judged from Rev. Robert Hume's statement: "I have dismissed two men, sent away a few pupils, have asked all the other native workers to accept, at present, the loss of one month's salary, am economizing to the utmost in everything, and am waiting in hope, before slashing ruinously at the work of years."

The reforms which the committee in charge of the next meeting of the Massachusetts General Association are planning are stated in another column. We gladly give space to this statement for they promise well for the interest and usefulness of the association, and surely they should win many who have been dissatisfied in the past to plan to attend and cause an unusual attendance.

The semi-annual meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary Association in Worcester, April 29, bids fair to be of unusual interest. Special attention will be given to the work for the Juniors, and the needs of Oregon and Utah and the Black Belt are to be set forth by those competent for the duty. Mrs. Goodell will give a Bible reading, and Miss F. J. Dyer an address on A New Point of View.

Washed white or whitewashed? is Dr. Robertson Nicolls way of stating in four words the difference between sin that is hated, trampled under foot and atoned for and the sin that is condoned, forgotten and unexpiated, and of the latter kind he finds many descriptions in present day works of fiction by authors hitherto deemed sound in their ethical bearings, if not in their theological.

It is regrettable that one of our institutional churches has resorted to the "chain system" for aid in securing its income. Responsibility for carrying on this church should rest directly upon individuals and societies belonging to our denomination and, when aid is imperatively needed, they should be approached in a direct and legitimate way. Gifts of perfumery as bait for gifts to the church are not calculated to win respect for the institutional church or the Church.

Prof. Irving Wood of Smith College, in addressing the Christian Endeavor Societies of the Hampshire Valley Union last week, made a statement which is significant, addressed as it was to the coming generation of supporters of missionary work, and expressing the opinion of a college professor. He said: "No subject for study will give culture more than the study of missionary work. Philistinism is provincialism, and nothing opposes provincialism and broadens sympathy as does the study of missions."

Remembering that for the next few months our young readers in particular will spend many hours in the open air, we begin this week, in the Home Department, a series of outdoor articles which we hope will stimulate the boys and girls to use their eyes and ears to advantage when off on their rambles. Imaginary walks will be taken through field and forest, by the seashore and under the starlit heavens, and each topic in these various departments of natural science will be treated in a popular and entertaining way by expert writers.

Certain Sunday newspapers—the Herald in Boston—last Sunday touched an abysmal depth of vulgarity and responsibility for abetting crime by publishing a circumstantial description of the way in which a notorious murderer has killed twenty-seven fellow-mortals, the same being a confession sold to a news syndicate and spread broadcast for lucre. It was a sad day for American journalism when Mr. Pulitzer of St. Louis secured a foothold in New York, and it seems now as if Mr. Hearst, the California millionaire, who now owns the Morning Journal which copyrighted this abominable story, is to earn a like or greater degree of opprobrium.

Rev. T. J. Lee, who exposed Dr. Morgan's plagiarism, graduated at Yale Seminary and was formerly pastor of our churches at Winsted and New Milford, Ct. He says very pertinently: "I am by no means a clerical detective. I haven't a remarkable memory, either, but I don't see how a man can fail to recognize what he had read, else what is the use of reading? I have done this because I thought it was right to do it, and because I felt that I could not with a clear conscience avoid doing it." He believes that the ministers of the country are an "honest, hardworking set of men, human, liable to do wrong, and in duty bound when they err to stand up and take their punishment like men."

The executive committee of the Baptist Young People's Union denies that, as we stated Feb. 13, they "draw the color line and refuse to Negroes their rights as men and Christians." They assert that there is absolutely "no constitutional distinction based upon the ground of race, color or sex," and affirm that they "neither invite nor ignore any person on account of race, color or sex." We made the assertion because it was the reason given by the Young People's Society of Tremont Temple, Boston, for its action in withdrawing from the union and becoming a Society of Christian Endeavor. We supposed that Dr. Lorimer and his young people knew what they were doing.

An excellent illustration of the changes which are constantly occurring in the membership of our city churches is found in the history of the "Old First," Detroit, during the twelve years of Dr. Davis's ministry. More members have gone out from the church—seventy-one having died and 327 been dismissed to other churches—than were on its roll during the first year of Dr. Davis's pastorate. Within twelve years, by letter and confession of faith, 792 have been received into the fellowship of the church, four more than its present membership. Thirty-five of this number were received the last Sunday which Dr. Davis was its pastor. During these years the church has moved more than two miles from its former site, built and paid for an edifice of remarkable beauty and convenience, and at the same time enlarged every department of its work. It was with great regret that the people permitted their pastor and his wife to leave them.

In consequence of his immersion Dr. A. T. Pierson finds himself like Noah's dove, without an ecclesiastical resting place for the sole of his foot. The Baptists will have none of him, nor does he claim their brotherhood. He holds a certificate of dismission to a Congregational association, but has not presented it, and even this has now been revoked by the Presbytery of Philadelphia which granted it, and which in the same action resolves

That, whatever Dr. Pierson may have meant to the contrary, this Presbytery is clearly of the opinion that a change of denomination is demanded by his immersion, by the views expressed in his letter and by all the proprieties of the situation.

That we, therefore, urge Dr. Pierson promptly to seek admission into some denomination more in sympathy with his convictions on baptism, thus relieving Presbytery of its present embarrassment.

We suppose Dr. Pierson will be highly indignant at being shown the back door with such emphatic urgency, but what else could he expect when he made up his mind to do what he did in the way he did it.

STAFF CORRESPONDENCE.

FROM THE INTERIOR.

Easter Services.

Congregationalists more and more these later years are paying attention to prominent events in the life of the Lord, and by carefully prepared services are trying to lead the people to cherish juster views of his person and work. Not only were the larger churches like the First, Union Park, New England, Plymouth, the South, richly adorned with flowers and crowded with worshipers, but the smaller churches, even the missionary churches, had their attendance largely increased. Some of our churches held special services during Holy Week and report a great spiritual uplift in consequence. Some had communion Easter Sunday and received a goodly number into their fellowship.

Splendid Gains in Membership.

At California Avenue Church a review of four years' work was given, showing that in this time 523 persons have been received into the church, making its present membership 510, while the house of worship has been completed and property worth not less than $40,000 secured. Here every Sunday an audience of about 700 gathers to listen to Dr. D. F. Fox, the pastor. The church is made up of working people and illustrates what earnest evangelistic efforts wisely put forth will accomplish. At the Cortland Street Church, one of the city missionary churches, thirty-four persons were received into fellowship. At Bethlehem Church (Bohemian), Dr. E. A. Adams, pastor, forty-eight were received, all but four on confession of faith. These accessions came for the most part from the ranks of the young people who have been trained in the Sunday schools and are fully aware of the significance of the step they have taken. Perhaps the most remarkable accession to our churches was that received by the Church of the Redeemer, Rev. W. H. Manss, pastor. Here thirty-nine were admitted into the church, thirty-five on confession of faith, making fifty-nine since November. This church is in a region which is occupied both by the rich and the poor. The spirit of the church and all its work recognize the fact that with God there is no distinction of persons. To the friends of this church nothing has been more gratifying than the rapid growth it has recently made, and the new spiritual power it is showing. Easter was also a great day for the Lincoln Park Church, Dr. David Beaton, pastor. After a careful study of its field this church decided some months ago to sell its house of worship, change its location and build anew. Its chapel, a model of beauty and convenience, seating some 500 persons, on Fullerton Avenue near Harvey, was dedicated Sunday morning, the pastor preaching the sermon, and Professors Curtiss, Chamberlain and Secretary Taintor taking part in the service. The building is free of debt. In fact, the subscriptions called for amount to nearly $2,000 more than were actually needed. In its present location the church starts with a property worth about $30,000 and the prospect of great usefulness.

The Ballington Booths Reception.

Easter was also a good day both for Salvationists and Volunteers. Miss Eva Booth being in the city, her influence attracted large numbers to Princess Rink, the headquarters of the Salvation Army, while the influence of Major Blackhurst and Mr. Tremble and the resignation of Brigadier-General Fielding, who has been the leading spirit in the Salvation Army for the West, in order to join Mr. and Mrs. Ballington Booth filled the halls where the Volunteers gathered. Tuesday evening the Auditorium contained an audience of not less than 5,000 to welcome the Booths and listen to their plans for their new work. Nothing in all that they said was more remarkable than the loyalty they expressed toward their old work and their determination to do nothing to interfere with its progress. And yet with its former leader, General Fielding, on the stage and accepting from his new yet old commander an appointment which gives him the control of four or five Western States, and the certainty that a very large number of those who have hitherto been identified with the Salvation Army will now join the Volunteers, it would seem as if the new movement could hardly fail to cripple to a greater or less extent the old. As Bishop Fallows expressed it, speaking as the representative of the churches, the wish is that General Booth would turn over the whole army to his son Ballington and let it be known as the Salvation Army of the United States, instead of an army which is receiving its orders from men across the water, who cannot be in complete sympathy with our institutions or understand the real needs of our field.

Ministers' Meeting.

The subject discussed at this meeting Monday morning, What Can Be Done to Advance the Interests of Our Work? was one to which a good many have given serious attention. No one among us is better fitted to describe what has been done and to suggest methods for the future than Professor Curtiss, who has not spared himself since he came to the city in his efforts to found and successfully develop churches in needy and promising fields. His paper was largely historical and personal. It gave an account of the way in which, through the aid of members of the First Church and by the gift of about $30,000, Grace Church, the Covenant Church and Warren Avenue Church, each self-supporting now, the two last of commanding importance, were founded, of the years of sacrifice called for and of the reward all who had a part in this self-sacrifice are now receiving. The gifts of the Union Park Church to California Avenue Church were also emphasized, and references made to other work illustrating the interest of other churches in special fields and calling attention to the aims and methods of the City Missionary Society in its attempt to provide for the rapidly growing fields opening on almost every side. Due honor was given to Dr. Goodwin, Dr. Noble, Dr. Little and Rev. B. F. Leavitt for the part they took in laying foundations upon which the success of the last few years has been based.

Tuesday's Election.

Tuesday we elected city officers and half of a new city council. Of city officers, assessors, collectors, sheriffs, the Republicans made a clean sweep. The candidates for these offices were in the main acceptable to the people. Thanks to the Municipal Voters' League, a new organization formed to scrutinize the character and fitness of nominees for the office they desire to fill, a good many who would like to be known as aldermen were permitted to remain private citizens. Less than half a dozen well-known boodlers got into the council. It is hoped that we now have a council which will render it impossible for any ordinance which has received the mayor's veto to be carried over it. The need of such a reform is evident from the action this week, by which valuable franchises have been granted without any proper regard for the welfare of the city or the rights of its citizens. Perhaps the veto which Mayor Swift is sure to prepare will not be presented till the new members enter the council, when the action of the present council will be reversed. Although the results of the election were not all that could be desired, the gain in good men has been so considerable that we are hopeful, and begin to believe that the time is not so very far off when we shall have a city government of which we shall not be ashamed. Some men were put into the council this year by votes both of Democrats and Republicans who will be heard from, while others, whose election was looked upon as sure, were defeated by such majorities as to make it evident that the people will not support a dishonest man or a man whose record is doubtful when the facts are laid before them.

Seminary Examinations.

These examinations have just taken place. On the whole the professors speak favorably of the results. Owing to the brevity of the seminary year the students have been driven very hard. Thanks to the position taken two or three years since the standard for admission to the seminary has been raised so decidedly as to make it possible to require far more of the students than previously. Professor Curtiss, in order to save time, has been in the habit of teaching young men proposing to enter the seminary the principles of Hebrew by correspondence, encouraging them by the offer of prizes to devote at least two months' study to this language before entering the seminary. Last year fourteen were able to enter an advanced class in Hebrew and to do an amount of work which is simply astonishing. The examination of this class was highly creditable to the instructor and to those who compose it. If something could be done to secure a better or a more accurate preparation in Greek equally satisfactory results would appear. All the classes have given evidence of faithful work and devotion on the part of the professors. Much interest was felt in the examinations, conducted by Professor Mackenzie, in systematic theology. It is enough to say that they were thoroughly satisfactory, but not more so than those who have come into close association with Professor Mackenzie had anticipated.

Chicago, April 10. FRANKLIN.

FROM LONDON.

A Reactionary Measure.

The country is now experiencing the full benefit of Lord Salisbury's rule. Having embroiled the country in sundry "little wars," embarked on a needless expedition in the Soudan, got into complications in almost every quarter of the globe and over Armenia brought the nation into disgrace which every true Briton feels like a personal shame, one might have imagined that the limit of Tory folly had been reached. But the Government has now displayed an equal capacity for mischief in the domestic sphere by concocting an educational bill whose main principles are in direct opposition to the progressive spirit of the British people. Emboldened by the hugeness of its majority, the Government has introduced a measure which, in almost every particular, bears the imprint of the reactionary hand of the premier, who has long desired, to use his own blunt phrase, to "capture the board schools" and endow the voluntary schools. No better analysis of the measure could be furnished than that given by the emergency committee, composed of leading Nonconformist educationists. They declare that the bill is essentially bad in principle, that it discriminates in favor of schools under private management in the distribution of the parliamentary grant, impedes the formation of school boards and tends to the abolition of those that exist, introduces sectarian distinctions into the religious teaching of board schools, does nothing to secure local voluntary effort and even removes the existing obligation to meet from local resources the funds given by Parliament, proposes increased parliamentary aid with no adequate securities for increased efficiency, arrests educational progress and tends to perpetuate clerical monopoly in the schools and places the local educational authorities under the control of other local authorities who have been elected for totally different purposes. Such a series of preposterous proposals has naturally roused the whole body of Nonconformists throughout the country. Whatever be the ultimate fate of the measure, it is safe to prophesy that it will not pass in its present form. Even some of Lord Salisbury's followers are astounded at the audacity of the measure and certain Liberal Unionists may be depended upon to rebel against some of its provisions. Lord Salisbury, in his characteristic, blundering way has unintentionally done distinct service to the Liberal party by precipitating an issue which will provide them with what they sorely needed, a rallying cry, and lead to the consolidation of their forces.

The Congregational Outlook.

It is pleasing to find that the secretary of the Congregational Union of England and Wales is able, with his intimate knowledge of churches and pastors throughout the country, to take an optimistic view of denominational prospects. Among other things, he finds reason for rejoicing in the general attachment of the churches to sound doctrine. Some old views have been abandoned, but the fall of things that could be shaken has revealed more that could not be shaken. Here and there a preacher weakens his ministry by inclining overmuch towards subjective theology, but the vast majority in pulpit and pew hold on to the historic facts of the revelation which came by Jesus Christ. Mr. Woods believes that of all Christians Congregationalists have with most freedom examined and renewed their theological robes, whilst no church in the world has suffered fewer changes in relation to things essential. Other causes for rejoicing he sees in the return of the churches to the old ideal of a learned ministry, their recognition of the place and power of Christian women, and the interest they are showing in young people. On the other hand, grave anxiety is occasioned by the enfeebled condition of churches in agricultural counties, who are "vexed by a system of nagging persecution which inflicts all the torments of martyrdom without conferring a fraction of its distinction." To allow these village churches to die out would be an error in policy, a failure of brotherly love and a sin against Christ. Mr. Woods's plan for saving village Nonconformity is "such affiliation or federation as will supply ample-headed, large-hearted men, commanding the enthusiasm of their supporters and compelling the respect of their opponents." Last year's chairman of the union, Rev. Urijah R. Thomas, declares after much visitation of the churches that the great, abiding, universal theme of the gospel ministry never fails to interest the people. Mr. Thomas pays tribute to the splendid work done by village pastors, and deplores that they are so ill paid. Better days seem to be dawning for these worthy ministers. Thanks, primarily, to the devotion and energy of its treasurer, Mr. Gerard N. Ford, the financial condition of the Church Aid Society has so much improved that this year it is able to secure to every pastor of an aided church a minimum stipend of £80 and to every evangelist £70. In some counties the minimum stipend will now be £100, and that is the goal to be aimed at throughout England. There are ample resources within the denomination to accomplish this. Let us hope they will be forthcoming. ALBION.

CURRENT THOUGHT.

AT HOME.

President DeGarno in The Citizen says that "the greatest need of our time is a revision of our theory of character. Our prevailing ideals were formed when society in this country was, so far as environment was concerned, in its most primitive state. . . . At the present time one-third of our population is concentrated in cities. . . . The essential idea of provincial and rural life is isolation, independence and, in many important respects, non-responsibility for others; that of the city is reciprocity, co-operation, mutual responsibility. . . . So long as our present non-social ideals of character prevail, first in the school and later in the community, so long will our municipal reforms prove to be both ineffective and transient. They are all brought about through the infinite labor of the few, only at the next election to be lapsed into their former state."

The Springfield Republican uses the scandal, which the course of Trinity Church, N. Y., as a landlord causes, as an argument why no church should solicit or accept gifts which may serve as an endowment. It holds that "the policy of individuals and perhaps that of legislatures should be against the creating of funds for the benefit of particular churches, which become at last but temptations to avarice and indolence and the destruction of personal responsibility. The only assurance for the extension and perpetuity of religion is the spontaneous offering from the human heart whether expressed in personal service, or in money gifts and the mischief of invested funds has always been that they tended to destroy this spontaneity."

The Boston Journal, commenting on our In Brief, which described the action of a pastor in Maine who induced every member of his church to contribute to removing the debt of the American Board by preaching a sermon and then supplementing it by calls on the forty or more absent members says, "Few churches would be in financial straits and few missionary societies would have a heavy debt fastened like a millstone about their necks if the duty of universal giving and the value of accumulated small gifts were emphasized as it should be. . . . Often the very terms in which an appeal for contributions is made are such as to seem to apply only to those who are able to give largely"

Bicycles as anti-tobacco evangels are suggested by the following excerpt from the United States Tobacco Journal: "We do not exaggerate the least. The bike craze has infatuated, enslaved at the least calculation 500,000 males who were formerly addicted to the smoking habit. If these 500,000 male slaves to the bike craze have weaned themselves to smoking only two cigars less a day—this must be considered a most moderate calculation, as the bikeist hardly ever worships less than from four to six hours at the shrine of his wheel—then the consumption of cigars is decreasing at the rate of 1,000,000 per day and 700,000,000 in a year. And the decrease in our cigar production since the bike craze has set in has actually been 700,000,000 per year."

ABROAD.

The tenor of Radical criticism in Great Britain may be judged from the following quotation from the Chronicle: "Are we to be nothing more than the Quixotes of the world, remedying this injustice, and defying that Power, destroying our own insular character, and getting nothing in return but the ill-will of our most powerful neighbors? In short, have we any consistent foreign policy at all? There is not a particle of evidence that the advance on the Soudan was justified by any pressing military necessity. Indeed, all the evidence points the other way. If no such necessity exists, we are driven to the conclusion that behind a flimsy and inconsistent case lie concealed obligations towards Powers with which we have no interests in common, and whose ideas of government are repugnant to us and to the components of the British commonwealth."

THE WORK OF THE YALE BAND IN WASHINGTON.

BY ONE OF ITS MEMBERS.

The Yale Band has completed its work as a band. Four of its six members are still in the State of Washington, three as pastors of churches and one as president of Whitman College. It may be of value to review its four years' work, that those whose interest was stirred at the Saratoga home missionary meeting of 1890 may decide whether their enthusiasm has borne fruit, and, secondly, that those who are looking forward to Christian work may have the benefit of this experiment in planning their own methods.

The band was made up of six Yale Seminary graduates, who offered themselves to the missionary society, ready to be placed anywhere the secretaries felt that work was most needed, with the one stipulation that they should be located in the same State within a reasonable distance of each other. Among themselves they had agreed to stay together at least two years. They were sent to Eastern Washington into a farming region. Each received the same salary and was to locate at any point designated by the State superintendent. One man's field was changed by a telegram delivered to him on the train a few hours before he reached his supposed destination. Another, six weeks before starting from the East, received word that a certain town had been destroyed by fire, that his location had been changed to this place, where the church must be rebuilt at once. This military freedom in placing the band at the most critical points had a double advantage: the superintendent could put men where they were needed, at short notice; the men lost no time in candidating or balancing the advantages—some would say disadvantages—of the respective fields. The character and development of the idea will perhaps appear in tracing briefly the "band meetings." In them will be seen the advantages of the band plan, since our methods differed from those of every home missionary pastor in no other marked respect. The people were an alert, hopeful, generally speaking young, farming class, without church traditions or restraints. As a rule every one expected to make enough money in ten or twelve years to live on and then return somewhere. Houses were built, but few homes. To make money was the one incentive. "Do you think we are out here for our health?" would be the reply to a suggestion for closing places of business on Sunday. When one man was asked to come to church, he asked in reply, "Is there any money in it?" Old men and cemeteries were scarce.

The men reached their work in September. The first band meeting was held at Genesee in November. At this meeting the mornings were spent in theological discussions; various papers were presented, one on the first one hundred pages of Müller's Christian Doctrine of Sin, another on the Origin of Conscience, discussing certain chapters in Spencer's Data of Ethics. The afternoons were occupied in talking of the practical work and in visiting. The first evening was given to a reception, where members of the band met the people of the town in a social way. A few college songs showed the people that the men were human like themselves, enjoying a hearty laugh, and that they could sing something besides Coronation and Webb. This took well, especially with the boys. Some member of the band frequently made a brief speech asking the people for their candid and earnest consideration, in the ten days following, of the claims of Jesus Christ upon them as individuals. A gospel hymn and a prayer usually closed the evening.

At the next band meeting, two months later, Müller's Doctrine of Sin had rather scant attention and speculation on the origin of conscience became preparation to arouse conscience. Until every town in the circuit had been visited a reception was held on the first night, after that they were discontinued and all the evenings were given up to evangelistic services. Discussions of theories gave way to grappling with facts. Most of the mornings were spent in prayer for individuals and planning the afternoon and evening attack. Afternoon cottage Bible readings were used with good effect. In the evening the cards were superseded by the more definite and courageous self-declaration, personal request or consecration. While figures may either overestimate or underestimate results, it may be of interest to know that when the men reached the field the total resident membership of the six band churches numbered seventy-nine, an average of thirteen and one-sixth. This included two new churches just organized. During the band work this increased to 341 resident members, an average of fifty-six and five-sixths. Two hundred and twenty-one united on confession. This does not include the one or more out-stations which each man supplied. Some had church organizations. The increase in the population of the towns would not average probably more than twenty five per cent.

The evolution of the band work may indicate the need felt by the individual members for their fields. While they found themselves organizing and maintaining (for a longer or shorter time) reading-rooms, Chautauqua circles, boys' guilds and gymnasium classes, pushing movements for village adornment and civic decency, still greater and greater stress came to be laid upon the salvation in Christ. The band meetings became straight, earnest appeals to personal commitment to him, going as far as street singing and preaching in at least two towns. I have no authority to speak for others, but I believe that the development of the band meeting showed that the solution of the problem, sociological, religious or civic, as worked out in those fields, was Christ, Christ as lived by the true Christian, as presented through the churches and especially through enlightened Congregational churches. To insert a personal confession and testimony, I went out glad that I was a Christian, satisfied for the time in the choice of the Congregational church, but questioning the wisdom of letting either be too prominent. Four years has changed this. Our simple Scriptural polity, with its infinite adaptability, is something to glory in, and fearlessly do I now make the all-prominent figure in social and philanthropic, as well as religious, work Jesus Christ, the Prophet of the better race future and, for that reason, the needed Saviour of the present sinful individual. A warm-hearted man, who unaffectedly lets it be clearly known that it is Christ who worketh in him to will and to do, will never estrange the candid working man, high or low, by letting that fact appear.

At the close of our second band meeting in one town I was introduced to a man at his own gate. With no introduction further than a brief comment on the weather he broke out, "God Almighty ought to damn every one of you men to hell, if there is such a place, for hoodwinking the people the way you do, preaching a lot of stuff you know is not true." I intimated to him that he might think us fools, but he had no right to call us knaves; that he knew there was no reason such a man as —— should bury himself in such a town if he did not believe in what he was doing. The secret was that the man's wife, the former center of a group of literary infidels, had found the truth as it is in Jesus; she had become an active member of the church; her oldest daughter stood with her; and her younger daughter, a bright society girl, who two years before had said in a most flippant tone, "Why, really, Mr. ——, I haven't any use for God," was now an active member of the Christian Endeavor Society and a little later a member of the church. Jesus Christ, the power of God unto salvation, becomes something more than a theological dogma when you know that business men who could not pass a summer Sunday a few years ago without an excursion are now looking courageously at business reverses. It means much for such a lately prosperous young merchant to write of his business:

> The financial outlook has been growing worse and worse, darker and darker, while it is now as dark as night. The crops are all harvested and very few of them indeed have paid harvesting expenses, and of course the consequence is that our worst fears are realized. But thank God, while our financial affairs have been growing so dark, our spiritual affairs have been growing brighter and brighter. Mrs. X. stands the reverses splendid; she looks on the bright side of them all the time, and this morning she says, "Let's ask God to direct our steps and lives in the future and put our trust in him." We knelt down at once and did so, and I haven't been so happy in some time. The —— company has gone entirely to smash.

Such experiences are invaluable for a young man fresh from the seminary training. They put a new meaning into the facts about which he has studied and arouse him to the need of home missionary work. For a man to grasp the idea of God is a necessary thing, but to have the needs of men drive him in his helplessness into the wilderness until God grasps the man—that is the sublime thing. To study about prayer is one thing, but to pray is quite a different thing. A man has sobered up under your roof; he has gained strength; after a few days he goes down town alone; from behind your curtain you follow him until he turns the corner; he is out of sight; temptation is on every hand; God alone can help him. Is it wrong to say that a glimpse of Gethsemane's agony is revealed to the kneeling one? To study about prayer is one thing but to pray—is a mystery. The key is not in the classroom.

The need of the home missionary work is confronted with lack of funds and a necessary retrenchment of $75,000 Financial support in the field is given generously when the people have the money, but this retrenchment comes at a time when the people are bankrupt. One year when crops and prices were good over $3,000 was raised by a church of less than fifty members in a town of eighteen hundred to enlarge and repaint the church building and pay the salary. Wheat was then selling at eighty cents per bushel—for two years it has averaged little over thirty cents. All values are based upon wheat. Such a shrinkage means business paralysis and confusion. People who cannot pay off the mortgages on their homes cannot support church work as they would like. At such a crisis the reluctant word comes "retrench." Can it be that those who might increase their subscriptions will not hasten to do so and thus untie the hands of one of our most effective societies for the redemption of the land?

The "band idea" has been a success in this experiment. The churches now being larger and stronger are developing under individual pastors.

The advantages of the plan may be summarized in four points: (1) In this plan of co-operation, work was attempted which could not or would not have been tried by the individuals. As the men were congenial in tastes and methods of thought and equal in experience or lack of experience, no one hesitated because of older ones, each did the very best he could. All the powers that were in the men were called into service. (2) The plan saved time for the men and gave power to the superintendent to meet special needs. That they were judiciously placed is evident from the fact that only one change in the six was made after the men were actually at work. (3) It helped churches to be interested in each other. It was a noticeable thing that no church was envious of the others. All the men were well liked on all of the fields, but each church thought that its man was the best. (4) The idea can be used wherever three or more men with similarity of thought and training have perfect confidence in one another, so that each would be ready to sacrifice for the others, and no one would ask unreasonable sacrifices for his own work. The churches, of course, must be willing to co-operate and led to look upon the work in the various fields as, in a certain sense, part of their own work.

L. O. B.

THE WORK OF THE ANDOVER BAND IN MAINE.

BY REV. E. R. SMITH.

The Congregationalist desires an account of the work of the Andover Band in Maine. This work has extended over a period of three and a half years. It has been carried on chiefly in a group of five towns, in each of which a member of the band was stationed as the pastor of a Congregational church. After co-operation for three years two of the band withdrew to other fields of labor. This withdrawal has necessarily modified the work I shall describe, so that much of what is written must be in the past tense.

The average membership of the five churches to which the band went is forty. Two of them had been pastorless for many years. The financial ability of all was small. Moreover, they distrusted themselves and failed to realize how much power was actually theirs. They lacked efficient leaders. More effective organization was needed. Rival denominations stood ready to bid for popular favor, if not to labor for the public welfare. All these churches needed a larger conception of practical Christianity.

Social conditions in these towns are very similar to those of a hundred other New England country towns. The life of their small villages tends to stagnation. The conventional methods of social activity are inadequate to the needs of the people. The hard conditions of isolated farm life also have their narrowing tendencies. In the struggle for existence an abnormal individualism is developed. Public spirit, as manifest in a zeal for good roads and better schools, is too frequently noticeable for its absence. Yet the people are of keen, vigorous, independent Yankee stock. While asserting their right to do their own thinking, many evince a rare openness to new truth and new methods. Many of the young people aspire to wider educational advantages than are afforded by the district school.

The work of the Andover Band has moved along lines indicated by these needs. The churches were organized for practical work. Two of them have been incorporated. Young people's societies have been organized and existing societies better adjusted to the needs of their constituencies. District Sunday schools have been formed and neighborhood meetings established.

The services of public worship were made more attractive and profitable by giving the congregation a larger share in the same. We endeavored, successfully, to inspire the people with a larger faith in their own power. To a considerable extent leaders have been developing among them. The numerical increase in the churches has been most encouraging. In one instance the number of middle-aged men led to identify themselves with the church is remarkable.

The social side of Christianity has been emphasized, that "to be morally sound one must be socially serviceable." This idea of service has come to many as a new gospel. It is gratifying to see how the lives of those accepting it speedily begin to bear the fruit of a practical Christianity.

Much of our effort was necessarily concerned with the material factors of religious development. One of the band was released for a season from his usual pastoral duties to supervise the extensive renovation of the church building. Another, having the welfare of his parishioners' horses at heart, as well as the spiritual results accruing from regular church attendance, led in the erection of much-needed horse sheds. A third has just dedicated a beautiful and commodious meeting house. The hearty and self-denying manner in which his people have responded to his leadership in the erection of this new church building, and the spiritual awakening which is now following the material renewal of strength and beauty, make evident that this pastor's work has not been in vain. After the first year another member of the band brought his church to self-support, and at the same time received annual offerings for all seven of our Congregational benevolent societies.

On the educational side of the work classes have been formed for training in the fundamentals of religion and of practical ethics. These have proved useful factors in the spiritual development of children and young people. Literary clubs and reading circles are also found to have a beneficent mission in the country town. The Good Templars lodge is an efficient channel of broadening and uplifting influences.

Where possible the band have always worked through existing institutions rather than organizing new ones. It has been their aim to serve not simply their churches, but also the towns in which they are citizens. Sometimes they worked for this end through the church; where this was not practicable through other agencies. For two seasons they conducted entertainment courses on the co-operative basis. The effect of these has been salutary.

Bowdoin College friends have aided in this social work through the gift of the "Bowdoin Circulating Library," loaned to various towns of the group. A free public library, for which the town in which it is established has granted liberal appropriations, owes its existence, in large part, to the persistent agitation of one of the band.

The Lyceum League of America, a revival of the old debating club, proved a valuable factor in the promotion of manliness, patriotism and good citizenship among boys and young men. It may not be amiss to say that as citizens the members of the Andover Band have taken an active interest in matters pertaining to good government. One, to his surprise, was once elected moderator of the annual town meeting. Two have served upon the school board as superintendents of schools.

A large proportion of time has been spent among the people, in their homes and at their work. The pastoral side of the minister's life has been magnified. Pains have been taken to find the poorest and most isolated families along the "green ribbon-roads" of the back districts. This work, however, is not always practicable. The demands upon the country pastor's time and energy are many and varied. Since two of the band are the sole resident ministers in their respective towns, their parishes practically include the whole population of, in each case, between 600 and 700 people. Another has an annex to his parish in the form of a large lumber camp. Calls for pastoral services sometimes come from afar, once, in the case of a funeral, from the Canadian border, fifty miles distant.

Perhaps no problem in the work has been of more serious import than the denominational problem. The band attitude has always been one of protest against the evils of denominationalism. Where the peculiar sensitiveness and suspicion which these evils breed have permitted they have co-operated with churches of other denominations and, on the other hand, neighboring pastors, not simply of our own but also some of other denominations, have actively sympathized with the band's work.

The band assisted in establishing and supporting a county union ministers' meeting. All ministers of the county are invited to join this organization and it has proven serviceable in fostering relations of intelligent sympathy between workers in the various churches. The band have also preached interdenominationalism and the possible duty of denominational self-sacrifice. In one case a weaker denomination has withdrawn from the field and its members co-operate with the Congregational church. But, though one who wrestles with the denominational problem be reluctant to admit the fact, frankness compels him to acknowledge that his special contribution to its actual solution is necessarily of only small account.

The band method of work proves useful to the churches themselves, because a larger fellowship between them is thereby promoted. As they learn of each other's good deeds, a profitable competition is inspired. In all important matters each pastor may have the advice of his colleagues, who are always ready to lend a hand. The churches have been strengthened, numerically and spiritually, by special services conducted under the auspices of the band. Nine of these series of meetings have thus far been held. Each continued one week. The aim is evangelistic, though the method has not been the conventional revival method. A special subject or text is taken for the week. The text of two series was John 3: 16. In another series the week's thought centered around the Lord's Prayer. Following the principal speaker of each evening, the others aim in brief, pointed remarks to drive home his truth and to re-enforce the same. Frequently the band contributes to the musical part of the service a quartet or other selection.

One day there may be a children's meeting. The mornings are given to private band conference and consultation. The opportunity of becoming acquainted with the people in their homes adds largely to the value of the week. As the days go by the interest invariably deepens. For giving definite and permanent direction to this interest cards containing a pledge to the Christian life are circulated. These services result in definite decisions for Christ. Moreover they afford a larger outlook on religion. United in the common themes of the gospel the people forget any petty differences of opinion and are encouraged to go forward.

The personal benefits derived from membership in a band may be summed up in the word fellowship. The value of this fellowship during the constructive years of one's early ministry is inestimable. Band meetings are held, if possible, every second or third week. At these meetings books and magazines are exchanged, and possibly a sermon or paper may be read, but the main benefit of the conference comes from the personal touch.

Temptations to conceit and cant are reduced to a minimum when one is subjected every few weeks to the kindly but unsparing criticism and counsel of his colleagues. Then also ideals are strengthened and purified through this fellowship. The same power inspires courage. Moreover, it gives one a larger faith in himself, in his people and in God.

The need of this co-operative work among our weaker churches is large. If a band could go forth from every seminary class to some needy field, I am sure they would find the results of their labors commensurate with this need.

REV. WILLIAM H. DAVIS, D. D.

AN APPRECIATION.

BY REV. DR. DE WITT S. CLARK.

"A man that hath friends must show himself friendly," runs the proverb in the Authorized Version. Kindness, sympathy, self sacrifice—the very elements of friendship—are quite certain to attract and hold others. It is commonly believed that one cannot have too many friends. If love be the motive, inspiring interest in and service for others, it surely is worthy of all praise. If selfishness, it merits condemnation and, sooner or later, publishes itself and loses all it has gained.

Such reflections are prompted when reviewing the rather remarkable career of Rev. William H. Davis, D. D., of Detroit, who this week is to take the important pastorate of the Eliot Church, Newton. Nothing is more certain than that, wherever he goes, friends are made, who "grapple" him to their souls "with hooks of steel." The reason is that in speech, act and heart he shows himself friendly. That is simply because the great, generous, compelling spirit of the Christ dwells in him. "I will draw all men unto me," said the Master. The disciple has no holier ambition which he can state to any than

That, haply, I may help you climb
To Jesus, up the mount sublime.

He will do this by his personal winsomeness.

Put such a man anywhere and he will draw. His virtue is not "magnetism." It is downright worth expressing itself. There is no resisting it. Like the crocus in the spring, its warmth will thaw its own way through the frozen clods and blossom above them, till all admire its bravery and beauty.

But this man is not merely a "hail-fellow well met." That would be a poor type of a minister, if he be nothing more. He is a wise and trusted counselor. An experience of nineteen years has given him large opportunity for seeing people in all forms of earthly joy and sorrow. He has not been slow to learn helpful methods of guiding and relieving, as we expect the shepherd of a flock should know them. Of quick and correct intuitions in difficult situations, with ready and sensible suggestions, his advice has been widely sought and relied upon. Personal, civic and denominational interests have had need of him to plan and speak for them. Tactful, courageous, patient, enthusiastic, he has been able to command the confidence and support of those whom a weaker and less optimistic leader could not have rallied.

In his earlier years he had the advantage of a practical acquaintance with the work of the merchant and farmer on the Vermont hills. The courts in his native town gave him some knowledge of the lawyer's arts. A refined taste, cultivated and broadened by foreign travel, found its happy exercise when his people would build a sanctuary, which has been rather ambitiously styled "the cathedral church" of the denomination in Michigan. To have pushed through such an enterprise without conflict, and to have dedicated it free from debt, testifies to his eminent good sense and knowledge of affairs.

He has a large conception of the kingdom of God, which is no less than the world for Christ. The benevolences of his church have, as a consequence, been generous and constant for missions at home and abroad. Believing in the expansive character and demands of the gospel, he has lovingly and faithfully presented and urged them upon his congregation.

As a preacher he holds the interested attention of every audience. His is the appropriate word, illustrated by passing event, problem, discovery. He brings to his hearers the result of fair, honest study and thinking. He is scholarly but by no means scholastic. One said of him: "He does not put everything into a sermon, but enough." He is quite at home on the platform, though there are greater masters of extempore address and greater preachers. His style is often rugged, abrupt and piquant at times, and then marked by passages of much grace and literary finish. With a singular ability to say right out what he thinks, and that without offense, the ecclesiastical classifiers find it hard to place him. He is claimed by both conservative and liberal. None, however, ever heard him breathing "a plague," but instead a blessing "upon both" these theological "houses."

Too broad to make a partisan out of, sincere in his love for truth to its extremest limit, he does not fear to state it as he sees it. Christians, therefore, of all creeds and types find it easy to work with such a minister. He seems, for the time, to be one of their own party.

Only considerations of health would persuade him to leave a position, exceptional in the mutual love and esteem of pastor and people, and return to the East, where the warm welcome of old friends and colaborers awaits him.

Too few churches, alas! could truthfully say, as did the "Old First" of Detroit of nearly 800 members in urging the withdrawal of his resignation, "Not a ripple of dissatisfaction exists between pastor and people. Behind us is a period of remarkable, almost unexampled, prosperity. Every condition is favorable for a continuance and growth of our Christian activity and influence."

He furnishes another bright illustration of the exalted and respected office which the minister of Jesus Christ may hold today. Fortunate the church with a pastor of such ideals, and one who is so successful in realizing them!

SOME OBSERVATIONS ON THE PRESENT DISTRESS.

The oldest inhabitant has no recollection of a time wherein the Congregational ministry was ever in such straits as now. Everybody is supposed to know it—everybody, except now and then a confiding or self-confident clergyman, infantile in his innocence, who cuts loose from his base of supplies before making sure of another. Such an one has greater knowledge in a little while, and he pays dear, very dear, for his experience. The writer is seeking a change of pastorate, from necessity, not from ambition or because of a "vague unrest and nameless longing." He reads in letters of warmest sympathy and powerlessness to help such sentences as these: "Thirty applications for a little mission church, a large percentage from unworthy men." "The pressure upon the churches is tremendous." "Almost every minister I know faces the future with anxious heart." This crisis brings its lessons and warnings to the ministry and the churches.

One warning is that no pastor give up what he already has, except as a dire necessity, until he is sure of another place. The writer faces a large and inevitable reduction of salary. It represents the loss of revenue which the town and the church has sustained. "Half a loaf is better than no bread." He can live on half a loaf; without it he would starve. Nothing in the above shall be so construed as to conflict with Matt. 4: 4 or 5: 30.

A second message is to the churches. That church which sets its pastor adrift in these days, save for gross immorality, is well-nigh guilty of a brother's blood. The times are hard enough for the "ins"; but for the "outs"—except for the few that had income from other sources than their salary—the situation is indeed terrible. The church owes something to the pastor, even if he is not perfect, whom she called when times at least were not what they are now.

In the midst of this stress it seems as if every pastor seeks to make a change. One brother feels that he is strong enough to be doing something more in a church than "mark time." With the conference statistics before me, I should say that he is in step with the rest. Is it not the duty of the brethren who are comfortably situated, who find no opposition to speak of in their churches, who are illustrating the principle of the salt of the earth, to keep still in the boat till the storm is past? Is it not one duty of the hour to study to be quiet?

Once more. Are there not elements of the present distress which indicate that a presidential election out of the way, followed, as is hoped, by a revival of business, will not remove, will, at best, but alleviate the difficulty? Hope deferred has made the heart of business sick and the doctors disagree about the cause, and hence the remedy, of the commercial disease. Is relief sure to come in a year? "It may be," as one correspondent writes, "that God is leading the ministry to greater sacrifices than they have yet known." Brethren, how shall we face them? The hour meets many of us with a practical test of faith and courage such as we have hardly experienced before. Shall we meet the test as good soldiers of the cross, practicing what we have preached of cheerful sacrifice, being ensamples to the flock, living epistles of more value than many sermons?

ANXIOUS OBSERVER.

THE GOSPEL FOR AN AGE OF DOUBT.

Such was the subject chosen by Rev. Dr. Henry van Dyke for the Lyman Beecher Lectures at the Divinity School of Yale University, which are being delivered this month. The first two of these lectures were delivered April 9 and 10 in Marquand Chapel.

Not only must a man know how to preach, said Dr. van Dyke, but he must know what to preach. He must preach that which is revealed to him and accepted by him. His truth must be intimately related to himself and adapted to others. It must be framed and fitted for an immediate proclamation. It must be a distinct, present, positive gospel. A good news for today.

In order to this the preacher must know the spirit of the time. Here is the one point where all men are alike. The preacher must know and be in touch with his age and all its necessities. He must be in contact with the world. He can do this largely by means of literature. The preacher who does not know what his people are reading does not know his people. If he be a reader of many books he will soon discover that we are living in an age of doubt. There is a profound and widespread unsettlement and uncertainty as to the truths of religion. Not disbelief but uncertainty. Not bitter and mocking atheism. It is restlessness and not defiance. It is a questioning age.

Some say this is due to the progress of science. But this is not so in the sense in which it is understood to be so. Much is affirmed in the name of science which science does not say. There is a general skepticism reflected in current literature. It all wears the melancholy of disillusion and of lost hopes. We find in the books of today little recognition of the idea of God, of prayer or of any of the great truths of religion. In poetry we find this lack most general.

Now what is to be the attitude of the minister towards all this? Not a damnatory one. Doubt is not a crime; it is a malady. We must look through it for its favorable symptoms. Among these we shall find three—the sufferings of doubt, the doubts of doubt and the moral inconsistencies of doubt. It is not a painless malady. It is not jubilant and triumphant like the older atheism. Cheerful skepticism only survives here and there. The painful side of doubt is thus its sunny and hopeful side. This inquietude of the doubting heart is evidence that skepticism is a malady and not a normal state. On all hands we find men doubting doubt and returning to faith. These are the signs of the times. Said Renan: "I fear the work of the twentieth century will take out of the waste-basket what the nineteenth century has thrown in." The skeptic's fear is the believer's hope.

What can the preacher do to meet this need? First, as a man he must be steadfast, upright and sincere in life. Here character and conduct count. But beyond this there must be something specific and personal. Doubt cannot be met by negatives. Dogmas will not destroy it. Systematic theology will not meet its wants. The central message must be personal, the gospel of a person to persons, the gospel of Jesus of Nazareth, one whom they can know and love and follow. Skepticism is the inertia of the soul. Christ is the force that moves it.

C. S. M.

The Home

"GOD BLESS YOU, JOHN."

The following lines are from the pen of the Canadian poet, J. W. Bengough, and will be of interest to all who have enjoyed Ian Maclaren's beautiful book, Beside the Bonnie Brier Bush:

God's blessin' on ye'r cannie pen,
"Maclaren," ye'r a prince o' men,
Wi Burnbrae, ye maun be "far ben,"
To write like yon;
A bonnier book a' dinna ken—
God bless you, John!

A've read it sax times o'er a' sweer
An' ilka time a' lo'ed it mair,
Tho' whiles it made my hert richt sair
An' gar'd me greet;
An' whiles a' lauched until a' fair
Row'd aff ma seat!

A' day, an' in ma dreams at nicht,
A'm wanderin' wi' renewed delicht
An' feastin' on each bonnie sicht
In yon sweet glen!
Conversin' aye wi' a' thae bricht
Drumtochty men.

A'm fair in love wi' Marget Howe,
An' truly feel for puir Drumsheugh,
An' aye a'm there at Whinnie Knowe
Ilk' eventide;
For there the Bonnie Brier Bush grew,
An' Geordie died.

Puir Domsie! he's as real tae me
As ony leeven' man can be,
Whuppin' the thistle heids in glee
While on his way
To tell o' Geordie's victory
Yon glorious day!

An' Burnbrae, elder o' the kirk,
An' Hillocks, type o' honest work,
An' Soutar, wi' sarcastic quirk,
An' big Drumsheugh,
Wha'd maybe haggle o'er a stirk
But aye was true.

An' Donald Menzies, "mystic" chiel
(A Celt was he frae heid tae heel),
Wha warstled awfu' wi' the deil
For mony a day;
Wi' him a canna help but feel,
An' groan an' pray.

An' Lachlan Campbell, wha wes ca'd
"Censorious," wha regarded God
A sovereign rulin' wi' a rod,
An' no wi' grace;
An' wha the very session awed
Wi' ghaist-like face.

Him suffering sair mak's sweet an' mild
As shadows veil the Grampians wild,
Till "like unto a little child"
He comes tae be,
An' o'er the erring and defiled
Bends tenderly.

Wi' these and mair, in godly fear,
We sit yon Sabbath day an' hear
"His mither's sermon" frae the dear
Young preacher lad,
An' wi' them shed a secret tear
That isna sad.

An' wi' them on anither day,
When kirk is oot (tho' wi' dismay),
We join to make a bold display
An' cheer Maclure,
Our doctor, wha wi' little pay
Serves rich and poor.

Aye, dear Maclure! him maist o' a'
We lo'e, an' thro' the drifts o' sna',
Unmindfu' o' the north wind raw,
We tearfu' come;
Wi' a' the mourning glen we draw
Near-haun his tomb.

An' barin' there oor heids we pray
That we may so live ilka day
That when we come to pass away
Frae a' things here,
Truth may the tribute to us pay
O' love wrung tear!

Ay, "Ian," ye're "a lad o' pairts"
An' master o' a' the winsome airts;
Ye'r bookie by its ain deserts
Wull live fer aye;
The benediction o' oor herts
Ye hae the day.

---

The writer in Mothers in Council, who deplores undue emphasis on inherited evil in training children, makes a good point when she warns parents not to excuse faults in their children on the ground of inherited tastes or temperament. Illustrations of the harmful effect of such a course may be seen in a young man of our acquaintance, who rids himself of the responsibility of a hasty temper and a sullen disposition by declaring that he "can't help it," he is "just like his father," and in the case of a young woman who helplessly accepts her morbid temperament in like manner. On the other hand, there is much said concerning the need of patience, not only on the part of parents when dealing with the hereditary faults of their children, but of adults who are inclined to judge their own inherited weaknesses too severely. To those who are interested in problems of heredity we earnestly recommend the thoughtful perusal of Dr. A. H. Bradford's recent work, Heredity and Christian Problems.

---

ANGEL MINISTRATIONS.

BY MRS. M. E. SANGSTER.

Thick starred as is the sky at night with golden shining lamps, the Word of God glows with its stories of angel ministries. In the dim days, when as yet there was no open vision, these messengers of our King came and went, serene and unhurried, rebuking, sustaining, revealing, consoling, and always bringing a breath of heaven to earth, always showing how intimate and tender the relation between here and beyond, always proving how constant in the mind of God is the thought of his children, over whom he giveth his angels charge.

Should we go through the Bible, selecting and setting by themselves the passages wherein allusion is made to the angels and their errands, we should have a beautiful book of selections full of inspiration and encouragement for ourselves, in this time when we do not take the comfort we might from the knowledge of our Father's care, when we shut the angels out of our modern glaring day, and think of them as poetic beings, or beings above us of another order, but not as of God's continual errand-bringers, yet attending on us who dwell below and have need of their help. We lose much by our opacity and slowness of belief in this matter, for, to those who have eyes to see and ears to hear,

> Still through the cloven skies they come
> With peaceful wings unfurled,
> And still celestial music floats
> O'er all the weary world.
> Above its sad and lowly plains
> They bend on heavenly wing,
> And ever o'er its Babel sounds
> The blessed angels sing.

It may be objected by those who take a literal view of all experience, and who hesitate to accept what they cannot at once weigh in the scales, analyze, define and classify, that we, at this period, neither realize nor expect angelic help. Perhaps not, regarded from the standpoint of those who appreciate only the tangible, and demand full rounded and concrete facts at every step. On the other hand, who of us has not had to deal with moods of depression, when an unseen and impalpable, yet terribly strong, enemy bore us down, when out of the fog and the mist of thought and imagination came suggestions and whispers and voices which made us cry to our Father for relief from the torments of the adversary? We are compelled to battle with the prince of the powers of the air, with many and incessant forms of temptation, and in the conflict we require, and I think we receive, as the saints of old did, actual assistance from those who are always sent to "minister unto them who shall be heirs of salvation."

Often, too, in those hours of poignant anguish when the solid ground quakes under our feet, as our best beloved are taken from us, may it not be that some of those who ever stand waiting to carry consolation where it is needed cross our thresholds and uplift our fainting heads? Sometimes, too, in lesser moments, when the indiscreet or angry word is hushed before it reaches our lips; often in our times of temptation, when we are almost ready to yield but are suddenly and strongly helped to resist, so that we feel as if re-enforcements had reached the field; again, in our life with our little children, where we need so much tact and wisdom and gentleness, may we not thank God for the coming of his angels?

"I was about to do thus," said a friend, describing an occasion which might have been disastrous but was saved by prompt action, "when all at once I was aware of a strong inward compulsion, as of a hand holding me back. I obeyed the invisible touch, and I have been grateful ever since."

We are ourselves supernatural beings, living in tents of clay, but aware of powers which transcend space and time, and conscious of an immortality caught from the divine nature which enfolds us and to which we belong. For, beloved, though it doth not yet appear what we shall be, yet now are we the sons of God. In the calm of our quiet resting on our Heavenly Father, let us take whatever he gives us, confident that among other hallowed gifts is the ministration of his angelic host.

Just here is room for another and very practical thought, pertinent to every one, and quite readily applicable to those who do not fully enjoy, in literalness, the benediction of belief in God's ever coming and going angel servants. Faber crystallizes it in half a stanza:

> We are not angels, but we may
> Down in earth's corners kneel,
> And multiply sweet acts of love,
> And murmur what we feel.

No one is denied the privilege of engaging, so far as man or woman may, in work befitting the angels. To enlighten those who are ignorant, to sympathize with the joyful or the sorrowing, to share a brother's load, to strew flowers where else would be barrenness, to speak words of love and kindness everywhere, this is to do the work of the angels, and this may be your lot and mine.

---

There is no happiness in life, there is no misery like that growing out of the dispositions which consecrate or desecrate a home.—E. H. Chapin.

THE SCIENCE OF FOOD.

V. MILK AND ITS PRODUCTS.

BY M. V. SHALER.

It is said that the English and American peoples are practically the only nations who continue to drink milk uncooked and without protection from infections. Almost all savage nations of the world who use milk at all employ some method of protection more or less effective. The Chinese use it very little, if at all. The Hindu considers it loathsome, and African tribes mostly let it stand in a gourd for some time, which makes a kind of kumyss. In Turkey and Asia people prepare it one way or another before using it, and Italians use goats' milk almost universally, presumably because they have learned by experience of the transmission of tuberculosis through cows' milk. Germans always cook milk and the Irish and Scandinavians prefer it sour rather than sweet. The French dairymaid scalds her milk before churning, not because she knows anything about sterilization, but because she knows her butter will be a better quality. She is ignorant as to the species of bacteria which, if allowed to develop, change the fat globules into other properties and reduce the richness of the milk. Experience has taught her the effects of heat and cold, but she little dreams that living infinitesimals are at the root of the change and that the air holds them all.

It has been proved beyond question that pure milk is entirely free from bacteria when drawn from a healthy animal and that contamination is wholly from outside. Every feature of change is due to bacterial growth added to the milk either from the air, the milker, the vessel into which the milk is put, or the cow herself. Some one has stated that there is a dairy in the United States which is so perfectly managed that "milkers are obliged to take a bath and part their hair in the middle before milking hour." Some such regimen, or a more Spartan one, must be instituted in all dairies and farms before milk will cease to be the source of infection it now is, often causing outbreaks of epidemics of typhoid. The spread of knowledge is a great factor toward effecting reforms.

Cheese, butter, souring, curdling, blue milk, buttermilk, soapy milk, red milk and other changes are each due to a specific germ, as easily recognized as a blade of grass through the microscope. More than 200 kinds of bacteria are known to thrive in milk, producing as many changes, and as many as 10,000,000 of these have been counted in a single cubic inch of milk. The number depends upon various conditions of cleanliness, "hence the great secret of obtaining a proper supply of milk is to have a healthy cow and to keep that cow clean."

The germs develop at the expense of the sugar, casein and fat of the milk. Cheese and butter makers taking advantage of this thrifty warfare, for bacteria develop at a rate almost beyond belief when conditions are favorable, use these regiments of midgets to produce certain flavors and give color to their products. Yeast and mold plants grow in milk, and to the former is due the development of alcohol and lactic acid which makes kumyss, while the latter gives the highly esteemed flavor of Roquefort cheese. The peasantry of France manufacture this cheese from the milk of ewes, putting it in damp caves after being made into layers between which are sprinkled moldy brown bread crumbs. The cheeses are brushed over with fat and pierced with little holes for the admission of air. It is said that only the atmospheric condition of these damp caves can produce the kind of germ necessary for Roquefort flavor.

All these germ changes in milk are, however, items of slight interest to the majority of people in comparison to the presence of disease germs. Bacterial information might easily be dispensed with by the laity if we were sure of absolutely pure milk, but as it is we need our pocket dictionary to fathom the meaning of the new adjectives tacked before and after the simple word of four letters. When the milk leaves the cow it is at a degree most favorable to the growth of bacteria, hence the dairyman at once plunges his milk cans into ice or cold spring water to arrest development of germs. Pasteurization, holding the temperature at 167° F. for fifteen minutes, is acknowledged to be the best precaution against souring and other changes, but as it takes boiling to kill infectious germs the fact is emphasized that in this fluid is harbored prolific source of danger to invalids and little children, who use the food almost entirely. For the sake of the lives of thousands of helpless ones there is needed a radical reform in the use of raw milk and greater vigilance on the part of all concerned in its inspection. Against this grave indictment, however, is the grandly overbalancing knowledge that pure, microbless cows' milk is an ideal food for the human system.

AFIELD WITH YOUNG NATURALISTS.

THE FIRST SPRING FLOWER.

BY S. J. BUCKLIN.

When the redwing "flutes his 'o-ka-lee'" in the meadows, when bluebirds and song sparrows warble from wayside hedges, when wasps crawl from their hiding places and little brooks run merrily down to the sea, it is time for young botanists to look for the first spring flower. The bees find it the moment it opens and begin to fill their baskets with its pollen. Not in pastures nor on breezy hilltops, but in swamps, bogs or wet land dwells symplocarpus, or skunk cabbage, own cousin to the queenly Egyptian calla, the peppery Jack-in-the-pulpit, the spicy sweet flag and other members of the arum family. As soon as snow is gone and the sun shines warmly on sheltered spots in moist land it pushes up its gold and crimson spathe, regardless of wind and weather. No matter if patches of ice surround it, or how cold the water that fills the hollows between rocks and stumps, it braves the rigors of inclement March and seems to enjoy a rough-and-tumble fight for existence.

Its coming varies with the season. Frank Bolles records it as early as the fourteenth of March. This year March was in her sternest mood and when a robin shouted from an elm top that flowers were in bud a skeptical botanist, on the last day of the month, went not "a-Maying," but a-Marching, and found Mother Nature wide awake. Pussy willow was nursing her kittens by the brookside, smooth alder dangled its brown catkins over a snowdrift, the scarlet fruit of the partridge berry gleamed like rubies on a bed of velvet moss, and in a swamp the first spring flower had pushed up its tender green shoots and crimson buds.

Symplocarpus fœtidus, sometimes called draconitum, is a native of North America and is found from Nova Scotia to North Carolina and west to Minnesota and Iowa. Its spathe precedes the leaves according to the botanies, but for once Mother Nature was impatient and sent up the leaf shoots and buds side by side. That no mistake be made, we examined one of the bundles in which she had packed the foliage and marveled at her compact way of folding the delicate baby leaves, rolling them over and over each other so tightly that not a drop of freezing water could penetrate and inclosing them in a waterproof coat, making all strong, firm and pointed that the plant may force its way to the outer world without injury. There they were, "smooth, ovate, heart shaped," precisely like the leaves that in maturity would grow large and coarse, measuring one or two feet in length.

The disagreeable odor, so offensive when the plant is bruised and which gives Symplocarpus its popular bad name, was noticeable even in the infant specimens. Why this property is fastened upon it we are unable to state. A microscopic acquaintance with its parts reveals some curious facts. A flower is like the soul in man. As flesh and bone, the "house we live in," is not the real man, so the outside envelope, the petals or spathe, are not the real flower; the stamens and pistil hold the life-giving principle and have the power to reproduce and perpetuate life of their peculiar kind.

Symplocarpus sits under a canopy of royal colors in a tent-like spathe with a curved, pointed top that hangs over the front like a roof protecting a doorway. It is three or four inches high and rests on the ground. The outside is gaudily colored in purple and yellow-green, sometimes shading from crimson to a golden yellow, and under a microscope the interior seems lined with velvet of the same brilliant hues. In the spathe, on a thick stem, sits a globular, fleshy spadix holding the perfect flower. In the early stage of development the observer will notice that the surface of the spadix is marked into divisions like honeycomb and in the center of each segment is a tiny white spot like a minute drop of dew. Later this white spot shows that it is a pistil, rising above the surface and tipped by a white star. Each segment is a petal of the corolla, a small, square-shaped hood which conceals the anthers and keeps them warm and dry.

As florescence proceeds the segments separate slightly and allow the anthers to leave their hoods and push up around the pistil. As the four anthers open lengthwise they curl towards the pistil and fling their pollen on the stigma. The yellow dust drops so plentifully that the floor of the tent is covered with pollen. This the bees carry off to manufacture into bread. The pollen-covered pistil is protected by the hoods. The spathe decays; the spadix enlarges to a spongy mass containing the fruit, which ripens in autumn into bulblet-like seeds half an inch in diameter. The root is said to produce vertigo, nausea and frequently vomiting. It has been used as a medicine in hysteria and spasmodic asthma, but being less efficient than other remedies is not often employed by physicians.

Closet and Altar

Blessed be God, who has made earth and heaven one in the heart's unquenchable thirst for him!

Faith changes us in relation to Christ but it does not change him in relation to us. Faith does not create, but merely finds its object; it does not bring the vision near, but merely opens the eyes to behold what was already there for the seeing; it does not make Christ present, but it clears away the earthborn mists and clouds which hide him from sight and makes him vividly present to the inner consciousness as a real and actual Saviour. An old writer remarks that "when the boatman with his hook grapples the rock he does not pull the shore to the boat but the boat to the shore; so when we by faith lay hold on Christ we do not pull Christ to us but ourselves to him."—James M. Campbell.

Our blessedness depends upon our knowing and perceiving the highest good, which is God himself. And man is more blessed or less blessed in the same measure as he is aware of the presence of God. It is not because God is in him and so close to him and he hath God that he is blessed, but because he perceives God's presence and knows and loves him; such a one will feel that God's kingdom is nigh at hand.—John Tauler.

Whenever in some bitter grief we find,
All unawares, a deep, mysterious sense
Of hidden comfort come, we know not whence;
When suddenly we see, where we were blind;
Where we had struggled, are content, resigned;
Are strong where we were weak—
And no more strive nor seek—

Then we may know that from the far glad skies,
To note our need the watchful God has bent,
And for our instant help has called and sent
Of all our loving angels, the most wise
And tender one, to point to us where lies
The path that will be best,
The path of peace and rest.

—H. H.

Son of God, have mercy upon us. If thou wilt say unto us, What will ye? our answer shall be, Lord, that we might receive our sight. This prayer we pray to thee every morning that the day may not be lost to us because of dimness of vision. We know not what angels come forth from the gate of heaven dawn by dawn, and it may be that because our eyes are not anointed we see nothing of the descending hosts, and because our ears are dull of hearing we hear nothing of their sweet gospels. We would have all our faculties inspired; we would be sensitive to every breath of heaven, answering the glance of every star, replying in tender love to the fragrance of every flower. We pray for enlargement of mind, thought, purpose; ennoble us in the whole region of our affection, desire and will. The Spirit of the living God calls us higher to wider regions, to brighter suns, to larger fields; may we hear the music of the call and answer it with the sacrifice of obedience; then shall our life be rooted in the eternity of God and nourished by all the grace of Christ. Amen.

Mothers in Council.

A KINDERGARTEN FOR MOTHERS.

IV.

Children quickly grow tired of set performances. In our kindergartens as well as in our homes we have still too little of that lightness of touch which pleases children. How much, for instance, may be gained by the teacher who is free enough with her methods and her pupils to sing her good morning sometimes, instead of always saying it in the same way day after day. Nothing should be allowed to grow monotonous through meaningless repetition. For example, a child may from habit think of an orange or an apple merely as a sort of food, which is to be seen in a particular kind of dish on the table. But suppose he finds one under his pillow, or slyly slipped into his pocket; at once he sees it in a new light. It is not only good to eat, it is a beautiful plaything, which appeals to him from its form and color and from the very suddenness of its coming as a real revelation. So with every object and every familiar act—a fresh view gives the child all the thrill of discovery. Too often a tired mother says, "Johnny, please take your elbow off the table," just as she said it yesterday and will say it tomorrow, and yet it is not hard by a little kindly tact to make even these small reminders pleasant. The common acts of dressing, bathing, going to bed ought to be delightful, all of them, and easily become happy games to the child and to the mother.

A Mother of Young Children: "I am very desirous of having my children's religious life spontaneous—unconscious. Can you suggest a way to make going to church less irksome to little folks?"

The Mother Helper: "Some children like to go to church simply because of the love of doing what other people, especially grown up people, do. But it seems to me that in most cases going to church should be introduced gradually, unconsciously to the child. Some day, when passing your church, when it is open, take the child in. Tell him it is God's house, and let him be quietly impressed by its greatness and beauty and stillness. Say with him, perhaps, the little prayers which he is in the habit of saying at home. By and by take him to some service and let him remain long enough to hear the Bible read by the minister. Allow him to feel that he has heard God's book read in God's house. It will be a beautiful experience to him. And when he is ready for a whole service, he will come to it with unconscious reverence, and his pleasure in it will be the greater because of his first impressions."

Another Young Mother: "How can I help my boy to be interested in what are called practical studies? He loves to practice and to draw but he dislikes his numbers, and, in fact, nearly all his school studies."

The Mother Helper: "Sympathize fully with him in his music and drawing, and speak appreciatively of his progress in them, but say, when he has practiced a certain length of time, 'Let us work just as hard on these numbers as we did on the music, so that we can have real pleasure in every study.' And have him know that you are just as interested in the study he likes best as he is, but that a man needs all kinds. And vice versa, when the child needs stimulating in the sensibilities, meet him where he is and help him to form a conception of something a little higher."

A Thoughtful Mother: "What should one tell a child about the coming of a little new baby?"

The Mother Helper: "I think when a child is old enough to question about such things it should be told just the beautiful truth, that the little baby came from the mother. God gave it to her to keep when it was very, very small until it should be strong enough to live in the world, and then God told her that it was time for it to be born and it came from where it had been lying by the mother's heart. The child's interest is then satisfied and there is no morbid curiosity to be indulged in other ways."

A Busy Mother: "Should our children be allowed to associate with children who are known to be bad? Should they come to our homes and our children be encouraged to be friendly with them?"

The Mother Helper: "I think so. The mother should, of course, sanction any such invitation and be there with the children."

The Busy Mother: "But don't you think it requires a great deal of wisdom and experience, and haven't we all we can do to bring up just our own children well?"

The Mother Helper: "I think we cannot bring up our own children in the right way unless they have all kinds of associates."

The Busy Mother: "Suppose my boy learns to swear, or smoke cigarettes, or hear low stories. Ought I not to keep him away from such company?"

The Mother Helper: "If so, I think the boy should be taught to feel that he is to blame if he gets harm from his associates, that he is too weak to be permitted to play with the boys from whom you have separated him. We should never unite the sin with the sinner."

An animated discussion followed this keenly interesting question. Many of the mothers could acquiesce in the theory, but the practice was too terrible an experiment. Questions came fast one upon the other, and there were dissenting shakes and assenting nods as the Mother Helper quietly developed this thought.

MRS. H. W. BOYNTON.

UNDUE EMPHASIS ON INHERITED EVIL.

In an article which appeared in your issue of March 5, under the heading Moral Tumbles in Little Children, I feel that the author has put unwarranted emphasis on inherited evil. For instance, she says: "If you seek carefully and prayerfully you will usually find the fault is an offshoot of some trait of character in one or other of the parents or some near or more remote relative," and her closing remark is: "But our inheritance of evil is too deep-rooted not to sprout again and again." I can find only one place in the New Testament where Jesus speaks of inherited evil and then his words are decidedly opposed to the old Jewish belief. Also does he not show the absolute purity of little children in the lines, "Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of God"?

Are we not worrying the little ones by imputing to them inherited evil when, "His work is perfect"? Are we not imposing these faults upon them and in many cases making an excuse for evil? Have we the spirit of Christ when we hold up the distorted image of sin to show its heinousness, thus instigating a search for evil, which, being easily found, is examined, discussed, kept in heart and mind, naturally excluding the good we wish by contrast to place there?

Can we not see the wrong this popular theory of heredity may do if held over a child all his life, and what an immense amount of evil we could roll up, for instance, if we could trace our ancestry back to Noah? We are endowing evil with a power it does not possess, unless we so will it. Jesus said, "Be ye perfect even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect," and the whole spirit of his teaching and that of the New Testament is looking up and not down, forward and not backward, keeping the perfect thought in heart and mind, thus entering into living peace, lifting ourselves, our children, all with whom we come in contact, to a higher, better contemplation than that of evil, knowing that evil must be temporary and unabiding and so cannot be transmitted through countless ages.

G. T. B.

DANDELION.

BY ISAAC OGDEN RANKIN.

Firstling of the mellow year,
Ere thy golden disks appear
Empty are the wintry days,
Barren lie the frozen ways;
Snows of March that will not last,
Sunlight often overcast;
But with thee our glad hearts sing
Possessors of the jocund spring.

Thine the first clear notes that please
In our floral symphonies.
Other blossoms in the May
For lovers shall make holiday,
Summer suns again shall shine
On clover and on columbine,
And the autumn's gold and red
Fling their splendor overhead;

Yet, in our advancing years,
In our gladness, through our tears,
When our summer joys are high,
When the autumn night winds cry,
Who forgets his vanished youth?
All earth's flowers are dear, in sooth,
Children of the dewy morn,
Thou art still the eldest born.

ABOUT PEOPLE.

It is interesting to learn that Anthony Hope does not get suggestions for his dialogues from his observations of London society. Although he moves largely in this circle of people he says he closes, rather than opens, his ears. He goes to his head for repartee and to his imagination for plots.

The Charlotte E. Richardson circle of King's Daughters connected with the Walnut Avenue Church, Roxbury, gave a charming reception recently in honor of the gentlewoman whose name they bear, and at whose house the circle was formed some years ago. She is its eldest member, being now seventy-seven years old, but she is still active in Dr. Plumb's church, which also had its birthplace in her hospitable home.

A Chicago woman, Mrs. Elizabeth A. Reed, has achieved the distinction of having written the only paper that the Victoria Institute or Philosophical Society of Great Britain has ever accepted from a woman. In order for a paper to find favor with this society of savants it must not only pass muster in the local board, but stand the criticism of the highest authorities in Europe upon the question treated. Mrs. Reed's subject was the Ethics of Buddhism.

Miss Helen Gladstone in a recent article calls attention to the fact that no fewer than six Cambridge colleges were founded by women for men—Clare by Elizabeth de Burgh, countess of Clare; Pembroke by Marie de St. Paul, countess of Pembroke; Queen's by Queen Margaret of Anjou; Christ's and St. John's by Lady Margaret, countess of Richmond, who also founded a divinity professorship; and Sidney Sussex by Lady Frances Sidney, countess of Sussex.

The death in London recently of Lady Isabel Burton recalls an act of moral heroism on her part which challenged universal admiration when the deed was performed. Her husband, Sir Richard, made a famous translation of The Scented Garden, from the Persian of Saadi, but died before he could arrange for its publication. Lady Isabel was offered a large sum for the manuscript, but, deeming it immoral and unfit for print, committed it to the flames. Her life was full of adventure and, when traveling with her husband among savage tribes in the East, she was often forced to wear male attire.

A suggestive incident is related in Gail Hamilton's life of J. G. Blaine. Consulting one day his son, then old enough and competent to be his assistant Secretary of State, the son maintained his own opinion strongly against the father's. The latter felt it and said to a confidant—presumably the author herself—"Walker is disrespectful." The reply was: "It is you who were disrespectful. You consulted him as a man, and then treated him in argument as a five-year-old boy." It reflects great credit on the statesman that when the son returned he gave him his hand, saying, "Walker, I owe you an apology." The response was alike creditable: "Not at all, sir, I owe you one."

A correspondent of the Transcript, giving reminiscences of Thomas Hughes, says that of all pleasant memories of his friendship he prized most a visit with the author of Tom Brown to Oxford and to his old room at the university. His chair, which had been made the objective of curio devotees, afforded the visitors much amusement. It was once of plain oak, but all that was left had been strapped with tin to keep something of the old relic intact, while each leg was supplied with a poker, no two alike, because the original wood had been stolen. The student who occupied the room was astounded when he found that one of his guests was "Tom Brown" himself, who inquired with irresistible solemnity, "How does it happen that my chair has been so maltreated during my protracted vacation?"

An amusing story is told of Dr. S. F. Smith, illustrating his remarkable and exact memory of Scripture. While professor in Colby Unisity, in his early life, he was called upon to conduct chapel worship several mornings. Meaning to have a little fun at the expense of the youthful professor, some mischievous students spirited the Bible away from the chapel pulpit. Dr. Smith, however, was equal to the emergency and, instead of hunting for the missing book, repeated from memory an entire chapter. The next day the same program was followed. On the third day, the Bible still not appearing, the professor repeated a longer chapter, and on the fourth morning he took his revenge on the boys by reciting slowly and with great deliberation seventy-one verses from one of the longest chapters in Luke. Needless to say, the Bible was found on the desk the following day.

Demonstrations of affection among men, in this country at least, are not considered proper. Nevertheless there come times when even reserved, self-controlled American men give way to impulses of the heart. Bishop Whipple of Minnesota tells of a time when the late Bishop Thomas of Kansas was professor in the Seabury Divinity School in the early days when it was struggling along under a burden of debt. "One day," says Bishop Whipple, "when it was so dark we could not see a step, he came to my house. As he entered my study I saw in his tell-tale face that he had come to tell me that it was hopeless. I sprang to my feet and said: 'Don't tell me; let us pray.' We knelt and poured out our hearts to God in prayer. He rose and kissed me and went away. That was the nearest I ever came to failure. Do you wonder I loved him?" A kiss may betray, but it oftener saves and binds.

PRIMROSE DAY.

On the 19th of April in each year many thousands of English people, of all ranks and both sexes, appear in the streets wearing the pretty, simple English wild flower, the primrose. The reason of this is that the primrose was the favorite flower of the late Lord Beaconsfield, the famous statesman, orator and novelist, and the 19th of April, 1881, was the day on which he died.

The primrose is therefore worn, as it has been worn every year now for ten years past, by those who admire Lord Beaconsfield and who desire to pay annual honor to his memory. The gentle little flower may thus be said to have become a party badge, for it is only Tories, followers of Lord Beaconsfield in politics, who for the most part display it in buttonholes and on dresses.

It was this fact which caused the Tory ladies, who, several years ago, banded themselves into a political society for electioneering purposes, to call their society by the now famous name of the Primrose League. So fanciful a tribute was, perhaps, never paid regularly for so long a period to the memory of any other dead statesman, and shows that Lord Beaconsfield had won a more secure place in the hearts of large numbers of his countrymen and countrywomen than the world at large had suspected.—The Youth's Companion.

A Maine mother was hearing her little child repeat the Lord's Prayer recently. As the child hesitated a bit over the expression, "Forgive us our trespasses," she interrupted long enough to ask, "Do you understand, dear, what 'trespass' means?" "O yes," replied the little one; "it means 'keep off the grass'!"—Lewiston Journal.

A pure cream of tartar powder.

CLEVELAND'S

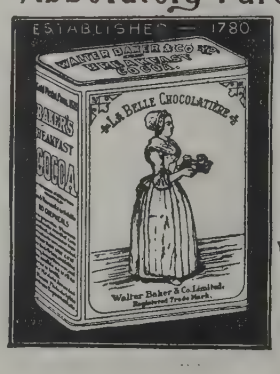
Only a rounded spoonful is required, of Cleveland's Baking Powder not a heaping spoonful.

BAKING POWDER

"Pure" and "Sure."

Food raised with Cleveland's baking powder has no bitter taste, but is sweet and keeps sweet and fresh.

·Absolutely Pure-Delicious-Nutritious·



The Breakfast Cocoa
MADE BY
WALTER BAKER & CO. LIMITED
DORCHESTER, MASS.

COSTS LESS THAN ONE CENT A CUP.
NO CHEMICALS.

ALWAYS ASK YOUR GROCER FOR WALTER BAKER & CO'S. BREAKFAST COCOA MADE AT DORCHESTER, MASS. IT BEARS THEIR TRADE MARK LA BELLE CHOCOLATIÈRE ON EVERY CAN.

·AVOID IMITATIONS·

The Conversation Corner.

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS: Do you remember that when the publisher offered last year a prize for the best amateur photograph taken by Cornerers and the Hyde Park elephant appeared (Dec. 12), an honorary mention was made of others? One of them was shown you for Washington's Birthday, and now we have three others from Rose C. of Boston for the issue nearest "Patriots' Day." They are appropriate to that day, for as you see they all belong to old Concord.

THE OLD MANSE.

It is well on this patriotic holiday to associate them with that historic town and with three authors whose books have gone wherever the English language is spoken. I do not intend to describe these houses—I presume many of you know more of them than I do. For, to tell the truth, I never saw either of them until a fortnight ago, when I spent a very pleasant afternoon there. Two Corner boys, whom I had happily stumbled upon once in my own town, had invited me to come, and were very hospitable and kindly in showing me their town. They were enthusiastic Concordians as well as inquisitive Cornerers, and drove me from one place to another, till my brain was full of monuments and inscriptions, redcoats and rebels, ancient houses, famous people and historic sites.

THE ORCHARD HOUSE.

We visited, of course, the famous bridge across the Concord River, where the "American Militia" met the "Invading Army" and "the first of the Enemy fell in the War of that Revolution which gave Independence to these United States." Granite posts and an iron chain inclose the spot where those soldiers of the "Enemy" were buried. The old monument erected sixty years ago tells the story, while on the other side, on the spot occupied by the "embattled farmers," stands the statue of the Minute Man, one hand holding his gun, the other leaning upon his plow-handle. The boys told me that the arm was modeled from that of a well-known citizen—of honored name—and thought that no other lines in the world could have been so beautiful and appropriate as those inscribed on the pedestal. They showed me the old house with the mark of a bullet-hole near the window, and in front a large rock (brought from the bridge) on which Capt. Isaac Davis of the Acton company fell. We went to "Meriam's Corner," where a bowlder in the wall tells of the attack there on the retreating British.

We saw the three houses—the Old Manse, where Emerson's grandfather, the patriot pastor, lived, where for a time Emerson lived himself, and where Hawthorne wrote "Mosses from an Old Manse"; the Orchard House, the home of the Alcotts, with the building back of it—looking like a respectable, deserted old barn—which once sheltered the "Concord School of Philosophy;" the plain, pleasant house where for nearly fifty years lived Ralph Waldo Emerson.

THE EMERSON HOUSE.

Besides these was a fourth, "the Wayside," which was first the home of the Alcotts (and of Louisa Alcott's "Little Women"), then of Nathaniel Hawthorne, and now owned and occupied by "Margaret Sidney," the widow of Daniel Lothrop, the publisher of so many juvenile books and magazines. Then there was the home of Thoreau (Thomas Todd, who, you know, is a Concord man, says this is pronounced like thor-ough, without any French accent at all!), about whom the boys told me curious stories and who, Dr. Holmes said, "insisted on nibbling his asparagus at the wrong end."

The cemetery in Sleepy Hollow is perhaps the most interesting spot of all, for it has the graves, very near each other, of Emerson, Hawthorne, Thoreau, and Louisa M. Alcott. A hedge of arbor vitæ incloses Hawthorne's and a beautiful bowlder of rose quartz stands beside Emerson's. At the public library we saw why Concord youth must be both intelligent and patriotic, among books and papers, busts, portraits and historical relics. I stopped on my return at Lexington—as the British did not—but I described a visit there a year or two ago.

Mrs Martin

CORNER SCRAP-BOOK.

Minute Man Inscription. Inquiry is sometimes made as to the familiar lines on the pedestal of French's statue of the Minute Man at the North Bridge in Concord, and many have the impression that Emerson wrote them expressly for that inscription. On the contrary, they are part of a hymn written by him for the dedication of the "old monument" on the other side of the bridge, April 19, 1836. Oliver Wendell Holmes says of it: "Of all Emerson's poems the 'Concord Hymn' is the most nearly complete and faultless. . . . Its one conspicuous line, must not take to itself all the praise deserved by this perfect little poem, a model for all of its kind. Compact, expressive, serene, solemn, musical, in four brief verses it tells the story of the past, records the commemorative act of the passing day, and invokes the higher Power that governs the future to protect the Memorial-stone sacred to Freedom and her martyrs." Our readers may wish to have the whole poem for their scrap-books.

And fired the shot heard round the world,

By the rude bridge that arched the flood,
Their flag to April's breeze unfurled,
Here once the embattled farmers stood,
And fired the shot heard round the world.

The foe long since in silence slept;
Alike the conqueror silent sleeps;
And Time the ruined bridge has swept
Down the dark stream which seaward creeps.

On this green bank, by this soft stream,
We set today a votive stone,
That memory may their deed redeem
When, like our sires, our sons are gone.

Spirit that made those heroes dare
To die or leave their children free,
Bid Time and Nature gently spare
The shaft we raise to them and thee.

Petersburg or St. Petersburg? In this column, March 12, a statement was quoted from a London magazine to the effect that the Russian capital has no right to the prefix of "St.," with the added inquiry whether any of our juvenile readers could confirm that. No juvenile readers have replied, but two honored readers who are by no means juvenile, and who speak with authority, write respectively as follows:

The city is called St. Petersburg. That is the form in post-marks on letters. I was born there and ought to know. My idea is that Peter called it after his patron saint. You know in Russia people do not celebrate the birthday of a person, but the "names-day," that is, the day of the saint after whom one is named. The Church of St. Peter and St. Paul was the first building on the site, although it is true that a fort named Petersburg, after the emperor, was the second.

The name of the city is St. Petersburg, and it is never called anything else in letter-headings or other documents. Hundreds of times I have had to sign legal documents, calling myself a "St. Petersburg First Guild Merchant," and the "Saint" had always to be inserted. It is true that the Russians are in the habit of speaking of the city familiarly as "Petersburg," and even of shortening this to "Peters," but this does not change the correct title of the city. I have no hesitation in saying that the "London Little Folks" is all wrong in this matter.

Another Peter Who Knew His Name. He was not a saint, nor an emperor, but a cat. He is a beloved member of a minister's family near Boston. Not long ago, as the paterfamilias was reading the eleventh chapter of Acts at morning prayers and had just spoken the name, Peter, in walked the cat from the kitchen. In a moment more the words were read, "Arise, Peter," and the cat obeyed, jumping quickly into the minister's lap. This recalls the incident related by a former missionary in Labrador, that when, on a wild winter Sunday, he was reading the last chapter of Revelation, and had reached the words, "Without are dogs," two or three teams of wolf-dogs, waiting outside, began to howl in a dismal chorus!

L. H. M.

The Sunday School

LESSON FOR APRIL 26. Luke 16: 19–31.

THE RICH MAN AND LAZARUS.

BY REV. A. E. DUNNING, D. D.

Jesus was talking, when he uttered this parable, to men who ridiculed his teaching. They did so because they were selfish. He taught self-denial for the sake of others. "The Pharisees, who were lovers of money, heard all these things and they scoffed at him." The purpose of the parable was to show the nature and the consequences of avarice.

The central character in the picture is the rich man. Lazarus says nothing, does nothing. He is introduced simply as a background to bring into full relief the character of the rich man, the type of the men who mocked at the idea that self-sacrifice is heroic. Self was the master to which they held. Christ was the Master they despised. He sought to show them that "that which is exalted among men is abomination in the sight of God." Various interpretations have been given of this parable. Some of them seem to be far fetched and fanciful. Whatever of truth is in them we need not miss its plainest teaching. It pictures to us:

1. The selfish life in this world. Jesus illustrated it by "a certain rich man," to whom he gave no name; for convenience he has been named Dives and so we will call him. His life was continual feasting, a banqueting in splendor every day. His clothing was the most exquisite for comfort, the most impressive for display. His outer robes were of the royal color and most expensive texture, and his undergarments were made of flax of such fineness that it sold for more than its weight in gold. Here was the satisfaction of materialism at its utmost limit. This man's heaven was earthly pleasure. His tastes and character were formed and guided by the things he possessed. In reality they possessed him. He would have monopolized, if he could, the sugar, or coal, or oil business for all Palestine and collected for himself a tax from every Jew or Gentile using these necessaries of life. He would have built for himself magnificent residences, given his daughter a million dollar wedding and despised the multitude whose curiosity he was proud to stimulate to gather at his gate while the ceremony was being performed.

While Dives was enjoying heaven according to his idea of it, a man lay at his door suffering hell. In utter poverty, he would have been satisfied with the food which Dives wasted. He had no shelter from cold or heat. He was loathsome with disease, and had no salve for his sores except the tongues of wandering street dogs. Dives saw Lazarus and did not care. He had no feeling of brotherhood for others. He cared only for himself. All the life he had consisted in the abundance of the things he possessed.

2. The selfish life in the world to come. Dives left behind him when he died everything he cared for. He found himself in the world beyond with absolutely nothing to satisfy his need. He had trained himself to enjoy wealth which did not exist in the realm he had entered. He had wasted the capacity to enjoy what is wealth in Hades. Parched with thirst, not because there was no water but because he had lost the power to drink, he sees Lazarus, once a beggar at his gate, now enjoying the felicity of heaven, Lazarus in the bosom, i. e., in intimate communion with Abraham, the great father of the faithful. Abraham had been as rich as Dives, but he had lived under the spell of the promise, "In thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed," while Dives had cared to bless nobody but himself.

Therefore Dives had become an abject beggar, while Abraham was the great dispenser of blessings. Dives begged from Abraham what would cost him nothing, a drop of water at the hand of the beggar who once at his gate had longed for a crumb. Abraham acknowledged the once rich Jew as his son, but could do nothing for him. He could only remind him that he had wasted his opportunities. He might have gained heaven forever. Even the helpless beggar Lazarus had done that. But he had sacrificed the eternal heaven for the earthly heaven of an avaricious soul. Dives had made his choice and could never change it. He had made himself unfit for eternal happiness, and between him and it was a chasm never bridged. This parable is an illustration of Christ's saying, "What doth it profit a man to gain the whole world and forfeit his life?" Christ taught men, rich and poor alike, that the true life is that which is devoted to the highest welfare of others, beginning with those nearest to us and including the whole race. All those who live that life will attain everlasting blessedness. Those who live for self will wake up in hell, and these conditions after death are final.

3. The influences which determine the selfish life. Dives accepts the statement of Abraham. He admits that it is too late for him to escape from his misery, but he makes one more request that those like him on earth may have a plainer warning than he had had. The Jews were always asking Jesus for a sign to confirm his teachings. So, when Abraham points Dives to the Scriptures, he protests that they should be certified to by one rising from the dead. But Abraham declares that no testimony can make them authoritative to those who see no authority in the truth itself. The Old Testament had taught righteousness with ever increasing distinctness. The Pharisees were devoted to the Old Testament, but missed its meaning. Christ came to give its teaching fresh power and new applications. They hated him for doing it. He was soon to rise from the dead to witness to its truth, but he knew they would not accept his testimony. Only sordid influences swayed them.

Here, then, we have the plain lesson of this parable. Every one, rich or poor, who lives for self alone is destroying himself. Every needy person is a beggar at his gate. What he gives them will not purchase heaven for him, but if he accepts his mission, as Abraham did, he will find himself at last with Abraham in eternal peace. If he continues to make his own pleasure, fame and fortune the object of life the measure of success he has will be his "good thing," all he can ever hope for. In the next world he will find himself without the capacity to enjoy what heaven offers, nor can he ever regain that capacity. He has plunged himself in hell, from which there is no escape. Those who do not recognize these truths which Christ and prophets and apostles uttered would not be convinced of them by any supernatural signs. Doing miracles does not give men power to see miracles. "If ye abide in my word," Christ said, "then are ye truly my disciples, and ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free."

THE CHURCH PRAYER MEETING.

Topic, April 19–25. Presenting Our Bodies to God. John 5: 5–14; Rom. 12: 1, 2; 1 Cor. 6: 19, 20.

By care of health; by abstaining from sin; by service; by conformity to Christ.

(See prayer meeting editorial.)

The inventions which are to make the next great war terrible continue. The latest which we have noticed is a cup-shaped bullet which the inventor claims gathers air under high pressure, exploding when the bullet finds its mark with destructive effect. Perhaps this may contribute to the object lesson as to the logic of war, which God evidently has in store for the world at its next outbreak of hate and which may bring Christian nations to a better way of settling their disagreements.

Flowers love the Sunlight and always turn to it. The modern housewife learns to love and always turns to it to help her out on "wash day" or any other day when she needs a pure, honest soap which cleanses everything it touches and doesn't injure anything, either fabric or hands.

Sunlight Soap

Less labor
Greater comfort

Lever Bros., Ltd.,
Hudson & Harrison Sts., N.Y.

Our guests are highly pleased with your Fine Flour of the Entire Wheat.
I have been a user of Graham Flour for nearly thirty years. I think this is far superior to the best Graham. EMORY POTTER, Elmwood Hall, Saratoga Springs, N. Y.
Always ask for "Franklin Mills." All leading Grocers sell it.

Franklin Mills Co., Lockport, N. Y.

STIMULATING and REFRESHING After Exercise

Liebig Company's Extract of Beef

The genuine has signature of Baron Liebig, in blue, on every jar, thus: J. Liebig

A discussion of salt (like salt itself) is always seasonable. We argue the merits of Bradley's

"Yorkshire" Salt

the only salt which will not harden, and is free from lime and dirt. Price is right; quality cannot be better. See that your grocer supplies you—he can get it if you really want it. Sample bag mailed free—send your address on a postal.

We make all kinds and grades of salt. Whatever price you pay, see that you get Bradley's—it will be the best salt made for the money.

BRADLEY SALT CO.,
40 Jay St., New York. 4 Commercial St., Boston.

PROGRESS OF THE KINGDOM.

OUR OWN WORK.

In the Black Belt. Those who have never visited the South can form no adequate conception of the vastness of the home mission field under the A. M. A.—of its sore distress and need. Even those who have visited the cities and towns of the South have not seen the black South. In the six Southern States containing what has been called the Black Belt there are 4,000,000 Negroes, less than half a million of whom live in the cities, towns and villages. In an interesting article in The American Missionary Secretary Woodbury declares that "the rank superstitions, the beliefs in necromancy and witchcraft, the wild orgies of excitement, the utter divorce between the moral virtues and what is called religion, which obtain among these millions of plantation Negroes are but little understood." The moral and religious condition of many communities in this region may be judged from the testimony of a colored man of many years in direct association with ministers in this part of the South, who says that three-fourths of those who are now acting as preachers in all the Black Belt are absolutely unfit, intellectually and morally, to preach the gospel. At its best, in multitudes of cases, what is called religion in these plantation churches is but a form of sensational excitement. The deep work of regenerating the soul and life, the vital need of these people, is not done, is not even attempted. Yet among these dark masses plunged in ignorance, poverty and vice Secretary Woodbury sees signs of a great awakening, an eagerness for education, a desire for better preachers, a call for pure churches which emphasize virtue and intelligence, and he calls upon our churches to arouse themselves to the opportunity by providing the A. M. A. with means, not only for a more ample support of its educational service, but for the planting and upbuilding of free Congregational churches among these destitute millions.

Printer's Ink in India. From Rev. H. J. Bruce of Satara comes an interesting pamphlet showing what one of our American Board missionaries has accomplished with a small printing press. More than ten years ago he bought a little amateur press with the thought that it might be a source of amusement and instruction to his children, but he soon recognized its possibilities as an evangelistic agency. The typographical supplies were therefore enlarged and the little press turned out nearly half a million pages of books, tracts, leaflets and Scripture cards. During a visit to America in 1888–89 Mr. Bruce obtained a larger and more powerful press, and began the publication of religious literature on a much larger scale, his primary object being to provide for the wants of his own district, but such urgent requests came from other missionaries that many thousands of leaflets and cards were sent to fields in all parts of the Marathi speaking country. These tracts, some of which are illustrated, have been distributed broadcast in the railway trains, at the great annual festivals, on the city streets and by house to house visitation, and though it is impossible to see the results, it is known that in multitudes of cases the gospel leaflets are eagerly read, and some conversions have been traced directly to their influence. The Columbia press at Satara now takes its place as a valuable evangelistic agency, having issued in six years nearly 2,000,000 publications.

A Missionary as a Business Man. Dr. Herrick of Constantinople, in an appreciative biographical sketch of the late Rev. J. F. Smith of Marsovan, emphasizes his service as a financier and business adviser. "Probably the treasurer of the Turkish missions and the treasurer of the A. B. C. F. M. would say that no better station treasurer than Brother Smith could be found and, in saying this, I refer not so much to accuracy in his accounts as to scrupulous fidelity in the prevention of all irregularities or advance drafts upon the treasury, in holding himself and others strictly and uncompromisingly, in the face of strong temptation to a generous laxity, to the spirit and the letter of his instructions. He was a born economist. He could live on less salary than others and his personal account always showed a surplus. Moreover, in gifts to the poor he was unusually generous, always giving more than a tenth of his salary." Mr. Smith's rare business ability, which so ably qualified him to be treasurer of Anatolia College, as well as station treasurer, was always at the service of the humblest individuals. He used to say: "The man who wishes to see me is the man I wish to see," and would often give precious hours to some one who sought advice in his perplexing affairs, careful to turn the interview before its close to spiritual profit. Again Dr. Herrick writes: "I have known Mr. Smith, when in infirm health, on a visit to an outstation church where difficulties existed, to sit through a long evening and even till three o'clock in the morning, watching his opportunity to harmonize and guide to right results, determined the long session should not end without the accomplishment of good."

American Board Receipts. The receipts during March are more encouraging than for the same month last year, but the record of seven months of the financial year as compared with the same period in 1895 shows a decrease in every item, making a total falling off of more than $20,000, as is seen by the following figures:

| | Mar., 1895. | Mar., 1896 |
|---|---|---|
| Regular donations, | $31,291.12 | $32,499.91 |
| Donations for special objects, | 2,537.55 | 4,456.73 |
| Legacies, | 11,094.83 | 19,482.77 |
| | $44,923.50 | $56,439.41 |

| | Seven mos. last year. | Seven mos. this year. |
|---|---|---|
| Regular donations, | $235,292.33 | $233,120.02 |
| Donations for special objects, | 28,211.74 | 26,414.30 |
| Legacies, | 91,793.66 | 75,005.72 |
| | $355,297.73 | $334,540.04 |

THE WORLD AROUND.

Menelek's Religious Views. A remarkable letter has recently been written by Negus Menelek to Mr. F. S. R. Clarke, an English missionary, in which the King of Abyssinia shows himself as well able to discuss theology as to lead an army. With much dignity he begins: "You are mistaken in believing that I do not care for your prayers. All prayers of believers are dear to me, even when they come from the children of Europe. Not all are aggressors in my kingdom; not all have bent the knee before Baal, the god of destruction and the slaughterer of brothers. Many, I am sure, still truly adore the God of the cross, the God of justice and of peace. With them I feel in perfect communion of faith and I am happy that they pray for me, for my household and my people." The remainder of the letter indicates the strange mixture of Judaism and Christianity which characterizes the Abyssinian church as seen in the practice of circumcision, fastings, ablutions and other Mosaic institutions. Menelek defends the authority of the Old Testaments laws, and expressses a wish that Western Christians would "return and lead others back to the true gospel which began with the creation of the world, instead of a mutilated gospel which explains the confusion and the infidelity of the peoples of Europe," and he asks, "By what right do they efface the whole portion of it which precedes the coming of Jesus Christ and have they done away with what God established for all time?" After an argument in favor of circumcision and a warm tribute to the 300,000 Jews in his kingdom, who are not subjected to the persecution their race receives in Europe, this African ruler closes his curious epistle with these words of advice: "What you need is to return to our God, to observe all his ordinances, no longer to separate Moses and the prophets from the apostles, or St. Peter from St. Paul. Whoever wishes to serve God must humble himself and obey. You know that, envoy of God. Teach it in Europe and Asia. I am having it taught in Africa."

Jews of Abyssinia. Menelek's reference to the Jews in Abyssinia opens up an interesting subject. They are a peculiar class known as the Falashas, that is, "exiles" or "emigrants," whose origin is utterly unknown. It seems probable that they are a portion of the great Jewish dispersion, but whether they found their way to Abyssinia before New Testament days or after the destruction of Jerusalem is uncertain. These Hebrews have the Old Testament and observe the Mosaic ritual, but know nothing of Talmudic Judaism. They have been despised and persecuted in former times by the Abyssinian Christians, although the present king chooses to praise the Falashas and call the attention of Christendom to their comfortable condition. Missionary work was undertaken among the Abyssinian Jews in 1859 by Dr. Stern under the auspices of the Society for Promoting Christianity Among the Jews with encouraging results, but in 1863 the government interfered, the missionaries were thrown into prison, where they remained several years until released by Lord Napier. Since that time no European missionary has been permitted to labor among the Falashas, but native converts have carried on the enterprise under the superintendence of J. M. Flad, who has cared for and planned the work from his home in Kornthal.

Y. P. S. C. E.

PRAYER MEETING.

BY REV. ISAAC C. RANKIN.

Topic, April 26–May 2. Choose the Good Part. Luke 10: 38–42; Matt. 6: 31–34.

Suppose, in order to make Martha's error plain, that we break apart the word in which our Lord described her case. "Martha, Martha, thou art full of care and troubled." She was so anxious lest something should go wrong with her housekeeping that she had no strength left to enjoy Christ's company. She was so hospitable that she had no hospitality left for the higher ministry of her guest.

We often make this blunder of preferring a lower to a higher good, and must learn to remember that what comes first in our heart's seeking gives color to all that follows it. It was no mistake for Martha to be concerned with her housekeeping. That was her business in life, and we are to be diligent in business. But the love of God comes first, and when it comes it takes away anxiety. Seek ye first his kingdom and his righteousness and all these things shall be added. Beginning with the love of Christ means continuing with Christ's promise. Worry is always a form of doubt. It spoils our peace and hurts our influence. True Christian strength does its best quietly and leaves the result to God.

We are educated by our choices. The lower and the higher are always before us, and our temptation is to look down and not up in choosing, to do the easy or the habitual thing, and to forget that the good part is the best part for all the uses of life.

Parallel verses: Matt. 7: 13, 14; 1 Kings 18: 21; Josh. 24: 15; Luke 19: 41, 42; 1 Cor. 12: 31.

DISILLUSIONED.

Dr. F. H. Wines, the penologist, tells the following story to illustrate the chasm that sometimes yawns between theory and fact. A woman in Denver became a jail matron. She thus expressed her theory in a quatrain written in her diary:

> Help whomever whenever you can,
> For man forever needs help from man.
> Let never a day die in the west
> Without having comforted some sad breast.

Four years later she wrote the following in her diary:

> Watch whomever whenever you must
> Knowing full well there are few you can trust.
> Never a day dies in the west
> But somebody euchres me doing my best.

Literature

BOOK REVIEWS.

THE LIFE OF THOMAS HUTCHINSON.

No man in the early history of the New England colonies was more unpopular, and perhaps none was more prominent, than Thomas Hutchinson. He was representative to the General Court, chief justice, lieutenant governor and governor of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, and in all the heated controversies between the people and the English Government he was the steadfast defender of royalty. For many years he was the cause of irritation often breaking out in the province, occasionally intensified into riots which have become famous in history. During the Stamp Act riots in 1765, his house on Court Street, Boston, was destroyed by a mob. Two of his sons were consignees of the tea that was destroyed in Boston Harbor in 1773. He was the last of the royal governors of Massachusetts. His public career in New England extends over thirty-seven years, and during nearly all that time he was in the midst of public controversies, often with men like James Otis, Samuel Adams and others who are famous in the annals of the Revolutionary War.

There are abundant documents throwing light on Hutchinson's career, many of them the productions of his own pen. Many more were written by his political opponents. The writer of the biography now before us, Mr. James K. Hosmer, is well qualified for his task, having already won honorable distinction by his lives of Samuel Adams and Sir Harry Vane, and by other historical work of high value. His task in this instance is not a popular one and will not please all his readers. We do not think he has done full justice to the patriots of Massachusetts Colony, and we are not disposed to accept without qualification the character of Governor Hutchinson as here portrayed. Mr. Hosmer's sympathy with his subject leads him sometimes to take the position of an advocate rather than an impartial biographer. Yet he has evidently devoted much time to painstaking research, and is familiar with writings which have done injustice to the governor, as well as with the voluminous "Hutchinson Correspondence." He has aimed to speak in a judicial mood. The style is pleasing and forceful, and the material is connected with the most important period of our colonial history. The book is a valuable contribution, along fresh lines, to the early history of New England. [Houghton, Mifflin & Co. $4.00.]

RELIGIOUS.

Two volumes of the Little Books on Religion edited by W. Robertson Nicholl are The Visions of a Prophet, by Marcus Dods, and The Four Temperaments, by Alexander Whyte, D. D. Dr. Whyte's book is dedicated to Jacob Behmen, and is pleasantly tinged with a mystic view of humanity and its relation to the world, which will be helpful as well as enjoyable to its readers. Professor Dods's book is a study of Zechariah. How modern the propheeies of Scripture are, with the recurrence of the old problems of humanity in new conditions and combinations, the exposition and application here bear witness. In speaking of the problems of the day Professor Dods says: "Our hope lies in the continuance of resolute, serious-minded inquiry into religious matters. Serious men will in the long run be drawn where there is freest access to the truth," and this never needed more emphasis than it does today. [Dodd, Mead & Co. Each 50 cents.]

The Life of Privilege, by Prebendary Webb Peploe. These addresses were delivered at the Northfield Bible Conference last summer. They are fine examples of the hortatory style of speaking, and their publication in book form will extend and perpetuate their influence. [Fleming H. Revell Co. $1 00.]

Notes from My Bible, from Genesis to Revelation, by D. L. Moody. Students of Mr. Moody's method of Bible exposition will find some of its secrets recorded here in preface and text. To him the Book is alive with divine suggestion, and he comes to it with earnest study and welcomes suggestion from all quarters. Any one who uses his book slavishly will miss its best help, which is in its suggestiveness. If it shall direct the attention of preachers to the real power of thought and prayer and searching to bring forth treasures new and old from the familiar mine, the book will have done its best service. [Fleming H. Revell Co. $1 00.]

Christianity Vindicated by Its Enemies, by Daniel Dorchester, D. D. This is an interesting theme, and the materials gathered by Dr. Dorchester are valuable. An index will help the reader to refer to the instances quoted. [Hunt & Eaton. 75 cents.]

STORIES.

We have six stories dealing with events in French history. O'dest in point of date of writing as well as of historical order is Dickens's A Tale of Two Cities and Edwin Drood, with illustrations and introduction, biographical and bibliographical by Charles Dickens the Younger. This may be called the classic historical novel of the French Revolution, and it is needless to stop to discuss its merits or shortcomings here. It is well printed and makes a satisfactory edition of a favorite story. [Macmillan & Co. $1.00.]

To the same general school belongs When Greek Meets Greek, by Joseph Hatton. The author calls it a tale of love and war, and both are present in its well-studied pages, while the plot is clever, retaining the interest of the reader to the end. [J. B. Lippincott Co. $1.50.]

Treating of the same scenes as the other two is At the Sign of the Guillotine, by Harold Spender. It shows some traces of a lack of experience in story writing, and is artistically marred by a conclusion which involves an anti-climax, but has a good plot, well sustained, and gives a vivid picture of Paris during the Terror. [Merriam Co. $1.00.]

The Outlaw of Camargue, by A. De Lamothe, translated by Anna T. Sadlier, is of quite another school. It is a French picture of France in the time of the Revolution, in what might be called a series of sketches hung on the thread of a romantic story. [Benziger Brothers. $1.25.]

At a slightly later period begin The Exploits of Brigadier Gerard, by A. Conan Doyle, which belongs to the school of the elder Dumas rather than to that of Dickens—if so original a writer as Dr. Doyle must be referred to any school. Those who enjoy well-invented and brightly told adventure, with a good spice of humor, will get a great deal of pleasure from the book, which is well printed and illustrated. [D. Appleton & Co. $1.50.]

The American in Paris, a biographical novel by Eugene Coleman Savidge, has its scene in the second Terror, the days of the Commune. The book is written from an American standpoint, and is strongly planned, but perhaps bears too many marks of the notebook and the library for its best literary and dramatic effect. American patriotism is the moving force of its creation, and the writer finds the influence of his own country's life and thought in all the movements of modern history. In spite of this literary overweight the book is a stirring and readable one. [J. B. Lippincott Co. $1.00.]

POETRY.

One of the most spontaneous and musical of our younger poets is Clinton Scollard, whose Hills of Song comes to be added to his former poetic achievement. We like these verses, not merely for the unfailingly skillful workmanship, but for a spirit of faith and cheer which is not too common in our singing. Here is a bit quite appropriate to the season:

Be ye in love with April-tide?
I' faith, in love am I,
For now 't is sun and now 't is shower,
And now 't is frost and now 't is flower,
And now 't is Laura laughing-eyed,
And now 't is Laura shy.

Ye doubtful days, O slower glide!
Still smile and frown, O sky!
Some beauty unforeseen I trace
In every change of Laura's face.
Be ye in love with April-tide?
I' faith, in love am I.

[Copeland & Day. $1.25.]

The House of the Trees and Other Poems, by Ethelyn Wetherald. This is a dainty book, beautifully printed on creamy rough paper, with a portrait of the author for a frontispiece and a picturesque and poster-like young lady in green on the title-page. The verse is somewhat unequal, but at the best it is of a high order and of a delightful music. Such a lyric as Autumn Fire sings itself into the memory. The author loves the out-of-door world, and her verse gains from sympathy and insight with its changes. [Lamson, Wolffe & Co. $1.00.]

Armenian Poems, rendered into English verse by Alice Stone Blackwell. Miss Blackwell has succeeded in carrying over much of the native fire into her translations from the classic and modern poems of Armenia, a thing all the more difficult to accomplish because the material was at her disposal only in a prose English or French translation. Patriotism, love and lament over the long and unfortunate story of the Armenian nation appear in these verses, which give us a very high opinion of the literary capacity of the race which produced them. The book is well edited and has a portrait of Raphael Patkanian, one of the poets from whom translations have been made. [Roberts Brothers. $1.25.]

A beautiful little book is Emily Shaw Forman's Wild Flower Sonnets. The poems are thoughtful and melodious, and the illustrations by Abbott Graves are remarkably successful in catching the spirit of the blossoms in their natural surroundings. Such work as this in purely home scenes is full of the highest promise. The book is a blossom calendar for wood and shore and meadow. [Joseph Knight Co. $1.00.]

Bishop Spaulding of the Roman Catholic diocese of Peoria sends us his Songs, Chiefly from the German. Many of the translations are successful, although in the sense of reaching the highest level in English in a close rendering the author fails nearly as often as he succeeds, especially in cases where the charm of the original depends not merely on the thought, but also on subtlety and melody of language, as in some of the poems attempted in imitation of Goethe and Heine. The task he had set himself was a difficult one and the measure of success he has attained is greatly to his credit. The book would have been more valuable for an index of authors and a table of first lines. [A. C. McClurg & Co. $1 25.]

CHILDHOOD AND CHILD TRAINING.

Studies of Childhood, by James Sully, professor in University College, London. Every part of the world and every stage of life has become important to science as its followers realize more and more the difficulties and perplexities of the problems which they have set themselves to solve. This book of Professor Sully's is both a study of the human child and an essay to prove the importance and point out the difficulties of the subject. These difficulties arise largely from the very tenderness of the relation in which those who come nearest to the child stand to it. For instance, the author says: "One may conclude, then, that women may be fitted to become valuable laborers in this new field of investigation, if only they will acquire a genuine scientific interest in babyhood and a fair amount of scientific training. That a large number of women will get so far is, I think, doubtful. The sentimental or æsthetic side of the baby is apt to be a serious obstacle to a cold, matter-of-fact examination of it as a scientific specimen." Indeed we should think so! though we know that a great deal of just this kind of work has been done of late by American mothers. The book is not only valuable in its careful study of the available material for the study of the psychology of childhood, but is interesting as well, and some of its chapters relating to the childhood of famous persons have a charm for those who do not care much for the purely scientific aspect of the questions involved. [D. Appleton & Co. $2.50.]

Nursery Ethics, by Florence Hull Winterburn. "Parenthood is already looked upon by the more advanced minds as a profession," writes the author, in her chapter on dealing with little faults; "the time must come when its duties will be reduced to an exact science, ignorance of which will be inexcusable, as it is even now deplorable." And again she speaks of "that vast self-love that makes a parent consider his children but an exterior portion of his own personality." The book is written out of a mother's experience, and it shows everywhere a knowledge of the best modern thought upon the subject. It is at bottom a plea for the rights of the child and an enforcement of the responsibility of the parent. "The principle underlying every line is that of justice to children," Mrs. Winterburn tells us. We welcome it as a contribution to a study on which the last word is far from having been said, and wish that the essential principle which it enforces might be brought home in some very simple way to all those to whom God has intrusted the first years of his little ones. [Merriam Co. $1.00.]

In this connection we may notice School Interests and Duties by Robert M. King. Mr. King is himself an instructor, and his book may be described as a practical handbook of the machinery of his profession. In part it is developed from the remarkable address of David P. Page, delivered as long ago as 1838, from which is taken the opening chapter on the duties of parents. To this succeed practical chapters on such topics as school architecture and hygiene, the dictionary and how to use it, school morals, school etiquette, teachers' and pupils' reading circles, the teacher's relation to public opinion, and others. Altogether it is a sensible, and full manual of its subject, which would prove suggestive and valuable to others than the teachers and parents for whom it was specially prepared. [American Book Co. $1.00.]

MISCELLANEOUS.

In New England Fields and Woods, by Rowland E. Robinson, is a collection of sketches, first published in Forest and Stream, which reveal a subtle appreciation of nature in all her moods and manifestations. There are many who can interest us in flowers and birds, but here is a man who makes the bullfrog seem companionable, who knows the love-song of the silent toad, and who has a good word for the despised garter snake and skunk. He knows the keen delight of the sportsman and angler, yet he prefers that intimacy with nature's creatures which makes the taking of life repugnant. No season of the year is barren to him, and he gets more out of a walk in December than half the world can in midsummer. He writes enthusiastically of camping out and the camp fire, but deplores the modern so-called camping which demands in the woods all the comforts and conveniences of city life. It is with sorrow that we learn, from the preface, that eyes capable of seeing so much should now be denied the power of vision, hiding the scenes he loves behind a "curtain of darkness," and taking from us the hope of more of these exquisite sketches. [Houghton, Mifflin & Co. $1.25.]

For His Sake, extracts from the letters of Elsie Marshall, martyred at Hwa-Sang, Aug. 1, 1895. This, as the title indicates, is a memorial biography of one of the martyrs of the Chinese outbreak of last summer. Miss Marshall was working in connection with the Church of England Zenana Society, and had been less than three years in the field. The letters bear testimony to a bright, lovable and enthusiastic personality and a most useful life. Incidentally they are of interest in confirming the accounts of demon possession among the Chinese referred to in Dr. Nevius's book on that subject, and in giving interesting glimpses of missionary life in one of the provinces of China. [Fleming H. Revell Co. $1.00.]

A little book called Christian Unity, by Rev. Morgan M. Sheedy, is hardly of importance enough to bring to the attention of our readers, except as a convenient instance at once of the "Publisher's Circular" and of the present methods of the Roman Catholic literary propaganda. The book itself is a bitter attack upon Protestantism on quite familiar lines. The publisher's circular (intended, we suppose, to save reviewers the trouble of reading the book) runs to this effect: "The keynote of the book, the strain that runs throughout it all, is strictly according to that truest of all the ideas regarding this subject, that the first step toward Christian unity is a frank and generous acknowledgment of the good in each other. There is, therefore, not a discordant note to be detected in any one of the many beautiful sentiments it expresses. It is, moreover, neither redundant with controversy, nor tiresome and offensive with cant." Most publishers' circulars are bad enough, but the man who wrote this had either not read Mr. Sheedy's book, or gives a deliberately false account of it. He can only defend his honesty at the expense of his brains. [Catholic Book Exchange. 50 cents.]

In The Art of Cookery Mrs. Emma P. Ewing, superintendent of the Chautauqua School of Cookery, gives "intelligent instruction in regard to the preparation of food" and numerous thoroughly tested recipes. She makes a plea for fried food which, if the frying be done according to her explicit directions, she considers as healthful as that prepared in any other manner. A peculiarity of her recipes is the measuring of eggs by cupfuls instead of by number. Her book is comprehensive and would be an excellent gift for a young housekeeper. [Flood & Vincent, Chautauqua-Century Press, Meadville, Pa. $1.75.]

NOTES.

—— The successor of Lord Leighton in the Royal Academy is the former American, George Henry Boughton.

—— There are about thirty-nine miles of shelving filled with books in the library of the British Museum. This affords space for 1,750,000 volumes.

—— In the April number of Progress of the World Nikola Tesla promises to transmit electric energy from Niagara to Paris without any other conducting medium than the earth itself.

—— A grandson of Victor Hugo, who was a sailor for three years, is soon to publish his first book, The Recollections of a Sailor, some of the chapters of which have already appeared in one of the Paris newspapers.

—— It is a sign of the cosmopolitanism of the modern American theater that Sudermann's play, Heimat—or Magda, as it is often called, after its most striking character—has recently been played in New York in four different languages, German, French, Italian and English.

—— Mr. Anthony Hope objects to the publication by an American firm under his name as author of a collection of stories. "I have never written any story or any volume of stories under the title of Frivolous Cupid," he says, "and I am in nowise responsible for this publication."

—— It is announced, according to The Nation, that the Antigone of Sophocles will be represented by amateurs, students and composers at Athens during the celebration of the Olympic games in the theater of Dionysos, at the foot of the Acropolis, where very likely it may have been heard centuries ago.

—— The London Family Herald reports the following item of literary news, which is interesting—if true. "Angels being invariably represented as the fairest and whitest of beings a Yankee book agent has arranged a Bible for the colored race with pictures of Negro angels. The Negroes in the Southern States are buying up the Bibles as fast as they can get them."

—— Paul Verlaine is called the greatest poet of France in the present generation. He was a moral and physical wreck at his death, having spent his time between a wretched lodging and his favorite drinking and lounging places. After his death his effects were found to consist of some papers in a table drawer, a bundle of MSS. in a handbag, another in a portmanteau, half a dozon clay pipes and a clay cigarette holder, two pairs of eyeglasses, a hat and a nightcap.

BOOKS OF THE WEEK.

Ginn & Co. Boston.

POEMS BY JOHN KEATS. Edited by Arlo Bates. pp. 300. $1.10.

SELECTIONS FROM EPICTETUS. Abridged by Edward Ginn. pp. 240. 50 cents.

NATURAL HISTORY OF SELBOURNE. By Gilbert White. pp. 251. 50 cents.

Copeland & Day. Boston.

IN THE VILLAGE OF VIGER. By Duncan C. Scott. pp. 135. $1.00.

THE CAPTURED CUNARDER. By William H. Rideing. pp. 105. 75 cents.

THE ROAD TO CASTALY. By Alice Brown. pp. 70. $1.00.

Silver, Burdett & Co. Boston.

A HISTORY OF AMERICAN LITERATURE. By Fred L. Pattee. pp. 475. $1.50.

James H. Earle. Boston.

BEHOLD HE GOETH BEFORE YOU. By May F. McKean. pp. 155. 75 cents.

D. C. Heath & Co. Boston.

FRITZ AUF FERIEN. By Hans Arnold. Edited by A. W. Spanhoofd. pp. 57. 20 cents.

Fleming H. Revell Co. New York.

THE GREATER LIFE AND WORK OF CHRIST. By Alexander Patterson. pp. 408. $1.50.

WALKING WITH GOD. By S. B. Randall. pp. 121. 60 cents.

POPULAR AMUSEMENTS AND THE CHRISTIAN LIFE. By Rev. Perry W. Sinks pp. 176. 75 cents.

HOW TO STUDY THE BIBLE FOR GREATEST PROFIT. By R. A. Torrey. pp. 121. 50 cents.

MISSIONARY HEROINES IN EASTERN LANDS. By Mrs. E. R. Pitman. pp. 160. 75 cents.

LABRADOR AND ITS PEOPLE. By Wilfred T. Grenfell, M. R. C. S. E., L. R. C. P. pp. 240. $1.25.

EDEN LOST AND WON. By Sir J. William Dawson, LL. D., F. R. S., etc. pp. 226. $1.25.

American Book Co. New York.

LIFE OF SAMUEL JOHNSON. By Lord Macaulay. pp. 70. 20 cents.

THE RIME OF THE ANCIENT MARINER. By S. T. Coleridge. pp. 41 20 cents.

CONCILIATION WITH THE AMERICAN COLONIES. By Edmund Burke. pp. 87. 20 cents.

REVOLT OF THE TARTARS. By Thomas De Quincey. pp. 75. 20 cents.

Longmans, Green & Co. New York.

AS YOU LIKE IT. By William Shakespeare. Introduction by Robert Wendell and notes by William Lyon Phelps. pp. 103. 60 cents.

A MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM. By William Shakespeare. Edited by George P. Baker. pp. 111. 60 cents.

THE MERCHANT OF VENICE. By William Shakespeare. Edited by Francis B. Gummere, Ph. D. pp. 144. 60 cents.

Charles Scribner's Sons. New York.

INDUCTIVE LOGIC. By John Grier Hibben, Ph. D. pp. 345. $1.50.

SHAKESPEARE AND HIS PREDECESSORS. By Frederick S. Boas. pp. 555 $1.50.

YOUR MONEY OR YOUR LIFE. By Edith Carpenter. pp. 345. $1.25.

Harper & Brothers. New York.

A LAODICEAN. By Thomas Hardy. pp. 500. $1.50.

VENEZUELA. By William Eleroy Curtis. pp. 315. $1.25

THE EVOLUTION OF WOMAN. By Harry W. McVickar. $2.00.

Macmillan & Co. New York.

THE BROWNINGS FOR THE YOUNG. Edited by F. G. Kenyon. pp 203. 40 cents.

R. F. Fenno & Co. New York.

THE HEART OF A MYSTERY. By T. W. Speight. pp. 331. $1.25.

Frederick A. Stokes Co. New York.

I MARRIED A WIFE. By John Strange Winter. pp. 200. 75 cents.

E. P. Dutton & Co. New York.

THE FARMER AND THE LORD. By George H. Hepworth. pp. 238. 75 cents

American Baptist Pub. Soc. Philadelphia.

FROM HOLLOW TO HILLTOP. By Mary Lowe Dickinson. pp. 54. 50 cents.

J. B. Lippincott Co. Philadelphia.

THE EBBING OF THE TIDE. By Louis Becke. pp. 292. $1.25.

Open Court Publishing Co. Chicago.

THE SCIENCE OF LANGUAGE. By F. Max Müller. pp. 112. 75 cents.

THE GOSPEL OF BUDDHA. Told by Paul Carus. pp. 275. $1.00.

THE PSYCHOLOGY OF ATTENTION. By Th. Ribot. pp. 119. 75 cents.

RELIGION OF SCIENCE. By Dr. Paul Carus. pp. 125. 50 cents.

PAPER COVERS.

Macmillan & Co. New York.

A ROMAN SINGER. By F. Marion Crawford. pp. 354. 50 cents.

AMIEL'S JOURNAL II. Translated by Mrs. Humphry Ward. pp. 402. 25 cents.

Fleming H. Revell Co. New York.

THE ARMENIAN AMPHITHEATER AND ITS BLOODY ARENA. By a twenty years resident of Turkey. pp. 48. 10 cents.

E. P. Dutton & Co. New York.

LOVE AND DEATH. By Lyman Abbott, D. D. pp. 14. 10 cents.

Johns Hopkins Press. Baltimore.

COLONIAL ORIGINS OF NEW ENGLAND SENATES. By F. L. Riley. pp. 76. 50 cents.

MAGAZINES.

March. BABYLAND.—AMERICAN UNIVERSITY.

April. DONAHOE'S.—CHAP-BOOK.—MUSICAL RECORD.—CAMBRIDGE.—APPLETON'S POPULAR SCIENCE MONTHLY.—CHRISTIAN LITERATURE.—NEW ENGLAND.—VOCALIST.—PENNY.—EDUCATIONAL REVIEW.—CENTURY.—SCHOOL REVIEW.—BOOKBUYER.—REVIEW OF REVIEWS.—NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW.—WINDSOR.—CHATTERBOX.—JOURNAL OF ECONOMICS.—PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL.—PANSY.—CHAUTAUQUAN.—MUSIC.—BIBLICAL WORLD.—BOOK NEWS.—AMERICAN MAGAZINE OF CIVICS.—GOOD WORDS.—SUNDAY.—BIBLIOTHECA SACRA.—LEND A HAND.—GOOD HOUSEKEEPING.

News from the Churches

Meetings to Come.

FOREIGN MISSIONARY PRAYER MEETING under the auspices of the Woman's Board of Missions in Pilgrim Hall, Congregational House, every Friday at 11 A. M.

UNION BIBLE CLASS, conducted by Rev. Alfred A. Wright, D. D., Bromfield Street Church, Boston, Saturday, 3 P. M.

WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION, Central Church, Worcester, April 29, at 10.30 A. M and 2 P. M. Louise A. Kellogg, Secretary.

WORCESTER SOUTH CONFERENCE, Grafton, April 22.

CONFERENCE FOR MINISTERS AND CHRISTIAN WORKERS at Chicago during the month of April. Special lectures by Superintendent Torrey, Prof. W. W. White and Dr. W. J. Erdman. All who desire to avail themselves of this special conference and stopping at the Institute at the reduced price for board and room of $5 per week should make application early to Supt. R. A. Torrey, 80 Institute Place, Chicago, Ill.

THE ANNUAL MEETING of the Congregational Sunday School and Publishing Society will be held in Pilgrim Hall, Congregational House, Boston (Monday being a legal holiday), on Tuesday, April 21, at 3 P.M., for the purpose of reporting the proceedings of the society, presenting the accounts, choosing officers, and for the transaction of other business. Also to take action on the following change in Article 7 of the constitution of the society which is recommended by vote of the board of directors. The last clause to be altered to read: "They shall be ex-officio members of each of the standing committees, without vote, except in the committee on publications."

All life members are entitled to vote; also, five delegates duly attested by credentials from every State association, conference, convention, or Congregational churches, and one such delegate from each Congregational church annually contributing to this society.

GEORGE M. BOYNTON, Secretary.

SPRING STATE MEETINGS.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| New Jersey, | Newark, | Tuesday, April 21. |
| Oklahoma, | Kingfisher, | Thursday, April 30. |
| Missouri, | Lamar, | Tuesday, May 5. |
| Kansas, | Lawrence, | Thursday, May 7. |
| Ohio, | Marietta, | Tuesday, May 12. |
| Indiana, | Michigan City, | Tuesday, May 12. |
| Illinois, | Aurora, | Monday, May 18. |
| Iowa, | Davenport, | Tuesday, May 19. |
| Massachusetts, | Fall River, | Tuesday, May 19. |
| Michigan, | Greenville, | Tuesday, May 19. |
| New York, | Canandaigua, | Tuesday, May 19. |
| South Dakota, | Pierre, | Tuesday, May 19. |
| Pennsylvania, | Ridgway, | Tuesday, May 26. |
| Rhode Island, | Westerly, | Tuesday, May 26. |
| Vermont, | Bradford, | Tuesday, June 9. |
| Connecticut Asso., | Hartford, | Tuesday, June 16. |

Benevolent Societies.

THE CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY is represented in Massachusetts by the MASSACHUSETTS HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY, No. 9 Congregational House, Rev. Joshua Coit, Secretary; Rev. Edwin B. Palmer, Treasurer.

WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION, Room No. 32, Congregational House. Office hours, 9 to 5. Annual membership $1.00; life membership, $20.00 Contributions solicited Miss Annie C. Bridgman, Treasurer.

AMERICAN BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS, Congregational House, No 1 Somerset Street, Boston. Frank H. Wiggin, Assistant Treasurer; Charles E. Swett, Pub lishing and Purchasing Agent. Office in New York, 121 Bible House; in Chicago, 153 La Salle St.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, Rooms 1 and 2 Congregational House. Miss Ellen Carruth, Treasurer; Miss Abbie B. Child, Home Secretary.

THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION, Bible House, New York. Missions in the United States, evangelistic and educational, at the South and in the West among the Indians and Chinese. Boston office, 21 Congregational House; Chicago office, 153 La Salle Street.; Cleveland office Y. M. C. A. Building. Donations may be sent to either of the above offices, or to H. W. Hubbard, Treasurer, 108 Bible House, New York City.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY.—Church and Parsonage Building. Rev. L. H. Cobb, D. D., Secretary; H. O. Pinneo, Treasurer, 59 Bible House, New York; Rev. George A. Hood, Congregational House, Boston, Field Secretary.

CONGREGATIONAL EDUCATION SOCIETY.—(Including work of former New West Commission.) Aids four hundred students for the ministry, eight home missionary colleges, twenty academies in the West and South, ten free Christian schools in Utah and New Mexico. S. F. Wilkins, Treasurer. Offices, 10 Congregational House, Boston, 151 Washington St., Chicago, Ill. Address, 10 Congregational House, Boston.

CONG. SUNDAY SCHOOL & PUBLISHING SOCIETY.—Contributions used only for missionary work. Rev. George M. Boynton, D. D., Secretary; W. A. Duncan, Ph. D., Field Secretary; E. Lawrence Barnard, Treasurer, Congregational House, Boston.

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF MINISTERIAL AID.—Treasurer, Mr. Arthur G. Stanwood, 701 Sears Building, Boston. Address applications to Rev. R. M. Quint, D. D., Congregational Library, 1 Somerset Street, Boston.

MINISTERIAL RELIEF.—In order to afford a little timely aid to aged and disabled home and foreign missionaries and ministers and their families, the committee of the National Council asks from each church one splendid offering for its permanent invested fund. It also invites generous individual gifts. For fuller information see Minutes of National Council, 1892, and Year-Book, 1893, page 62. Secretary, Rev. N. H. Whittlesey, New Haven, Ct.; Treasurer, Rev. S. B Forbes, Hartford, Ct. Form of a bequest: I bequeath to the "Trustees of the National Council of the Congregational Churches of the United States" (a body corporate chartered under the laws of the State of Connecticut) [here insert the bequest], to be used for the purpose of Ministerial Relief, as provided in the resolution of the National Council of the Congregational Churches of the United States at its session held in Chicago in October, 1886.

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF PASTORAL SUPPLY, established by the Massachusetts General Association, offers its services to churches desiring pastors or pulpit supplies. Careful attention is given to applications from without the State. Room 22A, Congregational House, Boston. Rev. Charles B. Rice, Sec.

THE BOSTON SEAMAN'S FRIEND SOCIETY, organized 1827. Chapel and reading-room, 287 Hanover St., Boston. Open day and evening. Sailors and landsmen welcome. Daily prayer meeting, 11 A. M., Bible study, 3 P. M. Sunday services, usual hours. Meetings every evening except Saturday. Branch mission, Vineyard Haven. Is a Congregational society and appeals to all Congregational churches for support. Send donations of money to B. S. Snow, Corresponding Secretary, Room 22, Congregational House, Boston. Send clothing, comfort bags, reading, etc., to Capt. S. S. Nickerson, chaplain, 287 Hanover st. Bequests should read: "I give and bequeath to the Boston Seaman's Friend Society the sum of $——, to be applied to the charitable uses and purposes of said society." Rev. Alexander McKenzie, D. D., President; George Gould, Treasurer.

PASSING COMMENT.

"Seats free but definite" is the announcement of a church in the West. A system of free pews under such conditions does away with at least one of the common objections.

Those brethren of other denominations in two Western States, who have looked about for a firmer ground for their faith, have made no mistake, we believe, in seeking a foothold in Congregationalism.

That church in Connecticut, which reports outstanding pew rents of double the amount of its unpaid debts, has taken the first necessary step toward bettering the condition, and offers one more illustration of the need of strictly business methods in church affairs.

The spirit of Easter was manifest afresh in last Sunday's services at many churches which took the opportunity of illustrating the value of high class music in the sanctuary by repeating the programs of the previous week.

What a sensible adjustment of two Minneapolis churches! And had the balance swung the other way, more favorable conditions resulting in a Presbyterian church rather than in one of our denomination, we could have said with equally emphatic congratulations, better one like the prospective organization than several like those now existing.

That there are one-third more churches in Maine than active ministers, may perhaps be considered as auguring well for the seminary men who enter the field in a few months. But that less than one-third of all the pastors are installed gives a slightly different color to the conditions.

If individuals could realize what changed conditions have resulted on the mission fields from such generous support as a Chicago church, for example, has given during the past year, their anxiety to share in the good work would not allow them to rest until they had ransacked their houses, where often moths corrupt before the call of the needy is answered.

EASTER IN NEBRASKA.

Easter Sunday was a glad day among the churches in Omaha. At the First Church confident hopes have been realized in the acceptance, by Rev. F. A. Warfield of Brockton, Mass., of his call to this important field. His former long and successful pastorate will give an earnest to the people of this church and to Congregationalists in Omaha and Nebraska that the mother church among the Congregational churches in the State will regain its leadership and aggressive influence. At St. Mary's Avenue, after a characteristic sermon by the pastor, Rev. S. W. Butler, D. D., Easter offerings, amounting to $1,350, fully the amount expected, were received for the extinguishment of a floating indebtedness. In the evening the services, under the auspices of the Men's Club, were attended by the Knight Templars of the city in a body. The musical program was elaborate and exceptionally fine. The pastor gave a brief address to the visitors and many persons were turned away from the crowded house. At Plymouth and Hillside the pastors, Rev. H. S. MacAyeal and Rev. Jacob Flook, preached Easter sermons to good houses and, at the latter place, the evening service was given up almost entirely to Easter music. It was an impressive service, enjoyed by an appreciative congregation. At Pilgrim Chapel, where Mrs. A. H. Byles has been taking care of the services for a time, her husband preached in the evening and received five new members.

In Lincoln the churches made much of Easter. At the First Church the pastor, Rev. Lewis Gregory, preached and the music at all services was admirably chosen and rendered. Mrs. Raymond, the musical leader, has been for some years director of music for the Crete Chautauqua Assembly. At Vine Street the communion service was observed in the morning, the pastor, Rev. A. F. Newell, preaching an Easter sermon, and four new members were received on confession. The Butler Avnue Church had its Easter service in the enovated church building, which appeared lmost entirely new inside, having been re-aired, repapered and made much more in-iting. The two mission schools reported by ne First Church, one held in the German neeting house and the other at Pilgrim hapel, are both prospering. H. B.

THEOLOGICAL SEMINARIES.

Bangor.

Professor Denio lectured in Houlton, Me., April on Oliver Cromwell: His Times and His Work. —The exercises in Sociology last Friday consisted f a debate—in the first division of the class of an ttack and defense of communism and in the second ivision an attack and defense of anarchism.——Re-iew work has begun in most of the departments preparation for the final examinations.——There ill be six speakers from the graduating class at ommencement, May 19, 20.

Hartford.

The spring term of eight weeks began with noon of pril 6.——The required Junior work in Hebrew nded with the winter term.——Four of the teach-rs in Mr. Moody's schools at Mount Hermon and orthfield are to study at the seminary during pril ——Last week Tuesday evening Prof. Arthur . Gillett was formally inaugurated as professor f apologetics. He had already filled the chair r seven years as instructor and associate pro-ssor, but now he has been made full professor. —The Carew lecturer for the present year Dr. G. L. Walker. His theme is Some Phases f the Religious Life of New England with Spe-al Reference to Congregationalism. The lec-ures will be given as follows: April 15, The Reli-ious Life of the Puritan Period (about 1620–1660); pril 20, The Decline of Religious Feeling in New ngland (1660–1735); April 22, The Great Awakening nd Its Sequels (1735–1790); April 27, The Evangeli-al Revival (1790–1859); April 29, the Current Era 859–1896).

Yale.

The following students of the Middle Class were censed by the New Haven Central Association, pril 7: M. W. Baker, W. S. Beard, G. L. Briggs, . Coolidge, D. H. Evans, M. B. Fisher, A. E. John-on, P. A. Johnson, G. E. Ladd, F. H. Linch, C. C. lerrill, W. E. Page, C. P. Pierce, A. Rice, W. H. owe, J. E. Sarles, W. H. Short, L. W. Wiltberger. rom the Senior Class, C. N. Thorp and C. K. ankhauser were licensed.——The Senior address st week was by Mr. C. N. Thorp on the Statesman nd the Politician in the Ministry.

Oberlin.

Rev. D. M. Fisk of Toledo recently gave an unsually interesting address on The Minister and enal Reform, a subject upon which he has rare ualifications to speak.——Professor King of the ollege is to give to the class in theology a course f twelve lectures upon the Philosophy of Religion, sing as a basis Lotze's Outlines.——G. W. Bliss as accepted summer work with the new church in road Ripple, Indianapolis, Ind.

CONFERENCES AND ASSOCIATIONS.

MASS.—At the meeting of the Suffolk North Con-erence, April 8, in Cambridge, encouraging reports ere heard, and the topics were Completeness of haracter and Life; and Usefulness, Its Motive and Iethod.

The Suffolk West Conference, at its meeting, pril 8, with the Park Street Church, Boston, con-idered The Priesthood of the People and of the lergy, with sub-topics.

MICH.—Muskegon Association held its annual neeting with the First Church, Muskegon, April 6, . There was a large attendance and encouraging eports were given. Special features were the ad-ress by Dr. E. B. Fairfield on the Holy Land and he home missionary rally in charge of Secretaries Warren and Wiard.

CLUBS.

CT.—The New Haven Club's meeting at Grand Avenue Church, April 13, was patriotic night. Rev. Reuen Thomas, D. D., of Boston, spoke on England nd America.

N. Y.—The spring meeting of the Central New York Club was held with Plymouth Church, Syra-use, April 10. The address was by Prof. C. M. Tyler f Cornell University on The Bearings of Archæolog-cal Discovery on Old Testament Scripture.

NEW ENGLAND.

Massachusetts.

CAMBRIDGEPORT.—Pilgrim. A special commun-on service was held April 5, attended by the lar-gest number of members that ever sat down here to-gether. Five young people were received into membership. No communion has occurred since the coming of Rev. Charles Olmstead without addi-tions, making in all 154 on confession and 92 by let-ter. During this pastorate the church has raised $31,000 for benevolence and $49,000 for home ex-penses.

SOMERVILLE.—Broadway. Last Sunday $10,500 were raised in addition to $13,500 the week previous to wipe out the debt, which amounts to $24,000.

EVERETT.—Mystic Side. The Sunday school of this church mourns the loss of its superintendent, Deacon Herbert Porter, who died April 12. He was one of the founders of the school and church, and will be greatly missed in Congregational circles.

LYNN.—First. In memory of Rev. Walter Barton, a former pastor of this church, the choir on Easter Sunday sang one of his favorite hymns, Vox Angelica, the congregation joining in the chorus. The church held a special preaching service on Good Friday, appropriate to the day.

PEABODY.—South. The annual meeting and church supper were held April 7, with a large at-tendance. The total membership Jan. 1 was 334, contributions to foreign missions were $815 and to home missions, $1,417. To other charities $478 were given. Rev. G. A. Hall is pastor.

LOWELL.—John Street. The pastor, Rev. G. H. Johnson, has recently returned from a visit to Washington, D. C., and in a recent evening lecture to his people spoke warmly of the creditable repre-sentative church of our denomination there.

MIDDLEBORO.—Central. The annual meeting of the church marked the most prosperous year in its history. The spiritual condition is good and there is a surplus in the treasury. A roll-call and social reunion were helpful features. Rev. R. G. Wood-bridge is pastor.

ORLEANS.—The church has entered upon its 250th year, and its members contemplate a celebration. For two years Rev. E. I. Rackett has been its set-tled pastor. A series of evangelical evening serv-ices has resulted in the renewal of several persons and the hopeful conversion of many others. The meetings were deeply impressive and conducted entirely by the pastor. At the last communion 21 united with the church, 17 on confession, mostly adults.

TAUNTON.—More churches than usual observed Holy Week with special services this year, and it is felt that they have been greatly helped in the spirit-ual life.

WORCESTER.—Union. The people turned out in large numbers at the recent farewell reception to Rev. F. F. Emerson. Drs. Cutler, Mix, Horr and others spoke words of appreciation. Dr. Gould made the address of the evening. He highly com-mended the homiletical workmanship of Mr. Emer-son.——Second Swedish. Rev. J. R. Armstrong ex-pects to go to Japan as a missionary as soon as his successor is ready to take up the work here. This church was organized last May with 42 members, and called Mr. Armstrong from Chicago Seminary. The present membership is 111, 63 having been added by letter and 48 on confession. Congrega-tions number about 300, Sunday school 200, Young People's Society 40. Since November, 1895, the church has assumed self-support. A call has been extended to Rev. John Udd of Chicago Seminary.

SHREWSBURY.—The total benevolences last year amounted to over $175. The Sunday school and C. E. Society are in a flourishing condition, and the morning service is well attended. An "extra-cent-a-day band," recently formed, will provide $100 ex-tra for missions. Rev. E. A. Lathrop is pastor.

PALMER.—Second pledged enough money Easter to pay off the society's debt of many years' stand-ing and nearly $200 more to be added to the music fund for the year.

Maine.

SCARBORO.—The completed vestry was dedicated April 3. The expenses of the improvements were $400. On the night before the exercises the build-ing was seriously threatened by fire from the chan-delier, which fell while lighted.

GREENVILLE.—Appreciative notice has been taken of the service of Rev. Charles Davison, who has served as superintendent of schools the past year and on the school committee the past 20 years.

MILFORD.—A committee has been appointed to solicit funds to engage a pastor for this church the coming summer.

The annual statistics of the State just published show 1,409 accessions during 1895, making the total membership 21,543. The missionary character of the State work is evidenced by the excess of churches over ministers, the former numbering 242, the latter 187. Benevolent contributions were $71,394, a decrease of $34,622, due to the falling off of legacies and the unsettled condition of the State Missionary Society. Home expenditures were $225,-964. Five churches were organized. The member-ship of the Sunday schools is 13,538; of the Christian Endeavor Societies, 9,671. Of the 187 active minis-ters in Maine only 57 are pastors installed by coun-cil.

New Hampshire.

CHARLESTOWN.—The formation of a Young Men's Society has been an attractive feature of the work. The members meet every Monday night at the par-sonage for debate. The object is to unite young men in every cause, athletic and social interests as well as literary pursuits.

HANOVER.—By vote of the trustees of Dartmouth College a large addition is to be made to the dwell-ing house formerly owned by Dr. Dixi Crosby at an expense of $18,000. When finished it will be used for a dormitory.

WILTON.—Second. By the will of the late Phebe M. Lane the society receives the homestead and $1,500 and the New Hampshire Bible Society $600.

Vermont.

LYNDON.—As a result of a canvass of the town, it is found that of the 2,300 Protestants, 1,750 are non-church-goers.

Rhode Island.

PROVIDENCE.—Highland. Vol 1., No. 1. of a quarto paper, giving a full history of this enterpris-ing new addition to the Rhode Island Congrega-tional churches, has been issued by the Ladies' Aid Society, by which they added $100 to their treasury. ——Edgewood. Rev. D. H. Torrey has astonished many by the success attending his efforts to secure a building fund, $10,000 in cash and reliable pledges having been obtained. This growing quarter of the city demands an attractive and adequate building for the future life of the church, which now uses the only hall that can be obtained, and that only for Sunday services.

THORNTON.—This church is largely made up from the English laborers in the British hosiery mill in the place. Its growth is steady in the right direc-tion. Rev. W. H. Starr, its pastor, also superin-tends the Sunday school and has an added influ ence upon the work of the church.

BARRINGTON.—The pulpit service in this church will be voluntarily supplied until July by the differ-ent members of the Rhode Island Association.

Connecticut.

NEW HAVEN.—The Institute of Sunday School Workers of New Haven and vicinity met in United Church chapel April 8-10. Phases of Sunday school work were presented by Prof. C. S. Beardslee of Hartford, Judge L. E Hitchcock of Chicopee, Mass., F. A. Ferris, Esq., of New York and others.—— United. The Men's Club service last Sunday even-ing was addressed by Prof. E. L. Curtis of Yale on The Development of Israel's Religion.

GREENWICH.—First. The new $18,000 edifice is ready for the interior work. This church is one of the oldest in the State and fittingly celebrated its 225th anniversary last year. Like all the early New England churches it has seen many vicissitudes, temporal and spiritual, but is springing into a new-ness of life which its new home will render more useful to the coming generations.

GLASTONBURY.—The total destruction of the par-sonage last week was narrowly averted by prompt assistance offered by three young men who hap-pened to be calling. A spark from a match in the hands of a domestic set fire to a bed which was de-stroyed. Water did considerable damage, particu larly to the library.

SALISBURY.—This church, Rev. J. C. Goddard, has lately organized a Men's Band, modeled some-what after the Christian Endeavor Society, the ob-ject of which is to reach other men. It accom-plishes its object so well that neighboring churches are copying it.

TORRINGTON.—Within the past month $100 have been collected for home missions. The current ex-penses for the year were $3,560. The debt of the so-ciety was reduced by $400, and $225 were expended for hymn-books. Rev. H. B. Roberts is pastor.

WILLIMANTIC.—At the annual meeting of the so-ciety last week the expenses were reported as $3,589 with unpaid bills of $374, and overdue pew rents amounting to $697. Thereupon the office of collector was created.

CANAAN.—Pilgrim. The annual reports show total contributions last year of $1,468, with all bills paid. The subscriptions for the new parsonage now aggregate $2,635, and work will be begun at once.

EASTON.—The Easter offering to be used for paint-ing the outside of the meeting house and making several needed repairs and alterations amounted to $44. The women of the church will provide new carpets.

WATERBURY.—Second. At the annual meeting of the society the finance committee reported on the new church building. The total expenditures were $160,000, with a present indebtedness of $48,000.

HARTFORD.—South. Mr. N. H. Spencer has entered upon his 26th year of service as a member of the choir. He was recently remembered handsomely with a gift of silverware from the congregation.

NAUGATUCK.—The voters of the borough decided last week by ballot to purchase the land of the Congregational society for park purposes for $12,000.

ELLINGTON.—The church has voted six to one to have free seats during the coming year and over $900 have already been pledged.

The Missionary Society of the State reports for 1895: $51,115 for home missions; $31,951 received in legacies and boxes of clothing valued at $15,003; 52 churches aided and nine general missionaries employed.

MIDDLE STATES.

New York.

NEW YORK.—Broadway Tabernacle. At a meeting held April 8 the resignation of Rev. Dr. Henry A. Stimson was accepted by a vote of 140 to 100. It was also voted that Dr. Stimson should be given a year's salary. Dr. Stimson in presenting his resignation stated that before coming to the church he defined his position to the church committee, indicating his belief in the "necessity of a revised and adequate financial scheme, a sufficient staff of workers, ministerial and lay, proper facilities for work, and, above all, a definite decision as to the policy of the church and the hearty co-operation of the leading members who remained with it in swinging the church into a new line and welcoming to it all classes of people." He also said that three years having passed without these promises being fulfilled, and opposition from influential members of the church to all of his suggestions having developed, realizing that the question at issue could not come before the church except as complicated by the question of his remaining pastor, and being unwilling to imperil the spiritual development of the church and its individual members by any controversy, he felt it best to resign. After Dr. Stimson retired from the meeting, a joint statement, signed by the members of the prudential committee and the board of trustees, was read by Dr. William H. Thompson, stating their reasons for feeling that a serious decline in the prosperity of the church had occurred and why they felt that their hopes and anticipations during Dr. Stimson's pastorate had not been realized. A full discussion followed. The meeting was an object lesson in the beneficent working of Congregational principles. Though there was intense feeling and a full and free expression of varying views, the minority acquiesced graciously in the decision of the majority.

SYRACUSE.—Plymouth. Dr. E. N. Packard is taking 10 days of much needed rest in Boston and New York, his pulpit being supplied by Rev. Messrs. Ethan Curtis and A. F. Eastman. Prof. John R. Commons of the university, a member of this church, is organizing a class for the Sunday school, of those who do not now attend, for the study of the problems of society, beginning with the saloon.

OGDENSBURG.—Easter was a memorable day for this church, Rev. C. W. Wilson, pastor, 39 members being received, all but three on confession. This was the largest accession at any communion since the formation of the church. It is the result of special services, in which Evangelist F. L. Smith assisted. The present membership is about 225.

MORAVIA.—The pastor, Dr. W. H. Hampton, entered his new residence the first of this month. The parsonage cost about $2,500, all of which has practically been raised. This has been a very happy year with church and pastor. The members of the church gave a supper and donation recently in the new house, the proceeds amounting to $120.

OSWEGO.—During Lent the pastor, Dr. B. W. Bacon instructed a confirmation class, and as a result at the communion service on Easter 30 new members were received on confession, and one by letter. Dr. Bacon has endeared himself to all, and the church will sadly miss him in his departure to accept a call to Yale Divinity School.

ROCHESTER.—Plymouth. The church has contributed $20 towards paying the debt of the A. B. C. F. M., and $100 to the A. M. A. through the Sunday school, constituting the pastor, Rev. W. F. Kettle, and two officers life members.

New Jersey.

ORANGE.—Orange Valley has been celebrating the 35th anniversary of its organization. Addresses were made by Dr. J. E. Rankin of Howard University, the predecessor of the present pastor, and other neighboring ministers. The pastor, Rev. C. A. Savage, read a carefully prepared historical paper, tracing the growth of the church. The original members numbered 45, of whom 35 were Presbyterians and of whom also only four still remain with the church. There were then but four Congregational churches in New Jersey. During the present pastorate 107 persons have been added to the church, over half of them on confession, the present membership being about 300. In the same period the church has raised about $50,000 for all purposes, $14,000 being for outside benevolent objects. The church property is valued at about $80,000, including a $10,000 parsonage, and, with the exception of a debt on the parsonage, there is no financial incumbrance. The revenue is raised mainly by voluntary subscriptions.

UPPER MONTCLAIR.—At the annual meeting about 170 persons were present. The amounts contributed for various purposes last year amounted to $6,000, about two-fifths of it going to missionary objects outside the city. Steps were taken toward enlarged accommodations for the church and Sunday school. Rev. H. S. Bliss is pastor.

WOODBRIDGE.—Passiontide services were held in this church throughout the week preceding Easter, addresses being made by various neighboring pastors, which interested the people greatly and commended this new form of spiritual culture to them. The attendance was good.

THE SOUTH.

District of Columbia.

WASHINGTON.—Mt. Pleasant. The fifth annual neighborhood meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Societies of Washington Conference was held with this church April 7. Mrs. Susan H. Ward gave an interesting address at each session. Mrs. Gates of India also made an address.——Fifth. The second missionary extension rally of this city was held with this church April 1. Addresses were made by Rev. James Garvie on Work Among the Sioux Indians, and Miss Pond on her labor among the Zunis.

THE INTERIOR.

Ohio.

CLEVELAND.—Mt. Zion refused by a unanimous vote to accept the resignation of Rev. D. W. Shaw, and united with him in calling a council. The council approved the dissolution of the pastoral relation. Mr. Shaw accepts a call to a Methodist church in Charleston, W. Va., and preached his farewell sermon in Cleveland April 12.——Pilgrim. The Sacred Music Society of this church, with a chorus of 60 voices and soloists under the direction of Prof. Alfred Arthur, on Easter evening rendered Gounod's sacred trilogy, Redemption, with fine appreciation of its great theme. The congregation completely filled the great house, seating nearly 2,500 people, and not a few persons were unable to gain admission.

Illinois.

CHICAGO.—Union Park. The annual report of the benevolent society shows that 825 pieces of work have been completed, that 10 boxes and barrels of clothing, together with some money, have been sent West, that many articles of clothing have been given needy children in hospitals and asylums in the city, and many needy families, through the church visitor, have been supplied. The sum of $3,400 has been raised for foreign and home missions and special objects at home. The meetings have been seasons of much profit. Persons representing foreign fields have addressed the meetings, and those interested in the needs of the home fields have been given an opportunity to speak. The society closed the year with a balance of 43 cents in its treasury. At the first fall meeting in memory of Mrs. Noble, whose loss is more and more apparent, a gift of $1,000 was received from Dr. Noble, to be known as the Mrs. F. A. Noble Memorial Fund, its income to be used for this work. This is the first permanent gift to the society.

Union has been organized at Baker's Hall, the 71st Congregational church within the city limits. Thirty-eight persons entered into covenant. Harry E. Mills of the seminary was ordained pastor. The sermon was by Dr. W. A. Waterman.

PEORIA.—First. Memorial services were held April 5, with a large attendance. At twilight the tablet erected on the wall at the left of the pulpit to the memory of Rev. D. K. Nesbit, a former pastor, was unveiled. Beautiful floral adornments and appropriate music accompanied the exercises. Various other tributes were added in the way of addresses and appreciative testimony to the late pastor's service. His pastorate lasted from 1887 to 1892.

KEWANEE.—At the annual meeting of the W. B. M. I. 150 delegates were present. Total receipts last year were $26,381, including a legacy of $1,000 from O. H. Platt and $1,000 as a memorial fund to Laura P. Noble, both of Chicago.

Indiana.

FORT WAYNE.—Plymouth. Easter Sunday was a memorable day. In the morning the extensive edifice was crowded and chairs had to be placed in the aisles. Thirty-five members entered into covenant, making 114 which the church has received since December. In several instances whole families came together. In the evening an enjoyable service was held, the music being under Professor Miles's leadership. There was a short talk from the pastor on Do We Believe It? Rev. Mr. Ainslie, who came from Ogdensburg, N. Y., six years ago, is happy in his work in Indiana. He found a church of less than 100 members, and it has increased to about 400.

DUNKIRK.—Plymouth laid the corner stone of its new edifice April 9. Many representatives from towns in the vicinity were present. A prominent glass workers' association assisted in the ceremonies, besides other civic societies. Addresses were given by Rev. Messrs. George Hindley, W. A. Thomas, the pastor, and Dr. E. D. Curtis. The women served dinner and supper to a large number. The new building is planned on the institutional order, and will be constructed of stone, pressed brick and slate. The Bible school now enrolls 366.

CARDONIA.—The debt on the new building has been paid, the Congregational fund at Brazil furnishing an additional $100 to aid the church.

INDIANAPOLIS.—Easter Sunday was observed generally in the churches. The musical programs at Plymouth, People's and Mayflower were unusually fine and large congregations were the rule.

Michigan.

MIDDLEVILLE.—The church observed its fiftieth anniversary, Easter, Dr. James Gallup of Grand Rapids preaching the anniversary sermon.

THE WEST.

Iowa.

IOWA CITY.—Rev. C. E. Perkins, for four years pastor of the Unitarian church here, united with the Congregational Church, Easter Sunday. Mr. Perkins's clear statement of belief and his confession of faith place him squarely on a strong evangelical platform, while his fine literary taste and scholarly attainments make him a valuable addition to the ranks of the Congregational ministry, which he now wishes to enter.

MCGREGOR.—Rev. C. A. Marshall welcomed 10 new members Easter morning and others have applied for admission. There has been a quiet religious interest in the church through the winter, but no evangelist has been holding special meetings. The Sunday school made an Easter offering of $15 for home missions, making the amount raised by all departments this year for this work about $420.

BONDURANT AND LINN GROVE.—During the last 15 months these points have been supplied by Rev. H. H. Long of Des Moines, and the work has been making steady progress. Evangelist Packard has just closed a series of meetings resulting in much good at both places. Nine members were received, three on confession, at Bondurant Easter Sunday.

OTTUMWA.—Second. On a recent Sunday there were 50 accessions to the church, all but two on confession. The pastor, Rev. J. R. Beard, has had no evangelistic help outside of his own family and church. The prayer meetings now have an average attendance of about 60. The work is prospering and the church is gaining strength.

OAKLAND.—Rev. J. L. Blanchard has resigned his pastorate. The church had voted to retain him for another year, but on account of failing health he has been obliged to give up the work. During his two years of leadership the church has prospered, and the membership and attendance have greatly increased.

DOON.—Eighteen persons recently joined this church, 12 on confession. The work is prospering in many directions under the leadership of Rev. W. L. Brandt. The congregations and Sunday school attendance are steadily growing and a new parsonage has recently been secured.

ONAWA.—March 15 104 persons were received to fellowship, all but 13 uniting on confession. This accession came after a series of special meetings, in which the pastor, Rev. W. A. Pottle, was assisted by Rev. J. E. McNamara of Sloan.

SHELL ROCK.—An ingathering will result from a special effort by the pastor, Rev. Mandus Barrett. A payment of $500 has just been made toward the debt on the house of worship.

BLENCOE.—Rev. W. G. Little is being assisted in special meetings by Rev. W. A. Pottle of Onawa.

ve new members were received at the last com-nion, three on confession.

Minnesota.

MINNEAPOLIS — Plymouth. Rev. D. N. Beach eached his first sermon as pastor on Easter Sun-y, the house of worship being crowded and the ngregation being held throughout by the fine ort of its new leader.——With the coming of Rev. E. Smith to Fifth Avenue all the churches in e city are again supplied with pastors. Rev. ssrs. J. W. Heyward at Bethany and R. A. Had-n at Forest Heights began work on Easter Sun-y, both being greeted with large congregations. reception was tendered to Rev. and Mrs. R. A. dden. Easter services were observed in all the urches with large attendance.

T. PAUL. — Pacific The proposed union with Arlington Hills Presbyterian, the future organ-tion to be known as Pacific Congregational urch, will be accomplished when Pacific secures necessary funds with which to move its build-to the new site which it is to secure. The ited churches are to improve the property. The posed organization will be a strong one.

RTONVILLE.—Since the coming of the new pas-, Rev. G. W. Shaw, congregations have increased, attendance at Sunday school has doubled, the E. Society is steadily growing and the finances in excellent condition. Five young people ited on confession and four by letter. The new rsonage is greatly enjoyed.

PRING VALLEY.—Since Jan. 1 the pastor, Rev. M. Harmon, has received to membership 28 per-s on confession, making 60 accessions in the t 15 months. The attendance is so large that ny are turned away, and the church is enjoying ater prosperity than ever before in its history forty years.

IBBING.—Through the efforts of Mr. A. A. Wick-n a good Sunday school and congregation have n gathered and several persons are ready to ite in a church organization. Lots have been se-red for a church building and a subscription sed.

EW PAYNESVILLE.—The low price of wheat, the moval of several paying members and a small t are discouraging features. The people are king a strong effort to keep their pastor, and an ngelist has been secured for a series of meet-gs.

PPLETON. — A sunrise prayer meeting Easter nday and crowded services all day at an out-sta-n, where a church is to be organized as the result a revival, are encouraging features.

ALKER.—Lots have been secured for a building be erected at once. The town is situated on the re of Leech Lake, in one of the most beautiful tions of Minnesota.

LARISSA.—Evangelist Fellows has held a series meetings, resulting in several conversions, and a uncil has been called to organize a church.

Kansas.

AOLA.—Rev. E. L. Howard, who has been the ccessful pastor of the Baptist church in this ce and prominent in that denomination in the te, having become convinced of error in the cial tenets of the Baptists, has formally with-wn from them, and April 5 united with the Con-gational church. He was also received as a mber of the Eastern Association of Kansas April Mr. Howard makes this change on purely con-entious grounds, and the kindest relations exist tween him and his Baptist brethren.

Nebraska.

DE SOTO.—The good work which has been in gress for some time culminated April 4 in the ognition of a church of 17 members. The organ-tion has a large, free field, with no other church the community. At the public service the ser-n was by Rev. G. G. Perkins. The church will supplied in connection with the one at Calhoun e miles away. The pastor there, Rev. S. A. Par-r, has been preaching and visiting at outly-g school districts, until now the currents are all ting toward the home church. A large number young people attend the evening service and eat need is felt of an enlarged building. The E. Society is especially strong and influential for od.

LAY CENTER.—Mrs. E. B. Perkins, supplying re, finds congregations steadily increasing, es-cially in the evening, the latter sometimes reach-g 300. The Sunday school has reached its high ter mark. At Silver Creek, the other church sup-ed by Mrs. Perkins, Easter Sunday was a day of oicing. The Ladies' Aid Society had renovated d repapered the interior of the meeting house, king it look almost new.

WESCOTT.—Rev. J. F. Smith of Arcadia has been assisting in revival work at this point, formerly part of his field, and now pastorless. Union meetings were held and about 40 hopeful conversions are recorded.

North Dakota.

CRARY.—Supt. E. H. Stickney organized a Sunday school about a year ago in this new and growing town on the Great Northern Railway. The work has so prospered that a church will be organized soon and a house of worship will be erected.

GRAND FORKS.—This important field, pastorless nearly two years, is fortunate in securing the services of Rev. I. B. Tracey of Valley City.

ANTELOPE.—This is an out-station of Dwight. A work of grace is in progress under the lead of the pastor, Rev. D. F. Jenkins.

Passion Week was observed with special services in Caledonia, Portland and First Church, Fargo. In every case the attendance was good and deep interest was awakened.——Two laymen from Rose Valley have been supplying at Argusville during the past two months.

South Dakota.

HOLABIRD.—Special meetings have been continued by Rev. C. M. Daley, resulting in eight accessions April 3. This new church now has a membership of 25, with prospect of further increase. A C. E. Society of 27 members was organized April 3.

Miss E. K. Henry is holding special meetings at Faulkton and Clark.

CANADA.

New Brunswick.

MILLTOWN.—On Easter Sunday 14 new members were received, 12 on confession. Large congregations, often crowded beyond the seating capacity of the house, manifest great interest in the Sunday and week night services. The Ladies' Aid Society recently cleared $215 at an entertainment. The Sunday school and C. E. Society are in a flourishing condition. Rev. William Williams is pastor.

WEEKLY REGISTER.

Calls.

BALL, Marcus A., Garretson, S. D., to Winfred and Freedom. Accepts.
BARTLETT, Dana W., Phillips Ch., Salt Lake City, Utah, to Bethlehem Ch., Los Angeles, Cal. Accepts.
BLACKBURN, J. F., to Fort Valley, Ga.
BLAISDELL, Jas. A., Waukesha, Wis., to Olivet, Mich.
BLISS, Geo. W., Oberlin Seminary, to Broad Ripple Ch., Indianapolis, Ind. Accepts.
BUSHEE, Wm. A., Woonsocket, R. I., to Northwood Center, N. H.
CROSS, Alien E., Cliftondale, Mass., accepts call to Park Ch., Springfield, to begin work May 17.
CUNNINGHAM, W. B., to supply for a year at Niagara, N. D. Accepts.
CURTIS, Gilbert A., Andover, Ct., to Killingworth. Accepts.
CURTIS, John S., Center Lebanon, Me., to Hopkinton, N. H. Accepts, to begin work May 17.
CUSHMAN, Chas. E., White Cloud, Kan., to Argentine. Accepts, and has begun work.
EAST, Wm. R., Tidwell, Tidmore and Nectar, Ala., to New Prospect Ch., Sulligent; also to remain another year at Nectar.
FINDLAY, Jno. J., Bethlehem Ch., Los Angeles, Cal., accepts call to Vernondale.
FULLER, Geo., Stratford, Ont., to London, Eng. Accepts.
GRANT, Jno. H., Yale Divinity School, to Center Ch., Meriden, Ct.
HALL, Geo. A., So. Peabody, Mass., to Union Ch., Rockville, Ct.
JOHNSTON, Jno. B., Malta, Ill., to Atkinson. Accepts.
LEWIS, Edward R., Scranton, Pa., to Alliance, O.
MOORE, John D., to remain another year at Longton, Kan. Accepts.
STURTEVANT, Ernest W., Hartland, Vt., accepts call to E. Braintree.
THOMPSON, Thomas, Winfred and Freedom, S. D., to Revillo and Elmira. Accepts.
TRACY, Isaac B., Valley City, N. D., accepts call to Grand Forks.
UDD, Jno., Chicago Seminary, to Second Swedish Ch., Worcester, Mass.
WAKEFIELD, Frank A., Brockton, Mass., to First Ch., Omaha, Neb. Accepts.
WATKINS, Thos. R., Scranton, Pa., to Dundaff.
WILLIAMS, W. Tyrer, Tipton, Mich., to Linwood, Kan. Accepts, to begin May 1.

Ordinations and Installations.

BIGELOW, Herbert L., o. Vine St. Ch., Cincinnati, O., April 6. Sermon, Rev. Sidney Strong; other parts, Rev. Messrs. C. F. Goss, J. W. Magruder, W. O. Jones, G. A. Viets, A. A. Andridge.
EMMERSON, Nicholas, o. First Ch., Kirwin, Kan., April 2. Sermon, Rev. W. C. Veazie; other parts, Rev. Messrs. F. P. Newell, D. H. Scarrow, D. H. Platt. He will serve the churches in Dial and Mont Ayr.
MILLS, Harry E., o. p. Union Ch., Brighton Park, Chicago, Ill., April 3. Sermon, Rev. Dr. W. A. Waterman; other parts, Rev. Messrs. J. C. Armstrong, Henry Willard, E. A. Adams, D. D.
SHARRATT, James, o. p. Baldwin, Mich., March 17. Sermon, Rev. F. G. McHenry; other parts, Rev. Messrs. B. C. Robbins, H. F. Tyler, A. L. Griswold.

Resignations.

ARMSTRONG, Jno. R., Second Swedish Ch., Worcester, Mass., to begin missionary work in Japan.
AYERS, Alfred W., David City, Neb., to take effect in June.
BLANCHARD, J. L., Oakland, Io., on account of failing health.
NAYLOR, Benj. D., Crockett, Cal.
PRIOR, Arthur E., New Baltimore, Mich., to take effect May 31.

Churches Organized.

CAMP CREEK, Wis., 31 March, 20 members.
CHICAGO, Ill., Brighton Park, Union Ch., rec. 3 April, 38 members.
CLARISSA, Minn., org. and rec. 8 April, 19 members.
DE SOTO, Neb., rec. 4 April.
DRY HOLLOW, Ore., 30 March, 23 members.
INGLES CHAPEL, Ore., rec. 3 April, 15 members.
IONE, Ore., rec. 28 March, 25 members.

Miscellaneous.

ARNOLD, Henry T., appreciates the gift of a handsome chair from young men in his parish at Plainfield, Ct.
BARBOUR, Thos. W., was remembered March 24 by his church in Palmyra, Wis., with a fine fur robe.
EDWARDS, Thos. C., of Edwardsdale, Pa., started, April 11, on an extensive European tour. He will visit Wales, and conduct the National Eisteddfod at Llandudno.
GOLDER, Arthur L., and wife, of Eliot, Me., were recently given a generous pound party in connection with an invitation to remain a third year.
JONES, Morgan P., and wife, Kent, O., received beautiful presents from the church on their thirteenth wedding anniversary.
PALMER, Frank H., and wife, E. Bridgewater, Mass., received congratulations at a recent reception that they were to remain another year with this church, and valued testimonials were given them.
ROBBINS, Anson H., and wife, Iroquois, S. D., recently received a call from their people, who left a valuable silver remembrance.
ROWLEY, Ralph A., S. S. Supt. for Oregon, is in the East telling the story of his seven years in missionary Sunday school work on the North Pacific coast.
SANBORN, Francis W., has received from his friends of the First Ch., Newbury, Mass., a beautiful gold watch and chain.
THURSTON, Thos. W., now 80 years old and for six years the efficient pastor at Dawson, N. D., is now in a critical condition and obliged to go to the hospital.
WILLIAMS, Edwin E., of Elyria, O., recently fell and fractured his hip, a serious accident for one of his advanced age.

OTHER CHRISTIAN WORK.

George Whitefield's soul must have hovered over his moldering bones beneath the high pulpit of the Old South Church, Newburyport, last week. The one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the organization of that stronghold of Presbyterianism was celebrated with enthusiasm and grace which were matched only by the eloquence and historic interest of the four memorial services. The preaching of Whitefield was the exciting cause which led the first members to leave the old First and Third Churches of Newbury, now known locally as the Oldtown and Unitarian Churches, respectively. The great Calvinistic revivalist preached his last sermon from the stairs of a house back of the church to a crowd which overtook him, candle in hand, ascending to his chamber for the night. He could not resist their appeal, and preached till his candle burned out, and also till the sands of his life ran low, for he died the next day about the time when he should have been thundering from the pulpit beneath which lie his bones, with those of the first pastor, Jonathan Parsons. Rev. H. C. Hovey, D. D., whom the Congregationalists have loaned to their neighbors for a season, is the thirteenth pastor of the church, and a handsome tablet of marble was unveiled during the celebration, bearing in old English letters, in gold leaf, the names of the twelve apostles gone and of the one still in the pastorate The Congregational churches gave up their pastors for the occasion, and the entire city turned aside to honor the historic church and its ancient edifice. One interesting fact brought out was this: that Rev. D. T. Fiske, D. D., senior pastor of the Belleville Church, who responded to the address of welcome, has lived through more than half the life of the church, and has assisted in the induction of more than half of the clergymen who have ministered there.

A QUARTER OF A CENTURY AT MT. VERNON CHURCH.

A large congregation, beautiful floral decorations and an impressive service last Sunday morning marked the twenty-fifth anniversary of the installation of Dr. S. E. Herrick in Mt. Vernon Church, Boston. The pastor's anniversary sermon, which had for its text 1 Cor. 2: 1-5, was historical and to some extent autobiographical, but was delivered with a modesty characteristic of the man. His dignified, earnest, vigorous utterance, the expression of deep feeling in face and voice as he dwelt tenderly on memories of the past, spoke enthusiastically of the loyalty of his present parishioners or told the interesting story of the new church building, showed how much the day meant to him.

Nothing could have been farther from boasting or self-congratulation than this discourse, which opened, as it closed, with sentences of gratitude: "Come, let us magnify the Lord," was the call of the preacher, "and let us exalt his name together."

In reviewing the history of his pastorate Dr. Herrick referred to the circumstances of his call to the church, lovingly characterized the four members of the diaconate then—Deacons Palmer, Tyler, Kimball and Cushing, who have since died, and mentioned with grateful appreciation other noble men and women of the church of that early date, as well as his associates in other Boston pulpits.

The most masterly portion of the discourse, however, was his review of the changes in fundamental conceptions and ruling ideas which he believes have taken general and permanent possession of the thinking of mankind. Formerly men said Christ died, therefore God is our Father. Our belief now is just the reverse; God is our Father and therefore Christ died. In the same way men held that the Bible is an inspired book and must therefore be accepted from beginning to end. Not so; the Bible is a book full of profound truths which appeal to the judgment and conscience and therefore must be given of God, inspired. The ethical relations of God and man are as parent and child who stand with mutual rights and mutual duties, while the cross is the supreme expression of God's eternal altruism in relation to his children. Heaven and hell are here. "I have been in both," said the preacher, solemnly. With a new conception of the corporate unity of mankind theology has become more altruistic and a new theory of preaching, which holds that man must be a follower of Christ not merely to save himself, but to be a saviour in his own place and measure, has been adopted of inward necessity.

During the past twenty-five years 600 communicants of Mount Vernon Church have been buried or dismissed. That is one and one-half times the present membership. During this period Dr. Herrick has preached more than 2,000 sermons, written over 40,000 pages of manuscript, attended 412 funerals and 189 weddings, baptized 101 children and received 590 communicants into the church, of whom 243 came on confession. Benevolent contributions have amounted to over $500,000.

Monday afternoon a reception in Mount Vernon Hall afforded an opportunity for an enjoyable social reunion of the past and present members of the church, while in the evening a large and appreciative audience gathered to listen to words of eulogy and congratulation from Dr. Herrick's old friends and his ministerial associates of various denominations. Prof. J. W. Churchill of Andover presided, introducing first Dr. G. A. Gordon who declared that the grandeur of Dr. Herrick's ministry lies in the fact that he has saved Mount Vernon Church from the doom that awaited it in its old location. Dr. A. S. Twombly of Newton gave reminiscences of the old church as he knew it in his youth.

Gen. F. A. Walker of the Institute of Technology, a classmate in the class of '59 in Amherst, spoke in a genial strain of the qualities which distinguished the young Herrick as a college man, and Judge Mellin Chamberlain of Chelsea dwelt upon his influence as a young pastor in that city, while Dr. Alexander McKenzie's address was full of the warm sympathy of a near neighbor and friend. Theologians were represented by Professors E. C. Smyth of Andover and C. H. Leonard of Tufts College, while Dr. E. W. Donald brought congratulations in behalf of Episcopalians, Prof. B. T. Bowne of Boston University in behalf of Methodists and the Unitarians were not without representation, as Dr. E. E. Hale made an address at the afternoon gathering. A single sentence of Dr. Herrick's response to the felicitations of the evening showed his happy and humble mood: "These lovely things you have been saying about me are not true, but that you should think them true touches me very deeply."

---

Christianity tells us that Christ died to take away our sins, and it speaks first to our sense of remorse. It brings us a sense of pardon. Is it the experience of our readers that they hear much of this in the preaching of today? If not, practically the whole contents of the Christian gospel has been omitted.—British Weekly.

---

FOR coughs, asthma and throat disorders use "Brown's Bronchial Troches." Sold only in boxes. Avoid imitations.

---

"CONGRESS IN SESSION."—Congress will not adjourn until May 15th, and every one should seize the opportunity of visiting Washington before that time. "Royal Blue Line" personally conducted parties leave Boston April 15th, and May 6th. The rate of $23 covers every expense. Stop-overs at Philadelphia and New York. For illustrated Itinerary, address A. J. Simmons, New England Agent, 211 Washington St., Boston.

AFTER CHIPPENDALE.

This Cabinet Sideboard is one of the best studies in Chippendale design that we have seen in a long time. For its small cost it attracts more attention than any piece of dining room furniture we have ever offered.

The construction is in dark Honduras Mahogany, with a dead finish. The Cabinet stands about six feet from the floor, and has a width of 59 inches. The base is built with double curves in the drawer fronts; it has fluted posts and polished brass trimmings.

The elevated closets are semi-circular in shape, and have solid French plate mirrored backs. Between them is a mirror 14 x 24 inches, and beneath this is a larger plate measuring four feet in width.

The top is 22 inches deep. The upper line of drawers has a triple serpentine front. There are two linen drawers and two plate closets.

For a small expenditure of money it would be hard to find a more effective bit of cabinet work. It fairly bristles with style.

PAINE FURNITURE CO.,
48 CANAL STREET, BOSTON.

BAILEY'S REFLECTORS

compound, light-spreading, Silver-plated Corrugated Glass reflectors. The most perfect light ever made for CHURCHES, Halls, etc.

Handsome designs for electric light, gas and oil. Catalogue and price list free.

BAILEY REFLECTOR CO., Pittsburg, Pa.

Spring Medicine

Your blood in Spring is almost certain to be full of impurities—the accumulation of the winter months. Bad ventilation of sleeping rooms, impure air in dwellings, factories and shops, overeating, heavy, improper foods, failure of the kidneys and liver properly to do extra work thus thrust upon them, are the prime causes of this condition. It is of the utmost importance that you

Purify Your Blood

Now, as when warmer weather comes and the tonic effect of cold bracing air is gone, your weak, thin, impure blood will not furnish necessary strength. That tired feeling, loss of appetite, will open the way for serious disease, ruined health, or breaking out of humors and impurities. To make pure, rich, red blood Hood's Sarsaparilla stands unequaled. Thousands testify to its merits. Millions take it as their Spring Medicine. Get Hood's, and only Hood's, because

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is the One True Blood Purifier. All druggists. $1. Prepared only by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Hood's Pills are the only pills to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

ESTABLISHED 1849
MACULLAR PARKER COMPANY
400 WASHINGTON ST. BOSTON
166 WESTMINSTER ST. PROVIDENCE
THE BEST CLOTHING FOR MEN AND BOYS

Church Cushions

Correspondence Solicited.

Ostermoor & Co., 110 Elizabeth St. New York, N.Y.

Subscribers' Wants.

Notices under this heading, not exceeding five lines (eight words to the line), cost subscribers fifty cents each insertion. Additional lines ten cents each per insertion.

An educated woman desires a position to care for children and do family sewing; accustomed to children, a good sewer. Address D. I, care of The Congregationalist.

A motherless girl of 13, good size and health, needs a home where she can be useful. Address, with reference, Mrs. Johnson, 689 Main St., Worcester, Mass.

A young lady, graduate of Smith College, would like position as traveling companion or private tutor for the summer months. Will accept the former for expenses merely and latter for small salary. Best of references. Address "T.," Congregationalist office.

CHURCH CARPETS AT MANUFACTURERS' PRICES. JOHN H. PRAY, SONS & CO., CARPETS AND UPHOLSTERY, 658 WASHINGTON ST., OPP. BOYLSTON ST. BOSTON.

Not a Patent Medicine.

Paralysis,

partial or complete, locomotor-ataxia, epilepsy, all show a diseased or deficient condition of the brain, once considered incurable. We can show letters from hundreds of well-known physicians, telling of positive cures by

The Phosphorized Cerebro-Spinant,

Freligh's Tonic

The phosphorus is what does it. Absolutely pure. Positively harmless. Can be taken for any length of time.

Regular bottle $1.00, 100 doses. All druggists. Sample by mail, 25 cts. Concentrated, prompt, powerful. Descriptive pamphlet, formula, testimonials, etc., mailed to any address.

I. O. Woodruff & Co.,
Manufacturing Chemists,
106-108 Fulton Street, New York City.

Formula on Every Bottle.

RAYMOND & WHITCOMB'S TOURS. Six Magnificent High Class Tours

All Traveling Expenses Included. to the Old World, sailing from New ork May 16 on the splendid steamship "La Touraine," the French Line; May 23 and June 20 on the palatial eamship "Campania," of the Cunard Line; and July 7 the favorite steam- ip "Lahn," of the orth German Lloyd ine. Great Britai , orway, Sweden, Den- ark, Russia, Austri- ungary, Germany, Switzerland, Italy, France, Holland, nd Belgium will be visited in a leisurely manner. So- urns in the great capitals and art centers

EUROPE

Parties will leave Boston July 27 and August 17 for omprehensive tours through the Hawaiian Islands,

JAPAN

Japan and China, the first-named date including the Hawaiian Trip. Both this and the Oriental round will be very full and attractive.

Other tours during the spring, summer and autumn California, Colorado, Alaska, the Yellowstone National Park, etc.

Independent Railroad tickets via the Boston & Albany, Boston & Maine, and Other Principal Lines; also Steamship Tickets to all points.

Send for circulars mentioning the tour desired.

RAYMOND & WHITCOMB,
306 Washington Street, opposite School St., Boston.

VACATION TOURS EUROPE

H. GAZE & SONS, 52d Year.

All expenses—$175 to $800—all expenses.

HIGH CLASS ARRANGEMENTS.

Spring and Summer Vacation Tours, Europe. } Thirty Tours, ranging in price from $175 to $800, visiting England, Ireland, Scotland, France, Holland, Rhine, Germany, Italy, Switzerland, Danube, Austria, etc.

North Cape and Russia Party, June 27.
Annual Round the World Party, Sept.
Holy Land Party (Egypt and the Nile)—Spring and Autumn—Four tours annually.

Independent tickets for any desired tour in Europe, with or without hotel coupons. Estimates furnished. Agents all lines steamers. Choice rooms secured. Gaze's Tourist Gazette free, gives particulars.

113 Broadway, New York. H. Gaze & Sons, Ltd., 201 Washington St., Boston.

CRUISE OF THE AMERICAN BUILT STEAMER "OHIO."

The largest and finest yacht steamer in the world. Dining room holds 200 persons, and only this number will be taken on the cruise.

June 27th to August 27th. Cruise to Russia, Sweden, Norway and the Midnight Sun, and the total eclipse of the sun, visible August 8th. Rate, $475 upwards.

June 6th, July 1st and 8th. European Tours. Send for descriptive catalogues.

THOMAS FOREIGN TOURIST CO., 1715 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, or Leon L. Collver, New England Agent, 306 Washington Street, Boston.

Cook's Tours to Europe.

All Traveling Expenses Included.

Our Annual May Party, the first of our high-class parties to Europe, will sail by the White Star Line SS. "Majestic" on May 6. Succeeding departures May 16, 23, 28, June 10, 17, 27. All the arrangements for these parties are in every respect first-class.

Illustrated programs free. Railroad and steamship tickets for individual travelers everywhere.

THOS. COOK & SON,
261 and 1225 Broadway, New York.

EGYPT AND NORTH AFRICA'S GIFTS TO CHRISTIANITY.

At the Boston Ministers' Meeting last Monday Rev. George A. Jackson presented a paper on the Gifts of Egypt and North Africa to Christianity. He referred briefly to the fact that the first translations of the Old Testament into Greek and of the New Testament into Latin were made in Africa, and that the earliest Christian literature came from there. He then went on to claim that Africa would also be in direct connection with the newer thinking which is to hold the future. The eminent thinkers of today emphasize the immanence of God as opposed to the "absentee God" of the Roman theology; they make the incarnation a basal dogma of the faith; their attitude toward the Scriptures is one of reverence towards a book that contains, rather than is, the highest revelation of the divine; they think of the whole world as God's from the beginning, and that revelation has come to men, and still comes, through other sources than those named in the Scriptures; they emphasize a redeemed humanity rather than the thought of individuals to be plucked here and there as brands from the burning; they assume, rather than assert, the freedom of the human will and its fitness, being in the image, to take on the likeness of God; they make the end of religion the lifting and training of men in religious character rather than the bestowment upon them of some external salvation; they have large faith in the kingdom of God as a present power, the mightiest factor in human history, to the service of which the elect of God are chosen. All of which ideas, save the last to which in the nature of things they had not attained, the Alexandrian fathers emphasized.

EDUCATION.

— Gen. F. A. Walker, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, has received the degree of LL. D. from Edinburgh University.

— Harvard University is to offer courses in the Slavonic languages. Prof. Leo Wiener, until recently of the University of Minnesota, will fill the chair.

— The careful investigations of President Thwing of Western Reserve University show the total number of graduates of American Colleges from the beginning to be about 300,000, one-half of which number are supposed to be living now. The whole number of college and university students in our institutions today is 143,632, and more than one-fifth of these are women.

— The annual meeting of college presidents this year was held with the University of Chicago. The discussions, especially in reference to the study of history, for which more time is demanded in our secondary schools, were very interesting. Visitors had much pleasure in inspecting the buildings and work of the university. They dined together in the Haskell Museum Building and were given an evening reception by President Harper.

THE MIDNIGHT SUN

By S. S. "OHIO," the largest and finest steam yacht in the world, leaving New York, June 27, 1896, visiting England Russia, Finland, Denmark, Sweden, Norway and the Midnight Sun, stopping at Bodo to witness the total eclipse August 8. Lectures on astronomy by Miss Proctor and others $475.00 and upwards

University Cruise September 16, as far east as India $950.00 and upwards.

European Tours June 6th, July 1st and 8th.

THE THOMAS FOREIGN TOURIST CO., 1715 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
LEON L. COLLVER, N. E. Agt., 306 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

EUROPE.—A small family party is being organized for spending the summer in European travel. Leave June 17, return in September. Route to include Belgium, Holland, the Rhine, Germany, Switzerland, Italian Lakes, Italy, France, England. Price $600 References exchanged. Mrs. L. E. Schneider, 138 W. 4th St., Mount Vernon, N. Y

KIMBALL'S TOURS

in Europe (8th season). Limited party sails June 24, on "St. Louis." Moderate price, comprehensive route.

EDWIN C. KIMBALL, 56 Summer St., Boston, Mass.

What is the reasonable treatment of

Rose Colds, Hay Fever

and similar diseases? To dose the stomach with nauseous drugs to cure the respiratory organs? You may palliate the pain this way, with preparations of opium, or temporarily stimulate yourself with tonics; but for a permanent cure, try nature's way.

Booth's "Hyomei," the Australian "Dry-Air" treatment of Asthma, Hay Fever, Catarrh, Bronchitis, etc.,

"CURES BY INHALATION."

Hyomei is a purely vegetable antiseptic, and destroys the germs which cause disease in the respiratory organs. The air, charged with Hyomei, is inhaled at the mouth, and, after permeating the minutest air-cells, is exhaled through the nose. It is aromatic, delightful to inhale, and gives immediate relief.

Pocket Inhaler Outfit, Complete, by Mail, $1.00, to any part of the United States; consisting of pocket inhaler, made of deodorized hard rubber (beautifully polished), a bottle of Hyomei, a dropper, and full directions for using. If you are still skeptical, send your address; my pamphlet shall prove that Hyomei cures. Are you open to conviction?

R. T. BOOTH,
23 East 20th St., New York.

Leaders of Fashion

Endorse Fibre Chamois as the best support for puffed sleeves and flare skirts in the market.

CAUTION—Beware of imitations. The genuine article is plainly stamped . . . . . .

Fibre Chamois

All dry goods stores. Three weights.

Blake Bell Foundry
Established in 1820.
Successors to WM. BLAKE & CO.
Manufacture bells of every description, single or chimes, of Copper and Tin. Address
BLAKE BELL CO., Boston, Mass.

IN CORRESPONDENCE SUGGESTED by announcements in our ADVERTISING COLUMNS, please mention that the advertisement was seen in The Congregationalist

THE BUSINESS OUTLOOK.

Although the volume of business has not materially increased, there is a distinctly better feeling, due mostly to the finer weather. Among business men the opinion is widespread that with two or three weeks of warm, seasonable weather the merchandise movement will assume fair proportions. Nor is this opinion out of joint with the facts of the situation. Supplies of goods in second and third hands are not heavy; the accumulation has been in first hands, so that, when trade starts up, the jobber will have to rush to the manufacturer for goods.

After all, it is the retail demand which counts in the long run, and there are indubitable signs that this demand is steadily improving. The adjournment of Congress will also act as a stimulus to trade, and it is predicted that Congress will close not later than May 15.

The advance in iron and steel prices by the new steel combine has checked the demand, but prices are expected to be maintained and business done on the advanced basis. Noticeable for increasing activity is lumber, owing to the extension of building operations. The effect of the latter also extends to paints, oils and structural materials generally. Wool remains flat and cotton goods have been demoralized by the recent cut in prices. The concession in leather has brought in large orders for shoes.

The bright spot in the situation is the continuance of increases in railroad earnings. During March the total earnings of 115 railroads aggregated $36,698,000, a gain of 4 6 per cent. over the same month last year. In the stock market speculation remains dull. Traders and speculators are awaiting the President's action on the Cuban affair, but if his action takes a mild form and does not recognize the belligerency of the Cubans an upward turn in the stock market will probably occur.

A GOOD child is usually healthy, and both conditions are developed by use of proper food. The Gail Borden Eagle Brand Condensed Milk is the best infant's food; so easily prepared that improper feeding is inexcusable and unnecessary.

The Cheapest is Pond's Extract, because one "Small" bottle, 50 cts., has more beneficial effect than one gallon of other preparations sold as being the "same as" or "equal to," Pond's Extract. For all Pain and Soreness.

We made an investment in Chicago real estate for Gov. F. M. Drake of Iowa. We submit, by his permission, without comment, what he says about the result:

CAMPBELL INVESTMENT COMPANY

State of Iowa,
Executive Office,
Des Moines.

DES MOINES, March 24, 1896.

CAMPBELL INVESTMENT CO., Chicago.

GENTLEMEN:—Your favor inclosing check received. I beg to assure you that I am more than pleased with the result of my investment. It is not only a high compliment to you to be able to make such a showing in view of the general depression in business, but it confirms me in the opinion I have always had that Chicago is to be the greatest city in the world. Therefore, an investment in Chicago properly made, as I know you are capable of doing, is the safest and best, taking into consideration the minimum of risk and maximum of profit.

I shall be glad to have you call my attention to other investments you are willing to recommend, and keep me posted, so I may be able to avail myself of your good judgment in the future.

Very truly yours,

F. M. Drake

We would like to have an opportunity of sending you our plan of investing $10.00 or more per month. Send for our free book.

Campbell Investment Co.,

625 NEW STOCK EXCHANGE, - CHICAGO, ILL.

Globe Investment Company

MORTGAGES

Bought for Cash.

CHAS. E. GIBSON, 45 Milk St., Boston.

YOU SELL WE BUY

DO YOU WANT TO SELL A Western Mortgage or Western Land—avoid foreclosure costs—stop sending good money after bad—get a good 5% investment instead? State exact location, condition of title, and your lowest price. Over $2,000,000 in Western securities successfully handled by the present management of this corporation. THE BOSTON REALTY, INDEMNITY AND TRUST CO. Send for our Bond List. 38 Equitable Building, Boston.

Guaranty Trust Co.

of New York.

Formerly New York Guaranty and Indemnity Co.
Mutual Life Building,
65 CEDAR STREET, N. Y.

CAPITAL, - - - - - $2,000,000
SURPLUS, - - - - - $2,000,000

ACTS AS TRUSTEE FOR CORPORATIONS, FIRMS AND INDIVIDUALS, AS GUARDIAN, EXECUTOR AND ADMINISTRATOR. TAKES ENTIRE CHARGE OF REAL AND PERSONAL ESTATES.

INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSITS
subject to check or on certificate.

WALTER G. OAKMAN, President.
ADRIAN ISELIN, JR., Vice-President.
GEORGE R. TURNBULL, 2d Vice-President.
HENRY A. MURRAY, Treas. and Sec.
J. NELSON BORLAND, Assist. Treas. and Sec.

DIRECTORS.

| | |
|---|---|
| Samuel D. Babcock, | Adrian Iselin, Jr., |
| George F. Baker, | Augustus D. Juilliard, |
| George S. Bowdoin, | James N. Jarvie, |
| Frederic Cromwell, | Richard A. McCurdy, |
| Walter R. Gillette, | Walter G. Oakman, |
| Robert Goelet, | Alexander E. Orr, |
| G. G. Haven, | Henry H. Rogers, |
| Oliver Harriman, | Henry W. Smith, |
| R. Somers Hayes, | H. McK. Twombly, |
| Charles R. Henderson, | Frederick W. Vanderbilt, |
| | William C. Whitney. |

An American Express Co. Travelers Cheque

is practically a certified cheque made payable to one's order, for a fixed amount named on its face, in gold or its equivalent, in the currency of the country, at 20,000 places throughout the world, by an extensive list of Bankers and Hotels.

More available, economical, and secure than Letters of Credit, Circular Notes, or other forms of Travelers' credit.

Cheques, rates, and further information may be obtained at any Agency of

THE AMERICAN EXPRESS CO.

OR AT THE PRINCIPAL OFFICES OF THE COMPANY,

65 Broadway, New York. 78 Monroe St., Chicago. 45 Franklin St., Boston.

Iowa Loan & Trust Co.,

of Des Moines, Iowa.

Capital, $500,000. Surplus, $335,000.

This old and reliable company has been in successful business operation for over 23 years, and has always met every obligation promptly at maturity.

Its Surplus is now larger than ever before, and the company continues under the same careful management. Its Debenture Bonds are amply secured by

FIRST MORTGAGES ON REAL ESTATE,

$105,000 of such mortgages being deposited for the security of each series of $100,000 Bonds.

Bonds in sums of $200, $300, $500 and $1,000 for sale by

FREEMAN A. SMITH,
Ex-Treasurer American Baptist Missionary Union,
Office, 31 Milk St., Room 22,
Correspondence solicited. Boston.

The Duchesse Glove.

NONE GENUINE UNLESS STAMPED.

Adaptable to all hands. Excels all other akes in fit, finish and durability.

our Button, Colors, Plain Back . $1 50
our Button, Colors, Embroidered Back . . . . . 1.75 our Button, Black, Plain Back . 1.75
even Hook, Colors and Black, Embroidered Back . . . . . 1.75

Gloves sent anywhere by mail. Order business a specialty.

CHANDLER & CO.,
Winter Street, Boston.

A good mortgage is the best investment

First—Because the principal is always safe.

Second—Because the interest is always sure.

We have a large assortment of good mortgages on improved Chicago real estate. Write us.

H. O. Stone & Co.,
206 La Salle Street, Chicago.

7 PER CENT. NET.

First Mortgage Loans on Improved Farms in the Wonderfully Fertile Red River Valley

d in North Dakota and Minnesota. 20 years of experience in the business, and an actual residence of over ears in the Red River Valley and of over 22 in Minnesota and North Dakota. A personal knowledge of lands d values. Loans only made to industrious, thrifty rmers, on well improved farms. I give my personal pervision to the business. Loans made in your name d interest coupon-notes and mortgages and applicaons sent to you and held by you. Interest collected by e and forwarded to you by New York Check. Funds w earning you only 2, 3, or 4 per cent. in Savings Banks ll here earn you 7 per cent.—about doubling your inme. Remit funds for investment by New York or ston Draft, or by personal check payable to my der. Address

E. P. GATES,
628 Portland Avenue, Minneapolis, Minn.

"KOMBI" Camera $3.00

ample photos and book FREE. Kombi Camera Co., Chicago.

Religious Notices.

THE address of Rev. Rufus B. Tobey is 198 Dartmouth , Boston. Telephone, Tremont 893.

PRESIDENT STEPHEN B. L. PENROSE of Whitman ollege will be in the East until June 1, and desires portunity to tell the patriotic story of Marcus Whitan before churches, societies, etc. Address 182 Chelen Avenue, Germantown, Pa.

